But this was one of Beecher's blunders and did not know it; he got a taste of his own principle, distilled through the mind of Tilton, who was profoundly influenced by his magentic personality up until Lincoln sent him to Europe; this absence seems to have broken the hypnotic spell, for it was following this that Tilton prosecuted him. Beecher, in unconsciously foistering this thesis upon his own intellectual child, who turned and rent him, deminds one of the Lord's statement: "out of thine own mouth will I judge thee." Ingersoll to the same effect said: "if the intelligent use a whip, the ignorant will use a club." Mr. Tilton was not gifted with the noble endowment that Beecher inherited, and "love various minds, doth variously inspire", and his precepts let his animal loose—Beecher's life was functional on a high plane, Tilton on a lower. Abbott takes advantage of this circumstance and says that Beecher's mistake consisted in associating too closely with inferior men. This may have occasioned their

O'NEIL BOOMS BRUMBAUGH AND WANTS A FAT JOB

Allegheny County Broke by O'Neil and Road Taxes to the Amount of $1,000,000 Required to Pay Interest on Bonds.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 19.—This city is proud of the remarkable gatherings and hordes of strangers attracted to it through various delegations attending numerous conventions but no prouder of any one can the city be than one J. Dennis O'Neil, a former County Commissioner of Allegheny County and a prince of prodigals.

During O'Neil's reign, O'Neil so loaded down the richest county in America with indebtedness that it now requires $1,000,000 of the $1,500,000 she can raise on her entire road tax to pay the interest on the bonded debt. This leaves for maintainence of roads only $500,000. But O'Neil was not in Chicago to talk about his prodigality or his extravagance, he came here on a pretended mission to boom Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, of Pennsylvania for President but being here O'Neil has developed a streak of economy; the only one ever discovered in his anatomy even after a microscopic investigation. His economy is thus revealed that he can demonstrate his loyalty and at the same time remind Governor Brumbaugh that he is a candidate for Chief of the Department of Roads to succeed the late Robert G. Cunningham. Thus bringing his princely presence as well as his candidacy to the attention of the Governor he can save the money he might spend going to Harrisburg on a similar mission and of course while here he could carry a flag or holler "Hurrah for Brumbaugh." The only thing that prevents O'Neil from becoming enthusiastic was, his vent pipes seem to be clogged and the big leaders had presumably put the ice bag on the Vares of Philadelphia and made an effort to hold down our own incomparable, matchless William A. Magee. Magee, however, hit the swift Niagara of real sentiment and was carried from the Brumbaugh boom, of first choice, after the first ballot, into the rapids of Hughes pandemonium and when last seen he was riding well his barrel.

But O'Neil wants to be road commissioner of the state and O'Neil is regarded as the most extravagant man that ever dominated the County Commissioners office. During the last year he was in office he sought re-electtion and he was unsparing in his prodigality, he lavished roads upon every farmer and kept his road superintendents looking for sections with a vigilance and persistency that has been unequalled in that office.

Who ever wanted a road or a piece of a road or a path that might be transformed into a road; or if there were any who had visions of a road cutting across particular farms all that was necessary was a few names and these were regarded as petitioners and a corpse of engineers were assigned to immediate duty for a survey.

O'Neil at one time condemned Contractor William Flinn for charging $12,000 a mile for building roads but the roads O'Neil squandered money for far exceeded this price and many ran as high as $20,000 to $25,000 a mile.

During the last year prior to his candidacy O'Neil squandered $700,000 on roads in one year and prior to that he issued bonds which were contrary to the law of the state, but what was that to O'Neil. It was like the constitution between friends. O'Neil had the law changed and made retroactive. He had issued 30 year bonds for macadam roads which last 3 years; ashphalt roads which last 8 years and brick roads which last 15 years. The macadam roads must be rebuilt ten times before the bonds mature; the ashphalt almost four times and the brick roads twice and O'Neil now wants to be Chief of the Road Department.

Thus O'Neil made a trip to the National Republican Convention to boom Brumbaugh in return for an appointement and O'Neil is ready to loaden Pennsylvania down with a similar indebtedness as soon as he can secure the appointement.

The road tax in Allegheny county is 1½ mills. It requires all that the levy of one mill can raise to pay the interest on the bonds that O'Neil floated. That amounts to $1,000,000 and the amount of $500,000 which is the levy of one-half a mill is scarcely enough to keep up the roads. The taxpayers are kicking and when O'Neil's exorbitant wastefulness is shown with his other stupendous extravagance and his prodigious folley there will be a howl that will extend from the Delaware to the Monongahela should he be made the chief road builder of the state.

O'Neil has no interest in the Presidental nominees nor did he show any interest in political affairs any further than that which tended to aid him in his own selfish ends or personal agrandisement. O'Neil is synonymous to selfishness and his whole career has been one of providing for himself and his family; seeing that his brother-in-law held a post office appointement and another his chief clerk at an outragious salary. O'Neil's selfishness was his own destruction and his overthrow was not the result of a combination but headlessness of sound advice and his reckless disregard for friends who were willing to aid but whom he feared may seek his support for something his brother-in-laws may want.

FURNITURE FAKERS TRIMMING THE PUBLIC

Articles on Display in Windows Marked Down Half Price to Cheat Buyers--The Police Ready to Make Raid.

The fraud, deception, and trickery now going on and constantly being practiced by an aggregation of rogues who are flocking to this city and setting themselves up in the furniture business surpasses anything in the "sure thing" and "get-rich-quick" game ever introduced to the American public.

The Tribune has been constantly exposing the fake doctors, the quacks and the vulchers in medicine as well as the crooks operating fake jewelry stores but the rogue in the furniture business is the most recent and his ruse is as extraordinary as any yet exposed.

This latest rapacious species that preys upon the unsuspecting buyer has become so numerous that the buying public is becoming so alarmed that mail order houses are taking away the trade from Pittsburgh. This condition will become more pronounced unless the legitimate furniture houses take some decided action. There should be nothing unusual about a movement of this kind since the police department is willing to render prompt service if called upon.

In the City of Pittsburgh, there was at one time an ordinance which compelled all merchants to take out a license—the purpose being not to interfere with old reliable concerns but to guard against fraud and the knaves who might attempt to pull-off something quick and get away with it. This ordinance has some how or other been relegated or buried in the municiple archives where many another good ordinance now rests in peace. However, no one will dispute the celerety with which Director of the Department of Public Safety Hubbard or Captain Archibald Mackrell will act if the frauds now being practiced are brought to the attention of either.

The modus oparandi may be thus presented: The fake confidence furniture dealer in order to facilitate his deceptions and practice his cheatery with solid comfort and extortionate profits secures a location as near to a legitimate store as possible—next door if at all accessible or directly opposite. This location secured he secures the cheapest grade furniture, the cheapest factories in the country can produce. In addition furniture taken back, confiscated or reclaimed by installment houses in eastern or western cities is secured; and second-hand furniture revarnished or done over is used. Thus stocked in crowded space the prince of monsters begins his infamous career. Sometimes he begins by full page advertisements on the "⅓ off" or "must sell to enter new building, present location too small" or "Tremendous bargains secured through Receivers sale and prices slashed to meet the needs of the humblest as well as the rich." The "knave factory" operated for fraudulent advertising is kept going at high speed and the dictionary is exhausted for extravagant adjectives boosting up the rascality and scoundrelism. The unsuspecting public is lured to the scene and the show windows are carefully scrutinized. On the opposite side of the street or next door is the legitimate furniture house and in the window of the latter are substantial pieces of furniture which can be recommended and guaranteed to stand the test without going to pieces within a few weeks after they are hauled to the home of the purchaser. In the window of the faker is probably the same identical articles but they are marked at "⅓" or "½" the value of the straight forward honest business house. The result is the misguided purchaser cannot see any difference nor can any one

Thriftlessness of British Workers Unfounded

Thomas Reece, Staff Corrrespondent.

LONDON, June 8.

The general charge against the working classes—that they are spending inflated war earnings in foolish ways—is still being repeated, although perhaps not quite so freely as it was last year. Investigation has shown that while in many parts of the country, and especially in munitions areas, the average household has more money to spend than in normal times, even when allowances has been made for the rise in prices, there is ample evidence to prove that the bulk of it is being sensibly laid out. The war prosperity, however, is not by any means universal. There are regions which are not to any great extent affected industrially by the war conditions, or, at any rate, in which the inquirer would fail to discover any increase of spending power. An instance in point is furnished by certain information obtained in the East End of London as the result of a piece of research undertaken from Toynbee Hall—this place, by the way, being the famous philanthropic self-help and educational center of uplift effort in the East End. A survey of a number of typical families showed that 58 per cent were enjoying an increased income; the remainder were struggling to keep up to the pre-war level, and all were feeling the strain of the war prices. There is no mater for surprise in the statement that, on the whole, it is the better mothers who are laying out more money in proportion upon food and clothing for their children.

A fact too often overliiked by those who complain of working class improvidence is that the extra war wages have made possible, for the first time in many thousands of cases, the raising of the home to a tolerable standard of comfort; and it would be absurd to to argue that this is not good national economy. Doubtless the first effect of increased earnings was a widespread tendency to rather reckless expenditure, but we are justified in concluding that it has by this time been pretty effectually checked. For one thing, the heavy cost of all necessaries is every day bringing down the scale of real wages; and for another, as the returns of the co-operative societies appear to indicate, the severe national experience of these days is encouraging both intelligent expenditure and careful saving.

It is understood that a special meeting of the Parliamentary Committee of the British Trade Union Congress has been summoned for next week to consider the advisability of convening a special trade union congress to discuss the effect of the Military Service Act on labor and other problems arising out of the war.

The addresses of the candidates for the general secretaryship of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers (numerically and financially the most powerful trade union in this country and I think the world) have now been issued. Robert Young, the present occupant of the office, has very little to say on questions of policy. He is, as a matter of fact, careful to point out that the general secretary of the society has no voice in discussions of that character and no vote in the council. His predecessor, Jenkins Jones, who makes an-

THE NEXT PRESIDENT WILL BE CHARLES E. HUGHES

The Loyalty of Editor-in-Chief Moore, of the Pittsburgh Leader, Gets a Terrific Jolt, but With Unwavering Fidelity He Follows the Republican Standard Bearer.

(Special Correspondent to National Labor Tribune)

(BY J. H. VITCHESTAIN.)

CHICAGO, Ill., June 12.—The National Republican Convention, the greatest in the history of the Republican party has concluded its business and the delegates have returned to their homes conscious of the fact that the Presidential nominee Charles Evans Hughes is the greatest standard bearer the party has presented to the public since the days of Ulysses S. Grant.

No candidate within the ranks of the party and surely none offered to the convention could bring about the unanimous conviction that the party can be more readily united and its labors more easily concentrated under the banner of Hughes than any other man.

Four years ago the convention was overwhelmed by a Roosevelt ian sentiment that at times almost swept the delegates off their feet but during this convention that fervor was noticeably lacking and obviously conspicuous during the roll call the final result of which showed the Progressive champion could muster but 65 votes on the first ballot and 80 on the second.

The delegates have finished the job and they have departed fully convinced they have given to the grand old party the greatest man the nation has to offer and that this leader is uncontrollable, unbossed and an enemy of corrupt practices and wrong-doing.

The Progressives are feeling the bitter sting and they look upon their annihilation as most appalling while the Old Guards liken them unto the Populist party of long whiskered memory and they declare the interment has been most respectful.

The obsequies may not have been as solemn and as fitting as they might have been, while the blow that killed cock robin was cruel, brutally so, and in the opinion of the foremost devotees—barbarous. It was cold and calculating according to some, vicious and prearranged in the minds of others, while multitudes look upon it as base, foul and monstrous.

The perfidiousness of George W. Perkins is being lifted to the glare of a noon day sun and this treachery and disloyalty, the friends of Col. Roosevelt declare, will ever remain in the memory of the Progressives, an incident, which when recalled, is sufficient for an outburst of contemptous and scornful indignation.

Whether he be responsible for the nomination of Charles Evans Hughs or not, Mr. Perkins, of trust affiliation, must shoulder the burden of responsibility, and since every insideous plot must have its victim, Perkins is viewed as the arch conspirator, and must naturally be the object of disdain and mockery hurled back by the Progressives at their "leaders."

The exuberance of the delegates to the Republican convention, who supported the Old Guard, was in strange contrast to the scurrilous and ribald attack of the one time enthusiastic friends of the idol of Oyster Bay.

The picture is most distressing with indescribable anguish, and the disaster wrought is looked upon as more than a calamity, it is a catastrophe. The pain is not that inflicted through some crude or harsh instrument of torture but it is equally as effective and excruciatingly painful.

It may be presented thus: Editor-In-Chief Alexander P. Moore, and one of the principal owners of the Pittsburgh Leader, a most enthusiastic supporter of Colonel Roosevelt, has during the last four years, with steadfast and unwavering loyalty, carried across one page or another of the great paper of which he is the magnetic force, a streamer "Roosevelt In 1916." For four years this great enterprising newspaper has carried this stirring pennant and remarkable announcement into the homes of its numerous subscribers with the purpose of ever keeping present the great leader in whom he had pinned implicit faith.

Whether in the home of reader or if paper was cast adrift the prayer was constant and fervent that the message might be carried even on the bosom of some idle wind to the feet of those who might be won to the principles espoused and championed by the hero of San Juan Hill.

During these trying four years, no utterance ever emitted but bore the significance of first page preference to Editor Moore and all other news matter was isolated when Colonel Roosevelt spoke. Roosevelt for President in 1916, was a golden dream with Editor-In-Chief Moore and Roosevelt's ideals were priceless gems, luminous, lustrous and radient in the opinion of the irresistable editor.

To him, in their resplendant beauty they scintillated more than an evevescent or transitory joy, they were to be perpetual and, of course, to penetrate the remotest corners: this sunshine and beauty was to find its way to the homes of the poor, the weak, the unfortunate, the wronged.

Harvest Gatherings and Siftings.

[The Tribune has received many requests to publish the following:]

Many are the inquiries relative to the truths presented in the Studies in the Scriptures and The Watch Tower, as to whence they came and how they developed to their present symmetrical and beautiful proportions. Were they the results of visions? Did God in some supernatural way grant the solution of these hitherto hidden mysteries of His Plan? Is the author of these writings more than an ordinary being? Does he claim supernatural wisdom or power? Or how comes this revelation of God's Truth?

No, dear friends; we claim nothing of superiority; nor do we aspire to exalt ourself in the estimation of our brethren of the Household of Faith, except in the sense that the Master urged it, saying, "Whosoever will be chief among you let him be your servant." (Matthew 20:27.) Our position amongst men of the world and of the Nominal Church, is certainly far from exalted; for we are everywhere spoken against. We are fully content, however, to wait for exaltation, until the Lord's due time. (1 Peter 5:6.) In the words of the Apostle, we therefore answer, "Why look ye upon us, as though by our own power we had done these things?" We also are a man of like passions with yourselves, of like infirmities and frailties, earnestly striving by overcoming many besetments, discouragements, etc., to press along the line toward the 'Prize of our High Calling, and claiming only, as a faithful student of the Word of God, to be an index finger, as we have previously expressed it, to help you to trace for yourselves upon the sacred page the wonderful Plan of God—no less wonderful to us, we assure you, than to yourselves.

No; the truths we present, were not revealed in visions and dreams or by God's audible voice; nor were they revealed all at once, but gradually, especially since 1870, and particularly since 1880. This present unfolding of Truth is not due to human ingenuity or acuteness of perception, but to the simple fact that God's due time has come; and if we did not speak, and no other agent could be found, the very stones would cry out.

We give the following history, not only because we have been urged to give a review of God's leadings in the path of light, but especially because we believe it to be needful that the truth be modestly told, in order that misapprehensions and prejudicial misstatements may be disarmed, and that our readers may see how all along the way the Lord has helped and guided us. In so far as the names and view of others who have parted company with us may be associated with this history, we shall endeavor to bring forward only such points as are necessary to an understanding of our position and of the Lord's leadings. Nor can we name all the little points of Divine favor in which faith was tested, prayers were answered, etc., remembering that our Master and the early Church left no such example of boasting faith, but admonished otherwise, saying, "Hast thou faith, have it to thyself."

We will not go back to tell how the light began to break through the clouds of prejudice and superstition which enveloped the world under Papacy's rule in the Dark Ages. The Reformation movement, or rather movements, from then until now, have done their share in bringing light out of darkness. But we will here confine ourselves to the consideration of the Harvest truths set forth in the publications of The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, formerly called Millennial Dawn and Zion's Watch Tower, now called Studies in the Scriptures and The Watch Tower. We began the narrative at the year 1868, when the Editor, having been a consecrated child of God for some years, and a member of the Congregational Church and of the Y. M. C. A., began to be shaken in faith regarding many long accepted doctrines.

SKETCH OF DEVELOPMENT OF PRESENT TRUTH.

Brought up a Presbyterian, indoctrinated from the Catechism, and being naturally of an inquiring mind, I fell a ready prey to the logic of infidelity, as soon as I began to think for myself. But that which at first threatened to be the utter shipwreck of faith in God and the Bible, was, under God's providence, overruled for good, and merely wrecked my confidence in human creeds and systems of Bible misinterpretations.

I was led gradually to see that through each of the creeds contained some elements of Truth, they were, on the whole, misleadingg and contradictory of God's Word. Among other theories, I stumbled upon Adventism. Seemingly by accident, one evening I dropped into a dusty, dinggy hall in Allegheny, Pa., where I had heard that religious services were held, to see if the handful who met there had anything more sensible to offer than the creeds of the great churches. There, for the first time, I heard something of the views of Second Adventism, by Jonas Wendell, long since deceased. Thurs I confess indebtedness to Adventists as wel las to other denominations.

Through his Scripture exposition was not entirely clear, and though it was very far from what we now rejoice in, it was sufficient, under God, to re-establish my wavering faith in the Divine inspiration of the Bible, and to show that the records of the Apostles and the Prophets are indissolubly linked. What I heard sent me to my Blible to study with more zeal and care than ever before, and I shall ever thank the Lord for the leading; for although Adventism helped me to no single truth, it did help me greatly in the unlearning of errors, and thus prepared me for the Truth.

FIRST FAINT GLEAM OF GOD'S PLAN.

I soon began to see that we were living somewhere near the close of the Gospel Age, near the time when the Lord declared that the wise, watching ones of His children should come to a clear knowledge of His Plan. At this time, myself and a few other Truth seekers in Pittsburgh and Allegheny, formed a class for Bible study; and the period from 1870 to 1875 was a time of constant growth in grace, in knowledge and in love of God and His Word. We came to see something of God's love, how it had made provision for all mankind, how all must be awakened from the tomb in order that God's loving Plan might be testified to them, and how all who will then exercise faith in Christ's redemptive work and will render obedience in harmony with their knowledge of God's will, might then, through Christ's merit, be brought back into full harmony with God, and be granted everlasting life. This we saw to be the Restitution work foretold in Acts 3:21.

But though seeing that the Church was called to jointheirship with the Lord in the Millennial Kingdom, we had up to that time failed to see clearly the great distinction between the reward of the Church now on trial and the reward of the faithful of the world after its trial, at the close of the Millennial Age—that the reward of the former is to be the glory of the spiritual, Divine nature, while that of the latter is to be the glory of Restitution—restoration to the perfection of human nature, once enjoyed in Eden by the head of the race.

However, we were then merely getting the outlines of God's Plan and unlearning many cherished errors, the time for the clear discernment of the minutia not having fully come. And here I gratefully mention assistance rendered by Brothers George Stetson and George Storrs, the latter the Editor of The Bible Examiner, both now deceased. The study of the Word of God with these dear brethren led step by step into greener pastures and brighter hopes for the world, though it was not until 1872, when I gained a clear view of our Lord's work as our Ransom-price, that I found the foundation of all hope of Restitution to lie in that doctrine.

Up to that time, when I read the testimony that all in their graves shall come forth, etc., I yet doubted the full provision—whether or not it should be understood to include idiots and infants who had died without reaching any degree of understanding, beings to whom the present life and its experiences would seem to have been of little advantage. But when in 1872 I came to examine the subject of Restitution from the standpoint of the Ransom-price given by our Lord Jesus for Adam, and consequently for all lost in Adam, i tsettled the matter of Restitution completely, and gave mo the fullest assurance that ALL must come forth from their graves and be brought to a clear knowledge of the Truth and to a full opportunity to gain everlasting life through Christ.

Thus passed the years 1868-1872. The years following, to 1876, were years of continued growth in grace and in knowledge on the part of the handful of Bible students with whom I met in Allegheny. We progressed from our first crude and indefinite ideas of Restitution to clearer understanding of the details; but God's due time for clear light had not yet come.

During this time, too, we came to recognize the difference between our Lord as "the man who gave Himself," and as the One who would come again, a spirit being. We saw that spirit beings can be present and yet invisible to men, jpst as we still hold and have set forth in Studies in the Scriptures, Vol. 2, chapter 5. And we felt greatly grieved at the error of Second Adventists, who were expecting Christ in the flesh and were teaching that the world and all in it except Second Adventists would be burned up in 1873 or 1874, and whose time settings and disappointments and crude ideas generally of the object and manner of our Lord's Coming brought more or less reproach upon us and upon all who longer for and proclaimed His coming Kingdom.

CHRONOLOGY SEEN TO BE VALUABLE.

These wrong views so generally held of both the object and manner of Christ's Second Advent, led me to write a pamphlet: "The Object and Manner of the Lord's Return," of which some 50,000 copies were published.

It was about January of 1876 that my attention was especially drawn to the subject of prophetic time, as it relates to these doctrines and hopes. It came about in this way: I received a paper called, The Herald of the Morning, sent by its Editor, Mr. N. H. Barbour. When I opened it, I at once identified it with Adventism from the picture on its cover; and I examined it with some curiosity to see what time the Adventists would next set for the burning of the world. But judge of my surprise and gratification when I learned from its contents that the Editor was beginning to get his eyes open on the subjects that for some years had so greatly rejoiced our hearts in our class in Alleghenyt—hat the object of our Lord's Return is not to destroy, but to bless all the families of the earth; and that His Coming would be thief-like, and not in flesh, but as a spirit being, invisible to men; and that the gathering of His Church and the separation of the "wheat" from the "tares" would progress in the end of this Age without the world's being aware of it.

I rejoiced to find others coming to the same advanced position, but was astonished to find the statement very cautionsly set forth, that the Editor of The Herald of the Morning believed the prophecies to indicate that the Lord was already present in the world, unseen and invisible, that the Harvest work of gathering the wheat and tares was already due; and that this view was warranted by the time prophecies which but a few months before he had supposed had failed.

Here was a new thought: Could it be that the time prophecies, which I had so long despised, because of their misuse by Adventists, were really meant to indicate when the Lord would be invisibly present to set up His Kingdom?—a thing which I clearly saw could be known in no other way. It seemed(to say the least, a very reasonable thing to expect that the Lord would inform His people on the subject, especially as He had promised that the faithful should not be left in darkness with the world, and that although "the Day of the Lord" would come upon others as a thief in the night (stealthily, unawares), nevertheless it should not be so to the watchers, the earnest saints.—1 Thessalonians 5:4.

I recalled certain arguments used by my friend Jonas Wendell and by other Adventists to prove that 1873 would witness the burning of the world, etc. —the chronology of the world showing that the six thousand years from Adam enned with the beginning of 1873—and other arguments drawn from the Scriptures and supposed to coincide. Could it be that these time arguments, which I had passed by as unworthy of attention, contained an important truth which the Adventists had misapplied?

alike with respects to their purposes and precepts of life—they both gave expression to their endowments in life and continued to develop these. Wesley improved in thought and expression until his vital power began to ebb away with old age. Russell, we shall presently see, increases his vital powers with his age. It has been the experience of both that "the path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Wesley began his career with a life of service and ended a theologian, whereas Russell began his a theologian and ends with a life of service. In order to elaborate these thoughts we will quote Hubbard's description of Beecher in full and follow with a notation of the features they have in common and contrast.

"It would have been worth going miles to see this man as he appeared at Plymouth Church those first years of his ministry. Such a specimen of mental, spiritual and physical manhood Nature produces only once in a century. Imagine a man of thirty-five, when manhood has not yet left youth behind, height five feet ten, weight one hundred and eighty, a body like that of a Greek god, and a mind poised, sure, serene, with a fund of good nature that cannot be overdrawn; a face cleanly shaven; a wealth of blonde hair falling to his broad shoulders; eyes of infinite blue—eyes like the eyes of Christ when he gazed upon the penitent thief on the cross, or eyes that flashed fire, changing their color with the mood of the man, a radiant, happy man, the liveliest, cheeriest, sunniest nature that ever dwelt in human body, with a sympathy that went out to everybody and everything —children, animals, the old, the feeble, the fallen—a man too big to be jealous, too noble to quibble, a man so manly that he would accept guilt rather than impute it to another. If he had been possessed of less love he would have been a stronger man. The generous nature lies open and unprotected—through its guilelessness it allows concrete rascality to come close enough to strike. 'One reason why Beecher had so many enemies was because he bestowed so many benefits,' said Rufus Choate. Talmage did not discover himself until he was forty-six; Beecher was Beecher at thirty-five."

Russell has one pronounced feature in common with Beecher, "guilelessness that allows concrete rascality to come close enough to strike." This lack of power to detect rascality as common people, cost him considerable suffering from ambitious associates who coveted the honors of managing the enterprise he controls, early in the history of the movement, and led to building up legal machinery to conduct the business of the society in such a way that in these transactions they never pass from his control, nor permit others to block any move he wishes to make. This is one of the secrets of the rapid strides of the institution; it has a far-sighted manager who is not hampered with excessive parliamentary machinery. It is unnecessary for him to educate a board of directors before he can act. These corporations through which he transacts his business, were aired in the famous libel suit against the Brooklyn Eagle.

As a further indication of the inability of the President of the Society to judge character in certain directions, we recall an incident related where a friend walking along the street in a crowded city remarked to him indicating some one approaching, "that is a lewd woman." The otherwise intuitive seer expressed surprise at his friend's ability to read character so readily. Another instance: The writer was at one time in conversation with a former member of the "Bethel family" who was traveling with the Photo-Drama and who saw its development through all of its stages (during a period of about three years) up to its being launched in the Temple in New York City. In conversation concerning its details the writer had occasion to ask the following question: "Since you have been working close to C. T. for a good many years—how is he to work for?—is he severe?—especially when you make mistakes?" The reply was: "Well—he don't always get wise; he is very strict in a general way; everybody has to abide by the rules, you see there are so many of us there, he has to be strict in order to manage them, but he is easy to fool when we make mistakes —you can easily pull the wool over his eyes—Brother Russell always gives everybody the benefit of a doubt."

I received your notice of expiration of my subscription to your valuable paper. On account of sickness in the family I must ask you to discontinue the paper. I have four small children and my wife is in the hospital and is likely to be there for some months. I have always appreciated the Tribune and will again renew my subscription when I am able as I will miss its visits very much. Praying for your continued success.

St. Louis, Mo., June 17.

We see from the date on address tag on our paper, that some dear friend has prepaid our subscription, a long time in advance. We greatly enjoy and profit spiritually in the reading of the National Labor Tribune for it has been a comforter to us every week for many years. We pray our heavenly Father's blessing on all the dear friends that are so kind to us, and a liberal portion for yourself, for publishing our beloved Pastor Russell's sermons; and for all your kindness to us and many of the Lord's little ones. To you dear Editor, and all the dear friends we would like to say, God bless you and give you His strength from above

His wisdom to make your perfected in in love.

With sincere Christian love,

BRO. AND SISTER POWLEY.

Medford, Mass., June 16.

I have renewed my subscription to the National Tribune through the Watch Tower office. Your paper is full of good things. The reports of Jesus childhood and letters concerning his execution and resurrection are very interesting. I shall take the paper as long as I can. Sincerely yours.

Tullahoma, Tenn., June 13.

Please excuse delay in renewal, but I have just attended to this through the "Watch Tower" office. Thanks to you for sending it on. was glad not to miss it. Although I have another paper with our dear Pastor's sermon and other features I always wait for the Tribune's sermon on account of the fine large print and broad spacing. Bro. Nelson's articles are appreciated also, and is worth preserving entire, and the letters from many friends add spice to your paper, and are encouraging to many. This is a day of many and great perplexities over the whole world, but those who put their entire trust in the Lord shall never be confounded. Psalm 91. Yours in hope.

SYCAMORE CREEK.

Sycamore, thou gentle stream,
I feign would wirte my constant dream
Of thy clear waters and pebbly shore,
Where I shall sleep when this life is o'er.
The memory of those, my mind can't fiill,
Who on thy banks are living still,
But when I wander in days gone by
For those who "were," my heart gives a sigh.

Thou wilt flow on still, thy peaceful way,
And from thy path will never stray,
For God gave thy shady nook and rill
That thou might's grow and do his will.
When crooked places are made straight,
Then take thy place among the great,
So as the thief desired the Lord's advice,
So surely thou shalt be in paradise.

And when this earth is no more cursed,
Thy sons shall rise to quench their thirst.
As we have oft by sage been told
There is to be an "Age of Gold,"
Then memory of those our minds will fill,
When those that died are living still;
Then when we wander in days of yore
For those that "were," our hearts will sigh no more.

Sycamore is the stream on which I was born and have lived nearly all my life, and where my father, grandfather and great grandfather, my mother, grandmother and great grandmother lived, and were all buried there, and a great many loved ones and friends are sleeping beneath the sod near that beautiful stream.

FINALLY, BRETHREN, THINK!

Quarterly Review—June 25.

The Power of the Mind, the Will—As a Man Thinketh, So Is He—The Power of Evil Thoughts—The Power of Good Thoughts—Think of Pure Things. Praiseworthy Things.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Philippians 4:8.

COMPARATIVELY few people seem to appreciate the great power of the mind and its potent influence upon our lives. Few mothers realize that their very thoughts have to do with the molding of their unborn children—giving them either helpful or injurious dispositions. Few fathers realize this, or seek to cooperate with their wives in the bringing forth of noble children, by stirring up the wife's mind with noble thoughts, high ideals—with things of beauty, grace, art, purity, reverence, spirituality. When people come to know the power of the mother's mind for good or for evil toward the children, it will undoubtedly work a radical change in many homes; for most people would rather do right than wrong, and one of their chief difficulties is ignorance.

But while interested in mankind in general, we are never to forget that the Bible is addressed to God's children, who have entered into a special covenant with Him through the Lord Jesus Christ, and who have become New Creatures through the begetting of the Holy Spirit. The world will be taught and developed during the Millennium. But now, in the present life, the only opportunity for development is on the part of those begotten of the Holy Spirit and expecting a perfecting on the spirit plane in the Resurrection of the Just. As much, therefore, as we feel interested in the world, it is the Christian's duty to follow the Lord's example and be especially interested in his brethren in Christ.

Considering God's Heavens.

Many Christians have learned to govern their actions. Many have learned to control their tongues in a measure, remembering that the tongue with which we praise God could injure fellow creatures. (James 3:1-10.) But restraint of conduct and of word is difficult unless the mind, the will, be brought into line with the will of God. Hence God shows us what He requires, and sets before us great and precious promises, to work in our minds and thus to carry out in our words and actions the Lord's will.

Questions For Self-Examination.

In our Golden Text the Apostle points out the proper course for us to take in getting control of ourselves. Every thought should be challenged; for if an evil thought, a selfish thought, or a mean thought, a depraved thought, be admitted, it will germinate and bring forth a great defilement, which will affect our words and our conduct, and will extend to others. We may learn to do the challenging readily, even along the comprehensive lines laid down in this lesson.

(1) Is the thought which is seeking consideration in our mind an honorable one? If so, it may pass in and be entertained. If not, it should immediately be expelled as an evil influence.

(2) Is the thought suggested pure—not sensual, not selfish? If so, it may pass on for further consideration. If it fails to prove its purity, it should immediately be resented as likely to do great harm—as would the entrance into our house of things infected with a plague.

(3) Is the thought lovely? Does it appertain to lovable things? Does it excite lovable influences, or is it more or less identified with hate, resentment, anger, malice? If lovely, it may pass on. If not, it must be at once expelled.

(4) Is it reputable? Is it one which would be well thought of by all reputable people, if they understood everything connected with the thought?

(5) Has the thought any virtue or is it praiseworthy in any sense of the word? If so, it may be admitted. If not, it should be repelled; for even if it be blameless otherwise, the fact that it is not of any value is a reason for its rejection. We have neither time nor place for things that are merely not bad. We desire to have in our hearts and our minds things that are positively good, helpful, beneficial in some way. Otherwise, the thought should be repelled as a mere cumberer of our hearts, of our minds, needed for profitable things. Much novel reading is of this character—not evil, but not advantageous.

Studying God's Word.

Whatever we may be naturally, the people of God who follow the instructions of the Divine Word surely become noble people, helpful people, possessed of the spirit of a sound mind; and these things will be only a part of their preparation for the Kingdom and for the great work then to be entrusted to them as the servants of God, under their Redeemer and Head.

Appreciations

Pittsburgh, June 15.

What we can do? Show our appreciation to the Labor Tribune by keeping our name on its subscription list and when possible other papers as well. Also to bring it to the attention of others. We may not be able to make or get the world to love us or make the world better under the present existing condition, for if we were of the world the world (professed religious world) would love its own, but ye are not of the world as I (Christ) am not of the world, so the world (professed religious world) will hate you, and if they called the Master of the House Belezebub how much more so those of His Household or Body Members, but what we can do is to love your enemies. We also can do it to make our own individual life better in spite of what the world may think of us or do, We can be of God's workmanship also in Christ, we can by the help of God be living epistles seen and read of all men. We can be in harmony to the following saying, that we have been with Jesus and learned of Him. We can become dead to self and living to God through Jesus Christ. We can by the grace of God seek to make our election sure. We can by the grace of God and in humbleness strive to hold fast to that which we have that no man take thy crown. We can pray one for another. We can, when faithful, build one another up in the most holy faith. We can know that God and Christ is still our own. We may be few in number, but we can through the largeness of heart, by the grace of God in His due time and way make this earth, through Jesus Christ, head and Body, a place of joy, where Eden will bloom without a Tomb. Hail happy day. So as among ourselves. We can avoid trying to shake "the Apple Tree" before time, as to cause any separation before nature's due time, for God knows His own. Remember the chestnut burr opens of itself by God's set laws. So patience, Brethren, for ye have need of patience, when ye have done the will of God.

Appreciatively yours,

HEIGHT AND DEPTH OF INFINITE LOVE.

MARVELOUS CONDESCENSION OF OUR GREAT CREATOR

God's Love for the World That of Benevolence, Compassion—Love Provided a Recovery for Man as Far-Reaching as the Curse—Ultimate Result of Christ's Sacrificial Death—Rule of the Iron Rod—Mercy Tempers All—Man's Only Hope—God's Love for the Church of Christ.

June 18.—Pastor Russell was here today, and discoursed upon the comprehensiveness of Divine Love. His subject commanded close attention and deep interest from a very appreciative audience. The text was, "God commendeth His Love toward us in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." (Romans 5:8.) He said:

It is a wonderful thought that our great Creator, infinite in power and majesty, before whom the mightiest cherubim and seraphim bow in humble adoration, should condescend to pay any attention to creatures as small as we are, sinners by nature and encompassed with infirmities and imperfections. That He can love us and take an especial interest in us seems very wonderful indeed.

Our Lord Jesus Himself assures us that "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16.) It is very certain that the love which God has for fallen men is not a love of congeniality, of fellowship, not a love for their character, but a love of pity, of benevolence, of compassion. In their condition of rebellion and alienation from their Maker there is little in the human race that is worthy of love. They the "children of disobedience," no longer recognized as sons.

But God has pity for mankind in their fallen condition, in which they were born; and He has provided for their recovery from the fall. As any one of noble, sympathetic heart would have a compassionate love for even a poor dog that was wounded and in need of care, so our God, in a much greater degree, sympathizes with fallen man, originally created in His own image and likeness, but now full of wounds and putrefying sores.—Isaiah 1:6.

This compassionate love of our Creator for mankind, who are unable to recover and to restore themselves, has caused Him to make a provision for their redemption, through the death of our Lord Jesus Christ. This arrangement provided not only that God's Son should die for mankind, but that He should afterward become the great King to uplift the world from their helpless, degraded condition and bring them back to the perfection in which Adam was created.

BLESSINGS OF THE "IRON ROD"

This work will be accomplished in the Father's appointed time, when the Messianis Kingdom shall have been set up in the earth. Messiah is to take His great power and reign for a thousand years for this very purpose. His will be a rule of the iron rod; that is, it will be an inflexible domination, one that will neither bend nor make compromise with sin. It will be a rule that all will be compelled to obey; for this kind of government will be absolutely necessary until rebellious man shall have learned the advantages and the desirableness of righteousness. Such a Reign will be of the highest good of all. In their sinful, selfish condition men have had entirely too much liberty. Might and oppression have crushed the weak and helpless. Truly, "Man's inhumanity to man has made countless millions mourn. Such a hard and fast Law as Messiah will enforce will be needed.—Psalm 2:9; Revelation 2:26, 27; 19:15.

But while the great King will rule with an iron rod, He will also be the world's merciful High Priest. All necessary allowance will be made for the inherited and cultivated weaknesses of all. Knowledge and enlightenment will be given to every one, and assistance up the Highway of Holiness then opened up to the world. (Isaiah 35:8.) As in the Jewish type the priests taught the people and brought blessings to them through the Atonement Day sacrifices, so the great High Priest, Christ Jesus, and the under-priests, the faithful Church of Christ, will during the next Age bless and instruct the people, as the result of the sacrifices which have been offered for the world during this antitypical Atonement Day—the Gospel Age.

This great Royal Priesthood will be the future healers of the world. They will heal the diseases—mental, moral and physical—of every one who will accept the gracious terms and provisions then offered. The death of our Lord Jesus as the Ransom-price for Adam and all who died in him was necessary in order that the death penalty resting upon the human race might be lifted. The merit of Jesus' death, as the Purchase-price for all mankind, has thus far been available only for the Church of Christ; but the time is very near when this merit is to be paid fully into the hands of Justice for the sins of the whole world, the entire race of Adam.

WHY THE WORLD'S BLESSING DELAYS

This Purchase-price for the sins of the world has not been applied for the world as yet for two reasons: First, God purposed in His infinite Wisdom that mankind should have an object lesson through the permission of sorrow, pain and death for six thousand years as the result of man's fall into sin, in order that they might learn thoroughly the nature and the effects of sin and see it in all its hideousness. Man's experience was also designed to be an object lesson to all the angels and to every intelligent creature of God throughout eternity.

Second, God purposed first to utilize the merit of Christ's sacrificial death for the class which are to be associated with our Lord Jesus in His great future work of the world's uplift and restoration. As soon as this class, called in Scripture the Church, the Body of Christ, the Bride of Christ, has been completed and glorified with their Lord and Head, has been exalted to reign with Him in the Messianic Kingdom, then the merit of Jesus will be applied for all of Adam's race and in the sealing of the New Covenant for Natural Israel and for all mankind who will then become a part of Israel. Those who refuse to accept the terms of this Covenant, whether of Natural Israel by birth or of the Gentile world, shall suffer the Second Death—everlasting destruction.—Acts 3:23; 2 Peter 2:12.

HUMAN POWER UNAVAILING

The six thousand years during which Sin and Death have reigned over the world are six great days of a thousand years each. During this period God has permitted sin, has not interfered with the reign of Sin and Death, save in so far as His great Plan might otherwise be hindered or thwarted. He wished mankind to have full opportunity to try every device, to use every means in their power, to extricate themselves from their fallen condition, and thus to demonstrate what they could do.

Physicians have exhausted every means in striving to cure the world of their maladies of mind and body. Pills and plasters, remedies too countless to enumerate, have been unavailing. Every conceivable method has been resorted to in the endeavor to conquer disease and restore health. Skilful surgeons have vied with each other in their efforts to nullify, if possible, the effects of disease and accident. But all these can hardly keep pace with the new diseases that are manifesting themselves.

The moral condition of the race is deplorable. Organizations for human uplift and for the recovery of the criminal classes from vice and crime are finding themselves baffled at almost every turn. Sin is so deeply entrenched that the most earnest efforts to overcome evil is like an attempt to stem the course of a mighty river with a few cartloads of earth. Not long ago a noted preacher gave an address on the terrible plight in which the world finds itself today. He declared that immoral diseases are flourishing more than ever before, that the race is headed for destruction, and that unless something radical is done the whole race will destroy itself in a short time. The array of facts which he presented seems all the more remarkable because this gentleman is an Evolutionist by profession, and Evolutionists claim that the race has always been rising toward perfection. Now this Evolutionist declares that man is fast hastening toward destruction!

As to the mentality of the race, we are informed that the average brain is weaker today than ever before, and that insanity is greatly on the increase. It is said that more money is being expended upon our insane asylums than upon both army and navy combined. So, despite of all the efforts of mankind to alleviate their distresses, these are the conditions prevailing after six thousand years. The lesson is obvious. Man is entirely unable to extricate himself from his fallen condition. Therefore the world must look to God for aid. Unless they do so the entire race will be wiped out of existence in a few more centuries. Unless Divine help comes, the whole world will become insane.

THE WORLD'S GREAT SABBATH

During the six great Days of man's great Work Week, humanity has labored hard and accomplished little. Now the great Seventh Day has come, during which man will rest from his own laborious effort at self-uplift and salvation; for God will take all man's affairs into His own hands in the person of His Son. Messiah, with His Bride, the Gospel Church, will then begin the great work of the restoration of the world. The Lord Jesus will set up His Millennial Kingdom. Everything will be turned over to Him, and all the world will be under His control. Mankind will have no voice in the administration of earth's affairs. The great King and His royal associates will regulate everything.

Under the Messianic Kingdom, punishment will be immediately administered for any attempt to do wrong, and reward for every good deed will be at once forthcoming. It is not so now. A person may steal now, and oftentimes not be found out. A man may be so shrewd as to get possession of the hard earnings of others by a form of legality which is none the less fraud. People have stolen and defrauded, on a small scale or on a large scale, and have never been detected or brought to justice. But under the New Order it will be very different. All the hidden things shall be made manifest. Evil and evil-doers shall no longer prosper. But the righteous shall flourish; and the meek shall inherit the earth and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.—Psalm 37:7-11; 72:1-8.

The Bible tells us that when this Kingdom is set up, the ruling power will be on the spirit plane. This phase of the Kingdom will be composed of the Christ, Head and Body, who will all be glorified spirit beings. None but the saintly will compose that Kingdom class, that Heavenly Body of Christ. Under their Lord and Head, they will be the judges of the world. (1 Corinthians 6:2.) These are not judges while in the flesh, but are counselled to "judge nothing before the time." After their glorification they will be qualified to judge righteously but not before.

God is now fitting this class by disciplings, trials, testings, prunings, for their glorious future work, that they may be made ready for a share in the First Resurrection. This will bring a wonderful change to them. Sown in weakness, in dishonor, with blemished human bodies, they shall be raised in power, in glory, in honor, in glorious immortal bodies like their Savior and King. They will then have such spiritual discernment as to be able to know the intentions of all mankind.—Revelation 20:6; 1 John 3:1, 2.

EFFECT OF THE IRON ROD

Respecting that Day of Christ the Scriptures declare: "Nothing shall hurt or destroy in all My holy Mountain [Kingdom]"; "when the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isaiah 11:9; 26:9. Under such conditions people will soon learn to do right. Everybody will then wish to do a kindness to some one rather than to injure another. For a time there may be a degree of selfishness in their kindly acts, but they will soon come to love the ways of righteousness, to do right and to be kind because they desire to do so.

In time the world will come to love the Law of the Lord; for they will perceive that His is the best way. The children of God see this by faith now. They do not receive an outward reward for right-doing, however; they do not secure relief from pain and suffering because they keep the Law of Righteousness. But they believe the Divine promise that in due time they shall be rewarded; and they have a present reward in the joy of heart which the righteous course brings. They have learned to love the right because it is right. Thus they are in harmony with the principles of God's Law.

Doubtless within ten years after the establishment of the Kingdom a great change will be manifest in the affairs of earth. The prompt rewarding of every good deed and the swift punishment of every evil endeavor will make the world a very desirable place in even five years. While mankind have been under the reign of Sin, the Lord has permitted them to be also in a large measure of darkness; for if they had seen the Lord's way clearly and had known the Truth while their hearts were out of harmony with God and righteousness, their responsibility would have been greatly increased.

Light is a blessing only to those who have given their hearts to the Lord. As the Bible says, "Light is sown for the righteous." (Psalm 97:11.) If people are not in harmony with God, what knowledge they have is certain to be used for evil rather than for good. So the Lord withholds the knowledge until His "due time." The Light which He has granted to His people in advance of the world has been as the light of a candle. Thus we have been enabled to see our path a step at a time, and thus to know where we were going. But now we have come to the close of the Gospel Dispensation, and the Lord is throwing a flood of light before us, enabling us to see that the time for the exaltation of the Church is just at hand and that the deliverance of the world is just beyond.

GOD'S LOVE MADE MANIFEST

Soon the glorified Church will be, with their Lord and Head, the great Sun of Righteousness, which is to scatter the darkness which has so long covered the world. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together." They will not need to walk by faith, as the Church does now. They will walk by sight; for the light will be shining around them everywhere. In that Day the world will be rewarded according to their works, and not, as with the Church, according to their faith. While the Church are expected to do all the good works possible, nevertheless there is a special premium upon faith now, when conditions are very adverse. While faith will then be necessary still, it will be much easier to exercise than now. Therefore works will be demanded, and the special reward will be for works.

Thus we see, in harmony with our text, God's great love for all the world, manifested in His wonderful provision for them. Every human being who has ever lived shall have the fullest opportunity to return to God and to the ways of righteousness. But if, after all the manifestation of Divine Love, any shall still prefer the ways of sin, they will "be destroyed from among the people." But all who shall come fully into line with the laws of the Kingdom shall have God's perfect Law of Righteousness rewritten upon the tablets of their hearts. The Lord will take away the stony heart, and give mankind a heart of flesh.—Ezekiel 11:19; Jeremiah 21:33.

But the love which the Heavenly Father has for the Church of Christ, the Bride of His Son, is a very especial love. To these our Lord Jesus says, "The Father Himself loveth you." He declared that the Father loves them even as He loves the Son. (John 16:27; 17:23.) So much does He love them that He has purposed to give them the very best that He has to bestow upon any of His creatures—glory, honor, immortality, joint-heirship with His Son in His Kingdom. Then, in the ages to come, He will show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness to the Church, through Christ Jesus.—Ephesians 2:7.

Essay V.

Copyright 1916 by N. E. Nelson.

He was right, supremely right, in maintaining the headship of his family in his home, and in his business, but he erred, as is now freely admitted, in contending for and practicing strict celibacy. He now sees the Scriptures to teach that strict celibacy is right for the unmarried, and for them only, but he never wavered from the agreement made before his a virgin still; his better understanding of the question of marital celibacy came too late to enable him to use his knowledge is regaining his wife's affections. Mrs. Russell was and is a badly disappointed woman, but it is not because her husband has too little principle but because he has too much. Both husband and wife agreed, before marriage on a principle which both now know was incorrect. Had the husband seen the error first, there would never have been any domestic trouble. The smoke that has arisen in connection with his name has no fire as its origin; it is simply a cloud of dust kicked up by his enemies to detract from his reputation in the eyes of those whom he is endeavoring to serve. They fear and hate him because he is exposing their creeds and are envious of the publicity accorded him by the newspapers of the world. He is clothed with a cloud when seen through the lens of prejudice, but when our vision is properly focused upon him, he is clothed with the rainbow promises of the golden age—the Gospel of Hope for the dying world. Of the things that hide this man and his mission, it is true, as elsewhere, that "Truth is stranger than fiction." Those who are burdened with sorrow often keep the dinner table in a roar of laughter. Those who live in peace and harmony seemingly spend their lives in discord. Those that love the pleasures of solitude think of others, while those that sail in society constantly think of themselves. The modern society belle looks with contempt upon domestic life; domestic peace and happiness are clothed with a mass of cares which are stepping stones to endurance and worth. God puts a price upon his choice gifts and clothes them with a garb to hide them from the unworthy.

BEECHER AND HUBBARD ALIKE.

Ingersoll and Bradlaugh were contemporaries and singularly alike; they were born in the same year, held the same views on religion, were both orators and took a hand in politics; Bradlaugh was forcibly ejected from Parliament for not taking the formal oath of office; and Ingersoll, in reply to a question from a friend as to what his copy of Voltaire's book cost him, said, "the governorship of Illinois." A great deal of this could be said of Beecher and Hubbard. They were alike naturally and religiously; although Hubbard is publicly classed with Ingersoll and Beecher was classed with Spurgeon, his English contemporary. Both Spurgeon and Beecher counteracted the influence of Bradlaugh and Ingersoll in their radical attacks on the established religion. Drummond followed Spurgeon in England leading churchdom into Darwinism. Russell follows Beecher, who inadvertently led Americans to the same goal as Drummond, and Russell counteracts the influence of the whole set upon a certain class of people usually styled "old fogies" by the "cultured." Hubbard and Russell were contemporaries, Hubbard espouses the cause of the Business Man as his special vocation, but failed to notice that his contemporary, Russell, had the business proclivities of many of the special subjects of his essays.

Major Pond performed the same functions for Hubbard in his early lecture tours that he did for Beecher, that of advance agent and attending to the publicity features of the circuit for the lecturer. Major Pond told Hubbard time and again that he had much in common with Beecher—that the founder of the Roycroft fraternity and Beecher were very much alike. This can be readily recognized to the plausible for they were both lovers by nature and with this goes the gift of expression—they go together, as in love-sick poets and in the talkativeness of mother-love in women. Beecher used his tongue; Hubbard his pen, and they both mastered the art. They both had a peculiar feature of religion in common; their precepts of life were alike, that is to say Beecher acted in life the teachings of Hubbard's religion of "White Hyacinths" or the gospel of "Love, Laughter and Work." Hubbard formulated and penned his religion from his own intuition, and Beecher obeyed the impulses of his nature in life—they held about the same views respecting marriage vows; they esteemed them lightly.

BEECHER AND RUSSELL CONTRASTED.

Hubbard gives a splendid description of Beecher and has noted the fact that, in harmony with the principle just set forth respecting progress in Christian knowledge being in exact ratio to the obedience of principle, Beecher did not develop after his fortieth year—he had become "Oslerized" or to use the scientific term, he became a victim of "arrested development." Hubbard describes the fact without attempting to ascertain the cause and finds no fault with it, as follows: "Beecher was Beecher at thirty-five. He was as great then as he ever was. Had Beecher grown after his thirty-fifth year, as he grew from twenty-five to thirty-five, he would have been a Colossus that would have disturbed the equilibrium of the thinking world." He justifies this by saying "It is too much to ask that he should evolve into something more—Nature has to distribute her gifts. The opposition towards great men is right and natural." Beecher's experience in following the impulses of his nature and thus retrograding reminds us of St. Peter's quotation from the prophet Isaiah, "All flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower fadeth away." Prof. Osler's ideas of applying the chloroform to those that pass sixty should apply only to men who live a functional life, with no set principles and ambition in life.

There is certain sense in which the great men are opposites and yet advance in their respective directions, reach the same goal. We have already noted that Wesley and Russell were each other inverted, but were

BIG CONTRACTORS LOSE MORE THAN $1,000,000

Meaningless Disputes and Petty Graft Play Havoc With Big Contractors--Move to Break this Up

The loss sustained by contractors in the Pittsburgh district and particularly those who have been constructing the large buildings, has, during the past ten years, reached $1,000,000.

This vast sum is made up through loss of time and damages inflicted upon innocent parties and this is not all, during this time there has been in vogue a sort of petty graft that has fastened itself upon the community until outside business firms look upon Pittsburgh as the most notorious graft center in this country.

There has not been a large building erected in this city for years that the contractors have not suffered intensely and have not been harassed by some alleged difference that was so petty in consequence of the disaster wrought that it was scarcely worth noticing. Yet these small, trivial and minute matters have driven ligitimate men almost frantic and played havoc with Pittsburgh as a city to be desired in which to do business.

The injury that has been constantly perpetrated upon at least a dozen of the foremost contractors doing business in Pittsburgh is almost incalculable, and the annoyance has been more than nerve racking while every contractor in the building trades has been more or less a sufferer. Is it any wonder then that men in all walks of life, who have in some way or other become victims of the disaster wrought by an element in the trades labor movement, are crying out against the grafters and the paracites who are responsible for the scorn and contempt brought upon innocent workmen and organized labor?

But outside of the grafter and the labor parasite men have actually punished little children some of whom are permitted to attend the public schools only through the incessant toil of a poor mother who has been counting the hours over a washtub, patiently awaiting the day when the son or daughter may graduate from the High School. Since last February no less than ten useless and non-sensicle strikes have taken place on the Schenley High School and a building that should have been finished eight months ago is still unfinished. This means that at least 2,000 children have forever been deprived of eight months schooling which can never be regained. This is a crime against humanity and indeed intollerable. The citizen taxpayers must pay this bill and the citizen taxpayers should demand police protection white other men are put to work if the men employed on the buildings or their leaders are unequal to the task of quickly adjusting trivial matters. Children should not be made to suffer when questions of wages are not involved. Contractors should not be interfered with when they are ready to do all in their power to complete the work which they have contracted to do within a certain time and are paying every dollar agreed to by the employes and the unions in which they are represented.

The conditions became so outrageous that only last week the Board of Public Education of Pittsburgh was compelled to make a public appeal and the reasonableness of this appeal, as well as the necessity, shows the injustice of the workmen or their alleged leaders. The nnoying feature is that men of mature judgment should stoop to such inexcusable small things.

The appeal which appeared in large display type in the Pittsburgh papers, is as follows:

APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC

AND

ORGANIZED LABOR

IN THE INTEREST OF PITTSBURGH AND PITTSBURGH'S CHILDREN.

All other methods having failed, THE BOARD OF PUBLIC EDUCATION makes this appeal to the PUBLIC and ORGANIZED LABOR.

Beginning October 4, 1915, the erection of the SCHENLEY HIGH SCHOOL has been greatly delayed by reason of disputes between two branches of organized labor engaged thereon.

As a result thereof a strike has been in force since February 23, 1916.

Conflicting claims of jurisdiction over work involving less than $300 in value between the Steamfitters and Sheet Metal Workers, both affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, are making it IMPOSSIBLE to COMPLETE THE SCHENLEY HIGH SCHOOL by SEPTEMBER 1, 1916.

This dispute does not involve wages, hours, conditions of labor, or any subject within the control of the School Board or the Contractor.

On the contrary, the Contractor has offered to equally divide the work in question between the contending organizations, or to allow it to be done by members of one organization, paying them therefor, and to pay into the treasury of the other organization a sum equal to its actual cost, thus paying $600 for $300 worth of work.

This proposition has been rejected, both organizations claiming the work.

We urge immediate settlement of this dispute so that the chil-

PITTSBURGH GETS A JOLT FROM BIG FINANCIERS

$200,000,000 Taken from Pittsburgh by the Big Trust and Spent Elsewhere.

The greatest industrial center in the world and the city that "Promotes Progress" is to be handed another terrific financial blow notwithstanding the loss of $150,000,000 within the last decade, through vast expenditures in industrial expansion being invested in other localities at the expense of Pittsburgh.

In addition to the $150,000,000 already taken away from the Pittsburgh district by the United States Steel Corporation alone, $50,000,000 is soon to be expended by the big steel combine in Alabama.

The last appropriation of $50,000,000 for industrial expansion made by the trust was set aside or new plants and additional facilities. Of this extraordinary sum the Pittsburgh district is to get a meagre $5,000,000 while Youngstown gets an equal sum, but the remaining $40,000,000 goes to Garey, Ill., for additional trimmings to the $100,000,000 name plate to E. H. Garey, chairman of the world's greatest trust.

Mr. Garey is a resident of Wheaton, Ill., and his affiliations, connections, alliances and affinities, hopes and ambitions are located or directed westward and everything under the pretense of meeting trade conditions in the central west are going to Chicago or within easy distance east or west of the Windy City.

Mr. Garey knows not how long he may remain at the head of the big combine it is self-evident that while he is at the head every thing that can go west is being moved there or when new appropriations are made for increasing operations, facilities, or plants for output, Garey is the ideal spot, the Birmingham; the Pittsburgh of better days; the industrial monarch.

Garey is heralded as the Garden of Eden for school children. In Garey is the greatest public school in America. The taxpayers support it. The remaining part of Garey from car observations, is shacks, save the $150,000,000 which was made in Pittsburgh by the trust and surreptitiously dragged off for the benefit of the windy horde and the meat packers combine.

It was said Garey could furnish no foundation substantial enough to hold the monster engines. The engines have been built and the sandy beds are equal to any of the clay base along the banks of the Monongahela river. The mills are in full operation and Chicago financiers are wallowing in the benefits of at least $100,000,000 invested in new operations and are rushing things on the remaining $40,000,000 while they are looking with longing eyes toward the additional $50,000,000 promised to Alabama. The latter $50,000,000 is to be appropriated as soon as the court has definitely settled the pending suits.

The steel corporation is looking forward to a favorable decision and on this opinion depends Alabama's fate. This means the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company is to enjoy the products of a new coal field the equal of the Pittsburgh district and from the $50,000,000 appropriation for southern industrial developments new steel barges are to be built and these used to transport a product in competition with the Pittsburgh Coal Company, which at one time controlled the river coal trade, but which, through keen competition of the southern coal competitors, has been forced to relinquish its hold.

It is said among the financiers here that Mr. Garey was responsible for interesting western financiers in the United States Steel Corporation and in return he has thrown his support to transfering further operations to the west. This was the beginning of the town of Garey, and Garey has been well taken care of since Mr. Garey became the active head of the big trust, and Mr. Garey, it is said, is still determined to make Garey greater.

In order to combat the pretended arguments against Pittsburgh that freight rates are excessive and cannot be overcome, Secretary Bert Patterson, of the Lake Erie and Ohio Ship Canal Commission is completing arrangements for the Canal Commission to visit, during the approaching week, the Welland Canal, the purpose being to secure information regarding the grade, the capacity and other important details.

Secretary Patterson contends that the Lake Erie and Ohio Ship Canal is the only feasible argument to Mr. Garey and the western financiers who are determined to strip Pittsburgh of her industrial supremacy.

Mr. Garey with his western friends, have all the advantage and the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation are not at all sentimental, nor are they influenced against Pittsburgh through any other motive than to give the stockholders substantial earnings on their investments.

If the money is to be spent on excessive freight rates the corporation is to go without earnings and to avoid this the town of Garey was established. Regardless of Mr. Garey's personal identity or his $100,000,000 name plate he had the argument with him when he started and the suggestion that a western plant be erected was easy when the success or failure of the corporation was to be determined by additional capital.

Mr. H. C. Frick, it is said, wants Pittsburgh, and being largely interested in the Pennsylvania Railroad, it is necessary that he look

Lord Kitchener's Interest in Union Labor

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, June 15, 1916.

Among the many and great services given by Lord Kitchener as Secretary for War, was his able and tactful handling of the difficult problem of compulsory military service. Labor was at the outset almost wholly opposed to it in any form. Will Thorne (Labor Member of Parliament and General Secretary of one of our biggest trade unions, one voicing the interests of gas workers and general laborers, had for some years associated himself with the proposal for a civilian army embodying the principle of military training, but the scheme had failed to secure any real measure of support in the trade unions. The agitation for compulsory military service was regarded with undisguised suspicion by the trade unions, and the small but active pacifist section succeeded in accentuating the hostility of workers by the suggestion that it was the first step to industrial compulsion. So strong was the feeling pervading the ranks of the trade unions that a resolution protesting against the sinister efforts of a section of the Press to foist on the country that which had always proved a burden to the workers, and would divide the nation at a time when absolute unanimity was essential, was unanimously passed by the Trade Union Congress at Bristol in September of last year.

The danger which would have attended any premature resort to compulsion was happily averted by the action of Lord Kitchener at the private meeting with the leaders of the trade union movement. Lord Kitchener discussed the military situation with a frankness and sincerity which won the complete confidence of practically the whole trade union movement. "I am as much opposed to conscription as ever," remarked one of the strongest and most influential trade union leaders, "but I am prepared to accept it and work for it whenever Lord Kitchener says it is necessary. I have implicit confidence in him."

That fairly well represents the opinions of most trade union leaders who have been brought into personal communication with Lord Kitchener. His sincerity and rankness secured the whole hearted support of the general body of trade unionists for the Derby recruiting campaign, and later for compulsory military service. It is an undeniable fact that the confidence which the trade unions had in Lord Kitchener did much to smooth the path of the two Militry Service Bills in Parliament, and their ready and loyal acceptance by the workers of the country.

The Management Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions have sent the following telegram to the War Office:

The Management Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions hear with deep regret the report of Lord Kitchener's death by drowning. The committee had the fullest confidence in his ability as a soldier and appreciated his attitude towards labor. To them he was not only an able but a straight man.

W. A. APPLETON,
Secretary.

A special Trade Unions Congress will be held in London on Friday, June 30, to consider questions arising out of or in connection with the war, particularly the increases in the prices of food and fuel, the necessity for increasing old age pensions, and the effect of the Military Service Act on trade union organizations and administration.

J. E. Williams, the secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen has tendered his resignation on account of ill health, and it has been accepted. Mr. Williams will, however, continue to discharge his duties until the end of the year. Williams has been branch secretary for 25 years and for 14 years has acted as head office official.

Mention of this regretable resignation of one of our most important trade union officials reminds me that I must not forget to recall that a mass meeting of all grades of railwaymen, was held at Cardiff (Wales) on June 4, to consider the situation which has arisen through the constant rise in the cost of living. A resolution proposed that the National Executive take immediate steps in conjunction with the Miners' and Transport Workers' Federations to bring pressure to bear upon the Government effectively to prevent the continued rise in cost of living, or, alternatively, that the railway men demand an advance of wages to meet such additional cost. After a long discussion an amend-

WILL GORDON BRING BACK THE MONEY?

Attorney A. M. Lee, With a Battery of Lawyers, to Break Up Alleged Labor Disputes.

The National Labor Tribune is determined that business men doing business in Pittsburgh or the Pittsburgh district so far as lies within its power and the power of the courts shall be protected in their business transactions or affiliations with organized labor, and to this end a battery of attorneys under the direction of Attorney A. M. Lee has been employed.

The first task to be undertaken is the right of M. Gordon, Business Agent of Electrical Workers Union No. 5 to force J. W. Marshall, business representative of the A. & W. Sign Company of Cleveland, to pay to him in cash $110.00

When the demand was made for this $110.00 Mr. Marshall refused to pay over the sum of money but M. Gordon went to the Liberty Theatre and ordered all electrical workers on the building to quit work.

The electrical workers obeyed the order of Business Agent Gordon and the work on the Theatre was practically at a standstill. This condition brought the management of the Theatre after Mr. Marshall of the A. & W. Sign Company and finally Mr. Marshall was forced to call his Cleveland office over the long distance 'Phone. After relating the condition of the building and the refusal of Business Agent Gordon to permit the electrical workers to proceed with the work of wiring the building, the A. & W. Sign Company sent a check the amount of which was $110.00 payable to M. Gordon, but the latter refused to accept a check and demanded the money in cash. "I will get you the cash in five minutes" said Mr. Marshall "if you will endorse this check." Gordon still refused to endorse the check or in any way accept it. "I will give you the cash if you will give me a receipt for the cash" said Marshall. "No, I will not give you any receipt." The controversy continued owing to Gordon's refusal to accept the cash. The dispute was finally ended through the H. E. Kennedy Company, Architects, handing the money to Gordon and receiving from him two receipts one bearing the name of Burke and another Sharpe. It is alleged that Burke received none of the money up to the present writing (Wednesday) and it is also alleged that Burke was working during the time this controversy was going on.

The A. & W. Sign Company have been employing Union Labor and the action of M. Gordon is regarded as the most outrageous proceedings ever inflicted upon a concern employing organized labor but this appears to be thoroughly in keeping with a course that has been in vogue in Pittsburgh for several years.

The original dispute began with an electrical sign sold to the Famous Store at McKeesport the structural work of which was erected by Union Structural Iron Workers and members of that International Union. After this work had been completed Gordon of the Electrical Workers demanded that the sign be taken down and erected by the Electrical Workers.

Mr. Marshall regarded this action as rediculous and refused to comply with the demands because the men who worked on it were union men. About the same time the A. & W. Sign Company through Mr. Marshall had sold to the Liberty Theatre an electrical sign and were erecting this sign on the Theatre. Here it was that Gordon demanded that the men quit work and remain out until the A. & W. Sign Company pay to him $110.00.

All the time this was going on Business Agent Moyer, of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers Union protested against Gordon's actions and declared he had no right to pull the electrical workers off the theatre.

The trouble was referred to the Trades Labor Council but it is alleged M. O'Sullivan, the Secretary referred the communication back to the Secretary of the Electrical Workers Union No. 5, who is said M. Gordon. That is all the further the letter seemed to have gone.

The interesting portion of the outrage is that the original sign cost $94.00 and Gordon made the A. & W. Sign Company come across with $110.00 and Attorney Lee is preparing to bring such legal action against Gordon as is necessary to compell him to return the money. The proceedings are not to stop there. They are to be pressed to the extreme until this vicious procedure is broken up.

Mr. Marshall is disgusted with Pittsburgh and the manner by which building contractors are held up in the name of organized labor. He has just received a letter from President J. E. McGlory, International President of the Bridge and Structural Iron workers in which Mr. McGlory writes in part:

"I regret the way the electrical workers have hampered the progress of the work simply because of Union Structural Iron Workers to do there what they have been doing all over the country for years, namely the erecting of structural steel signs, that is the structural work only.

"And while at this time I have no knowledge of what the situation at McKeesport is now, I earnestly hope that the fact that I did not receive your letter sooner has not been the means of causing you any great inconvenience. I appreciate the fact that your firm has

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Anxious to learn, from any quarter, whatever God had to teach, I at once wrote to Mr. Barbour, informing him of my harmony on other points and desiring to know particularly why, and upon what Scriptural evidence, he held that Christ's presence and the Harvest of the Gospel Age dated from the autumn of 1874. The answer showed that my surmise had been correct; namely, that the time arguments, chronology, etc., were the same as used by Second Adventists in 1873. It also explained that Mr. Barbour and Mr. J. H. Paton, of Michigan, a coworker with him, had been regular Second Adventists up to that time; and that when the date of 1874 had passed without the world's being burned up, and without their seeing Christ in the flesh, they were for a time dumbfounded. They had examined the time prophecies which had seemingly passed unfulfilled, and had been unable to find any flaw. Therefore they began to wonder whether the time was right and their expectations were wrong—whether the views of Restitution and blessing to the world, which others were teaching, might not be the things to look for.

It seems that not long after their 1874 disappointment, a reader of The Herald of the Morning, who had a copy of the Emphatic Diaglott, noticed something in it which he thought peculiar—that in Matthew 24:27, 37, 39, the Greek word parousia, which in our Common Version is rendered "coming," is in the Diaglott translated "presence" — evidently the correct translation of the Greek. This was the clue; and following it, they had been led through prophetic time toward proper views regarding the object and manner of our Lord's Return, and then to the examination of the time when the things indicated in God's Word as related to Christ's Parousia should take place. Thus God leads His children often from different starting points of Truth. But where the heart is earnest and trustful, the result must be to draw all together.

There were no books nor other publications setting forth the time prophecies as then understood. So I paid Mr. Barbour's expenses to come to see me at Philadelphia (where I had business engagaments during the summer of 1876), to show me fully and Scriptually, if he could, that the prophecies indicated 1874 as the date at which the Lord's presence and the Harvest began. He came; and the evidence satisfied me. Being a person of positive conviction, and fully consecrated to the Lord, I at once saw that the special times in which we live have an important bearing upon our duty and work as Christ's disciples; that since we are living in the time of the Harvest, the Harvest work should be done; and that Present Truth is the sickle by which the Lord would have us do a reaping work everywhere among His children.

I inquired of Mr. Barbour as to what was being done by him and The Herald. He replied that nothing was being done; that nearly all the readers of The Herald, being disappointed Adventists, had lost interest and stopped their subscriptions; and that thus, with money exhausted, The Herald might be said to be practically suspended. I told him that instead of being discouraged and giving up the work since his newly found light on Restitution (for when we first met, he had much to learn from me on the fulness of Restitution, based upon the sufficiency of the Ransom given for all, as I had much to learn from him concerning time), he should rather feel that now he had some "good things" to preach, such as he never had had before; and that his zeal should be correspondingly increased. At the same time, the knowledge of the fact that we were already in the Harvest period gave to me an impetus to spread the Truth such as I never had had before. I therefore resolved upon a vigorous campaign for the Lord and for the Truth.

THE BEGINNING OF THE HARVEST WORK

I determined to curtail my business cares and give my time as well as my means to the great Harvest work. Accordingly, I sent Mr. Barbour back to his home with money and instructions to prepare in concise book form the Good Tidings so far as then understood, including the time features, while I closed out my Philadelphia business preparatory to engaging in the work, traveling and preaching.

The little book of 196 pages, thus prepared, was entitled, The Three Worlds, and while it was not the first book to teach a measure of Restitution, nor the first to treat of time prophecy, it was, I believe, the first to combine the idea of Restitution with time-prophecy. From the sale of this book and from my purse, our traveling expenses were met. After a time I conceived the idea of adding another Harvest laborer, and sent for Mr. Paton, who promptly responded and whose traveling expenses were met in the same way.

By noticing how quickly people seemed to forget what they had heard, it soon became evident to us that, while the meetings were useful in awaking interest, a monthly journal was needed to hold and develop that interest. It therefore seemed to the Lord's will that one of us should settle somewhere and begin again the regular issuing of The Herald of the Morning. I suggested that Mr. Barbour do this, as he had experience as a typesetter, and could therefore do it more economically; while Mr. Paton and I would continue to travel and contribute to its colums as we should find opportunity. To the objection that the type was now sold, and that the new subscriptions that would come in would not for a long time make the journal self-sustaining, I replied that I would furnish the money for purchasing type, etc., and leave a few hundred dollars in bank subject to Mr. Barbour's check, and that he should manage this as economically as possible, while Mr. Paton and I would continue to travel. This, which seemed to be the Lord's will in the matter, was done.

It was after this, while on a tour of the New England states, that I met Mr. A. P. Adams, then a young Methodist minister, who became deeply interested and accepted the Message heartily during the week that I preached to his congregation. Subsequently I introduced him to little gatherings of interested ones in neighboring towns, and assisted otherwise, as I could, rejoicing in another who, with study, would soon be a colaborer in the Harvest field. About this time, too, I was much encouraged by the accession of Mr. A. D. Jones, then a clerk in my employ in Pittsburgh—a young man of activity and promise, who soon developed into an active and appreciated colaborer in the Harvest work, and is remembered by some of our older readers. Mr. Jones ran well for a time; but ambition or something else eventually worked utter shipwreck of his faith, and left us a painful illustration of the wisdom of the Apostle's words: "My brethern, be not many of you teachers, knowing that we shall have a severer judgment."—James 3:1, Diaglott.

SIFTING AS WHEAT

"Satan hath desired to have you, that he might sift you as wheat."—Luke 22:31.

Until then all had run smoothly onward. We had been greatly blessed with the Truth, but not especially tested in our love and fidelity to it. But with the summer of 1878, the parallel in time to our Lord's crucifixion and His utterance of the above quoted words, the sifting began which has continued ever since, and which must, sooner or later, test every one who receives the light of Present Truth.

"Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which shall try you, as though some strange thing happened to you"; for "the first shall try every man's work of what sort it is"—whether he has built his faith flimsily of wood, hay and stubble, instead of with the valuable stones of God's revealed Truth; or whether he has built it upon the shifting sands of human theories (Evolution, etc.), or has built it upon the solid rock, the Ransom, the only sure foundation, which God has provided. They who build upon that Rock shall be saved personally, even though they may have built up an illogical faith, which the "fire" and shaking of this Day of trial overthrow and utterly consume. But they who have built upon any other foundation, whether they have used good or bad materials, are sure of complete wreck. —Luke 6:47-49; 1 Corinthians 3:11-15.

The object of this trial and sifting evidently is to select all whose heart desires are unselfish, who are fully and unreservedly consecrated to the Lord; who are so desirous of having the Lord's will done, and whose confidence in His wisdom, His way and His Word is so great, that they refuse to be led away from the Lord's Word, either by the sophistries of others or by plans and ideas of their own. There in this sifting time will be strengthened and will increase their joy in the Lord and their knowledge of His plans, even while their faith is being tested by the falling into error of thousands on every hand.—Psalm 91:7.

The sifting thus began: It was regarding St. Paul's statement (1 Corinthians 15:51, 52), "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," etc. We still held the idea which Adventists, and indeed all Christians, hold, that at some time the living saints would be suddenly and miraculously caught away bodily, thenceforth to be forever with the Lord. And now our acquaintance with time prophecy led us to expect this translation of the saints at the point of time in this Age parallel to the Lord's resurraction; for many of the parallelisms between the Jewish and Christian dispensations were already seen by us, and formed one of the features of the little book above referred to—The Three Worlds.

We did not see then as we do now (see Studies in the Scripture, Vol. III., Chapter 7), that April, 1878, marked the time for the beginning of the establishment of the Kingdom of God, by the glorification of all who were already asleep in Christ; and that the "change" which St. Paul mentions in 1 Corinthians 15:51 is to occur in the moment of dying to all the class described, from that date onward through the Harvest period, until all the living members ("the feet") of the Body of Christ shall have been changed to glorious spirit beings. But when, at that date, nothing occurred which we could see, a reexamination of the matter showed me that our mistake lay in expecting to see all the living saints changed at once, and without dying—an erroneous view shared in by the whole Nominal Church, one which we had not yet recognized as an error and discarded.

Our present clear view was the result of the examination thus started. I soon saw that in the Apostle's words, "We shal not all sleep," the word sleep was not synonymous with die, though generally so understood; that, on the contrary, the expression "sleep" here used represents unconsciousness; and that the Apostle wished us to understand that from a certain time in the Lord's presence, His saints, though they would all die like men (Psalm 82:6, 7), would not remain for any time unconscious, but in the moment of dying would be "changed," and would receive the spirit body promised. Throhugout this Gospel Age, dying has been followed by unconsciousness, "sleep." This continued true of all true saints who fell asleep in Jesus," up to the time when He took the office of King (Revelation 11:17)' which we have shown was in the Spring of 1878. See Studies in the Scriptures, Vol. II., pp. 212-219.

Not only did the King at that date awaken in His likeness all the members of His Body, the Church, who slept, but for the same reason (the time for establishing the Kingdom having come) it is no longer necessary that the "feet" or last remaining members go into "sleep," or unconsciousness. On the contrary, each now, as he finishes his course, faithful unto death, will at once receive the Crown of Life, and being changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, cannot be said to sleep, or to be unconscious at all. Here—1878—Revelation 14:13 became applicable: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth."

So this reexamination showed further light upon the pathway and became a good cause for encouragement, as evidence the Lord's continued leading.

markable personality reminds us of the great Newton, who, according to Spencer, was possessed of the greatest intellect since Aristotle, and whose work was hailed by Lapace as "pre-eminent above all other products of the human intellect." Newton's baby form was snatched from the jaws of death by a loving mother: quoted, "Sent before my time into this breathing world, scarce half made up," and left the mite to die. Does it not seem as if God would verify his word that "no flesh should glory in His sight?"

That St. Paul was expressing a truth that applied in Science as well as Theology when he said, "God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the things that are mighty?" Darwinism (the "Survival of the fittest") does not apply here.

Some of the many published defences of our modern Goliath against the vicious attacks of his enemies, have placed him on a par with the great Newton—the difference being in the field of application—one the physical universe, the other the theological. We are inclined to think that this is the expression of love for, or living too close to, the man, or the limitations of their knowledge of other men in the field.

In the first place none could be properly qualified to judge the proportions of two men unless they had the capacity to, and had absorbed the learning of both, and a knowledge of the conditions under which they labored. Spencer had evidently absorbed all that Aristotle and Newton had given the world and had placed Aristotle first. (Darwinism does not seem to apply here—Newton should have been the greatest—he came last.) Even Spencer could not get the proper estimate of Russell, not being familiar with the sphere in which he moved; for this reason it would be folly for those who are not properly qualified to venture any more than an opinion. So it is not our purpose in associating these two men of completely different types, with this one feature in common, to give the impression that the man from Long Island ranks intellectually with the Great Newton. But we have no hesitancy in concurring with the thought entertained by the members of the I. B. S. A. propoganda that Russell is the greatest Bible scholar the world has produced.

Russell and Luther had somewhat the same experience as regards health. Russell did not believe he would live past the opening of the twentieth century and had made provisions for the promulgation of his literature under the supervision of his wife—"man proposes, God disposes." Luther from the age of eighteen to thirty-five was a frail and sickly monk, living in the gloom of the monastery, with indigestion and all of its attendant evils. This was evidently brought about by living on the streets as a boy singing for pennies, half clad and not enough wholesome food to sustain life properly, as well as his perverted conceptions of "mortifying the flesh" in the monastery by lashing his body with straps and sleeping on beds of ashes until grewsome sores broke out on his body. His despondency was so marked that he made preparations for death and frequented the confession until his superiors became impatient with him and transferred him from the monastery to a school at Wittenberg and put him to work as a teacher and janitor. Russell, in common with Luther, has developed his body and maintained his health by hard work and enthusiasm. The following from the pen of Luther is demonstrated by the life of Russell:

"Only slaves die of overwork. Work a weariness, a danger, forsooth! Those who say so can know little about it. Labor is neither cruel nor ungrateful; it restores the strength we give it a hundred-fold and, unlike your financial operations, the revenue is what brings in the capital. Put your soul into the work and joy and health will be yours."

We have taken your excellent paper for many years, appreciating more and more the religious features; for the Gospel of Glad Tidings as preached by Pastor Russell is meat in due season to us and satisfies our longing as nothing else we have ever found could do. Your paper has given a faithful witness and no doubt has brought the harvest message to thousands whose hearts were hungering for just such a loving message from the Chief Reaper. May it continue the good work through evil report and through good report unto the end.

NEW PLANETARY THEORY.

Professor Chamberlain of the University of Chicago, has announced a new theory of the solar system. What is the sense of another theory? La Place's is good enough. It is reasonable and easily understood. It is not probably that we can be sure of any theory, but La Place's nebular hypothesis seems to answer every demand of a theory. It leaves some points unexplained, but so do all theories. But the old-time nebular hypothesis is good enough for us, says Ohio State Journal. It appeals to one as a sensible explanation of the formation of the solar system. One can see the same process in the skies any clear night he looks through a strong telescope. One of the "sweet influences of the Pleiades" is the formation of worlds which one can easily see in a powerful reflector. Before La Place proposed his theory, the big thinkers of the world had sensed the same. It should stand until another is proposed which is as easily understood, which is not the case with the Chicago professor's.

New light has been thrown on the legal side of arsenic poisoning. It has been found that arsenic compounds are absorbed by the hair of living persons though not absorbed after death In the hair of man arsenic has been known to reach a concentration of one to five parts in 100,000. The deposit takes place in the hair after it has been absorbed by the abdominal organs—liver and kidney in particular Therefore, in case of acute, quick poisoning a chemical analysis of the hair would show no arsenic while it would be found in the liver and kidneys, says Scientific American. On the other hand, if slow arsenic poisoning was suspected, analysis would show arsenic in the hair, but not in the liver and kidneys, and it could safely be assumed that the poisoning was not recent. The legal value of such evidence is apparent.

Keeping a soldier in the field fighting involves a vast deal more than putting a gun into his hands. He must be placed where there is fighting to do, must be fed, sheltered, provided with all kinds of paraphernalia, says New York Press. It would be positively dangerous to place a million soldiers along a fighting line where only half a million were needed, unless back of that million were transport facilities, stores, etc., to keep them in good condition. Mexico is teaching us a lesson not only as to inadequate numbers of troops but as to lacking essentials for troops.

ST. PAUL AT THESSALONICA AND BEREA

Acts 17:1-15—July 2.

Method of Indoctrination In the Early Church—Importance of Unprejudiced Study of the Bible—The Ransom the Pivotal Point of the Gospel—The Few Believed—The Majority Embittered.

"Him did God exalt with His right hand to be a Prince and a Savior."—Acts 5:31.

AFTER the magistrates had led the missionaries forth honorably from the prison, St. Paul and Silas returned to the house of Lydia, where they met the brethren and comforted them. Then, having concluded that God's providence was directing them elsewhere, they left Philippi, and went about one hundred miles to the southwest, to Thessalonica, now known as Salonica, the largest commercial city of Macedonia.

At Thessalonica the missionaries found a Jewish synagogue; and in harmony with their usual custom they attended worship there. For three Sabbath days St. Paul discussed the Bible with the Jews. The propriety of his course is evident. The Jews were familiar with the Messianic prophecies, and were continually hoping for the fulfilment of the grand promises made to Abraham.—Acts 26:7; Hebrews 6:13-19.

This form of preaching the Gospel is excellent. We have endeavored to revive it amongst the friends of Present Truth everywhere by commending to them the Berean Bible Studies and such discussions of the Word of God with the aid of helps.

After telling us that the Apostle reasoned with the Jews concerning the Gospel Message our Study explains something of his method; namely, he opened the Scriptures to them, pointing out what they had not previously noted respecting Messiah—the fact that it was necessary for Christ to suffer death and to arise from the dead before He would be the King promised.

St. Paul at Thessalonia.

The Jews knew of the Scriptures which referred to Messiah's sufferings. But these they ignored, and grasped only those which referred to His Millennial Reign of glory. What they needed was just what the Lord sent them in the Apostle.

St. Paul showed them the connecting links between the two lines of prophecies pertaining to Messiah. He pointed out the fact that death reigned over mankind through the power of sin inbred, ingrained; and that none could be released from this condition without a Redeemer. Messiah would indeed reign over the world; but previously a redemption must take place, a lifting of the curse of death. Then he produced the facts of Jesus' death, "the Just for the unjust," and showed that our Lord's resurrection was exactly what had been declared by the Prophets, and was necessary for Him in order to carry out in due time the blessing of Israel under the New Covenant and of the world through them.—Gen. 3:19; 12:3; Jer. 31:31-34.

Then the Apostle showed that first, however, an elect class must be gathered, to be associated with Messiah in His Kingdom; and that these must demonstrate their worthiness by laying down their lives in consecration in His service. The sum of the Apostle's argument was, "This Jesus whom I preach unto you is Messiah."

The Effect of This Message.

A few Jews believed the Message and sided with St. Paul and Silas. With them were some devout Greeks and a number of prominent women.

St. Paul and Silas at Berea.

But the majority were embittered. Having no logic wherewith to overcome the arguments of the missionaries, the unbelieving Jews resorted to Satan's usual tactics of misrepresentation, slander, thus arousing prejudice, hatred, malice, etc. They even incited a mob to make an assault upon the house of Jason, where the missionaries were. Not finding them, the mob took Jason and others before the magistrates, and charged them with treason.

Apparently this attack was not permitted of the Lord until those who had an ear to hear had a good opportunity to hear the Message. The rulers put Jason and the other believers under bonds, to guarantee that these Christian missionaries should raise no further disturbance. St. Paul and Silas realized that their work at Thessalonica was ended; and they agreed to leave the city.

Their next stopping place was Berea; and as usual they went first to the synagogue. There they were agreeably surprised to find the Jews very honest-hearted. Professing to believe all that was written in the Law and the Prophets, professing to be looking for Messiah, the Bereans began to examine the Scriptures daily, to see how well the Apostle's arguments were supported by the testimony of God's Word.

But the Jews at Thessalonica learned that the missionaries were at Berea, and forthwith began to foment strife and to raise a disturbance amongst the people. Then St. Paul went to Athens, where Silas and Timothy followed.

Dayton, Ohio, June 23.

Pardon me for this line relative to the poem in the June 15th issue: "What is the Conclusion?" It seems, I perhaps was a little in haste. Since a few little changes were made which seem to make the meaning a little clearer. I inclose the same and if you wish it a place in your paper again it will be all right—thanking you for this trouble.

I hope to be a subscriber to your paper as I note its good features, especially Pastor Russell's sermons. I was quite interested in Pilate's Report.

I remain sincerely yours,
A. H. KURZEN.

WHAT IS THE CONCLUSION?

If men at one time were monkeys,
Protoplaun, microbe, fish and horse,
Mosquito, bug, bird and donkeys:
How do we account for the source?

Of the lost art of embalming,
Tempered copper, elastic glass,
Of the Pyramid—its planning—
How did the great structure amass?

When we draw aside the curtain
And view the scenes of the past day,
It all looks very uncertain;
Men sprung up on this earth that way.

True, the past shows somethings were crude,
Savage and fierce,—clear out of range,
Can the past be properly viewed
When facts are contrary and strange?

All we see of this present day
And all results because of men,
Seem no less strange, who would not say?
But what is the Conclusion then?

No monkeys now turn into men;
And, monkeys at no time were gods.
For the effect the cause has been—
(Thirty and three feet make two rods.)

Do we have the Conclusion then?
Is the question unanswered? When—
Cause and Effect now make it plain:
The Effect—Thought, the Cause—Brain.

LOVING KINDNESS OF OUR GREAT GOD.

MISUNDERSTANDING OF GOD'S CHARACTER LEADS MEN INTO SKEPTICISM

Love of God Constrains—Many Made Agnostics by Erroneous Teachings—Very Little Gospel Preaching for Many Centuries—Heathen Bewildered by Unreasonable and Conflicting Creeds—Truth Now Clear to Earnest Bible Students—Majority of College Professors Know Nothing of the True Teachings of the Bible—Many Truth-Hungry Souls Stumbling Into Latter-Day Errors—To Know God Aright is Life Everlasting.

ST. LOUIS, June 25.—Pastor Russell spoke today before the I. B. S. A. Convention which is in session in our city. His text was, "Because Thy loving kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise Thee." (Psalm 63:3.) The Pastor said in part:

More and more are we noticing that the Bible presents to us a God of loving-kindness, and from that view-point calls upon us to render some return to Him. More and more are we impressed with the erroneousness of the creeds. How they misled us into thinking of our Heavenly Father as anything but the kind, loving Parent presented in our text! In harmony with this thought of the loving-kindness of our God, the Apostle says, "The love of Christ constrains us." (2 Corinthians 5:14.) Since Christ is the "express image of the Father's glorious person," God also constrains us—draws us to Himself by His love.

It is very probable that the reason why so many have been kept away from God is that He has been very seriously misrepresented to us all and by us all. When we read the Apostle's words to the effect that the heathen are feeling after God, if haply they might find Him (Acts 17:27), we ask ourselves, Why is it that the heathen have not found the Lord? Evidently St. Paul expresses the right sentiment here; for mankind are so constructed that the highest and noblest organs of our brain are those that call for reverence for the Almighty God. Therefore it would be the most natural condition for all men to desire to have a God, to have fellowship with Him, to have His favor and blessing, and to have the everlasting life which He has offered.

But we find the very reverse of this, not only Christian lands, but in lands where the Gospel has been preached to a very limited extent. Not only do we find many who neglect the Lord and care little for Him, but we also find many who have turned away from Him entirely and who are antagonistic to Him. They call themselves agnostics, a term which signifies persons who do not know anything definite about God, persons who demand proof of the existence of things supernatural. There is a difference, however, between an infidel—an unbeliever—and an agnostic. Some of the leading people of our day candidly confess that they are agnostics. They are feeling after God, trying to find Him. Then there are some who drift from one denomination to another; and others, such as Christian Scientists, who are outside of all so-called orthodox demoninations—all feeling after the Truth, but not having a knowledge of it.

REPELLED BY FALSE TEACHINGS

It is difficut to estimate how much harm has been done by the doctrines which misrepresent God's character. Erroneous teachings are responsible for the many denominations all calling themselves Christians, though knowing little about God and Christ—for the most part, merely formal professors. Only a few claim to be fully consecrated to the Lord. After all these centuries of preaching, we would naturally expect better results. The trobule is that during all these centuries there has been very little real Gospel preached. If we had been taught the simple Truth during the entire Gaspel Age, and not the "doctrines of demons," doubtless the results would have been more like those obtained in the early Church, when thousands turned to the Lord.—Acts 2:41; 4:4.

Noble Christians they were, not merely formal professors. The Apostle tells us of some who endured a great fight of afflictions, who suffered great loss; and of others who became the companions of such as were thus treated. (Hebrews 10:32, 33.) Under Nero, the Roman Emperor, and later under Diocletian, many Christians suffered for loyalty to God. It required a great deal of character to stand up and be willing to suffer even unto death for righteousness' sake. Had this spirit continued, where do you suppose Christianity would be today?

A few years ago, when I was in so-called heathen lands, some of those heathen people came to me one morning, just before my departure and said, "Pastor Russell, we are sorry that you are leaving us. We wish that you could stay longer. We did not get out to hear you last night; for we supposed that your teaching was something like that of the missionaries here. But we are told that it is very different; and we would like to hear you. We know that there is something in Christianity; but we cannot understand how it could be true, as the missionaries have told us, that thousands upon thousands are suffering in eternal torment because they did not know about God." Some said, "The gods of the heathen are better than your God. We are taught not to take the life of even a worm, and to be careful where we tread, lest we kill some little creature. How different from what the missionaries tell us about your God! Can you wonder that we are not Christians?'

You will perceive that these people are feeling after God and wishing to find Him; but they are bewildered by misrepresentations of the God of the Bible. Of course, we could converse only through an interpreter; and as my schedule placed a time limit upon me, I could not remain with them longer to tell them about the loving-kindness of our God, as I would have liked to do.

" YE KNOW NOT WHAT SPIRIT YE ARE OF"

When St. Paul was in Athens, he recognized the fact that the heathen were feeling after God and trying to find Him. On the street corners and elsewhere they had vain images erected to represent their multitudinous gods; and lest they should overlook even one, they had erected an alter to "The Unknown God." St. Paul noted the fact and preached to them the true God. But they were so steeped in superstition and error that when they heard of the true God and His Plan they were not ready to receive the Gospel.

If the truth had been proclaimed by the best of teachers all down the Gospel Age, the result might have been the same. Perhaps it would have been rejected; perhaps only a few would have been willing to receive the Message. But experience teaches that many people would like to know the truth about God. Even children of ten years of age and younger are interested to know about Him; and many at the age of twelve or fourteen years have a clear understanding of His Plan.

False doctrines have driven people away from the Lord; and Christian people, under the delusion of these false doctrines, have shown anything but a proper Christian spirit. They have not known what manner of spirit they were of, as was the case with St. James and St. John. You will recall that the people of a certain Samaritan village had refused to sell bread for the Master's use. St. James and St. John asked our Lord, "Wilt Thou that we call down fire from Heaven and consume them?" The Master replied, "Ye know not what manner of Spirit ye are of. The Son of Man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them."—Luke 9:51-56.

Like these two disciples, Christendom has had a wrong focus. We have not understood our Father in Heaven, nor His Plan. We had a devilish idea, engendered by the doctrines of demons, (1 Timothy 4:1.) During the Dark Ages, men were burned at the stake and put through various forms of torture, all in the name of Jesus, in the name of religion. What a terrible mistake. Did not this drive the people away from the Lord and the Truth? Did it not do great injury to those who perpetrated such crimes as well as to the world at large? Yes; and it all resulted from the lack of knowledge of God.

But now, by the grace of God, the light is shining clearly upon the Bible. God's people today can appreciate our text, perhaps in a way not appreciated even by the early Church. Because of God's loving-kindness our lips shall praise Him. How far removed is this thought from what many of us were taught in childhood—that God was vengeful, ready to throw us to the Devil; but that our Lord Jesus stepped in and said, "Please do not! I died for these people. Allow Me to show them mercy!" and that then the Father would say, "For Your sake I will; otherwise I would throw them into eternal torment."

What a wretched picture! Where would God's loving-kindness be? But when we see that God arranged a wonderful Plan of Salvation before the foundation of the world, that He has a great Purpose in gathering out of the world a Church, a Bride for His Son, to become Heavenly beings of the Divine nature (2 Peter 1:4), for the blessing of all mankind later, then we begin to see His loving-kindness, His tender mercy.

RIGHT AND WRONG VIEWPOINTS

Now we have come to a time when our conceptions of God are growing clearer. We are awakening from the sleep of the past. We are getting our eyes of understanding open a little. We are looking and thinking, in the right direction. Many others are looking, also, but in the wrong direction. The great professors in our colleges are looking, and are seeing things, too; but they are not looking in the right direction, however. A former professor in one of our western colleges came into the knowledge of Present Truth recently. One day he remarked to one of the brethern, "It is not necessary to teach Evolution to the young men or women who come to college. They enter with their minds already prepared on that subject, having gained ideas along that line from their school books and elsewhere. They have already been taught that Evolution is the way by which man came into the world. Furthermore, nearly all of the faculty in all of our colleges and universities are Evolutionists."

Many of the thinking people of the world are looking about in the direction of Theosophy of New Thought or Christian Science. They are searching for light, not knowing where to go. The degree of light which we enjoy who have come to understand God's Plan is to be highly appreciated. "Blessed are your eyes; for they see." You have looked in the right direction—that which God has pointed out—in His Word. Higher Critics, Evolutionists, and others who lean to their own understanding are in darkness. Those who are looking carefully into the teaching of the Bible are being drawn closer to God, and are obtaining a deeper appreciation of Him as a personal God.

All who accept these theories of men regard God as a Principle without personality. If any who follow these cults still believe in a personal God, it is because they have not as yet gotten the idea of their leaders. The theory is that there is a principle of good which operates everywhere, and that principle is God. Hence they say that God is everywhere and in everything. To them, God is a great law of nature. Is there any intelligence in such a law? Is there any sympathy, any love, there? Not a bit! They worship the principle. They adore the law and not the great Author of law.

GOD'S LOVING-KINDNESS KNOWN TO FEW

Our text speaks to those who have learned to know God. Since the days of the early Church not many have known of God's loving-kindness. It has been lost sight of, even as the teachings of the Bible have been. Only through the Bible can any know of God's loving-kindness and tender mercy. The words of this text have been true of all who have been in close relationship with God throughout the Gospel Dispensation. More fully than ever before do the Lord's people realize His love and mercy today. More light is shining upon this class than ever before. Truly we know something of the loving-kindness of our God.

If this realization has come into your heart, it is having a transforming effect upon your heart and mind; for it is having this effct upon all of God's people. The Psalmist declares that this loving-kindness of our God is better than life—the present life, not the future. It is this loving-kindness which has provided for a future life for us. In view of this fact, we count what remains of the present life as a trifling thing, not worthy to be compared with what God has in reservation for us. As a training school for life to come, this life is very valuable, but not for its own sake. So we are glad to lay it down in the service of God. We have not been compelled to do so, however. God is not compelling any one to sacrifice. Whoever makes a sacrifice that is acceptable to God must do it of his own free will.

Our hope is built upon the loving-kindness of our God. As soon as we saw His loving character, we gladly surrendered our little all. It was the same with our Lord Jesus. Did He not, in appreciation of God's loving-kindness lay down His life? And so it has been with all who walk in His footsteps. Thus we appreciate God's provision for the future as far better than the present life, and are willing to surrender all of our earthly prospects, counting them as loss and dross, in order that we may secure the glorious things which God has promised to those who love Him.

WILLING SERVICE, NOT COMPULSION

Our text goes on to say, "My lips shall praise Thee." We praise God with joy in our hearts. He does not demand our praise; it is not that we MUST do this or that. We should not ask, "Must I do this?" or, "Will God require that?" This is not the right spirit; rather, it is just the reverse. Let us serve the Heavenly Father and do His will as our Lord Jesus did. He said, "I delight to do Thy Will, O My God! Thy Law is written in My heart." (Hebrews 10:5-9; Psalm 40: 7, 8.) We, too, will praise God with joyful lips for the privilege of service and of suffering for His name.

This spirit was exemplified in St. Paul and Silas, when on account of their loyalty to the Truth they were imprisoned at Philippi. There in the prison, with their backs smarting from the stripes which they had received, with their hands and their feet fast in the stocks, and with their bodies in a most uncomfortable position, these two faithful servants of God had so great an appleciation of God's loving-kindness that their lips gave utterance to songs of praise, telling the Good Tidings to others.

So it is with us, dear Brethren. We cannot keep God's gracious Message to ourselves. As the Phophet said, it is like a fire in our bones; we cannot stifle it. (Jeremith 20:9.) We must praise our God. We must declare our appreciation of the glorious things which He has in reservation for the Church and of the blessings which He has in reservation for the whole world of mankind. Because His loving-kindness is better than life, we praise Him with joyful lips.

WONDERFUL STORY OF GOD'S LOVE.

To know God is life eternal, the Master said, (John 17:3.) This being so, not many as yet have eternal life; for only a few know God. It is not sufficient to know that there is a God, nor to realize that He is a living Being, not a Principle. As the Scriptures say, "He that cometh to God must believe that He is (a personal God), and that He is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." (Hebrews 11:6.) We first believed; then we sought to know His will concerning us.

Thus doing, we found that He had made a provision in His Love whereby we might come from under the condemnation of sin and death and be admitted into His family. We offered ourselves to Him through Christ our Redeemer. God accepted us and gave us the begetting of His Holy Spirit. By and by, if we are faithful, we shall be born on the spirit plane and have joint-heirship with Christ Jesus our Lord.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Essay V.

The one sided feature of great men that Hubbard calls attention to applies to Russell as well, and to a marked degree; this departure from perfection of endowment exists in him physically and mentally. Wesley and Beecher were both gifted with strong bodies and well balanced mentalities out on their social, poetic and artistic sides, above that of their intellectual; nor is he gifted to the same degree with the beautiful sentiments that link us together and give permanence to society. Russell has not been endowed with a strong body, with all its attributes of rapid growth, as illustrated in Beecher, but leans more in the direction of Talmage, in that his genius is a flower of slow growth. He did not enter the field with his credentials, but proclaims his right to stay there by the laurels he won in the endeavor. ("Success consists in the climb.") His ordination is being recognized by the rank and file, the laity, whereas the routine products are ordained by the elect few, the clergy. We will note the distinguishing features of Russell and Beecher, first from a (a) mental point of view, then (b) physical:

(a) Russell is not what Beecher was, but is what Beecher might have been—Beecher's possibilities—"a Colosus that would have disturbed the equilibrium of the thinking world, and created a revolution instead of evolution." In not being what Beecher was, whose credentials and brilliancy commanded the attention of the influential, Russell did not disturb the balance outside of orthodoxy and created a revolution only amongst those that Providence guided. Russell is Beecher's antithesis. He posseses more depth than brilliancy; is more of a Seer and Teacher than a Philosopher and Logician; yet he has these above Beecher; although his genius consists pre-eminently in intuition, his writings are fused with a vein of logic that identifies him with the Apostle Paul as his prototype. He is not without deficiencies and faults. A well balanced man like Beecher or King David could not accomplish the work outlined for Russell. For a strong man to change the tendencies of those he serves, he must of necessity lean the other way—Russell is the right man, in the right place, at the right time.

Beecher was "too noble to quibble"; Russell is "too theological"; and St. Paul is 'the prince of theological quibblers." It is hard to please everybody. If avoiding quibbling is a mark of nobility then "condescend to men of low estate" as did Paul who did not quibble with the Jews for the sake of it. He indulged in it for their sake and in this he shows a mark of nobility: "I speak after the manner of men on account of your infirmity." Russell leaned in this direction in the morning of his manhood when he gathered up all the kernels of truth floating about and incorporated them into his literature that is now flooding Christendom. This literature now serves to arrest the attention of the People of God who are leaning on theological definitions to a degree that amounts to a weakness. The age in which we live is adverse to theological discussions which as late as fifty years ago flourished amongst stubborn and honest Christians of a pioneer life. But we are now in the dawning of a new age in which "All shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest," by another method, under the reign of the Messianic Kingdom. In this age "It pleases God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Pastor Russell has put the finishing touches to theological discussion; he has said the last word—Reformation by Doctrine ends with his mission. A new age is dawning.

This theological discussion, of which Russell's literature is chiefly composed, is by no means a reflection of the man. Strangers that know him theologically, and get into conversation with him, are often astounded at the contrast between the man and his literature. He will entertain and take part in conversation on any subject that you may choose—he never intrudes his views upon anyone. Yet if you broach the subject of his beliefs he will talk in a manner that inspires faith—no one will doubt his sincerity. A prominent Jewish editor who had no faith in the Old Testament, after an interview with him on the political phase of Zionism, left his presence with a remark something like this: "I entered that study a skeptic and came out a firm believer in the prophesies of the Bible": His personality is to strong that his office force shares all his moods, yet he has succeeded in keeping them out of his works. He has so thoroughly succeeded in keeping the "natural man" out of his "Studies in the Scriptures" that they can be literally said to be a work of art. The author of this serious, abstruse and profound literature is, like Beecher, a youthful, mirthful, personality, fond of jokes but not hilarious. His wit, inherited from his Scotch-Irish ancestry, is of a subtle nature that sparkles in gray eyes of slow movement, in which also glows a strangely open and childlike simplicity. In his society anyone can feel perfectly at ease, though at times he is severe. His wit does not consist of memorized jokes but is off hand discrimination in conversation and current incidents, and is one of his diversions; the only way he dissipates, and like the wizard Edison, the only vacation he has known anything about from the standpoint of experience for thirty-five years. Yet this amiable and decidedly entertaining personality, as a general, is a veritable Napoleon, who was a dictator, tyrant and egotist—the only kind of a general with whom any army would be safe. Russell in his official capacity is dictatorial but wise and reliable, a beneficent tyrant, and an egotist only in matters in which he knows he is right. He is a greater general than Napoleon in that he has mastered himself: his theology no Waterloo awaits, even though his enemies may temporarily stop his propaganda.

(b) From a physical point of view, Russell dwindles into insignificance as compared with Beecher and Wesley. Wesley would have passed the century mark had it not been for his unfortunate love affair. In comon with the noted philosopher Kant, Russell has pulled through a strenuous life with a weak heart and weak lungs and is still in the arena carrying a larger load of responsibility than ever, with a constant headache and a serious rectal disorder that will constantly sap his vitality until he rests from his labors. Such a frail body clothing such a re-

BRING THE FAKERS TO SPEEDY JUSTICE

The National Labor Tribune Invites Employes Employers to Join in a Crusade of Extermination -- Lawyers Furnished Free.

Of all the falacious, deceptive, delusive, fraudulent and mendacious shams and fakes no necromancer or sorcerer ever had anything on the labor renegade, or that species of human degeneracy operating in the Pittsburgh district.

This species has manufacturer and employer of labor constantly hiding in the trenches and when he dares to venture out it is only when well fortified with a check book or a voucher.

Not only has the manufacturer, contractor, and large employer of labor been made a victim of this perfiduous and treacherous coterie but the laborer himself has suffered intensely through insideous schemes which he has succeeded in pulling off with the smoothness, clerity and cunning of the experienced safeblower and he performs his awful crimes with as little compunction for his victim as the most desperate highwayman.

Only recently an effort was made to hold-up the labor unions for $39,500.00, according to figures furnished by the chief participants in the spoils. This was to be done under the pretense of organizing a legal bureau for the purposse of fighting the employers and harassing manufacturers or contractors who refused to be shaken-down. No manufacturer, contractor or employer of labor was to be overlooked and the details were set forth in a circular sent out to the elect who were to put through the plans. The building contractors during the last decade according to estimates paid over $1,000,000.00 to be permitted to proceed with their work even after all wages according to the demands of the Union had been paid and no dispute existed between employer and employe. This $1,000,000.00 it is alleged, was tribute, to the grafting labor leader, who has extorted money and actually committed grand larceny on every contractor doing business in the Pittsburgh district. This alleged labor leader, the faker of the trades movement, has become such a menace to the business interests of Pittsburgh that the Tribune has undertaken to exterminate him and put an everlasting end to his foul and shocking deeds.

Before said labor leader attempts his nefarious work he plans well and leaves nothing unturned to poison the mind of those whom he claims to represent but misrepresents.

He works men into a frenzy by maliciously charging the employers with doing things which investigation finds to be absolutely false. He draws vicious pictures of fraud being practiced so that attention is directed from himself while he thrusts his hands into the pockets of the "Poor Man" upon whom he levies tribute by assessment which in the aggregate according to his own figures would amount to $39,500.00 annually. In order to introduce successfully a vicious graft plot necessary to portray the employer as a hideous monster exposing all his evil traits.

Lacking the necesssary ability the "Chief Counsellor at Law" is mustered into this exalted office. Said attorney now transformes himself into a real modern Leonardo Da Vinci, whose wildness of fancy and imaginative genius is to culminate in a frightful picture of the employer. Like Leonardo the swamps, river-mud, and sewers are drawn for hideous reptiles, adders, lizards, serpents and all the crawling and obnoxious things and out of these leaps a human moster or chimera which with eyes flashing fire and an aspect so fearful and abominable that it contaminated the very air around. This is the chamber into which the Union man is led and after a vision of this hideous and horrible monster his vote to levy a tribute of 52 cents weekly on 75,000 union workmen is easy.

All might have worked out well had not the editor of the National Labor Tribune cruelly kicked over a bucket of paint on the picture, threw the artist's palette into the junk heap and tearing the mask from the artist exposed the cunning plot, the purpose of which was to harass employers, cause discensions which the papers might print and thereby such may be used as a pretense for squandering the tribute which is to be divided among the "elect." who are riding around in expensive automobiles which it is alleged were bought with money collected from employers who were compelled to fork over cash to keep their operations going.

Before the grand smash-up of the project, preparations for a real carnival of crime were almost completed but in unmasking the plans, temporary relief has been afforded those who were to be subjected to the torture.

The peculiar feature is that since the disclosure responsibility for thwarting the tricky plan is being charged against others with the purpose of incurring ill favor for destroying something that might have been of value to the "poor man."

The National Labor Tribune assumes all responsibility. It will go further to aid the "poor man," and will not stand for even the "other" being deliberately and wilfully held-up.

In order to meet any and every condition the National Labor Tribune has organized what will hereafter be known as the Tribune's Legal Department. This Department will be prepared to

LATEST LABOR NEWS FROM MANY POINTS

News Items Picked Up Here and There Depicting the Status of Labor in Many Centers.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—A delegation of Mexican labor leaders, here to confer with American Federation of Labor officials on means for re-establishing harmony between the United States and Mexico, today outlined their views on the subject to the Washington correspondents.

Carlos Loveira of Yucatan, spokesman for the delegation, expressed the belief that an American army could occupy Mexico "after a short struggle," but Colonel Edmund E. Martinez of Mexico City declared a war would be long and difficult. They insisted that withdrawal of General Pershing's expedition would solve the whole difficulty and that Carranza troops then could prevent border raids.

Several of the labor leaders were emphatic in declaring that "Wall street interests with holdings in Mexico," were Villa's partners.

"You ought to send a punitive expedition into New York," said Mr. Loveira.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., uly 3.—The Moving Picture Operators' union has inaugurated a campaign for better ventilation for its members while working.

"It is indeed a difficult matter," says President Harden, "to explain to the layman the dangers of badly ventilated and unsanitary operating rooms, for few, if any, of the motion-picture patrons have the opportunity or inclination to visit the workshop of the man behind the gun—the man who daily sits hour after hour in a little cubby hole and causes the picture to flicker across the screen: The high rates charged us by the insurance companies, however, should be absolute proof of the hazardous nature of our work.

"Already we have had two deaths in our organization as a direct result of the confinement under which our men must labor ,and we are at the present time paying sick benefits in an effort to combat further fatalities. There are also several of our members who, while being in no immediate danger are, nevertheless, being constantly treated for affliction of the lungs, caused by the poisonous gases arising from the burning carbons of the arc lamps. It is to alleviate conditions such as these that we are pleading for better air in which to work."

PRESSMEN'S HOME, TENN., July 3.—In their report to the convention of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union, this union's delegates to the last convention of the American Federation of Labor said:

"It is good to be able to advise that in all propositions appearing before the convention, the printing trades acted jointly, not only in the presentation of resolutions bearing upon matters of mutual consequence, but likewise in the support of them before the assembly. It is possibly the first time in the history of the printing trade unions where joint action in this respect has been carried out. It is reasonable to expect that this course will be followed in the future."

TRENTON, N. J., July 3.—The state department of labor has organized a workmen's compensation aid bureau and has opened offices in 12 of New Jersey's principal cities. The law provides that this bureau must keep in close touch with the administration of the compensation law and explain the workings and purposes of the statute to both employer and employe.

It is intended to give injured workers information without cost and secure their benefits under the law without the aid of lawyers.

GRAYS HARBOR, WASH., July 3.—Practically every shingle mill in this locality has re-established old rates and abandoned the attempt to reduce wages. Many strikes have been called by the Shingle Weavers' union throughout the northwest for this reason, and the solidity of the workers is proving effective.

LONDON, ONT., July 3.—At the convention of the Master Plumbers' association of Ontario it was acknowledged that the new workmen's compensation law was proving satisfactory, despite former claims that it would injure business.

Trade unionists say "We told you so," although the workers are complimenting these employers on their frank confession that they were mistaken.

YONKERS, N. Y., July 3.—Motormen and conductors of the Yonkers, Mount Vernon & New Rochelle street railway system have presented a request for a wage increase of 5 cents an hour. These workers are members of the Amalgamated Street Car Men's union.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—The Labor Council has instructed its officials to ask the Washington authorities to arrange for a six-day work week for engineers and firemen employed at army posts and in federal buildings in the vicinity of San Francisco.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—"As a loving token from the Mexican workingmen to the workers oi America" is the principal inscription on a medal presented to the American Federation of Labor by Colonel Edmundo Martinez on behalf of Mexican organized workers at the quarterly meeting of the A. F. of L. executive council.

Colonel Martinez conveyed greetings of the Mexican workers and their earnest desire for international peace, good will and fraternity. President Gompers, on behalf of the executive council, accepted the medal and in appropriate terms reciprocated the expressions of good will tendered. Messrs. Carlos Loveira and Balthazar Pages, the labor delegates from Yucatan, and Mr. John Murray, accompanied Colonel Martinez at the presentation.

The medal is inscribed, "To the American Federation of Labor," with hands across a square and compass.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., July 3.—As a result of conferences between officials of the Mine Workers' union and the Reading Coal and Iron company several strikes have been settled. Short strikes have started throughout the anthracite region since the establishment of the eight-hour agreement. The miners insisted that wrong interpretations have been placed on same. These differences, however, are being rapidly adjusted and the number of work suspensions are diminishing.

DENVER, Col., July 3.—The convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen has voted greater power to its president in cases where members are charged with criminal negligence in connection with wrecks. The delegates expressed no sympathy for the man whose neglect causes loss of life or property, but they intimate that there have been cases where public officials, at the instigation of railroad companies, would not be averse to prosecuting a fireman, thereby relieving the company of responsibility, if they were sure the fireman was not financially able to defend himself.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Typographical union No. 101 has appointed a committee of 35 to act with the executive committee to arrange for a day of entertainment in honor of delegates and visitors to the Baltimore convention of the International Typographical union who will visit the nation's capital an entire day.

BALTIMORE, July 3.—The International Association of Machinists opened its fifteenth convention in this city last Monday. This is the first convention held by these workers since 1911. The Machinists' constitution provides for a referendum vote on the question of conventions.

BILLINGS, MONT., July 3.—Bakers have formed a union and received a charter from the international of this craft.

BOSTON, June 27.—Longshoremen's union No. 917 announces that agreements have been signed with the Savannah line, Clyde line, United Fruit, Maine coast line and the Plant line. A strike for higher wages against the Merchants & Miners' Trinsportation company is on, and about 300 strikers have joined the union.

DETROIT, Mich., June 27.—Nearly 200 Polish bakers affiliated to the international Union of Bakery and Confectionary Workers, struck to reduce hours and raise wages. About a score of shops have settled with the union.

Minimum Wage for Women Workers

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, June 22.

It will be remembered that when, last July, Mrs. Pankhurst, sundry other notabilities, and a pageant of nations went to visit the Minister of Munitions, the Minister, David Lloyd George, promised to all women workers on munitions of war "a fair wage and a fixed minimum." That was more than ten months ago, but the problem of women's wages has not been yet solved, and the "fair wage" and the "fixed minimum" seem as far off as ever.

Something has, of course, been done, but it is clearly inadequate—thanks to one extent to the steady rise in the cost of living—to redeem the promise made last July. Women engaged on men's work are only assured a rate of a little above a sweated rate; women not on men's work are even nearer the sweating line; many women are still without the protection of any minimum at all. Moreover, a number are still not getting the rates to which they are legally entitled.

What is needed is a drastic and comprehensive minimum rate to be applied universally to all women on munitions work. This rate, of course, must not interfere with higher minima that have been, or may be, secured to special classes of women workers. The principle of such special higher rates requires to be extended, especially to those women who are doing the work of semi-skilled men. But the most urgant need of all is for a general minimum to be applied nationally to all clases of women who are engaged on war work. This minimum must be a 'fair wage," as Lloyd George promised. In view of the rise in the cost of living, it cannot reasonably be less than ten cents an hour. The fixing of such a flat rate, below which no woman on war work could sink, would set the artibration tribunal free to fix the higher special rates which many classes of women workers can justly claim.

Along with this general minimum must go a revision of the $5 a week minimum for women who are doing men's work. If women munition workers generally are entitled to a living wage, then clearly, according to our present standards of remuneration, women on men's work are entitled to something more, if only as a means of protecting male standards. When the famous Circular L2 was first issued many critics pointed out that $5 was too little, and the sum only found acceptance because of the scandalous rates that were being paid to many women who had taken the places of men. Now, the $5 minimum is worth in purchasing power only $4 as compared with last October and less than $3.25 as compared with July, 1914, and the least that can reasonably be done is to raise it to $6.25 which would about bring it level with the increase in prices since October. Moreover, since then women on men's work in the tailoring trade have secured a minimum of 10 cents from the Trade Board and women cloth workers a minimum of four-fifths of the men's rate and a guarantee that the aggregate wage paid to the women shall not be less than that of the men they displace. These rates are far beter than anything that has been won for women in engineering.

The problem of women's wages needs courageous treatment and the Minister of Munitions certainly does not lack courage. It is hoped that he will exercise his powers without further delay by declaring a fair national minimum for women on war work, by raising the minimum for women on men's work, and by insturcting the special arbitration tribunal to fix witout further delay special rates for women who are doing the work of semi-skilled men. These reforms are easy to bring about and the machinery for enforcing them already exists. Only a few strokes of the pen are needed to remedy one of the most crying injustices still remaining in the administration of the Munition Acts.

Several important annual conventions of trade unions have been held during the past week. The National Transport Workers' Federation met at Glasgow, Scotland, and dealt with a large number of transport workers' questions. Perhaps the most exciting debate was in connection with the resolution moved by a delegate pressing for the repeal of all the acts of Parliament imposing military service on people of this country and pledging the convention to oppose conscription unless it was coupled with the conscription of wealth. A hot debate resulted and the resolution was lost, voting being eighty-one thousand for it and a hundred thousand against it.

GOVERNOR AND MAYOR ALREADY AGREED UPON

Babcock and Jamison Get the Magee Seal--Armstrong Also Gets Place and Magee is Big Boss.

Only the war spirit came to divert the attention from the real political activities that threatened to bring about a harmonious relationship that put a smile on every face, a song on every lip and started the joy bells ringing in every political soul.

It is the unadulterated, par excellence, and guaranteed by the expert political pharmaeutical dope compounder and injector—other that Sam Jamison—to be the article that makes the politician minutely observe himself in the mirror to see how he looks when he's feeling gladsome.

Its this way, Ex-Mayor William A. Magee, would like to be Mayor once again to break the record; to do the unprecedented, the novel, the unrivalled; that which will go down in history; that which everybody says can't be done and as the public views it, once a Mayor, thence to the slag heap.

If precedent is to be continued, then Magee is doomed. He has exceptional political friends who still speak kindly of him but Magee has also his enemies. Further let it be understood and impressed upon the minds of every one that the late Mayor has a keen, well settled and defined antipathy against the Pittsburgh Railways Company. Why this aversion, this awful dislike, this pronounced repugnancy, this strange abhorance for a company that is selling a ride for 5 cents, the cheapest the market affords, and what by taxi would cost $1.50, is something the public does not understand and if explained heretofore seems of so little apparent consequence that a gentle zephyr has presumably brushed it from memory.

Magee's friends are telling him to forget it. Others forebode evil if he continues; still others are pressing him to rid himself of that tantalizing, destructive and loathsome feeling otherwise the future holds for him nothing save disaster, ignominy and shame.

Here's the plot: The next Governor is coming from the western end of the state. Magee is allied with the Vares, the Philadelphia aggregation operating the trouble machine in the saintly city. The McNichol faction of contract fame and fortune will accept an honest man—that's going some—Penrose will bow to fate—that's humbling himself to be exalted. The quartette of compromise and harmony is composed of Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong, Coroner and former Straight Republican County Chairman Samuel C. Jamison, William Flinn and Ex-Mayor William A. Magee.

The ticket will be E. V. Babcock, for governor,
Samuel C. Jamison, Mayor,
Joseph G. Armstrong, Sheriff or something else.
Hon. Charles Kline, Judge Common Please Court,
Hon. James B. Drew, Judge Common Please Court.

The coroner's office and the remaining judiciary candidates are later to be selected with the candidates for district attorney. It is said the list of members of the Allegheny County Bar Association could be printed and with few exceptions would be an accurate list of candidates for judiciary honors. Hon. Thomas J. Ford, and Hon. John D. Shaffer are at present members of the judiciary but as to whether they are to receive an endorsement from the quartette is a matter that has not yet been reached. However, the conferes are to shape their plans so that Magee for his support of Babcock, Jamison and Kline is to remain as Public Service Commissioner and Magee is to name certain councilmen who shall have the unqualified endorsement of Mayor Armstrong and the Armstrong-Jamison combination. In addition Magee shall name certain members of the Jamison cabinet and shall also name some county officers including Judge Drew for Common Pleas Court and Sheriff Richards for an office to be selected later.

The candidate for District Attorney is to be decided upon later as well as the other offices and it is not yet definitely decided whether Mayor Armstrong is to be the candidate for Sheriff or accept an appointment, probably his old place as Director of Department of Public Works.

Magee is safe, practically so, for four years, after the expiration of the term of Governor Brumbaugh, but for the harmony adjustment he is to be given a preference between the Attorney Generalship, Secretary of the Commonwealth, to succeed Cyrus E. Woods, or continue in his present office.

Should he decide to remain in his present office he may name who shall succeed any of the latter present incumbents. There shall be an amicable settlement as to councilmen. Magee selecting John Daily, J. S. Herron and W. Y. English, and the agreement that all shall support the Mayor in the budget and other municipal matters of vital importance.

The campaign promises to be the most interesting in the history of the state and the line-up originally was Magee for Mayor, forming a combination with William Flinn and J. Denny O'Neil, the latter having been fortunate enough to land himself into the office of State Insurance Commissioner, a place for which he is well qualified, since he has the insurance mania. J. Denny insured the employees of Allegheny County, who were exempt from insurance, under the Workmen's Compensation act, merely, of course, to rec-

DENYING THE RANSON

But while I was thus helped to clearer views and brighter hopes, and while I diligently endeavored to help others, the spring of 1878 proved far from a blessing to Mr. Barbour and to many under his influence. Rejecting the plain, simple solution presented above, Mr. Barbour seemed to feel that he must of necessity get up something new to divert attention from the failure of the living saints to be caught away. But alas, how dangerous it is for any man to feel too much responsibility and to attempt to force new light! To our painful surprise, Mr. Barbour soon after wrote an article for The Herald denying the doctrine of the Atonement—denying that the death of Christ was the Ransom-price for Adam and his race, saying that our Lord's death could no more avail for the payment of the penalty of man's sins than would the sticking of a pin through the body of a fly and causing it suffering and death be considered by an earthly parent as a just settlement for misdemeanor in his child. I was astonished; for I supposed that Mr. Babour had a clear understanding of the work of Christ as our Sin-Offering, our willing Redeemer, who, gladly cooperating in the Divine Plan, gave Himself as the Ransom, or corresponding price, to meet the penalty upon Adam, that Adam and all his posterity might in due time go free from sin and death.

A totally different thing indeed was the willing, intelligent, loving offering of our Redeemer, according to the Plan devised and revealed by Infinite Wisdom, from the miserable caricature of the Ransom offered in Mr. Barbour's illustration. Either I had given Mr. Barbour credit for clearer views than he ever had, or he was deliberately taking off and casting away the Wedding Garment of Christ's righteousness. The latter was the only conclusion left; for he afterwards stated that he had previously recognized Christ's death as man's Ransom-price.

Imediately I wrote an article for The Herald in contradiction of the error, showing the necessity that "One die for all," "the Just for the unjust"; that Christ had fulfilled all this as had been written, and that consequently God could be just and forgive and release the sinner from the very penalty which He had justly imposed. (Romans 3:26.) I also wrote to Mr. Paton, calling his attention to the fundamental character of the doctrines assailed, and pointing out how the time and circumstances all corresponded with the parable of the one who took off the wedding garment when just about to partake of the wedding feast.—Matthew 22:11-14.

Mr. Paton replied that he had not seen the matter in so strong a light before; for Mr. Barbour had a strong, dogmatic way of putting things which had for the time overbalanced him. I urged that, seeing now the importance of the doctrine, he also write an article for The Herald, which in no uncertain tone would give his witness also for the precious blood of Christ. This he did. These articles appeared in The Herald from July to December, 1878.

"THE WATCH TOWER BEGUN"

It now became clear to me that the Lord would no longer have me assist financially, or be in any way identified with anything which cast an influence in opposition to the fundamental principle of our holy religion. Therefore, after a most careful though unavailing effort to reclaim the erring, I withdrew entirely from The Herald of the Morning, and from further fellowship with Mr. Barbour. But a mere withdrawal I felt was not sufficient to show my continued loyalty to our Lord and Redeemer, whose cause had thus been violently assailed by one in a position to lead the sheep astray—and in that position, too, very largely by my individual assistance and encouragement, when I believed him to be, in all sincerity, true to the Lord. I therefore understood it to be the Lord's will that I should start another journal, in which the standard of the Cross should be lifted high, the doctrine of the Ransom defended and the Good Tidings of great Joy proclaimed as extensively as possible.

Acting upon this leading of the Lord, I gave up traveling, and in July, 1879, the first number of The Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence made its appearance. From the first, it has been special advocate of the Ransom; and, by the grace of God, we hope it will be so to the end.

For a time we had a most painful experience. The eraders of The Watch Tower and of The Herald were the same; and from time to time the former started, and the supply of funds from this quarter for The Herald ceased, Mr. Barbour not only drew from the bank the money deposited by me and treated all he had in his possession as his own, but poured upon the Editor of The Watch Tower the vilest of personal abuse, in order to prevent The Watch Tower and the doctrine of the Ransom from having due influence upon the readers. This, of course, caused a division, as such things always do. The personal abuse, being regarded by some as true, had its intended effect of biasing the judgments of many on the subject of the Ransom; and many turned from us.

OTHERS REPUDIATE THE RANSOM

But the Lord continued His favor, which we esteem more valuable than the favor of the whole world. It was at this time that Mr. Adams espoused the views of Mr. Barbour, and likewise forsook the doctrine of the Ransom. And true to our interpretation of the parable of the Wedding Garment, as given at the time, Mr. Barbour and Mr. Adams, having cast off the Wedding Garment of Christ's Righteousness, went out of the light into the darkness of the world on the subjects once so clearly seen; namely, the time and manner of the Lord's presence; from that time, onward, they expected Christ, Spring or Fall, down to the Spring of 1892, which was their latest disappointment, so far as we heard.*

During this ordeal, or we might truly call it, battle for the cause of Christ, we had the earnest cooperation of Mr. Paton, who, up to the Summer of 1881, was an appreciated colaborer and defender of the doctrine of coming blessings through Christ, based upon the Ransom for all given at Calvary. The book, The Three Worlds, having been for some time out of print, it seemed as if either another editor or a new book covering the same features should be gotten out.

Mr. Paton agreed to get it ready for the press; and Mr. Jones offered to pay all the expenses incident to its printing and binding and to give Mr. Paton as many copies of the book as he coul sell, as remuneration for his time spent in preparing the matter, provided I would agree to advertise it liberally and gratuitously in The Watch Tower. (For this reason, Mr. Jones' address was, probably, the only one mentioned in our advertisement of it.) He well knew that there would be a demand for it if I should recommend it, and that his outlay would be sure to return with profit (for those books did not sell at very low prices as we charge for the Studies in the Scriptures). I not only agreed to this, but contributed to Mr. Paton's personal expenses in connection with the publishing, and as well paid part of the printer's bill, at his solicitation.

STILL FURTHER SIFTING

In the end, I alone was at any financial loss in connection with the book, Day Dawn, the writer and the publisher both being gainers financially, while I did all the introducing by repeated advertisments. We need to give these particulars because of certain misrepresentations and one-sided and partial statements of facts which were afterward published and circulated in tract form by Mr. Paton, who also became later an advocate of that 'other Gospel," of which the Cross of Christ is not the center, and which denies that He "bought us with His own precious blood." Galatians 1:6-9.) Mr. Paton afterward published another book, which, though called by the same name as the one I introduced, was on another and false foundation, which I could not and did not recommend, but which I esteemed misleading sophistry, tending to undermine the whole structure of the Christian system, yet retaining a sufficiency of the truths which we once held in common to make it palatable and dangerous to all not rooted and grounded upon the Ransom Rock.

The false foundation which this later Day Dawn presented is the old heathen doctrine of Evolution renamed, which not only denies the fall of man, but, as a consequence, all necessity of a Redeemer. It claimed, on the contrary, that not by Redemption and Restitution to a lost estate, but by progressive evolution, or development, man has risen and is still to rise from the lower condition in which he was created until, by his own good works, he ultimately reaches the Divine nature. Mr. Paton claimed that our blessed Lord Himself was a degraded and imperfect man, whose work on earth was to crucify a carnal nature (which it was claimed He possessed), and so thus show all men how to crucify their carnal or sinful propensities.

And here we remark that the darkness and degradation which came upon the whole world in its fallen, cast-off condition, and which was only intensified by Papacy's priestcraft during the Dark Ages, when contrasted with the light of intelligence which God is now letting in upon he world, have gradually led men to esteem present intelligence as merely a part of the precess of evolution. This view, as we have shown in Studies in the Scriptures, Vol. I., p. 162, though quite incorrect, is nevertheless the occasion of the great predicted falling away from the faith in the Bible during this Harvest period. (Psalm 91-7.) And few Christian people seem to be well enough grounded in the Truth to be able to withstand this trial of this "evil day," in which many will fall, while only the few will stand.

The little history of the way Mr. Paton came to turn from us and from the Ransom to oppose that which he once clearly saw and advocated, is important; for it became the occasion of another sifting, or testing, of The Watch Tower readers (by that time a much larger number), because Mr. Paton had been a respected brother and coworker with us, and because as a traveling representative of The Watch Tower and its doctrines (his expenses being met in part by Watch Tower subscriptions and renewals, as well as by money from myself), he was personally known to a larger number of our readers than was the Editor. It came about thus:

In the year 181, Mr. Barbour, still publishing The Herald, and still endeavoring to overthrow the doctrine of the Ransom, finding that on a preaching tour I had used a diagram of the Tebernacle to illustrate how Christ's sacrifice was typified in the sacrifices of typical Israel, wrote an article on the Atonement, in which he undertook to show that the sacrifices of the Day of Atonement typified almost anything else than what they do typify. I could readily see through the fallacy of his presentation, which made the bullock and the goat typify one thing in one verse and another thing in each other verse in which either was mentioned. But I well knew that people in general are not close reasoners, and that with the cares of life upon them, they are too apt to accept a seeming interpretation, without a critical examination of the words of the Scriptures and their context.

After I had thought the matter all over, I reexamined the chapter. (Leviticus 16.) But while seeing the inconsistency of Mr. Barbour's interpretation, I could only confess that I did not understand it and could not give a connected interpretation which would fit all the details so plainly stated, and all of which must have a particular meaning. What could I do? Those reading both The Herald and The Watch Tower would probably be misled if not helped out of the difficulty; and to merely say that The Herald's interpretation was inconsistent with itself, and therefore a misinterpretation, wiuld be misunderstood. Many would surely think that I opposed that view from a spirit of rivalty; for there are always people with whom everything resolves itself into personality, rivalry and party spirit, and such cannot understand others who take a higher and nobler view, and who think always and only of the Truth, regardless of persons.

*Mr. Barbour died some years after this article first appeared in print.

Norfolk, Va., June 24.

Dear Sir:—As I have been a subscriber to your very valuable paper for a number of years, I am going to take the liberty of requesting a favor of you in the interest of the I. B. S. A. convention.

I wish to assure you that I greatly enjoy your paper, especially the sermons of Pastor Russell, and also all of its features relative to the teachings of "Present Truth," and I look forward to its visits with eagerness each week.

In view of the fact that the I. B. S. A. Convention is to be held in Norfolk Va., July 22-30, I wish to have you call special attention in your columns to some of the natural advantages we have as a Convention city.

In the first place, while Norfolk will be classed as a Southern city, the temperature here is superior to that of many of the Northern cities, being fanned as it is by ocean breezes, so that often the summer nights require light covering for comfortable sleep. In addition to this we are in close proximity to several very popular summer resorts, viz., Ocean View, Virginia Beach, Buckroe Beach and Old Point Comfort, either of which may be reached from within twenty minutes to one hour at a very reasonable fare, and those not desiring to witness the Photo-Drama could spend enjoyable evenings at these attractive resorts.

Additionally, we desire to have attention called to the Convention Hall, which the Chairman of our Convention Committee (Brother P. L. Derring) assures us is the finest he has seen at any of the many Conventions he has attended, being provided with ample electric fans and cushioned chair seats; and the acoustics are said to be excellent.

The hope of the Norfolk friends is, to make this the very best Convention yet held this side of "The Vail."

Those wishing to secure accommodations may do so at prices ranging from $1 to $5 per day by addressing Brother P. L. Darring, 216 12th St., stating just what is desired.

Yours very truly,
H. W. SNELLINGS.

Lyons, S. D., June 27.

We appreciate all the Truth features of your paper, which was our interest in subscribing, as well as the labor news, and your stand for honesty a justice.

May you be greatly blessed in thus serving these Truths now due..

Very sincerely
MRS. G. WEHLER.

I am renewing my subscription. I enjoy the Tribune very much as it is such a clean paper and stands for the Truth, but most of all, I enjoy Pastor Russell's sermons.

practical good-sense, and embraced in their topics the whole field of human society. He inspired others to do and become by his oratery they saw his limitations and apparent success in spite of them. His persistent and forceful denunciation of the evils of slavery brought him into the greatest prominence during the Civil War period, while his speeches made during his visit to England did much to disabuse public opinion there as to the merits of the struggle. These are the only grounds upon which he could be rated as a Reformer, just as was Theodore Parker and Windell Phillips, his contemporaries, who were rated Reformers by rendering a like service to the emancipation of the negro. As lyceum lecturer he ranks pre-eminent—his oratory is what distinguishes the man. The following from the pen of Hubbard may be a good description of Beecher's type of oratory:

"The limitations of the all-around man are by-products which are used by destiny in the making of orators. The welling emotions, the vivid imagination, the forgetfulness of self, the abandon to feeling—all these things in Wall Street are spurious coin. No prudent man ever made an orator—no cautious man ever made a multitude change its mind, when it had vowed it would not. Oratory is indiscretion set to music."

We use this citation from the pen of Fra Elbertus to assist in giving an insight to our Brooklyn Divine as an orator. Not because it gives a description of his style of oratory—but because it does not and at the same time proves that Russell is an exceptional orator to the rule here laid down. Hubbard, perhaps, has the truth stated as far as history records "that no cautious man ever made a multitude change its mind, when it had vowed it would not." Russell, a cautious, shrewd and far-seeing man, has accomplished this very thing—of swaying an audience of 4,000 Jews that had once for the avowed purpose of taking issue with him. Yet he was not the style of orator that accomplishes such feats, but was a practiced orator as was Lincoln.

The gift of experience goes hand in hand with emotion in all of its ramifications. Emotion and love in its various forms, of Platonics, friendship, benevolence, etc., promote the disposition to communicate. As, for instance, the chatting of friends. Even oratory is a love affair: the audience feminine and the orator masculine, and the success of the orator is usually due more to the audience drawing him out than the orator working himself up. When a misfit occurs, where the audience is masculine and the speaker weak, the audience assumes the feminine and extends its sympathy and helps matters along—otherwise the oration is a failure, dry, and the audience groans or falls asleep until the ordeal is over.

THE CHRISTIANS OF THESSALONICA

1 Thessalonians 1; 4:13-18—July 9.

St. Paul's Letter to the Young Church. The Power of the Gospel Amongst Them—Their Activities In Spreading the Truth—A Highly Figurative Description of Jesus' Second Coming and the Resurrection of the Church.

"If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that are fallen asleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."—1 Thessalonians 4:14.

VERY evidently the persecution which had come upon the Church at Thessalonica had caused them to grow rapidly, as evidenced by their love, not only for one another, but for all of the Household of Faith throughout Achaia and Macedonia. This love of the brethren, St. Paul declares, was a manifestation of the fact that they had been taught of God.

Under St. Paul's instruction, supplemented by Timothy's, the young Thessalonian Church had in a very short time attained considerable knowledge of the Divine Plan—much more than is enjoyed by a majority of Christian congregations today. For instance, they knew what very many today are ignorant of—that their hope centered in the Second Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and in their being gathered to Him then; and that their friends who had died were "asleep in Jesus," to be awakened from that death sleep by our Lord at His Second Coming.—John 5:28, 29.

Respecting Unscriptural Thoughts.

The fact that the dead are asleep and cannot be awakened until the Second Advent has been lost sight of for several centuries. Consequently faith in the Lord's Second Coming has generally languished. In fact, many professed Christian people do not believe the Bible teaching that the dead sleep, but hold that they are more alive than ever—that at the moment of death they go to Heaven or to Hell, and that their condition is permanent. With such unscriptural thoughts before their minds, who can wonder that to such the Lord's Second Coming is an event without special interest, lightly regarded by some and wholly rejected by others?

"Asleep in Jesus."

Those who have been instructed by God's Word and who do not follow "cunningly devised fables" originated by the Adversary, find that the Scriptures as a whole are illuminated with the grand hope of the coming of Messiah in power and glory, to establish His Kingdom of Righteousness and to awaken and uplift those who have fallen under the hand of Death—as many as will accept His blessing, under the terms of the New Covenant.—Gen. 3:4, 5; Ezek. 18:4, 20; John 8:44.

"In Jesus" Vs. "In Christ."

As originally pronounced, the penalty against our race was not a sleep of death, but destruction. But God purposed a redemption from the death curse; and for this purpose Christ Jesus came into the world and died, "the Just for the unjust," that He might bring us back into Divine favor. Consequently it has been proper to regard the world not as wholly cut off from life, but as merely sleeping—awaiting the return of the Redeemer as the Awakener, the Life-giver. In this sense the world may be said to "sleep in Jesus." But let us not confound this with the very different expression, "the dead in Christ," which applies only to the Church.

In today's Study the Apostle delivers a special message to the Church, instructing them that at our Lord's Second Coming the sleeping saints will suffer no loss by reason of having fallen asleep, but that they will be granted a priority over the living saints, in that they will be raised from the dead and glorified before the living saints are "changed." In this connection we notice that the word translated "coming" in Verse 15 really signifies presence—after arrival—giving the thought that the Lord will be present before the dead in Christ are raised, and prior to the change of the living saints. This thought emphasizes the Apostle's subsequent remarks respecting the Day of the Lord, and that the world would not know of it.

"Dead in Christ."

Many careful Bible students hold that the "shout," "the voice of the Archangel" and "the trump of God" are all symbols, referring to events now in process of fulfilment. In this connection we quote from "Studies In the Scriptures," Vol. 2, p. 149:

"Note carefully, too, the fact that each of the three prophecies just referred to (Daniel 12:1; Revelation 11:15; 1 Thessalonians 4:16) declares the Lord's presence at the time when the events mentioned transpire. * * * If, therefore, we can recognize the shout, the voices and the sounding of the great trumpet, we should accept them as indications, not that the Lord will come soon, but rather that He has come and is now present; and that the Harvest work of gathering the wheat and burning the tares is already under way. This we shall soon see is abundantly proved by time-prophecies."

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

GOD'S BLESSING BRINGS RICHES

THROUGH CHRIST A GREAT BLESSING IS COMING TO THE WHOLE WORLD.

Blessings Future and Blessings Present—Blessings of Knowledge—Blessings of Wealth—Blessings of Mind and Heart—Special Blessings for the Church—the Bride of Christ to be Fabulously Rich—Blessing of Divine Favor and Fellowship Even Now.

New York City, July 2.—Pastor Russell spoke here today at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway. His discourse, as usual, was both interesting and instructive. He said in part:

Our topic for this occasion is found in the wise man's words: "The blessing of the Lord maketh rich; and He addeth no sorrow with it." (Proverbs 10:22.) The blessing of the Lord is here put before our minds as in contrast with His curse. For more than six thousand years the whole world has been under the Divine curse pronounced in Eden. (Genesis 3:14-19.) When our Heavenly Father created man in his own image and likeness—"very good," as He declares—He was conferring a great blessing, one not sufficiently appreciated perhaps by Father Adam and Mother Eve—the blessing of Divine favor and fellowship, the blessing of living amongst the perfect conditions of an Edenic home, in which everything was favorable to happiness.

We have every reason to believe that God has a good purpose in connection with the creation of mankind as in connection with the creation of the angels, and that the present greatly different condition of man as compared with that of the holy angels is the difference between a condition of sin and one of righteousness. The angels who live in a state of holiness and happiness are those who kept their own estate. This some of the angels failed to do but left their own habitation. These God has restrained under chains of darkness to await the great Judgment Day. (Jude 6; Genesis 6;1-6) In his fallen condition man is sick, mentally, morally and physically. Because of sin he has come under a Divine curse—not, as once we thought, a curse of a devlish kind, a curse of eternal torment, but that which the Bible declares—"Dying, thou shalt die."—Genesis 2:17, margin; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; Romans 6:23; etc.

Our text suggests that a great blessing is to come from God to all men when the curse upon mankind has been removed. That a universal blessing is yet to come upon Adam's race is made very clear in the Scriptures. This blessing will come through our Lord Jesus Christ; "for as by a man came death, by a man also comes the resurrection of the dead. For as all in Adam die, even so shall all in Christ be made alove, every man in his own order."—1 Corinthians 15:21-23; Hebrews 2:9.

The curse pronounced in Eden was a world-wide sentence, which reached to all of Father Adam's posterity; and as the curse brought all mankind into condemnation through Adam, so it is the Divine purpose that a release from this condemnation shall come to all through Christ. Every man, woman and child of Adam's race, living and dead, is yet to experience an individual opportunity for life everlasting through the death of our Lord Jesus. But this blessing will be everlasting only upon certain conditions.

FEW SEEING EYES AND HEARING EARS.

The proposition which God has made is that all who have gone down, and all who are going down, to death through sickness and sorrow because of Adam's transgression will be brought up again, but will not be further blessed contrary to their wills. Let us illustrate this point by referring to condemnation under human law. Suppose that you had a friend in prison, and that in some way you had secured a remission of the penalty and an order for the liberation of that individual. The responsibility is then his. If he rejects the pardon and the release, the blessing will be of no avail. But before he can be responsible for the rejection of the blessing, he must KNOW that he has the opportunity to go free from condemnation. Even then he might be brought from the prison and told that he could could free, but if he should then say, "I prefer to remain in prison," he would lose the benefit of your friendly action entirely.

There are some Christian people who claim that the world's only opportunity for salvation is now. They cite the proclamation that whosoever believeth in Christ shall have everlasting life, and declare that this offer does not extend to any one beyond this life, and that thereby the responsibility to accept this offer rests upon all now. The Bible indicates, however, that not many now hear or see, not many understand, even the first principles of the great blessing which God has provided. The majority believe not because Satan has blinded their minds through ignorance, superstition and priestcraft. Moreover, vast multitudes have died without ever having heard of Christ. Since intelligent faith in Him as a Saviour is absolutely essential to salvation, according to the Scriptural declaration, how can these have any opportunity for salvation if the present life ends all hope?

To His disciples the Master said, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears for they hear." (Matthew 13:16, 17.) The intimation is that now few hear or understand. Again, our Lord said, "To you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom, but to them that are without all these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings, that seeing they may see and not perceive, and hearing they may hear and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and I should heal them." Here again, in our own day, we see that it is given to some to know the mysteries of the Kingdom; and to others, the majority, it is not given.

How inexplicable this is without the key! The explanation is that God's time to enlighten the world at large has not yet come. Only a few are now in the proper condition to be profited by the Truth. For others who are not in that condition of honesty of heart it is better that they do not know too much about God's arrangements; for the knowledge would give them the more severe condemnation. The Lord sees that this knowledge is not given to any except those who are in the right attitude of heart and able to exercise the necessary faith. Upon others God's Message makes little or no impression even if they should hear with the outward ear. Weakness of heredity or handicaps of training, or both, hinder them.

THE BLESSING COMING UPON THE WORLD.

"The blessing of the Lord it maketh rich." All who have the hearing ear and the understanding heart realize this blessing. Something has entered into their lives the like of which was never before known. During the next Age the blessing of the Lord will come upon the world, but will operate quite differently. The arrangement for the next Age, as we see from God's Word, is that, first of all, Christ will take the Kingdom, and will have absolute control of the whole world. His first step will be to bind that old Serpent, Satan, who has been deceiving the nations for 6,000 years. Christ will restrain him, that he may deceive the nations no more, that the people may be relieved from that deceptive influence, that they may the better appreciate the Plan of God, which will then be made known to all.

Will not that be a blessing from the Lord, a blessing of knowledge, when the world is shown that God, instead of being the greatest devil that they could imagine, is a God of sympathy and compassion? Will they not be glad when they learn that God has for a thousand years turned the whole world over to His Son, that our Lord may reign to the intent that the blessings of life everlasting may be granted to all who will receive God's gractious offer into good and honest hearts? God's blessing will make rich in body, in mind and in moral quality whoever receives it.

The Apostle Peter declares that these Times of Refreshment shall be "Times (years) of Restitution." (Acts 3:19-21.) Restitution means restoration." When Adam fell, he gradually lost his moral and physical perfection, and went down, down, down, into the tomb. So have all mankind, his posterity. Adam and all his race are to be offered restitution—a restoration from sickness, from sorrow, from death, a restoration from mental, moral and physical disabilities—back, back, back, to the image of God which Adam lost by disobedience in Eden, but which our Lord Jesus redeemed for all mankind at Calvary.

These wonderful blessings are all to be given to the race by Messiah's glorious Kingdom. Whoever will accept these blessings of God will receive riches beyond power of human pen now to portray. Just think what this will mean! Suppose that we had the power now to bring the world back from its selfish, mean condition to the image and likeness of God. Where would the European war be in two minutes? Where would all selfishness and sin be? The removal of all these evils is just what God purposes to do, not by magic, but along better lines. If such a change could be wrought by magic, it would go by magic.

WHY EVIL IS PERMITTED NOW.

God purposes that man must learn a great lesson—that sin burns and devours like a fire. The true Church of Christ have learned that lesson. The world is learning a similar lesson, and will learn it still more fully. The great Time of Trouble now coming upon the nations will enforce that lesson as it has never yet been realized. Then, under the Messianic Kingdom, the world will learn righteousness; they will climb the ladder back to perfection. The Lord sees that this will be far better than magical changes could be.

Now there are sin, sorrow, misery, poverty, all imaginable difficulties and even death itself. But then, the Lord tells us through His word, there will be no more curse, no more poverty, nor sorrow, nor crying, nor dying. The earth will become a paradise. The blessing of the Lord will make the world rich, and He will add no sorrow with it. If any should then have sorrows, it will be because they add the sorrows themselves. Whoever will be obedient to the laws of the Kingdom will be blessed of the Lord. All who will love righteousness and hate iniquity shall have the blessing of the Lord, making them richer and richer, until by the close of the Millennial Age they will be absolutely perfect, as perfect as are the holy angels—no more insanity, no more broken hearts, no more curse!

PRESENT BLESSINGS TO THE FAITHFUL.

Even in the present time it is true that the blessing of the Lord maketh rich His people now. "But," says one, "not many of them are very rich." I am not so sure about that. To be rich is to have all that one desires. If one is a true child of God, he will desire the things which God sees best for him to have. He will wish God to give him whatever Divine Wisdom approves. In proportion as he is yielding his life to God, in that same proportion he is getting his desire, and therefore he is rich.

There are plenty of people who cannot get the peace which they covet. Many rich people lack much that they crave. But those who get the riches of the Lord are rich indeed; for they have the peace of God, which passeth all understanding. It is the blessing of the Lord which makes His people rich—rich in the blessed sense of sins forgiven, in the realization that God no longer condemns us, that we are His children, joint-heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him.—Romans 8:17; 2 Timothy 2:11, 12.

In harmony with the Call which God has been sending forth during the Gospel Dispensation. He has received us as His children. He has been calling out of the world a certain company. The Call goes to the world, but not with the purpose of gathering the world. God's purpose now is to take out from the world "a people for His name," (Acts 15:13-17.) To illustrate, if a young nobleman should come to this city to seek a bride, he would choose a young woman of especially desirable qualifications to bear his name. He would select her from amongst all others. Similarly God is now choosing a Bride for His Son, to take the name of Christ. (Jeremiah 23:6; 33:16; 2 Corinthians 5:21.) For more than eighteen hundred years this has been God's special work.

GOSPEL CHURCH ALMOST COMPLETE.

This work of closing the Church is almost complete. Probably there are a few more vacant places, but not many, so far as we understand the World of God. We must be very near the time when the last member shall have come into the Bride Class. In the parable of the Ten Virgins (Matthew 25:1-13), we read that when all the wise virgins had gone into the marriage, the door was shut, This does not mean, however, that when the door to the Marriage of the Lamb shall have closed, the door of mercy shall also be closed. As lang as there shall be any proper use for mercy, there will be mercy. Only the Church as yet experiences mercy from God. But during the next Age all mankind will receive it.

It is not the door of mercy that is closing now, in the end of the Gospel Age; for that door will be open throughout the incoming Age. Nor is it the door of opportunity for salvation that is about to shut. It is the door into the Bride class, into the Marriage of the Lamb, that is soon to close; and when once it is closed, no more will ever get into that class. No other class will ever receive offers as good as those now offered. The Bride of Christ will be fabulously rich. Hers will be the highest honors. She will have all the riches of grace promised in the Word, all the loving kindness which her Lord has provided for her.

But even while still in the flesh the Church class are greatly blssed. The peace and rest of heart which we enjoy is conducive to physical health. This does not mean that all of the Lord's children are well and strong physically, but that, all things considered, their health is likely to be better than it would have been with the same amount of activity had they remained in the world. Even in a temporal way the Master's words, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest," have great force. This rest in Christ, this realization that we have the God of the Universe as our best and truest Friend, as our constant Helper and Guide, lifts a great load from the heart and brings a joy, a freedom from anxiety, that none others than the Lord's own people can understand.

We may not be richer in the sense that we shall have more wealth, finer homes or greater influence in the world. This will be very unlikely. Nor do we desire these things. But we have the true riches, which far outweigh all these other things for they cannot bring happiness nor peace of mind. The Heavenly riches give the spirit of a sound mind. This makes the brain clearer, the judgment more reliable, the nerves more steady, the heart more buoyant. We are keeping our eyes fixed upon the unspeakable blessings which await us; and so we rejoice as we go on our way.

"EYE HATH NOT SEEN NOR EAR HEARD"

The glories which God hath in reservation for His faithful, loyal children are things that eye hath not seen, nor ear heard. (1 Corinthians 2:9, 16.) Wonderful indeed will be the riches of the world when mankind shall have been fully restored to human perfection and to an Edenic home. But far more wonderful will be the riches of the Church, the Bride of Christ. She shall be made like her Lord in His present glorified condition—far above angels, principalities and powes—"partaker of the Divine nature,"—1 John 3:1-3; 2 Peter 1:4.

Our Lord was exalted to be the Head over the Church, His Body; and the Church is to sit with Him in His Throne. (Revelation 3:21.) What a wonderful blessing of the Lord is this! What earthly riches can compare with it? Then, dear brethern, "let us run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith."

HELP OTHERS' FUND.

The Tribune next week will publish a letter from a well-known Truth friend in Washington, Pa. This friend wants us to have a fund to help others to get the benefit and uplift of the weekly sermon of Pastor Russell and the other good things that appear week by week in the National Labor Tribune. We have decided to act on the advice of our friend and will have a fund devoted exclusive to the helping others to get the Tribune every week. We have decided to call this fund "HELP OTHERS", and every week we will publish the receipts and expenditures of this fund. Who will be the first to start this worthy object?

RUSSEL IS PREEMINENTLY A MAN OF ACTION.

It has been said of Lincoln that twelve of the best of the generally accepted talented men of today put together would not make an equal. We average well today but few excel. From a physical point of view Luther and Russell were inferior to Beecher and Wesley, but from a mental point of view it would require Beecher and Russell to make a Luther. Carlyle describes Luther as "A right Spiritual Hero and Prophet; one a true son of Nature and of fact." Of Beecher it could be said, "a true son of Nature and of fact", and of Russell it could be said, "A right Spiritual Hero and Prophet"; but both expressions could not be applied to either. Russell ranks superior to both in many respects. His distingushing features that place his power of thought and speech into the shade are his executive abilities, he is essentially A Man of Action, combined with the proclivities of the Modern Business Man. Dr. David P. Jackson (Ohio) confirms the description of Russell just presented in contrast to Beecher (Previously published in 1913); his intuitive powers exceeding his analytical and philosophical; and all these excelled by his executive abilities as set forth in our first essay, "A man of Action." Say Dr. Jackson:

"History shows that other men great in business and finance have not been richly endowed in other departments of the mind; but Pastor Russell, in addition to his financial talent, has remarkable mental talents of the most varied character. He has a frame of mind that may be described as a poetical mind, a mind that gets an insight into deep things by intuition, like a great poet or a Hebrew Seer; it is as if Isaiah and J. P. Morgan were united in one individual. Poets are not usually of a logical, scientific form of mind; but Pastor Russell has these talents also; that is, he has the acute discrimination and analysis of a great lawyer, that can test the truth and sift the evidence on which they are found . . . . He has the mind of an investigator and student, a scientific love of truth; . . the freedom from bias, the willingness to accept truth wherever found, willingness to be corrected, no difference how humble the instrument—in chort, a mind like Agassiz and Newton."

Prof. O. S. Fowler, the eminent Phrenologist, regarded Beecher as a fine specimen of manhood and complimented the orator's vital forces in describing him as a "splendid animal." Beecher, in reply to a question when about to sail for Europe, if he was going to travel for his health, verified Fowler's estimates, with the answer: "I have more health now than I know what to do with." Prof. Fowler also met Russell in his younger days and made an examination of his cranium, and pronounced it a splendid balance in the region of the intellectual faculties, which would give him the possibilities of success in many professions, were it not for two faculties that were deficient and necesary to make up an admirable combination. One of these faculties necessary to success was Secretiveness, which would give him a disposition to prattle all that he knew to others and not properly conceal matters that would better be kept out of sight. In line with this we note that Russell, like the great poets, takes the whole world into confidence by laying bare his head and heart; but that he has learned to keep a secret can be attested by many who have endeavored to ascertain matters that he purposely kept out of view. The other deficient faculty was Self Esteem, which, not being sufficiently developed, would hinder the full use of his endowment by not placing the proper estimates upon his possibilities. Russell has repeatedly referred to Fowler's examination and to these deficiencies in many of his addresses to Bible students. To the writer he referred to them in a remark: "When I know that the clock is two hours slow, I add it to the time it indicates." But there has been occasion when he failed to do this and admit that for that reason his newspaper publicity was fully two years late.

Prof. David Dall, a noted Mental Scientist of the British Institute of Mental Science, made an examination and character sketch of Russell when the latter was on a lecture tour in Scotland in 1911. It was made by Prof. Dall for his own pleasure and later sent to Russell. Prof. Fowler passed judgment upon Russell in his boyhood and indicated his possibilities in life; Prof Dall's sketch was made recently and it would be interesting to have the two reports analyzed by experts and an examination to see what extent his faculties have been developed beyond their natural size, or to what extent he is a greater man at the end of his career than the promises of youth indicated.

Prof. Dall's Phrenograph confirms our assertions, that great as is Russell's analytical and philosophical talents, these are excelled by his intuitive powers, and all these are placed into the shade by his remarkable activity, as indicated by his own remarkable accomplishments, thus making him pre-eminently A Man of Action, or as Emerson aptly denominates this type of man, a "Doer" as distinguashed from a "Knower" and "Sayer". Our descriptions are based on acquaintance with the man, his literature and his work, but Prof. Dall's is based on Science, and they being alike would indicate that Russell has made use of all his talents in his mission. We quote: "His temperamental development is very even. If there is a predominence of either, it is found in the mative, which supports an intense energy of mind that cannot dream life away, but must be practical . . . . An intense sense of duty, together with the conviction that each moment is precious and of important value, seems to prevade his entire nature."

Regarding his analytical and intuitive nature Prof. Dall says: "His perceptive region, as a whole, is exceeding active, an endowment rendering his range of observation extraordinary; while his memory of faces and forms is marvelous, as is also his power to analyze, compare and draw rapid inferences. Here is a mind able to steel itself against difficulty or attack, yet full of gentleness and amiability . . . In him dwells the soul or patient, charitable, but equally determined reformer—a practical mind, seeing far ahead, possessing large stores of philanthropy, discernment, judgment, talent and efficiency, giving him gifts as a teacher, yet also prompting him to natural desire after self-improvement."

Regarding Russell's vital forces which Luther similarly possesed yet both without strong bodies, indicating that their health was a case of mind over matter, Prof. Dall says: "I find the need of Pastor Russell to be a large one, and the brain gifted with an unconion degree of activity. A full basilar region is accompanied by the powerful endowment of the moral, intellectual and spiritual natures. His physiognomy gives a large face, a large, broad nose with ample nostrils, large mouth and chin—all that the face can indicate of a powerful constitution he has. The animal vital nature, as a whole, is ampy developed; his head also is broad, which indicates general force of mind, strength of feeling and stamina of character.

Russell's deficiences, as compared with Luther, Wesley and Beecner, as heretofore noted in the beautiful sentiments that link us with society, is made up for by others of a similar kind and are his best credentials; in the words of Dall: "Benevolence is a leading faculty, manifesting itself in liberality of sentiment to all mankind, deep desire for the welfare of others, combining warmth of sympathy with rare simplicity of purpose."

RUSSELL, THE ORATOR.

From all accounts Beecher's spiritual development was not near as high as several of the reformers of this story. This is due to the fact that he believed christianity to be, not a philosophical system, but an exalted rule of conduct. This made him intensely practical and his sermons abound with

MILL MEN ORGANIZE IN CHARTIERS VALLEY

E. V. Babcock Can Have the Entire Valley if He Wants It--A Big Day at Morganza.

BY J. S. VITCHESTAIN.

CANNONSBURG, July 10, 1916.

This town is enjoying the most strenuous activity and its industries are operating in full with orders sufficiently numerous to keep the various plants running almost double time if men could be supplied.

The most remarkable thing is how industries locate here when other sections seem to offer far better facilities and superior advantages but choosing this locality certainly exalts the characteristic thrift and extraordinary persistency of the people.

The Standard Tin Plate Co. is running better than full and the extensions only recently completed have doubled the capacity. This is an old concern and the highest type of men are employed. The Canonsburg Iron & Steel Co. is running full, but there is a disposition here among the men that forebodes evil to the management whom the men are inclined to criticize. In the death of the late John F. Budke, president and principle owner of the Canonsburg Iron & Steel Co., the workmen lament the loss of a good friend and they are resenting the harsh treatment of the present management. Today a meeting was held in Eagle Hall and the workmen were preparing a scale which is to be presented to the management within a few days. During Monday Assistant Secretary Davis of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers organized the men and they are once more under the jurisdiction of the association that at one time controlled all the iron and steel in the Chartiers Valley from Pittsburgh to Washington.

The pottery industries of W. S. George Pottery Company and the Canonsburg Pottery Co. are thriving even against the destructive tariff revision policies of the Democratic party.

The life of the pottery industries was extended only after special earnest pleas made to President Wilson for protection which gave only a brief respite and to the present European war goes the credit for the last and final hope.

It was the paralizing effect of the European industries brought about through the war that saved both Canonsburg and East Liverpool so far as the pottery plants are involved, and sad is the comment that such an ill wind should bring redress and stem a tide that men in the mills, shops, factories and mines here knew well, would not only play havoc with this industrious section, but destroy American industries throughout the land.

Well do the workmen here understand the demands made upon the industries here, as well as elsewhere, as reflected through the war orders.

The plants working on war orders are removed from the markets as competitors. Thus while others are working on war material the plants here are busy supplying a domestic trade. Men in the Fort Pitt Bridge Works are rushing orders and work is piled up. The bridge work's men will have enough to keep them busy until Hughes and Fairbanks are elected after which there will be such a breaking loose of order that the nation naturally will be thrust into the midst of a golden age.

The Chartiers Creek Coal Co., and the Pittsburgh Gas Coal Co. are busy on domestic trade and also rushing Coal to the Great Lakes for the Northwest.

Word reached here that the Pittsburgh Coal Company, the big combine, is transfering considerable of its river interests to the Kanawha river in West Virginia, owing to better working conditions. The real story seems to be the Pittsburgh Coal Company has been forced out of lower river shipments and the New Orleans trade has been absorbed by keen competition from Kentucky and Alabama.

The big Coal trust is now shipping principally by rail save the 1,000,000 tons contracted for by the United States Steel Corporation for which the latter pays but very little above the actual cost of production.

This bustling and energetic community is actually the political seismograph of Washington County. Here all the political upheavals and disturbances are recorded and here the analysis is made.

George McPeake will be the next member of the Legislature from this end of the county, while G. Plumer Baker will go from Washington and Dr. J. A. Sprowls will represent Donora in particular and the eastern end of the county generally speaking.

McPeake, a splendid man and good campaigner. T. M. Reese once a very influential member of the Amalgamated Association, also a valiant supporter of P. J. McArdle, when the latter was president of the great organization of Iron and Steel workers is here. Reese is no longer actively engaged in the tin mills, but he was Justice of the Peace here, later Postmaster under President Taft and last November was re-elected Justice of the Peace again, after being relieved by President Wilson, who gave the Postmastership to a Democrat. Reese is an amiable leader, a real diplomat and stands for right without being radical. He is forcible and practical. No man understands the men employed in the mills or mines better than Squire Reese and his popularity demonstrates the faith the citizens here have in his leadership.

Squire Reese told me he will be for E. V. Babcock for Governor. Reese's attitude on this matter will have a powerful effect throughout the county. Although on opposites sides at present, Reese is a staunch

GOSHORN'S TROUBLES COMING THICK AND FAST

Candidates for Sheriff Piling Into the Trouble Ring and a Big Time Now On.

Chairman Larry R. Goshorn, chairman of the Registration Commission is busy, exceptionally busy displaying more anxiety in this business matter than he has displayed for some time. But all agree that Larry is a diplomat and that eventually Larry will bring himself and his associates out into the open covered with smiles. Of course all who know Larry know that his is a master mind for evolving intricate problems and with his remarkable ingenuity he will be able through stratagetic moves to land on top of the heap. As it is the newly appointed Registration Commission which begins its business with L. R., as chairman, D. L. Lawrence, secretary, J. Scott Morgan and W. L. McCullagh as the real audience finds itself almost overwhelmed with applicants for district registers and by the way these candidates are moving upon the new board the impression may be gained that the entire voting public is seeking office. There are 1,656 registers to be appointed and these are to receive $10.00 per diam. There are 414 districts and this is on a ratio of four to the district. The first instalment of an appropriation during the term of the new board will be approximately $50,000.00 and the remaining $150,000.00 comes later.

To whom this first $50,000.00 shall be given is the monumental task Larry, with shirt sleeves rolled up is now working on, and Larry is more popular today than he ever dreamed he was. The acquaintances of old are being renewed and memories that were long since forgotten are being refreshed. Every one seems to be moving toward Diamond street, the headquarters of the Registration Commission, and by August 15 when the time for the appointment expires there will be haystacks of petitions. No one is being overlooked as a signer and after the petitions are filed the applicants return to seek the influence of the individual signer which is directed either in personal calls or telephone messages upon Mr. Goshorn or some one or all his associates.

Manufacturer, labor leader and politician are all getting in touch with Larry and the unfortunate thing about it is that Larry has made so many friends during his career as a newspaper writer. However those who have never had the pleasure of an acquaintance are looking up avenues of contact. By August 15 Larry and the entire Registration Commission will be at the pinacle of fame. None will predict what will be the extent of the damage after the fifteenth, but leave it to Larry. All are looking forward to some soothing words.

Some predict that this may have some effect on the municiple and county campaign next year, but the indications are the thrill given to the disappointed will wear off by that time. However, the candidates will be so numerous that incidents so trivial will be unable to survive in the shuffle.

There is a terrific battle to be waged for Sheriff and the line-up is promising of extraordinary events. Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong, according to those pushing his candidacy, is a full fledged candidate for Sheriff and he will have the backing of the organization.

The Mayor's popularity should not be questioned when he is an omnipotent factor in the distribution of offices. Whether there is unwavering loyalty or not the impression prevails that he has sufficient following to elect any candidate whom he chooses to support. For this support he will be able to name the office for which he cares to become a candidate and he can command, through his organization, the loyalty, essential to his success, to the moment of going to the polls. He will be the supreme power in choosing a candidate for Mayor and a candidate for Governor. This does not indicate there will not be a faction who will oppose Mayor Armstrong but factions opposing will not remove the important fact that his prestige and his personal influence will not be alluring to candidates who may exhibit the greatest strength.

Thomas O'Shell, who in 1913 received 41,000 votes for Sheriff is again a candidate and O'Shell's friends declare he can hold his own and may increase this splendid showing. If these predictions are true then O'Shell may be the next Sheriff of Allegheny county. The office of District Attorney offers a candidate in the person of E. E. Clark, Chief County Detective and Clark has been leading some of his admirers into a strange labyrinth and they do not hesitate to declare they are somewhat mystified over matters which to them keeps them in a dizzy atmosphere. However, as Clark approaches the firing line what now seems incongruous and intricate may crystalize into a new and startling phenomena.

Hon. W. J. Burke, alias Big Bill Burke, alias Railroad Bill, alias Bill, the Poor Man's Friend. He who was the saviour of the railroad men's hopes and aspirations. He who fought most ferociously for the Full Crew Bill, and who to the last, the very last held on and assailed viciously and without fear or consideration for the feelings of a poor and emaciated corporation with its hundreds of thousands of "Poor Widow Stockholders." He, Bill, Hon. Bill Burke, is said to be a candidate for Sheriff. See the ephemeral bubble of the other candidates burst.

The very announcement of Bill in the field shatters all hope of others securing a single vote from railroad men. Bing! Off goes railroad men from the calculations of any other candidate. There is record of one congratulating O'Shell for his work in behalf of railroad men, but

Railwaymen in Annual Convention

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, JUNE 29.

The annual convention of one of our most important trade unions, the National Union of Railwaymen, is sitting this week, sixty delegates being present representing three hundred thousand members. A strong attack was made at this convention on the food rigging and cornering that is going on in this country. J. H. Thomas, an important official of this union and also a Labor Member of Parliament, declared that if the railwaymen got an additional $2.50 weekly war bonus they would soon find themselves as badly off as ever owing to the increase in food prices. He went on to say, however, that the problems of the moment were as nothing compared with the preblems which they would have to face when the war was over. He referred especially to the way that women have come into industry, no fewer than 1,750,000 having apparently entered productive work since the beginning of the war, although the actual Board of Trade Employment Information Bureau only gives about 560,000 women as having become wage earners since the outbreak of war. Was there any sensible man who believed that if the war ended tomorrow the women were going to be driven out of industry? If any did so believe they were living in a fool's paradise. No leader dare blind himself to the facts. Indeed, viewed from the moral standpoint, would any man contemplate with any degree of satisfaction the knowledge of any intention of throwing out of the industrial arena one and three-quarter millions of women? He said, "No." Therefore, it was their duty to meet the situation and to deal with it in a practical way. They had no right to set up a sex war; but they had a right to say that no employer should be allowed in future to take advantage of women's labor as a means of reducing the value of men's labor. There was only one way, and that was to insist that wherever women were doing the work of men they should be paid the same rates as men. That was the surest safeguard as far as the workers were concerned.

The discussion as to what is to happen to labor after the war now waxes hot and strong and there is certainly every need for taking time by the forelock in this matter. I cannot do better in this case than quote the views of a well-known labor educationist. His remarks were devoted not so much towards a complete solution of the question as towards the necessity for everyone thinking along the lines which ought to find a solution. It has to be borne in mind that when the war is over there will be some millions of soldiers freed for industrial work. Many will find their places filled and the trouble may be intensified if the expected prosperity boom does not materialize.

Many kinds of trade which were good in times of peace had been slowed down, our trade with foreign countries had been slowed down, and what was going to happen after the war was likely to be that the nation which could readjust itself the quickest was going to have the best look-in from the material point of view. This gentleman addressing a meeting of men generally interested in the labor question said that they wanted to think out the matter beforehand, knowing that it was of importance that we should be more prepared for peace than we were prepared for war. In his talks with secretaries of big trade unions and large employers he had found prevalent, far too often, a sort of fatalistic feeling, which said, "I am afraid we are going to have an awful time in industry after the war." We ought instead of feeling the trouble to be inevitable rather to try to spread the feeling that the community is not going to have it.

He then proceeded to discuss what was likely to happen at the end of the war, and remarked that the large Government orders which had kept people busy had obviously got to cease; and, whereas at the beginning of the war a large number of people were taken off the labor market, at the end they would have millions coming on to the labor market. Against this one had to set several factors which were all to the good. In the first place there were a great many ordinary private demands for trticles which people quite properly in many cases had not put forward during the war, and to relieve the situation they would have all these orders released. This showed how extremely important it was that people should not go to spending money now. The time for buying from the point of view of the country was after the war. There were

FAKE FURNITURE MEN TRIMMING THE PUBLIC

Country Towns Suffer Intensely Through Frauds--How the Victims are Worked Through a Chain of Stores.

By J. H. Vitchestain.

CANONSBURG, PA., July 5.—There are victims here of Pittsburgh's fake furniture dealers and the plundering of the unsuspected is a sad commentary on a city that boasts that it "Promotes Progress."

If selling a defective mattress or a second-hand bedstead for new or selling certain articles and delivering inferior ones in their stead is advancing a city as a commercial center, it is entirely new in the catagory of business ethics. The fakers do not practice their frauds so deliberately on the residents of Pittsburgh as they do on the unfortunate victims residing in country towns. On this class they prey with a vengence and seem to strip them of everything they have with them.

The trickery is worked with greater ease when the prey lives a distance from the city. The average purchaser who has been duped is not a ready correspondent and unable to properly phrase a letter. Then, too, it costs considerable to make frequent trips to the city. Procrastination also wears the patience of the purchaser and the business knave knows well the tricks which work most effectively in his interest.

I called at the home of a prosperous family here and was told of an experience through which a member of the household has passed. It is the story already published. In searching for a legitimate furniture house the shopper falls into the hands of an infamous swindler, who is tricked, but does not realize the scoundrelism until articles other than those selected reach the purchaser. The fraud is not then disclosed until effort has been exhausted to secure the articles originally chosen have failed.

Upon this revelation the purchaser hesitates to seek redress through the courts and after exhaustive argument gives up in despair.

Captain Archibald Mackrell is determined to go the limit with any purchaser defrauded, but Captain Mackrell vigorously protests against the Police Department becoming a mere collecting agency.

Captain Mackrell declared he would act quickly on any case brought to his department provided the victim would make information and stand by the Department until the case went through the courts. The complaint of Captain Mackrell is that the unfortunate victims only want to ge their money back and they immediately agree to drop the case. This is an injustice to others. The case should be pushed to the limit and the diabolical villian would soon be landed where he belongs.

I saw a woman go into a furniture store along Penn avenue to purchase presumably one of the articles marked half the price of a similar article in a legitimate store.

She was taken across the street to another store which I was told was one of a chain from the second store. I followed her and a salesman, to a third store, some distance from the last store. I waited across the street and soon saw the salesman returning to the store, he having left his victim with what I was later informed was the expert trimmer.

I left this corner and was informed that around the corner on Liberty street was another of this chain of stores where fraud and deception was practiced. I was told if I entered the store to make a purchase I would not be sold any article, but taken to another store which was regarded as the principle store at which trickery was the chief practice. I went to the store and standing outside viewing a dining room table on display in the window, I was invited in.

I spoke of the table, its value $12.50. It was surely worth $25.00. Come in I'll show you, said the salesman or the one who might be regarded as the owner. I followed in but I had scarcely entered ten feet from the door when the salesman, reaching for his hat, said, "Come with me." "Where are you going?" I asked. "Just around the corner," said the salesman." I excused myself and left. It was as I had been told. A chain of stores all operating to one large store, held to be, when most advisable, the wholesale house.

Ligitimate stores are suffering through these frauds and the victims in towns in the Chartiers Valley are complaining.

The duped in other sections are beginning to realize the extent of the frauds and the National Labor Tribune has offered its services through a legal department which promises redress.

STOCK HELD BY BROKERS.

NEW YORK, June 27.—It is stated in Wall street that from April 1, 1915, to April 1, 1916, the number of United States Steel Corporation common stockholders of record dropped from 56,825 to 41,910. This is the smallest number of common shareholders in many years.

This information does not sustain the claim that the steel trust's stock is being purchased by its employes, thereby "settling" the differences between capitalists and laborers.

It is also claimed that 50 per cent of steel common is now held by brokerage houses. The trust would create the impression that this stock nestles in the humble homes of laborers, working 11, 12 and 13 hours a day, and who are partners in this great concern.

"TABERNACLE SHADOWS OF BETTER SACRIFICES."

I went to the Lord with this, as with every trial; I told Him just how it seemed to me, how anxious I felt for the dear sheep, who having their appetites sharpened by the Truth, were by their very hunger exposed to Satan's deceptions. I told Him that I realized that He was the Shepherd, and not I, but that I knew also that He would be pleased with my interest in the sheep and my desire to be His servant and to declare the Truth, the Way and the Life to them; that I felt deeply impressed that if the time had come for the permission of a false view to deceive the unworthy, it must also be His due time to have the truth on the same subject made clear, that the worthy ones might be able to stand, and not fall from the Truth.

Believing that the due time had come for the correct understanding of the meaning of the Jewish sacrifices which all Christians see were typical of "better sacrifices," and trusting that the Lord would grant the insight as soon as I got into the attitude of mind best fitted to receive the light, I prayed with confidence that if the Lord's due time had come, and if He were willing to use me as His instrument to declare the Message to His dear family, I might be able to rid my heart and mind of any prejudice that might stand in the way, and be led of His Spirit into the proper understanding.

Believing that the prayer would be answered affirmatively, I went into my study next morning prepared to study and write. The forenoon I spent in scrutinizing the text and every other Scripture likely to shed light upon it, especially the Epistle to the Hebrews, and in looking to the Lord for wisdom and guidance. But no solution of the difficult passage came. The afternoon and evening were similarly spent, and all of the next day. Everything else was neglected, and I wondered why the Lord kept me so long. But on the third day, near noon, the whole matter came to me as clear as the noonday sun—so clear and convincing and harmonious with the whole tenor of the Scriptures, that I could not question its correctness, and no one has ever yet been able to overthrow it. (The matter has been published in several editions in pamphlet form, under the title, Tabernacle Shadows of the Better Sacrifices, and can still be had by addressing The Watch Tower Office at Brooklyn.)

Then I knew why the Lord had led me to the solution so slowly and cautiously. I needed a special preparation of heart for the full appreciation of all it contained; and I was all the more assured that it was not of my own wisdom; for if of my own, why would it not have come at once? I found that the understanding of that subject was bound to have a wide influence upon all our hopes and views of all truths—not in that it overturned old truths or contradicted them, but that, on the contrary, it set them all in order and harmony, and straightened out little knots and twists.

For instance, the doctrine of Justification by Faith had always been more or less confused in my mind—as it has been in every mind—with the doctrine of sanctification, which calls for self-sacrifice and works. This was all made clear and plain at once; for the types show that we all, as sinners, needed first of all Christ's Ransom-sacrifice, that we must appropriate its merit to ourselves by faith; that thus we are justified (reckoned free from sin), when we by faith accept of Christ's sacrifice on our behalf and consecrate ourselves to God. The type shows, too, that it is only after being thus cleansed in God's sight (by our acceptance of Christ's finished work as our Ransom-sacrifice, and the imputation of Christ's merit to us) that God is willing to accept our offering and receive us as joint-sacrificers with Christ; and that if faithful to the end, following in His footsteps, we shall be granted the favor of joint-heirship in the Kingdom.

STILL FURTHER LIGHT ON THE SCRIPTURES.

Here I first saw that the great privilege of becoming joint-heirs with Christ and partakers with Him of the Divine nature is confined exclusively to those who would share with Him in His sacrifice and service of the Truth. And here, too, I saw for the first time that the Lord was the first of these sacrifices—the Sin-offering; consequently, that none of God's servants, the Prophets and faithful ones who lived and died before Christ, were priests after His order or sharers in the sacrifice with Him, even though some of them were stoned, others sawn asunder, and others slain with the sword, for the cause of God; that though they would get a good and great reward, they would belong to a separate class and order from those called to sacrifice and joint-heirship with Christ in the Kingdom, at and since Pentecost.

Here, too, I first saw that the Acceptable Day of the Lord signifies this Gospel Age, the time during which God will accept the sacrifice of any who come to Him through Christ, the great Sin-Offering; that when this Acceptable Day ends, the reward of joint-heirship and the Divine nature ends; and that when this great Day of Sacrifice, the Gospel Age (the real Day of Atonement), has closed, when all the members of the Body of Christ shall have participated with Him in the sacrifice of their rights as justified men, and shall be glorified, then the blessings shall begin to come to the world—the Millennial blessings purchased for them by their Redeemer, according to the grace of God.

This first brought me to a clear recognition of the distinction of natures—of what constitues human nature, what constitutes angelic nature and what constitutes Divine nature, as shown in Studies in the Scriptures, Vol. I., Chapter X. And whereas I had used the word Restitution in a general way to mean some sort of a blessed change, now, under the clear light, I began to see that the great work of Restitution could mean only what the word implies—a restoration of that which was lost (Matthew 18:11), a restoration to the original condition from which man once fell.

Then I saw that God's Plan, when carried out, would not bring all of His creatures to the one level of the Divine nature, but that He purposed to have an order of beings called angels, who, though perfect, would always be of a different order, or nature, from the Divine nature; and that He likewise purposed to have a race of beings of the human nature of whom Adam was a sample, or pattern; and of whose future earthly home—Paradise—Eden was a sample, or pattern. I also saw that God purposed that Christ and His joint-sacrifices and joint-heirs are to be God's instruments for blessing the fallen race and restoring them to the perfection enjoyed by Adam in Eden, a condition which God said was "very good," and in which man was an image of his Creator.

When all these things unexpectedly shone out so brightly and clearly, I did not wonder that the Lord gave me several days of waiting and preparation for the blesing; and to Him I render praise and thanks. All my faintness of heart and all fear of the bad effect of the wrong view fled before this evidence of the Lord's leading in the pathway that "shines more and more unto the perfect Day." I saw at once that these new developments would probably prove a stumbling-block to some, as well as great blessing to others who were ready for them. Instead, therefore, of publishing it in the next Watch Tower, I determined to first present the matter privately to the more prominent brethren; remembering the Apostle Paul's course in a similar matter.—Galatians 2:1, 2.

OTHERS WITHDRAW FROM US.

Accordingly, I sent the invitation and money necessary for the traveling expenses to four of the more prominent brethren, requesting a conference. Mr. Paton, from Michigan, was one of the four, and the only one who rejected the first rays of light. Nor could he find any fault with the exegesis, though urged, as all were, to state anything which might seem inconsistent, or to quote any passage of Scripture thought to be in conflict. There were none; and every question demonstrated the strength of the position. I therefore urged that what was beyond the criticism of those most familiar with the Plan of God must be the Truth and ought to be confessed and taught, especially when it arranged and ordered all the other features of Truth so beautifully.

I pointed out, too, how necessary it was to a logical holding of the Ransom to see just what this showed, namely, the distinction of natures—that our Lord left a higher nature and took a lower nature, when He was made flesh, and that the object in that change of nature was that He might, as a man, a perfect man, give Himself a Ransom for the first perfect man, Adam, and thus redeem Adam and all lost in him. I also showed how, as a reward for this great work He was given the Divine nature in His resurrection—a nature still higher than the one He had left when He became man.

But either Mr. Paton's mental vision or his heart was weak; for he never took the step; and before long, he, too, forsook the doctrine of the Ransom. Yet he still used the word Ransom, while denying the idea conveyed by the word; nor could he give the word any other definition or otherwise dispute the correctness of the meaning which we attach to it—which may be found in any English dictionary and is true to the significance of the Greek word which it translates.

Notwithstanding our best endeavors to save him, he drifted farther and farther away. I was obliged to refuse his articles for The Watch Tower for the same reason that obliged me to refuse to spend the Lord's money entrusted to me to assist Mr. Barbour to spread the same pernicious theory.

It was about this time that Mr. Jones informed me that the copies of the book, Day Dawn, which I had purchased last were all that were left; and announcing it so that no more orders for it might come to the Tower Office, I took occasion to promise Millennial Dawn, which should present the Plan of the Ages in the clearer, more orderly manner made possible by the new light shed upon every feature of it by the lessons from the Tabernacle.

About this time Mr. Paton concluded that he would publish another book under the name Day Dawn, revised to harmonize with his new views, which ignored the Ransom, ignored justification, and the need of either, and taught that all men will be everlastingly saved—not in any sense as the result of a sacrifice by Christ, but as the result of each one's crucifying sin in himself—the law under which the poor Jews tried to commend themselves to God, but which justified none. Many and severe were the calumnies heaped upon me because I exposed this change, told that the original Day Dawn was out of print, and that the new book was on a different foundation from that which I had recommended.

AKRON, Ohio, July 9.

For some time I've thought of writing to you and expressing my appreciation for your valuable paper which I enjoy reading each week especially the sermons of Pastor Russell, also for the type you are printing them; the letters from the friends, in fact all religious features. I will be counted as one of your subscribers as long as these features are printed in your pages.

Yours in Christian love,
MARVIN FOSTER,
439 McGowan St.

The "Help Others'" Fund.

Washington, Pa., July 9.

I wish to express to you my continued appreciation of your good paper. Its coming is always looked forward to with pleasure. I get several papers containing Pastor Russell's Sermons, but prefer to read them in the Tribune because of the clear print, and probably because of a little prejudice in favor of it. I enjoy Bro. Nelson's articles and hope to have them in pamphlet form sometime.

There is one thing, however, which always makes me feel sad, and that is when reading the Appreciations, to hear so many say they will have to discontinue their subscriptions because they are unable to pay for them longer. One can hardly imagine any one who is in good health not being able to raise a dolar by some means, but we are not able to judge, as we do not know the circumstances. But when we think of any of the dear ones being so situated that they cannot any longer afford to take the Tribune, which they evidently love to read, those of us who have health and strength, and ability to earn our living, with a few bones buried for the future, should feel very charitable toward them, and have a desire to help them, and to serve the Lord at the same time; remembering that he said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethern, ye have done it unto me." So I have been wondering if there is not some way in which they can be helped.

I believe it would be a good plan for the Tribune to start a relief fund, and I feel sure that all of the classes where the paper goes would be glad to contribute to it; then those who need help could make their request known to the Editor, who would be able to judge of their worthiness, and their request would not need to be published, as it certainly does not make interesting reading. Further, I feel that there are opportunities for the "one talent" ones among us to help to hasten the coming of the Kingdom. I am sure that many of us could find time to do a little outside work, thereby earning the needed dollar to help some one to get the sermons, and by that means we would be preaching to them. If we cannot do big things let us do little things, which are needed to help the big things along. If we are housekeepers we could make some pies for our neighbors, or something else which they might need, and which we have a talent for doing. Or we might do without something we need and thus make a sacrifice. I earn some money by sewing, and have already renewed several subscriptions. I cannot write the Plan of the Ages, as Bro. Russell did; I cannot take a subject and go into it so deeply that you can scarcely see to the bottom of it, as Bro. Barton can, for instance, nor analyze it, and dissect it, until you can see every phase and angle of it, as Bro. Johnson can, yet I doubt if any one of the three of them could sit down at a sewing machine and sew a straight seam, or make a pie to save his life. So if we can only do little things and can be the means of sending those fine sermons to others, the Lord will give us as much credit as though we had actually gone and preached them, and our "one talent" would have been made use of. When a paper like the Tribune takes up "Truth," and gives space to the sermons, it is sure to suffer loss at the hands of prejudiced people, and to incur the displeasure of the "Dumb Dogs," and of the "Hireling Shepherds" in general. So it is only fair that it should be given every encouragement and support by those who wish to see the good work go on. I believe the Editor can help some by always having some good articles from different brethren, and by inviting more letters from friends.

In the beginning I said that by making use of our talents we might hasten the coming of the Kingdom. I imagine some saying we cannot hasten the Kingdom. God has a set time for everything, and nothing we could do would change it. Then I ask why does it say "hasten the coming." See 2nd Peter 3-12, margin, common version; and in the Emphatic Diaglott it reads, "Expecting and hastening the presence of the Day of God." In 1st Corinthians we read, "See that ye come behind in no gift (talent) waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Some have thought a mistake was made by those who thought the Kingdom would be fully set up in 1914, but if we look back we can see how everything seemed to indicate that it would be so. Our Pastor nor anyone else pretended to give Scriptural authority for it, but there seemed to be no reason why it should not be so. Nothing seemed to intervene. The Chronology taught that date to be the end of Gentile Times. Events seemed to be shaping themselves to that end. Church Federation and the regathering of Israel were making rapid strides, but all at once, and from some seemingly unaccountable cause, seemed to receive a "set-back," and almost come to a standstill and to cause a delay. Why was it? It would seem that the Lord, according to some of his parables, gave just enough time and enough material (talent) to complete the work on time, but as foretold some did not use their talents, so when the Lord came he found the work not completed because some of the workmen had gone "off the job," and he had to give the unused talents to others to use in order to get the work completed. The Lord evidently foreknew it would be so, and permitted it for a test, as many tests have come along the lines of time, and it surely has been a test of faith, and loyalty to the Lord and his appointed Servant. But "they that wait shall not be ashamed.' And so the Lord, foreknowing the conditions, has sent us word through the Prophet Habakkuk, 2-3, that though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, and will not tarry. And also through the Apostle in Hebrews 10-37, "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

We are told there will be another testing time at the end of the Messianic reign, when Satan shall be loosed, and who knows but that it may also be along the lines of time. About the year 2914 some may begin to reason that according to Chronology the Kingdom should have been established in 1914, and was to continue for one thousand years, and now since the time was up they should not be kept under the iron rule any longer, but should have the Kingdom turned over to them, and every man be a King himself. That they will prove themselves disloyal at heart, after being brought to perfection outwardly, and with sufficient knowledge to enable them to stand every test, is certain. In Psalms 49-30 we read, "Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish." This is explained in Tower 1895 P. 23, to mean the condition of man after having been brought to perfection, by restitution processes. But not being loyal at heart, he fails to understand that his eternal life depends upon his perfect obedience. Again we read in Proverbs 2-21, "The upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it." Showing that even when they are brought to a condition of glory and honor they will not be considered perfect until they have stood the final test. "Then the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it." Just how Satan is to be bound, and then loosed again we are not told, and anything anyone might have to say about it would necessarily be mere conjecture, but the thought expressed by a Pilgrim Brother has appealed to me as being the most logical and reasonable. The thought was that it would be a knowledge of the Truth that would bind him, and we know that he has been deceiving the people all of these years by substituting all manner of error and superstition for the Truth. We also know that so far as the true Church is concerned, he can no longer deceive them with his errors, and to that extent he is bound. He cannot tell us that there are three Gods in one, or one in three, that the soul is immortal and "cannot surely die;" nor that the wages of sin is eternal torment, because we know better. And it says he is to be bound so that he can deceive the nations no more until the end of the thousand years, when he is to be loosed a little season.

Some might say that if knowledge is to be instrumental in binding him, that in order to loose him, it would be necessary to take away knowledge, but I do not think so, for they would have to have full knowledge before they could stand the final test, which would surely be something to test their sincerity of heart. Adam failed because he did not have knowledge, gained by experience, and was therefore, more excusable, but in the final testing there will be no excuse, for they will have had every opportunity to know right from wrong, and have had sufficient experience with "the exceeding sinfulness of sin."

With best wishes for your continued success.

Very truly yours,
BIBLE STUDENT.

Appreciatons

Brewton, Ala., July 10.

I would like to say to the Truth friends, through the Tribune, that the Official Postal Guide, which heretofore we have had to pay $1.50 for, can now be had of any postmaster at 15c per copy without the supplements, or 50c to include the supplements for a year. This Guide is indispensable to those doing much mailing. The publishers of this Guide have been grafting the public for thirty years, but our good friend Gen. Burleson has come to the rescue and now puts the Guide in the reach of those to be benefited by it—the patronizing public. General Burleson has done numerous good things for the people since he got control of the P. O. Department, for which he has the gratitude of millions of his countrymen.

And our Labor Tribune also has done many things for the protection of the people in its exposure of fakes and crooks. For this the people are also grateful. We also appreciate the religious instruction we get from the Tribune; it is so much better than anything offered us in the pulpits generally.

Very truly your friend,
ELSTON LUTTRELL.

Haliburton, Canada, June 26.

I again have the pleasure of renewing my subscription to the Tribune for another year and am sending it to you direct this time, because I want to request you to change the name and send it now to Mrs. Eliza Holland, instead of me. I will get it the same, but as all my mail goes in another box and I'm away a lot of the time, Mrs. Holland hardly ever gets my Tribune, as I want her to, for the postmaster evidently overlooks, continually, the fact that it has been sent in care of her. So you making this change will oblige us both. We love the Tribune because of the same thing. We saw one fellow order his discontinued for "Too much Russell". We think it hard to get too much of a good thing, and the elucidations of truth from God's word, that comes from the Bible House, that your paper contains so much of, is certainly good, grand. We wish you every success and are glad that we have not had to, as yet, discontinue our Tribune, as apparently, so many have.

Yours, for the Truth,
F. G. HAMMES.

BEACON, N. Y., July 10.

Kindly discontinue The Tribune as my subscription expires this month. A kind friend of ours subscribed for us the past year but I do not feel that we can afford to pay the subscription price for the year. I and my family have appreciated your paper very much. Brother Russell's sermons and Brother Nelson's essays upon Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation and the Voices of the people make your paper very interesting reading.

Yours very sincerely,
WM. R. WILLIAMS.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 10.

Please excuse delay in renewal. Will try to do better in future. We thank you for publishing Pastor Russell's sermons in such large type and all other features of Present Truth. The Lord will surely reward your Labor of Love for His cause. I shall continue to take the Tribune so long as I can afford to.

THOS. MOUNTFORD,
Route 2.

COLUMBUS, O., July 10.

I am enjoying the "Tribune" as much as ever and hope to continue taking it so long as you take an interest in publishing the "Truth" on religious affairs. Enclosed find $1.00.

Respectfully,
MISS EMMA L. LINKE,
693 Park St., South.

MINERAL RIDGE, O., July 7.

Find inclosed check to cover back subscription, place same to my credit and oblige. I am renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower. We consider the Watch Tower and National Labor Tribune household necessities. Thanking you for the boldness with which you proclaim Truth, I remain your much pleased subscriber and reader.

Very truly yours,

ST. PAUL AT ATHENS

Acts 17:22-34—July 16.

The Intellectual Center of the Old World—Images of Gods Everywhere. Preaching In the Parthenon—Basic Difference Between Greek Philosophy and the Scriptures.

"In Him we live and move and have our being."—Verse 28.

WHILE Silas remained to strengthen and establish the Bereans, as Timothy had at Thessalonica and Luke at Philippi, St. Paul went on to Athens, then the center of the world's intelligence, a college city, where resided the most eminent philosophers of the world. Jerusalem had been the center of true religion; Rome was the center of the world's imperial authority; and Athens was the world's intellectual capital.

We can imagine St. Paul walking through the streets of that great city, admiring its wonderful architecture, listening to some of the scientific teachers, and noting the numerous monuments with which the city was crowded—statues of gods, demi-gods and heroes. Every gate post carried its protecting god. Every street had its sanctuary. No wonder his heart was stirred within him as he beheld so intelligent a city wholly given over to idolatry!

As usual, the Apostle found the Jewish synagogue, where he reasoned with the Jews and with devout persons. Daily in the market-places he talked with all who were willing. Some called him a babbler, implying that there was neither sense nor reason in his presentations. Others thought more favorably, and were curious to have a formal discourse.

St. Paul on Mars Hill.

So in the Lord's providence the way was opened for him to deliver a discourse on the Plan of the Ages amongst the wise men of the earth, probably in the great structure known as the Parthenon, on Mars Hill. However, the curiosity of the Athenians was superficial. They wished to keep abreast of every new theory, that they might the better defend their own position.

Our Common Version reports the Apostle to have begun by accusing his hearers of being too superstitious. However true the statement might have been, it would have been unwise; for it would needlessly have offended his hearers from the outstart. We do well, therefore, to translate the word "too religious." This translation fits well with the discourse which followed; for the Apostle proceeds to show that by the images erected they recognize innumerable gods, and that additionally he had seen one altar to the unknown God. This was being too religious in one sense of the word—unwisely so.

Basic Doctrines Contrasted.

The inscription, "To the Unknown God," became the Apostle's text. He preached the true God and Jesus Christ, whom God had sent. He showed Divine Justice and its requirements, which Adam's fallen race cannot meet. He pointed out that consequently all mankind are under condemnation as unworthy of everlasting life, but that God has sent His Son to redeem our race from death and to grant us resurrection privileges. He drew their attention to a greater God than they had thought of, and showed the length and breadth of Love Divine—that it is not confined to one nation, but that God had made of one blood all nations, to dwell on all the face of the earth.

Anticipating the question, "Are we responsible for not having worshiped Him whom we knew not?" St. Paul declared that heretofore they had not been responsible for not having worshiped the true God. Such ignorance God "winked at"—overlooked; for until now His great Plan had not reached that stage of development which authorized the sending of His Message to the nations. But now God commands all men everywhere to repent; for He has appointed another Judgment Day.

In the first Judgment Day Adam was found unworthy of everlasting life and was sentenced to death. His entire race shared in his penalty. But Christ had redeemed Adam and his race from that death penalty, and thus opened the way for another trial for life or death everlasting. This second trial would not merely be for those living at that time, but for the entire race—"all men everywhere." This implied the awakening of the dead. Otherwise, the millions already dead could never participate in God's grace. The proof that this was God's purpose had been demonstrated by the fact that Christ had risen from the dead.

He is Risen!

But the Athenian philosophers, like those of our day, sneered at the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. Some denied a future life; others held that human life is indestructible. All were in opposition to the Bible teaching of a sentence of death, a redemption by death, and a resurrection from death. All interest in the Apostle's teaching vanished for the majority when they learned that the entire philosophy rested upon the resurrection of the dead. Few can receive this.

WEST MEDFORD, Mass., July 9.

I have sent today my renewal for the Labor Tribune for another year. I am still enjoying Pastor Russell's sermons in your paper; they are so helpful to a critical mind and the more you study the sermons in order to prove their error, the better satisfied you are that they are correct, and what we read and study squaring all by the Word of God we know must be so and we do not have to hire a man to tell us, and no one can make us believe otherwise. I have noticed that Pastor Russell's sermons are very clear, and only simple language is used so all can understand, also he gives you Scriptures to back up his thoughts and I have noticed that they are all placed in their proper order, not getting the times and seasons all mixed up, but the things that are spiritual are put upon the spiritual plane, and the things that are human are put upon the earthly plane, and these things are so reasonable that they appeal to me, and must to every right minded, sober man. May the Lord continue to use you and your paper for His work.

Yours truly,
W. H. KIMBALL,
255 Arlington St.

TOWER CITY, Pa., July 9.

I highly appreciate the Tribune for the psace it gives to the "Truth" as promulgated by that fearless man of God, Pastor Russell; as well as for the noble stand it takes against all kinds of fakirs in defense of right and equity.

From an old subscriber,
GEO. W. LONG.

KUTCH, Colo., July 10.

Some time ago I requested the discontinuance of the esteemed Labor Tribune thinking I could not afford it this year but I find the Dear Lord has provided a way for us to have it for some time to come; as I find it is still coming to my old address, Rush, Colo. Will you kindly change my address to Kutch, Colo. Crops are all dried up here. Even the grass. Have had to feed stock dry feed up to the present time with no prospect of feed unless it should rain soon. People discouraged and bitter. Many thanks to the Dear Loving ones who have helped me to the Dear Tribune.

AARON HUFF.

BIG SANDY, Tenn., July 8.

I see my subscription expires July 10th, so I hasten to renew. I don't want to miss a copy, so don't stop it. I am a lifetime subscriber or as long as I have the cash. I look forward to Friday morning as that is when I get the paper. I want it above all other papers. So I inclose check direct to you instead of through Watch Tower office.

Respectfully,
J. C. DAVIS.

GO HEAL THE SICK

H. H. Von Schlick, of Pittsburgh, Helped One Hundred Thousand Suffering People in a Sensible, Old-Fashioned Way—His Fight Against Old Age and Disease.

Two years ago H. H. Von Schlick, of 306 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was unknown. Today tens of thousands worship him. They are grateful for new health, freedom from pains and aches.

CHURCH HUMILIATION PRECEDES GLORY

"WEEPING MAY ENDURE FOR A NIGHT, BUT JOY COMETH IN THE MORNING."

Our Earth the Only Part of God's Universe in Rebellion—How the Rebellion Came About—Divine Permission of Evil for Six Thousand Years—Reign of Sin Soon to End—The Church's Present Experiences of Suffering Violence a Preparation for Future Glory—Apostate Systems, Claiming Present Right to Rule, Not the True Church—Distinction Soon to be Clearly Seen—Church in Glory to be Known and Honored of All.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, July 9.—Pastor Russell is in our city, in attendance upon the I. B. S. A. Convention here. Today he delivered a powerful lecture based upon Matthew 11:12—"The Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." He said in part:

According to the Bible, our earth is the only province in all God's Universe that is in rebellion against the great Creator. We will not recount the history of this rebellion, save to remind you briefly that our father Adam was created in the image of God, in perfect harmony with his Maker. He was abundantly supplied with suitable food, delightful surroundings, and everything needful to his welfare and happiness. The terms under which he might have life and its accompanying blessings continued everlastingly were most reasonable. But the temptation to disobedience came; and in his inexperience Adam succumbed to the Tempter. He became a rebel against his Creator, and brought upon himself the sentence of death—not eternal torment. That sentence was, "Dying, thou shalt die"—NOT "Living, thou shalt live in torment."—Genesis 2:17; 3:19; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; Romans 6:23.

This is the plain statement of the Scriptures, no matter how much we have been taught to the contrary. That rebellion, which set in more than six thousand years ago, has continued ever since. During this period, God has not interposed to stop this rebellion in the human family. Ever since the fall of man, Death has reigned over all of Adam's posterity. God purposed to permit sin to take its course, for a certain limited period, in order that mankind's experiences with sin should be a great lesson, not only to themselves, but to all of God's intelligent creatures throughout eternity.

The angels have been very deeply interested on-lookers regarding what has happened upon this planet, as the Scriptures plainly show. Some of the angels followed man into sin; others remained true to their Creator and His laws. But while the holy angels have not transgressed at any time, yet they have beheld the transgression of mankind, and are noting how it has turned out. They perceive that in its very nature sin brings a sure penalty; that its only possible effect is mental, moral and physical decay; and that misery, pain and sorrow are its inevitable accompaniments, ending in death.

DIVINE PLAN OF THE AGES.

But our wise Creator does not purpose to permit sin to continue indefinitely. Why should He permit sin to mar His great Universe? Before deciding that nothing can be done for humanity, God purposes to give the whole human family an opportunity to return to harmony and fellowship with Him. This opportunity, the Apostle Peter tells us, will be given during the "Times of Restitution." "Times of Refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the Heavens must retain until the Times of Restitution, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began."—Acts 3:19-21.

There have been no Times of Refreshing since Father Adam's sin of disobedience; for there the curse began and has continued even until now. St. Peter tells us, however, that in God's great Plan our Lord Jesus Christ is to be sent to earth, to accomplish the great work provided for in His death over eighteen hundred years ago. For a thousand years he will reign for the purpose of eradicating sin, of helping mankind up out of their fallen condition and bringing back to the image of God all the willing and obedient. That will be the time when Messiah will take to Himself His great power and reign. First of all, He will bind Satan, so that the nations will no more be deceived by him.

In His own due time God sent forth His Son to be the King, sent Him into this world, this rebellious province, to tell mankind that the great God who had condemned them has mercy on them and wishes to bless them. Our Lord Jesus came to the most favored nation of His time; but they rejected Him and crucified Him. He who had come into the world as its rightful King, as God's Representative, suffered violence even unto death. Since He represented the Kingdom which God purposed to set up on earth, when He was crucified, violence was done to the Kingdom.

These things have not taken the Lord by surprise. God foreknew it all from the beginning. It was a part of the Divine Program to permit His Son to be crucified; and knowing that it was the Father's will, the Son permitted His life to be taken from Him by wicked men. He humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name above every name," next to His own. He who came into the world as its rightful King was crucified. But His death as a man was the gateway to glory, when He was resurrected by the power of the Almighty, and sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on High, there to remain until He should come to earth again to take His rightful authority as earth's Ruler for a thousand years.

WHY THE SAINTLY ARE MISUNDERSTOOD.

God foretold the death of our Lord Jesus through the Prophets hundreds of years before He came to earth as a man, in order that we might be able to see that all things have worked according to the counsel of the Divine will, and that sin and evil have not been permitted in any wise to frustrate His plans and purposes. And as it was the Father's design to permit the great Head of the Church to suffer violence, even so has it been His design to permit those who have followed the Master in the way of sacrifice to suffer violence. "If they have called the Master of the House Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of His Household?" (Matthew 10:25.) In these, as representatives of the Heavenly Kingdom, the Kingdom of Heaven has suffered violence throughout the Gospel Age.

How comes it that so false and unjust an impression of Jesus and of His saints could exist? Why should good appear to be evil to many and the evil apear to be good? We answer, "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Corinthians 4:4.) The religious leaders of Jesus' day said that He had a devil because He did not join in with the Scribes and the Pharisees, because He would not teach the traditions of men, because He would not endorse their theories nor walk in their ways. Had He joined in with them, He would have been popular. They would have praised Him and pointed to Him as one of themselves. But He would not do this because they were wrong. Our Lord stood for God and the Truth; therefore He could not and would not endorse the theories of the religious leaders of His day. He would not teach their doctrines. As a result, the leaders opposed, maligned and persecuted Him. And thus it has been with all who have followed in His steps ever since.

There was a time when Christ's true followers were put to all manner of gross indignities, were tortured on the rack, were roasted at the stake. We may not today suffer in the same manner; for such physical tortures are out of style. Tormenting, burning, crucifying, etc., are no longer practised. Now the Lord's faithful servants are held up to public opprobrium. This is called "roasting." The former kind of roasting has become unpopular; and so we now have this more modern method.

Many newspapers and preachers seek to dishonor those who follow the Master and have His spirit. What shall we do when thus misrepresented and defamed? Shall we return evil for evil? Oh, no! Our Lord Jesus did not do so. (1 Peter 2:21-23.) Although He had the power to do so, yet He would not use that power. He could have saved Himself from the cross; but if He had done so, He would not have been the Saviour of the world. He knew that His enemies did not realize what they were doing. This was the testimony of the Apostles.—Acts 3:13-17; 1 Corinthians 2:8.

SUFFERING PRECEDES GLORIFICATION.

Thus it has been all down the Gospel Age. The members of the Kingdom class have suffered violence from those who knew not what they were doing. Had they realized that they were persecuting the true Church of Christ, they would surely have refrained at once. But the Lord's faithful followers are to put up with this ill-treatment with good grace, knowing that it is working out for them a great blessing, and that in due time a blessing will come even to our persecutors.

This is God's arrangement for all whom He has called to be of the Gospel Church. If the Head of that Church, our Lord Jesus Christ, had not suffered, even unto death of the cross, He would not have received the high reward of exaltation to the right hand of the Majesty on High. The same principle is operating toward all the Kingdom class. If we miss the persecution, we shall also miss the blessing, the reward. (Romans 8:17; 2 Timothy 2:11, 12.) We cannot change God's Plan.

The Scriptures assure us, however, that this matter of suffering violence under present evil conditions will ultimately work out for the good of the saints of God. It is written, "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to the called according to His purpose. (Romans 8:28.) How reasonable a proposition, that He whom God has purposed shall be the great King to bring the fallen race of man back to harmony with Himself should first learn sympathy for those whom He would uplift and restore! How reasonable, too, that those called to be associate rulers and blessers with Him should learn the same lessons!

THE MASTERPIECE OF DECEPTION.

There has been a great mistake made regarding the nature of the Kingdom of God and the time for its domination of earth. We have not properly understood the matter. We have thought that the Kingdom of God was already here, that its rule had already begun. Some have thought that it was set up when our Lord arose from the dead. Others have supposed that it was set up at Pentecost. But long after Pentecost St. John prayed for this Kingdom to come. (Revelation 22:20.) Still others have thought that it must have come with the destruction of Jerusalem. But it did not come then.

Many people believe that the Kingdom of God was established on earth in the year 800 A. D. Then the Roman Catholic Church had become very powerful, and the European Kingdoms very weak. Religious leaders said, "We have waited eight hundred years for our Lord to return and set up His Kingdom. He has not come. But the Church is growing strong and influential. Surely it must be the will of God that we should set up the Kingdom."

According to this conclusion, the Holy Roman Empire was established about the year 800, with the Bishop of Rome as the Vice-regent of Christ—His earthly representative. Doubtless the leaders of this movement thought that they were following Divine instructions regarding the establishment of the long-promised Kingdom; but the Adversary deceived them. The Bible tells us that He has deceived the whole world. (Revelation 20:1-4.) For centuries this pseudo kingdom of God made and unmade kings, as appointees of God's Kingdom. For a while the kings had to walk very humbly and quietly; for if they displeased the Pope, he would depose them and appoint their successor. History records many humiliating experiences which disobedient European sovereigns were compelled to undergo as a result of the Pope's anger at their course.

COUNTERFEIT VS. REAL MILLENNIUM.

Surely the Kingdom which had such power was not the Kingdom of Heaven which, according to our text, was to suffer violence at the hands of men throughout the Gospel Age! In the light of the Scriptures we cannot believe that the Kingdom of God has been reigning on earth for the past 1,100 years. If it has been in power, we would be greatly disappointed; for the Word of God leads us to expect that Kingdom to accomplish something far greater and far more lasting than anything that has been accomplished during these centuries. That Word assures us that when Messiah reigns, He will reign in righteousness and in judgment; that His control will extend over the entire earth, for the uplift and blessing of the whole world, for their deliverance from sin, sorrow and death.—Isaiah 32:1-4; 35:1-10; Psalm 72; etc.

We have seen nothing like these blessed results during the Papal Millennium. For the past 1,100 years the records of history reveal nothing but a reign of corruption and violence, not a reign of righteousness and peace. All evil-doers have not been cut off; neither have the righteous flourished. Speaking through the Prophet David, the Lord says of this present evil time, "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay-tree." "Their eyes stand out with fatness." (Psalm 37:35, 36; 73:3-12.) But to the righteous our Lord Jesus says, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for My sake." Of the same class the Apostle Paul declares, "All that shall live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."—Matthew 5:11; 2 Timothy 3:12.

All this is in harmony with our text, which declares that during the present life the Kingdom of Heaven, the true Church of Christ, suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. The meek have not yet inherited the earth; they seldom get even a good slice of it. Are the righteous blessed and the wicked punished today? No; just the reverse. Those who are living godly lives in Christ Jesus are misrepresented, persecuted and put out of the synagogues. All manner of evil is spoken against them falsely, for Christ's sake. And all this is being done in the name of Christ!—John 16:1-4.

REIGN OF TRUE KINGDOM AT HAND.

For centuries the true Church has suffered violence at the hands of the rulers of this world. Some have done this under one name, some under another; but the persecution has been done under the direction of Satan, whose object it is to destroy the true saints of God. But when the true Kingdom is set up, there will be a great change in this respect.

God's times and seasons are absolutely fixed. No one can hasten them. Everything is in the Father's power. Now we see that God wished the world to have six great Days of a thousand years each, during which to learn certain necessary lessons; and that these six Days were to be followed by a Seventh Day, during which Christ and the Church will occupy the office of Prophet, Priest and King, in order to teach, help and uplift the world, restoring them to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary.

The present order of things will not last. Our Lord will set up the Kingdom of God (Daniel 2:44), which will do away with this present order and will bring in the New Order. At that time He will have associated with Him all those who have been loyal to Him and His Cause, and who have proved themselves faithful even unto death. Only such will be His joint-heirs in the Kingdom.

Seeing these things, perceiving the fulfilment of the prophecies of the Scriptures all about us, and knowing from the sure Word of God the outcome of present events, the Lord's faithful people may well wait in patience for their deliverance, may well lift up their heads and rejoice. (Luke 21:28.) Daily we are getting ready for that Kingdom by proving and manifesting that we have a thorough-going loyalty of heart to the coming Kingdom and its principles of righteousness. If we are willing to suffer violence for the Kingdom and its righteous principles, God will know that we are loyal to Him; and He will reward us openly. The deliverance of the suffering saints of God draws near.

HELP OTHERS' FUND.

The Tribune this week publishes a letter from a well-known Truth friend in Washington, Pa. This friend wants us to have a fund to help others to get the benefit and uplift of the weekly sermon of Pastor Russell and the other good things that appear week by week in the National Labor Tribune. We have decided to act on the advice of our friend and will have a fund devoted exclusive to the helping others to get the Tribune every week. We have decided to call this fund "HELP OTHERS", and every week we will publish the receipts and expenditures of this fund. Who will be the first to start this worthy object?

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Essay V.

To class Russell under any of these emotional features would be a misfit, except, perhaps, it be benevolence—he has a genuine sympathy for all that are out of the way—the paternal sympathy of a father, a patriarch. His debut upon the platform was in a small mission in Pittsburgh, Pa., and grew into a calm, deliberate and conversational lecturer of international fame that holds his audiences spellbound for two hours in his public addresses. His personality, as well as the message, has to do with this; an expert's account of his power is: "His natural refinement, taste and imagination, with large language, qualify him to express himself in a free, easy, graceful style, enabling him to present many unpleasant truths in a pleasing and acceptable manner. . . . He has great magnetic force, is full of electricity, and consequently he imparts life and vivacity to every word he utters, whether in public or in private. Pastor Russell impresses and controls the mind of his hearers without making any effort to do so, for his utterances are like sparks that kindle a fire in the souls of those who listen to him."

To this we must add that his sincerity and simplicity is a drawing power, and in this respect he resembles Wesley whose sterling honesty and reverend air infected his hearers. Wesley spoke to enormous audiences in the open that reached beyond the limits of his voice. Russell's audiences are limited to the capacity of the largest auditoriums procurable. Beecher, the brilliant and gifted magnet, was obliged to charge for admittance to keep down the rush on his lecture tours. Beecher collected $240,000 at the doors. Russell donated $250,000 into the movement and will not lecture where admission fee is charged. His oratory, like his genius, was a flower of slow growth. His attainments as a public speaker makes up for his deficiencies in literature from the classical point of view. St. Paul's "bodily presence was weak, his letters only were mighty;" invert this order and you have Russell whose dignified, striking and extraordinary appearance commands the respect and attention of his audience and this eliminates the necessity of the clever ruse of Talmage in playing weak at the beginning of the lecture to get the audience to underestimate him and then surprise them by his powers on the home stretch. Pranks of this nature are not indulged in, but he will digress at intervals to relieve the tension of a weighty discourse, with an incident of his own experience with others on the subject of discussion. He handles heavy matter yet he uses no notes—he is an extemporaneous speaker with not less than two sermons weekly, one of these new for the press. He has a message to deliver and his discourses need no padding with little stories of pathos—he never appeals to sentiment.

An Unprecedented Feat.

The orator is characterized in the following language by a correspondent of the New York American in the news account of the famous Jewish gathering in the New York Hippodrome. It serves to show the distance he has travel in oratory since he emanated from the commercial life of Pittsburgh, Pa., to the rostrum, with no training as a public speaker and yet not a gifted orator like Luther, Ingersoll or Beecher. The message, more than the man, swayed this enormous audience. The account follows:

"The unusual spectacle of 4,000 Hebrews enthusiastically applauding a Gentile preacher after having listened to a sermon he addressed to them concerning their own religion, was presented at the Hippodrome yesterday afternoon, where Pastor Russell, the famous head of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, conducted a most unusual service.

"In his time the venerable pastor has done many unconventional things. His religion is bounded by no particular denomination, and encompasses, as he says, all mankind. His ways of teaching it are his own. But he never did a more unconventional thing than this—nor a more successful one. He won over an audience that had come—some of it, at least—prepared to debate with him, to resent perhaps, what might have appeared like a possible intrusion. 'Pastor Russell is going to try to convert the Jews to Christianity,' was the word that many had received before the meeting. 'He wants to prosolyte us.'

"In the crowd which filled the big showhouse were scores of rabbis and teachers, who had come to speak out in case the Christian attacked their religion or sought to win them from it. They had questions and criticism ready for him. He was received at first in a dead silence. But the pastor did not seek to convert the Jews. To their unbounded delight, he pointed out the good things of their religion, agreed with them in their most important beliefs as to their salvation, and finally, after a warm advocacy of the plan of the Jews establishing a nation of their own, brought about a tumult of applause by leading a choir in the Zionist anthem: 'Hatikva—Our Hope.'

"A more interesting audience the Hippodrome never held, perhaps. From all parts of the city came serious-minded Hebrews to hear what it was an alien, a gentile, might have to say to them at a service, held during their week of feasting, Rosh Hoshana. They were quiet, well-dressed, thinking men and women. Among them were many prominent figures of the Hebrew literary world. Some of these escorted Pastor Russell to the Hippodrome in a motor car and then took places in the Auditorium. The men recognized the pastor as a writer and investigator of international fame on the subject of Judaism and Zionism.

"There were no preliminaries. Pastor Russell, tall, erect and white-bearded, walked across the stage without introduction, raised his hand, and his double quartette from the Brooklyn Tabernacle sang the hymn, 'Zion's Glad Day.' But still there seemed an air of aloofness about the audience. They did not applaud, but sat silently watching the stalwart figure of the Pastor. When he began to talk, however, they gave him respectful attention. With a powerful yet charming voice, that filled the great playhouse, the unconventional clergyman made his every word audible to every hearer. His tones pleased their ears, his graceful gestures soon captivated their eyes, and in a few moments his apparently thorough knowledge of his subject appealed to their minds. Though still silent, the 4,000 were 'warming up' to him. It was not long before all reserve, and all possible doubt of Pastor Russell's entire sincerity and friendliness were worn away. Then the mention of the name of a great Jewish leader—who, the speaker declared had been raised by God for the cause—brought a burst of applause.

"From that moment on the audience was his. The Jews became enthusiastic over him as though he had been a great rabbi or famous orator of their own religion. He hailed them as one of the bravest races of the earth—having kept their faith through the persecution and cruelties of all other people for thousands of years. And he predicted that before very long they would be the greatest of the earth—not merely a people any longer, but a nation. By a system of deduction based upon the prophecies of old, the pastor declared that the return of the kingdom of the Jews might occur at so near a period as the year 1914. Persecution would be over and peace and universal happiness would triumph.

"As he brought his address to a conclusion the pastor raised his hand again to his choir; this time they raised the quaint foreign sounding strains of the Zion hymn, 'Our Hope,' one of the masterpieces of the eccentric East Side poet, Imber. The unprecedented incident of Christian voices singing the Jewish anthem came as a tremendous surprise. For a moment the Hebrew auditors could hardly believe their ears. Then, making sure it was their own hymn, they first cheered and clapped with such ardor that the music was drowned out, and then with the second verse, joined in by hundreds."

HOW THE FAKIR WORKS HIS GAME OF PLUNDER

Offers a Victim Furniture of Great Value for One-Fourth the Price--The Articles Bought are Never Shipped but Substituted With Cheaper.

There is ample legislation against the ordinary thief; the people are also protected by laws against the burglar, the pickpocket and the safeblower, but why the fake furniture crook should be immune is the most startling revelation that has been brought to the attention of the police department in this great municipality.

The way the shopping public has been robbed by the furniture fakir is the most startling discovery that has been uncovered in this city for many days and why these trimmers have escaped so long is to be laid at the feet of the victims.

No sneak thief, no pickpocket, no cheap crook worked with such open deliberation as the furniture fakir is permitted to operate and the complaints pouring into the office of the Tribune has brought about a personal investigation in which the revelation would put Jesse James and the experienced surething man to shame.

Here is a statement from the lips of one of the salesmen who had been one of the chief "trimmers" in the largest fake establishment operating in this city and the story would equal that of the best hold-up man in the country.

"You do not sell customers" he said "you merely rob them." From the time the victim is caught by the barker on the outside of any one of these fake stores operating to the "wholesale" store which is the largest of the chain, the sole motive is plunder. Workingmen are actually browbeaten; even poor widows, who come with the last few dollars left to them through a small insurance policy are deliberately robbed and all their pitiful entreaties for fair dealings are laughed at and cast aside with contempt only befitting a tyrant.

"During my connection with a fake store I caught an actor who was playing at one of the local theatres. He was walking along Penn Avenue and I practically siezed him. I asked 'looking for furniture?' I suspected the lady with him was a young bride. 'I'm only looking around but not prepared to buy at this time.' 'Would something, 50 cents on the dollar, interest you? I have something I know it's a bargain. Let me show you?' He bit—when he decided to go up stairs I knew I had him interested. That's half the trick. He came to the showroom and I showed a bedstead. 'See that?' It was a beauty. 'Take it for $50.' Any sucker would have bought that for fifty, it was actually worth $200 or $250. Before he was through I had sold him $450 worth of furniture for cash. One hundred was paid at once, the remaining $350 was to be paid before the goods were shipped. Some weeks later the actor called and paid the remaining $350 on the furniture, and everything EXCEPT the bedstead was shipped.

He wrote, but could get no satisfaction. He called and kicked terrifically, about the articles he received; he knew he had been duped. He demanded his bedstead. By this time the bedstead had been removed from the display room to the basement. My explanation to him was this: 'In removing the bedstead from the display room to the elevator something got wrong with the elevator and it fell to the cellar injuring the bedstead. We were compelled to send to the factory for a new bedstead. Just as soon as it arrives from the factory we will ship it to you.' That was good dope for another month; we got away with the small stuff on which we made a great profit. We had 'trimmed' him for $350 without the bedstead and we were not worrying much, we were now more interested in new victims. A month passed and no bedstead. He had grown tired writing and kicking, so he made another visit. He tore things up lively in roasting the house and after a burst of indignation he demanded his bedstead. We laughed at him. He was a joke. We kidded him and told him to beat it. He finally went to the police department and complained. The police department called us up and we returned ONLY $50. We were $400 to the good on him."

"I have watched the suckers come back after we had their money to kick about the furniture. Their complaint fell upon deaf ears. If they were persistent, the Boss put it all over them. He cursed them in the most abusive fashion, and if he felt it was necessary, he smashed them in the face at the same time filling the air with blasphemy. While the scene was being enacted the 'salesmen' in the roll of the rough necks sympathized with the Big Boss. It was necessary to pull off some pretty rough stuff at times and I have seen men carried out of the 'wholesale' house. Women who kicked were thrown out by the 'nigger' and the 'salesmen' look upon the visits of complaining shoppers as only incidents to the great business. It is estimated that $500,000 worth of business is done through this chain of fake stores. One big fake is the pretended sale of unclaimed railroad goods. This is worked off on the general public as a bargain proposition; the inference given out, the store has some connection with the big railroads. In this institution the shopping public is robbed right and left and no crook is permitted to work in the open like this aggregation of fakirs."

Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong is said to be making an investigation and Council is being aroused to the necessity of protecting legitimate business houses. The Tribune has began a campaign

SHERIFF RICHARDS MUST FIGHT FOR CORONER

Friends Preparing to Wage Strenuous War for Mill and Factory Vote. Big Battle Looked For.

Hon. George W. Richards, Sheriff of Allegheny County, is on the eve of closing his term in this office and not being eligible for re-election, the High Sheriff is being pushed forward by his energetic friends as a candidate for Coroner of Allegheny County to succeed Coroner Samuel C. Jamison, whose office becomes vacant at the same time.

Sheriff Richards has done splendid work since his induction into the Sheriff's office, and during the last half year he has passed through a most strenuous seige. It is not generally known but there has not been a month since Sheriff Richards was elected that he has not been called upon by some manufacturing concern or employer of labor for the protection of property against what in the opinion of said employers seemed to indicate a desire on the part of some one to destroy property.

HON. GEORGE W. RICHARDS,

In response to such calls Sheriff Richards showed that in many instances the impression was imaginary and that no evil was intended at all nor were there any property rights threatened. The Sheriff holds a most peculiar and delicate office. Corporations need only, according to law, notify the Sheriff and that is all. Should any destruction to property occur after the notice has been delivered in person by the manufacturer or employer, the taxpayers are held responsible and every home in Allegheny County may be either mortgaged or sold to pay for the destruction wrought either through fire or riot.

During the last few months there were no less than 72,000 men on strike at one time and to keep peace during such time is no small task. It must be understood by the citizens, the Sheriff has a sworn duty to perform and any refusal on his part may subject him to severe punishment through the courts. There is no question about the corporations not pushing him; and should he do anything to antagonize the workmen his whole political career may be wrecked. Sheriff Richards, it is said by the most conservative labor leaders, has acted wisely in all labor disputes and passed through the difficulties with remarkable success.

The whole Pittsburgh district early in May was threatened with a disagreeable strike situation but had the wiser heads ruled in some sections there would have been no trouble whatsoever and all would have passed off smoothly. The strike fever was high, and the temperament of the more radical boiling, but had the latter not interfered the workmen would have won every point for which they contended. As it was a private police force had to be restrained by the Sheriff and this brought upon the Sheriff an unnecessary burden. To a feeling aroused by private agencies may well be attributed the interference of the District Attorney's office who found it necessary to prosecute those who were responsible for the International Labor Convention to Meet

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, July 3, 1916.

An important conference of allied Labor federations will take place at Leeds, England, on July 5 and 6, to consider a lengthy programme on general Labor subjects affecting trade unions in the Allied countries. Representatives of the General French Confederation of Labor, the Italian, Russian and Portuguese confederations will attend as the guests of the British General Federation of Trade Unions, whose annual conference will be held during the same week.

Among the subjects to be discussed are: An international eight-hour day, a general Saturday half holiday, the Sunday cessation of Labor, the industrial protection of women labor, and an international approximation of laws relating to labor. There will also be considered the question of stopping immigration from enemy countries, and the appointment of a Government committee representing all sections of industry and Government departments.

An important joint Labor Deputation waited on Lewis Harcourt, acting President of the Board of Trade, and Dr. Addison, Under-Secretary for Munitions, at the Board of Trade last week. The deputation, which consisted of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress, the Executive Committee of Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades Federation, the National Labor Advisory Committee on War Output, and district representatives of the federation, made three requests to the Ministers for submission to the Government.

(1) That the State should regulate food and fuel prices in the interests of the community, as wage advances commensurate with the enormous increases in the cost of living cannot be obtained, even by the skilled and highly organized trades, as a result of the Cabinet's "limitation of wages increase" decision.

(2) That the Government decision withdrawing Board of Trade grants to societies paying unemployment benefit should be rescinded.

(3) That official steps should be taken to provide that trade unionists should pay contributions to their societies and should not be able to utilize the Munitions Act for escaping their obligations.

The proceedings were private, but an official report issued by Mr. Mosses, secretary of the National Labor Advisory Committee, stated: "Mr. Harry Gosling, president of the Parliamentary Committee, introduced a deputation, and the chief speaker with regard to food prices was Mr. John Hill, president of the federation, who was followed by Mr. Fred Bramley, Mr. Griffith (Liverpool), and Mr. Odgen, representing the Lancashire textile trades. Mr. Harcourt, who replied, pointed out the extreme difficulty of regulating food prices, but promised sympathetic consideration for the proposals placed before him. He intimated that the minute of the Cabinet of November, 1915, on the limitation of wage advances was not intended to prevent advances in wages being given, and as a matter of fact a number of advances had been made since the minute was issued, especially to the lower-paid trades.

"The question of workmen who had failed to pay trade union contributions was submitted to Dr. Addison, who intimated his intention of consulting with the National Advisory Committee as to certain proposals put forward with a view to remedying what the workmen's representatives evidently considered a great grievance."

The National Union of Railwaymen, at the conclusion of their annual conference at Bath, England, on June 22, declared for railway nationalisation, on the ground that private ownership is no longer compatible with social progress, and especially in view of the grave dangers which will confront the country after the war if such ownership be maintained. Mr. W. Hudson, M. P., said nationalisation was necessary in the interest of commerce even more than that of labor. The only satisfactory solution of existing difficulties was national control of the means of transit both by land and water. Dumping had been brought about by low tonnage rates from foreign countries and the existence of special rates for freights within our own shores—and this could not happen in future with the means of transit in the hands of our own Government. They did not want "protection."

COUNTY JAIL MUST GO; THE MORGUE TO FOLLOW

Cost More to Keep Juveniles Than Send Them to Washington and Jefferson College--State to Handle Big Charities.

By J. H. Vitchestain.

The Allegheny County Jail is to be moved and a plot of ground now valued at $1,000,000 is to be put to a more useful purpose than housing the riff-raff of a great city.

The morgue is to be transformed into a power building for the new City-County building, instead of using the property for a show case, where the morbid constantly keep up a pagaent viewing the remains of the unfortunate in whom they have no interest.

The Juvenile Court which is costing the taxpayers of Allegheny County more money to guard and protect innocent childhood and the adolescent than it costs to educate and keep a student at Washington & Jefferson College, is to be placed under the supervision of the State.

The charitable institutions, particularly for the care of the insane and feeble minded, are to be turned over for State bossing and supervision and to be subjected to State aid instead of support of local taxpayers.

The foregoing items are some of the big things to be legislated for and against the next session of the General Assembly and the creation, invention and realization of these magnanimous undertakings are to be the latest sensations to burst upon the County Commissioners, Coroner Samuel C. Jamison, Judge Way and his coterie, as well as those who have been chiefly directing their efforts to arranging budgets for the care of the insane or seeking appropriations from the State through the State Board of Charities.

It is said the jig is up for many of the politicians, as well as those enjoying soft snaps, or dispensing large State appropriations.

The jail which represents, it is estimated, nearly $2,000,000, is nothing more than the Tramps' Castle, where sometimes 1,500 drunks are stored to sober-up. This institution is not only regarded as a burden but an imposition on the taxpayers. The methods of providing for the inmates are antiquated and barbarious; they belong to the ancient days. The jail where it is, is of no more service for convenience than the Workhouse at Claremont. It is an expensive luxury. There cruelty is practiced in the extreme and the unfortunate derelicts are turned loose after serving their time only to return later.

Warden John Lewis is not brutal, neither are his keepers, clerks or attendants.

These men are kind, considerate and generous. The barbarity is in the confinement. Men sentenced to jail, it is said, are locked up in a small, very small apartment, with only one hour a day for exercise and recreation. During the remainder of the time unless, perchance, some small task should become their fortune they stretch their bones on the stone floor or struggle along the best they can. Men who are accustomed to do work would prefer to labor at something rather than eak out this existence in solitary confinement.

The jail could be transferred to Claremont and this valuable property used for something else. The prisoners on trial or waiting the calling of their case may well be kept at central station where there are conveniences in abundance and ample space.

The jail prisoners, it is said, should be used on the farm to raise the provisions they use and to aid in the raising of provisions that is lacking at Marshalsea and which costs the city about $40,000 annually. These prisoners, too, it is suggested, should be able to raise enough provisions to care for the poor who are provided for in the city through the Department of Charities. There are almost innumerable reasons for the change and but few that can essentially combat the movement to move the jail.

The health of the prisoners from a sanitary point is guarded and the utilitarian advantages both to the County and the inmates stand out prominently.

Then, too, it is an economical proposition and will be of tremendous saving to the taxpayers.

The transforming of the morgue to a power building is another big proposition.

J. Denny O'Neil, when County Commissioner, permitted the most useless and extravagant plans to be accepted as a lighting and power proposition and unless these plans are revised the County's light and power bill will rise up to haunt the present County Commissioners. These, if permitted to go, will eventually be the Golden Calf that will topple over to crush their present sponsors.

The Court House at the present temperature of 92 degrees is burning 500 cubic feet of gas per minute or 30,000 cubic feet per hour and doing this each of the 365¼ days in the year. This costs Allegheny County taxpayers 15 cents per one thousand cubic feet.

"What's the difference?" is the ejaculation of the custodians of the peoples' business "the money don't belong to us anyway" and the extravagance goes on.

The new Act of Assembly to be introduced eliminating the FOOD FOR THINKING CHRISTIANS

During this time I was busied with an immense work, known to some of you—the issue and circulation of over 1,400,000 copies of two pamphlets; one entitled, Food for Thinking Christians and the other, Tabernacle Teachings. The united matter of these two pamphlets was about the size of that of Scripture Studies, Vol. I. Besides this, I was flooded with thousands of joyous and joy-giving letters, from those who had received and were reading the pamphlets thus distributed, and were asking questions and more reading matter. To add to our pressure, financial complications came; and thus for four years I was hindered from fulfilling my promise of Millennial Dawn, now called Studies in the Scriptures. Nor is our promise of the complete set fulfilled even yet. Six volumes are out, but the Seventh Volume is not yet issued. During these four years, however, we were struggling through an immense amount of labor (all cheerfully undergone for the sake of our Lord and His saints); and each year we hoped afresh to be able to gather the hours necessary to complete the first volume of Millennial Dawn. And the same great Adversary of the Truth later hindered other volumes of the Series.

Some who have The Three Worlds or the old edition of Day Dawn would perhaps like to know my present opinion of them—whether I still think them profitable books to loan to Truth seekers. To this I reply, Certainly not; for the very immature views of God's Truth therein presented fall far short of what we now see to be God's wonderful Plan. Things which are now clear as noonday were then cloudy and mixed. The distinction between the perfect human nature, to which the obedient of the world will be restored during the Millennium, and the Divine nature, to which the Little Flock, the sacrificing Elect of the Gospel Age are soon to be exalted, were then unnoticed. All now so clear was then blurred, mixed and indistinct. Neither had we then seen the steps or planes, shown upon the Chart of the Ages in Studies in the Scriptures, Vol. I., which have assisted so many to distinguish between justification and sanctification and to determine their present relationship to God.

And the time reckonings which those earlier books presented, lacking point and leaving the reader in doubt as to what the author is attempting to prove to them, tend only to confuse the mind and to give the impression that time prophecies are merely clues and serve no definite purpose or object. Hence, I answer most decidedly, I would not recommend or use either of those books today. Once I was much less careful about what I circulated or commended, but I am learning every day to be more and more careful as to what sort of food I put before any of the Lord's hungry sheep. The Lord has taught me that it is a responsible matter to be a teacher, even to the extent of circulating a book or paper. Even the book, Food for Thinking Christians (now out of print), published, and circulated during the year 1881, I no longer commend, because it is less systematic and therefore less clear than later publications.

STILL ANOTHER SIFTING

Another chapter in our experience needs to be told, as it marks another shaking and sifting. Mr. A. D. Jones proposed to start another paper on the same lines as The Watch Tower, to republish some of the simpler features of God's Plan and to be a sort of missionary and primary teacher. Knowing him to be clear on the subject of the Ransom, I bade him Godspeed and introduced a sample copy of his paper, Zion's Day Star (now for many years discontinued), to our nearly ten thousand readers, only, as it soon proved, to stumble some of them into rank infidenity, and others into the rejection of the Ransom. For though The Day Star steered a straight course for a few months, and maintained the same position as The Watch Tower, with reference to the Ransom, and for the same reason refused the no-ransom articles sent in for its columns by Mr. Paton, yet within one year it had gone boldly into infidelity, and totally repudiated all the rest of the Bible as well as those portions which teach the fall of Adam and the Ransom therefrom in Christ.

All this meant another strain, another sifting, another cutting loose of friends, who erroneously supposed that our criticisms of the false doctrines were prompted by a spirit of rivalry, and who did not so soon see whither his teachings were drifting, nor how great the importance of holding fast the first principles of the doctrines of Christ—how Christ died for our sins, and rose for our justification.

These shaking and sifting processes continued to progress, and are not yet over; for all must be thoroughly tried and tested. It is not a question of who may fall, but of "who shall be able to stand?" as the Apostle puts it. And we have need again to remember the Apostolic admonition, "Let him who thinketh he standeth (who feels very confident, as did St. Peter when he said, 'Lord, though all deny Thee, yet will not I') take heed lest he will."

THE TEST OF ALL CHRISTIANS

This doctrine, of another way of salvation (and salvation for all, too) than by the Cross of Christ, is not only the error which since 1874 has been sifting all who come into the light of Present Truth, but it is the trial that has come upon the whole of Christendom to try them. (Revelation 3:10.) It has spread among all classes of Chritian people, especially among ministers of all sects. The number who believe that Christ's death provides the Ransom-price for Adamic sin is daily getting smaller; indeed there has been an actual stampede from the doctrine of man's fall in Adam and his ransom from that fall by "the Man Christ Jesus." (1 Timothy 2:5, 6.) As the Psalmist prophetically pictured it, a thousand shall fall to one that shall stand.—Psalm 91:7.

The time has come for each one to declare himself boldly. Whoever is not for the Cross and the Ransom there effected, is against it! He that gathereth not scattereth abroad! Whoever is on this subject, when it is being assailed by foes on every hand, whether it be the silence of fear or shame or of indifference, is not worthy of the Truth, and will surely be one to stumble quickly. Whoever from any cause sits idly by while the banner of the Cross is being assailed, is not a soldier of the Cross worthy of the name, and will not be reckoned among the overcomers who shall inherit all things. And God is permitting these very siftings, in order to sift out all who are not overcomers, and to test and manifest the Little Flock, who like Gideon's band, will, though few in number, share the victory and honors of their Captain in glory.

Are you prepared for the issue, dear brethern and sisters? The armor of Truth has been given you for some time past; have you put it on? Have you made it your shield and buckler, your defense, against all the wily arts of the Evil One?

Do not be deceived by the agents whom the Adversary often uses. In this matter he will be as cunning as in his presentation of the deceptive misrepresentations of Truth.

Aptly indeed did the Prophet liken this infectious poinson to a pestilence. (Psalm 91:6.) A pestilence spreads because people are in a physical condition which renders them susceptible to disease. Physicians say that those whose systems are in good, healthy order are in little danger of any disease. In like manner a spiritual pestilence will flourish, not only because all will be epoused to it who have not a clear intellectual appreciation of the doctrines of Christ, but from another cause also. Out of the heart are the issues of life; therefore the most needful of all things to be in right condition is the heart. How is your heart? Is it pround, boastful, independent, self-conscious, self-willed? If so, take care; you will be very liable to this epidemic, no matter how far from it you may seem to be.

"A heart resigned, submissive meek,
My great Redeemer's Throne,
Where only Christ is heard to speak,
Where Jesus reigns alone."

With such a heart you are safe. In meekness and lowliness, you will never think of redeeming yourself from the condemnation that you inherited through Adam, by sacrificing present sinful desires, but you will flee to the Cross, where God Himself opened the Fountain for sin and uncleanness, present as well as past.

DOTH THIS OFFEND YOU?

We presume that this article will offend some, though it is not designed to offend any. It is written for the defense of the meek against the sophistries of error. "Who shall ascend into the Hill of the Lord (into the Kingdom offered), or who shall stand in His Holy Place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart (who is diligently fashioning his life after the principles of holiness), who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity (who cultivates no earthly ambition or pride, but patiently waits for the glory to follow the course of present self-sacrifice), nor sworn deceitfully (ignoring or despising his Covenant with God). He shall receive the blessing of the Lord (the Kingdom glory and jointheirship with Christ), and righteousness (perfection, full deliverance from present infirmities, etc.) from the God of his salvation." (Psalm 24:3-5.) "Seek righteousness, seek meekness; it may be ye shall be hid in the Day of the Lord's anger (this evil day—this day of snares, pitfalls, flying arrows and destructive pestilences)." (Zephaniah 2:3.) "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation"—that "your minds be not corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." Let all the meek fully awake to the trial of the hour. And while many are putting stumbling-blocks in the way of the "feet" of the Body of Christ, let each soldier of the Cross be vigilant, not only to stand, but to assist others to stand—bearing up the "feet."—Psalm 91:11, 12.

DENIED ADMISSION TO CANADA.

The Tribune has been informed by our friends at Winnipeg, Canada, that Pastor Russell was denied admission to Canada by the Immigration authorities. He was to have addressed a convention of Bible students at Winnipeg on July 7. No reason was given, but we suppose it was because he preaches peace instead of war. It was a small piece of business any way.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

The Tribune has the first response this week for a fund to pay for subscribers and others who are unable to pay for the paper. The first remittance from Canonsburg, Pa. The second came from a friend at Quincey, Ill.

The following is the standing of the fund:

Amount received	$9.00
Paid out	5.00
Balance	$4.00

SALEM, O., July 9.

I have appreciated your paper very much especially your stand for righteousness and I am sure such adherance to a good principle is pleasing in God's sight. Pastor Russell's sermons and voices of the people make your paper good profitable reading.

Yours very sincerely
JOHN CHALKER, M. D.

Aberdeen, Miss., July 13.

A few days ago I sent you money for my renewal to the Tribune which affords me no small degree of pleasure, I shall never do without it as long as I am able to purchase it; I also enjoy Brother Russell's sermons so much I have spoke to quite a number of families concerning it so I think in short I will have you some new subscribers. Nothing more at present so I will close by saying I am as ever in Present truth,

SALLIE M. GRIFFIN.

SOME REMINISCENCES OF OUR DEAR BRO. BARTON.

Washington, Pa., July 14.

I am very sure that all of the dear friends everywhere feel that in the passing beyond the vail of our dear Brother Barton we have suffered a great loss; but we also feel sure that our loss is his great gain. For if ever anyone of the Lord's faithful servants was ready to go, he surely was.

I imagine that when his guardian angel appeared in the presence of Jehova, with the information that Brother Barton was in danger of being fatally stricken, He said, "Let him come, he has done enough." Almost a score of years in the service he never seemed to weary of it, but loved it more and more, and took but little time to rest, and then only when he had to. Surely he sought the kingdom of heaven first, trusting the Lord to provide the other things needful.

In the fifteen years that I have known him, and the many times I have heard him speak, there have been many things that remained in my mind and which have done me much good, and have served to show his deep humility, his lowliness of mind, and his complete self-effacement. So I feel like recording some of them. No doubt others will remember the same, and many other things. The first time I met him was when he came to speak to our class and was entertained at our house, and I remember about his telling us about how he found the truth. He said he was a great reader, and did nothing much except read, outside of business hours.

But he said he never had any use for religion, but thought it one of the most foolish things any one could bother his head about.

But one Sunday after reading everything he had at hand, and just for want of something better to do, he took up the "Plan of the Ages," which was lying on the table, where his father had left it. He thought he would look at it, and see what was in it. All can guess the rest of the story.

On another occasion he told something which showed that his humility was not altogether natural, but was cultivated by the exercise of the Spirit of the Lord, and of a sound mind. He said he was very proud, and recognized his abilities, and when he went into the service he would find himself thinking after he had given a discourse, that it must have sounded quite well. "I must have done that fine," and that it was a year or more before he could overcome that disposition, and feel that he could render acceptable service.

He utterly refused to gratify the flesh beyond what was actually necessary. I remember on one of his visits to us, that he refused to sit in a rocker, for fear he would grow to like it, and again that he wanted to work for the Lord so badly that he begrudged the time which he was compelled to give his body to rest in sleep.

Many years ago at a convention in Toronto, Canada, I heard him give a discourse on Israel's typical sacrifices which brought me down considerably in my own estimation. He was showing the picture of the bullock, with its perfection and its fat and vitality, as representing our Lord Jesus, and the goat representing the church, and remarked that if the members of the body represented by the goat wanted to know how big they were in comparison, just to imagine that poor lean goat cut up into 144,000 pieces. I was not very well versed in the "Tabernacle Shadows" at that time, but had the idea that each member of the body was a whole goat in himself. Other things I have heard him say showed how high his ideals were. As we all know he was an architect by trade, and in one of his discourses he said of all the beautiful buildings he had ever seen and of the pictures of buildings in other countries, none ever came up to his ideals, but something was always lacking to make it appear perfect to his mind. And so in books, he said he never read a book but it seemed full of discords, and he no doubt had read from many noted authors. But when he got the Scripture studies it was all different: all was perfect harmony, and he could find nothing to pick flaws about.

I was very much impressed by that, as it seemed to show the difference between the wisdom of God and the wisdom of man.

Those books written in such simple language that a child could understand them without any attempt at fine oratory, or rhetorical flourish, yet containing the sweet song of Moses and the Lamb, in all of their beauty and harmony which appeals so strongly to the mind in tune with its creator.

Nothing could ever make me more thoroughly ashamed of myself than one of his discourses and his manner of life. And since we cannot have him any longer, I feel that it will benefit us all to meditate upon the things he has said to us. I enclose a little poem of which he is the author and which I would like you to publish. It is so like him. He surely was one of the ones here and there."

Very respectfully yours,
MRS. M. C. KENDALL.

ONE HERE, ONE THERE.

Of all we meet in life's great stream,
There's but one here and there
Who treasures most the better things;
Each man to self most tightly clings,
For self he toils, for self he sings,
Except one here, one there.

The world would be a desolate place,
But for one here and there,
Whose heart with self hath not been filled,
Whose love for God hath not been killed,
Whose thankful praise hath not been stilled;
There's one such here and there.

And this hath been the Lord's wise will,
To find one here, one there,
Who counting earthly gain but dross,
Would daily take the Christian's cross,
E'en at the risk of any loss:—
God finds one here and there.

'Tis not the numbers that He seeks,
But just one here, one there;
He seeks not souls, but jewels fair,
For those who will His suff'ring share,
And for His sake reproaches bear;
They're few, one here, one there!

But oh! the grandeur of the work
For this one here and there,
To join in lifting up our race,
To wipe away of sin each trace,
To make of earth a perfect place,
Put glory everywhere!

Leon, Oklahoma, July 12.

I am renewing my subscription for the Tribune through the Watch Tower, and I thankfully congratulate you for your manly stand in defense of the Truth. I am amazed, and amused at the blind attacks that is being made upon Brother Russell, by all worldly sects, for his Christian defense of the Bible and its deep Christian truths. These attacks are mostly personal abuse—learned from Parson Russ' great cyclone twister book?—and sounds extremely vulgar from a pulpit. They are not answers, or explanations of what Brother Russell proves the Bible to teach—in a reasonable Christian spirit—but bitter denunciations in a round-about haphazzard, cowardly spirit,—calculated and intended to poison the minds against any and everything coming from the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Are the folks to blame for getting scared and afraid of a man that proves from the Bible that God is a God of love and justice and not the great black roaring Moloch erected in all pulpits centuries ago, to carry out and perpetuate the devils lie told to Mother Eve in the Garden of Eden? Well, not entirely. Reasoning faculties based upon common sense, has ignored and smothered over Bible truths, and taken up fables and the roaring and poundings of the leaders, it is taught and emphasized on every funeral occasion that death is our friend and God's way of transferring us to Heaven; of course, all are landed in Heaven! That death is a ficticious boogaboo, that we are just beginning to live,—What a shame! It is a noted fact that the vast majority, look at Christ and the writers of the Bible as English—just as we are—of course they know better, but that's just how they view things, and smother their common sense and reasoning faculties, and sit as it were for hours—blinded?—with funnels in their mouths, and swallow all the "truck" that's poured in. The majority of preachers blackens the name and character of God, with his shameful, hideous blasphemious hell-fire doctrine and rolls it as though it were a sweet morsel under his tongue, and makes and chinches his subject with roaring, waiving and pounding—"God will damn your immortal soul in hell fire." You can hear the Amens! sounding through the congregation.

Ask them where they find in the Bible that man has an immortal soul, and the only answer you get is, "lots of places, lots of places."

I believe some preachers are sincere, and don't know any better, while others do, and use it as a cudgel to force people to swell their church register. I recently attended a protracted meeting and heard a preacher exclaim, "It's the duty of a preacher to preach hell-fire and damnation with all his might, vim and vigor." I never heard any of the large audience disputing it, hence I take it for granted that the above is the sectarian view of a preacher's duties.

You speak in a mild Christian spirit of their hell-fire doctrine and generally they go off like an alarm clock. "My father and mother believed this, and I know they are in Heaven, and if it was good enough for, and saved them, it's good enough for and will save me." They forget that their fathers plowed with ball tongue cast plows, and knew nothing about automobiles, phones, etc. Tell them we are entering a new age-era just dawning, and they will say, "away with your nonsense, you fellows have been saying, the world was going to be destriyed in 1914." You can't reason or explain, they won't listen, but get mad, swell up and walk off, or use insulting language if you press the subject too far.

I once begged a kind neighbor and dear friend to read the Plan of the Ages. He said he would not believe it, I told him to mark all subjects not in harmony with the Bible, he said he had no pencil, I furnished a pencil, I never heard the book mentioned again. He moved to Arkansas (and is there a Sectarian preacher now). After he vacated the house, I was making some repairs and found the book in a fance corner among some high weeds.

Another preacher used to roast me fearful; after he left this place, I met him on a train, and he asked me if I was still denouncing the hell-fire doctrine? I told him yes, and he said, "Why of course you are correct, everybody with common sense knows that, but it won't do to let the people know it, for we can hardly control them now."

My observation has been that all the most criminal and murderous firmly believe this devilish, fiendish, monstrous, blasphemous doctrine, so what good has it accomplished? Just let a preacher announce that he will preach on hell; and the house won't hold the crewd. It reminds me of the old "doodle bug racket"; when a child I was convinced "doodle bugs" understood the fire racket; if I didn't believe it just find a funnel shaped hole in the sawdust, stoop down, and yell with all my might, "Doodle bug, Doodle bug, your house is on fire," and just watch them move out. Of, course I know better now; it was the noise and yelling that alarmed them, and caused them to move out. After the noise subsided they invariable returned to their funnel dens where they were at first. Just so with the hell-fire preachers, they use it to make people "hit the sawdust trail." It's the noise, tremendious yelling, roaring and pounding with horrible pictures of hell, that temporarially excites and sways the congregation and causes them to rush to the "sawdust trail," for without this, the majority of preachers are dumbfounded, and can't emphasise their clinches and pounders. After the excitement subsides the vast majority gradually backdown the "trail", and land on the old "stamping ground." Do I believe they are lost? Certainly not; but they will have to stand a trial before Christ—and His Church and give an account for their refusal to use reason and common sense, and the sacrifice of their jobs as sectarian hirelings.

The Symbolic language of Matt. 24:19-31 is getting in full force now, I think I can see it plain. The Sectarian System is with child, (and don't know it of course, won't listen) and the sucklings is personal abuse of Brother Russell—and theBible doctrine and you can see the "load" swelling, described in Rev. 16:10-14. Snarling, growling, howling, etc. May God through Christ, show the people, the straight and narrow path—speedily—and save them from the second death—not the first death—is my prayer.

PETER BYRON ARTHUR.

THE NOMINAL CHURCH.

The Church and the World walked far apart
On the changing shores of time;
The World was singing a giddy song,
And the Church a hymn sublime.
"Come, give me your hand," said the merry World,
"And walk with me this way;"
But the good Church hid her snowy hands
And solemnly answered, "Nay.
I will not give you my hand at all.
And I will not walk with you;
Your way is the way that leads to death;
To my Lord I must be true."

"Nay, walk with me but a little space,"
Said the World, with a kindly air,
"The road I walk is a pleasant road,
And the sun shines always there;
Your path is thorny and rough and rude,
But mine is broad and plain;
My way is paved with flowers and dews,
And yours with tears and pain;
The sky to me is always blue,
No want, no toil I know;
The sky above you is always dark,
Your lot is a lot of woe;
The way you walk is a narrow way,
But mine is amply wide;
There's room enough for you and me
To travel side by side."

Half shyly the Church approached the World
And gave him her hand of snow;
And the old World clasped it and walked along,
Saying in accents low:
"Your dress is too simple to please my taste,
I will give you pearls to wear,
Rich velvets and silks for your graceful form,
And diamonds to deck your hair."
The Church looked down at her plain white robes
And then at the dazzling World.
And blushed as she saw his handsome lip
With a smile contemptuous curled.
"I will change my dress for a costlier one,"
Said the Church with a smile of grace;
Then her pure, white garments drifted away,
And the World gave, in their place,
Beautiful satins and shining silks,
Roses and gems and pearls;
While over her forehead her bright hair fell
Crimped in a thousand curls.

"Your house is too plain," said the proud old World,
"I'll build you one like mine.
Carpets of Brussels and curtains of lace,
And furniture ever so fine."
So he built her a costly and beautiful house,
Most splendid it was to behold;
Her sons and her beautiful daughters dwelt there,
Gleaming in purple and gold;
Rich fairs and shows in the halls were held,
And the World and his children were there;
Laughter and music and feasting were heard
In the place that was meant for prayer.
There were cushioned pews for the rich and gay,
To sit in their pomp and pride;
While the poor, who were clad in shabby array,
But seldom came inside.

"You give too much to the poor," said the World,
"Far more than you ought to do;
If they are in need of shelter and food,
Why need it trouble you?
Go, take your money, and buy rich robes,
Buy horses and carriages fine,
Buy pearls and jewels and dainty food,
Buy the rarest and costliest wine;
My children dote on all these things,
And if you their love would win,
You must do as they do, and walk in the ways
That they are walking in."

Then the Church held fast the strings of her purse
And modestly lowered her head,
And simpered, "No doubt you are right, sir;
Henceforth I will do as you've said."
Then the sons of the World and the sons of the Church
Walked closely, hand and heart,
And only the Master, who knoweth all,
Could tell the two apart.
Then the Church sat down at her ease and said:
"I am rich and my goods are increased;
I have need of nothing, nor aught to do,
But to laugh, and dance, and feast."
The sly World heard, and he laughed in his sleeve,
And mockingly said aside:
"The Church is fallen, the beautiful Church,
And her shame—is her boast and pride."

The angel drew near the mercy-seat,
And whispered in sighs her name,
Then the loud anthems of rapture were hushed,
And heads were covered with shame.
And a voice was heard at last by the Church
From Him who sat on the Throne,
"I know thy works, and how thou hast said:
'I am rich'; and hast not known
That thou art naked, poor and blind,
And wretched before My face;
Therefore, from My presence, I cast thee out,
And blot thy name from its place."

A NEW PHASE OF BIBLE STUDY

The remarkable meteoric shower of November 13, 1833, said to be "the greatest display celestial fireworks that has ever been since the creation of the world, or at least within the annals covered by the pages of history", and of which it was also said, "no philosopher or scholar has told or recorded such an event", set the world to thinking. Secular newspapers commented on it at length, with the religious press, and a few scientists, applying it to our Lord's great prophecy of Matt. 24:29. This introduced a new phase of Bible study—that of Time Prophecy and Chronology as related to Christ's Second Advent. Prof. Bengel of Germany; Dr. Joseph Wolff, the noted misionary of Asia and Josiah Litch of England, aired the prophecies of Daniel in public and created a general interest and evidently paved the way for the "Miller Movement." Miller centered on chronology and Time Prophecy over five years before he publicly advocated the date 1844 as the end of the present order of things. The religious zeal of the "Millerites" spread over the world and amounted to a general excitement.

"As I was fully convinced", says Miller, "that all Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable; that it came not at any time by the will of man, but was written as holy men of old were moved by the Holy Ghost, and was written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. I could not but regard the chronological portions of the Bible as being as much entitled to our serious consideration as any other portion of the Scriptures. I felt therefore that in endeavoring to comprehend what God in his mercy had seen fit to reveal to us, I had no right to pass over the prophetic periods."

NATIONS BEFORE GOD'S JUDGMENT BAR.

"WEIGHED IN THE BALANCES AND FOUND WANTING," WILL BE THE VERDICT.

Great Judgment Day of the Nations Now Begun—Professedly Christian Kingdoms Showing Their True Character—Responsibility Proportionate to Light and Apportunities Ignored—Vast Majority Christian Only in Name—The People Have Not Been Properly Taught—Empty Forms of Godliness—Selfishness Behind All the Trouble—True Christians Also Being Judged—Deliverance of the Faithful Near.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 16.—Pastor Russell delivered a forceful address today before the I. B. S. A. Convention being held here. His text was, "The Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." (Deuteronomy 13:3.) He said in part:

While this text is applicable to the Lord's people in a special way, yet as we look out over the world today we can realize that the Lord is surely judging the nations, especially those that have been greatly blessed with His favor. Consider Europe, for instance. How wonderfully Europe has been favored with opportunities for coming to a knowledge of the Lord! Eever since the days of Jesus and the Apostles Europe has had Gespel privileges, more or less. Of course we are not to hold the people of today responsible for everything in the past. To do so would be unfair. But we are to consider that in a general way the influences of Christianity have spread over the world, especially in Europe. After an era of blessings would follow persecutions, thus developing a loyalty of heart amongst the people; and in those early years seeds were sown that have had good opportunities for being watered and bringing forth good fruit.

Gradually the world has come to esteem itself to be Christian. The nations of Europe are generally styled Christendom. Nevertheless the Bible declares that the world is not Christian, and has not the spirit of Christ in its activities. The world therefore is self-deceived. To the extent that the nations have had light, to that extent they are responsible. The Bible does not show, however, that the world has full responsibility. Only those have full responsibility who have taken the step of entire consecration to God through Christ, only those who have been begotten of the Holy Spirit. These have been illuminated and have come into the highest place of opportunities and blessings in the Lord. These have a deep insight into His Word that no others possess. Accordingly these have had an amount of light that brings a life or death responsibility.

THE WORLD'S JUDGMENT HAS BEGUN.

But so far as the world is concerned, we can readily see that in proportion as they have been they should be required to do. We can feel quite sure that God would expect more of the people of Europe than of those of Asia and Africa, who have little knowledge of Him. So just at this time, when Bible chronology shows that God's lease of power to the Gentile governments has expired, we see exactly what we should expect—that He is permitting these nations to pass judgment upon themselves, so to speak. He is permitting them to show themselves, to manifest their real condition of mind and heart, to demonstrate whether or not they have made proper use of their oportunities and blessings in the way of development in righteousness.

The nations of Christendom have had much to say about the Lord. His name is to be found in all these countries. The nations have held aloft the cross of Christ in an outward way. They have many places for prayer and worship. They have abounded in forms of godliness. They have had much wealth and treasure. They have had hosts of priests and preachers of all denominations. With all the advantages and experiences of the past nineteen centuries, we might have expected Europe to be in a much better condition than it is—that it would have learned much more than it has as to what is the spirit of the Lord and what is not.

The Apostle Paul tells how we may know the Lord's spirit. It is manifested in gentleness, meekness, patience, godliness, self-control, brotherly-kindness, love. (Galatians 5:22, 23.) Wherever we find true Christianity we find these fruits of the Holy Spirit. With the sole exception of Turkey, these people of Europe claim to be Christian. Now the Lord would prove these nations, not that He might Himself know their condition, but that they might know. Both the Father and our Lord Jesus well know that the nations are Christian in name only, that the vast majority have not taken the steps necessary to bring them into the family of God. The Bible shows that no one has a right to approach God except in His appointed way—through Christ as the Redeemer and Advocate. And Christ will be Advocate of only those who come to God in His appointed way.

God has arranged that whoever would come to Him must first accept by faith Christ's finished work on Calvary, and that they surrender themselves fully to God, to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow Me." (Luke 9:23.) The Lord knows that the masses of the people have not done this, that comparatively few have accepted these terms. When people are asked whether they have taken these steps, they admit that thy have not. They say, "We have never had it preached to us that we must be begotten of the Holy Spirit before we can become children of God."

LOOSING THE FOUR WINDS

The people have not been taught how to approach God in the right way. Therefore the vast majority are not His children at all. They have never passed from darkness to light, from condemnation to justification, through faith in Christ Jesus and consecration to God. Consequently they are still in their sins. They seem to have no proper conception as respects their privilege of presenting themselves living sacrifices to God, which is their reasonable service. (Romans 12:1, 2.) Judged by what they themselves tell us, not many have taken the Scriptural steps here pointed out. The Bible assures us that only a "little flock" enter the straight gate and walk the narrow way.

God forbid that we should be understood to say that there are no saints in Europe! We believe that in all these nations God has a true people, those who are fully trusting Him and are fully consecrated to Him, those who are desirous of knowing Him and of doing His will even unto death. We are not speaking of these, but of the other class—the mass who are outwardly professing Christians and who compose the great majority.

The Bible speaks of these as having "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." They are walking contrary to godliness—contray to what they would if they were true Christians, if they were living up to their profession. (2 Timothy 3:1-5.) Now God is bringing to their knowledge their true condition. In this great "Time of Trouble," in this death struggle of the nations, He will show them that they are not in the right way. He will demonstrate to both men and angels that the Christianity of the masses has been largely an empty form, a meaningless ceremony.

God is now letting loose the winds of strife. He is letting the nations take their own course, in order to prove to themselves and to others that they are not what they claim to be, and to humble them into the dust. Thus they will be brought to realize their own helplessness and their dire need of God.—Revelation 7:1-3.

As we look back over the past thousand years, we can see that God has been holding the people of earth more or less under restraint, qermitting them to go only so far at any time. Otherwise they would have destroyed themselves long ago. The hearts of fallen humanity are so selfish that, had mankind been permitted to go their full length, the race would have been annihilated long before now. But God's deu time has come to let loose the winds of strife, with the result that the long-expected storm has burst in fury upon the world. The trouble is spreading from nation to nation; and it looks as if ultimately every nation will become involved—surely every one which formed part of the old Roman Empire. (Daniel 2:44.) Whether the strife will extend beyond the boundaries of the Roman rule we do not know—whether it will involve America.

MINDS OF THE PEOPLE ASTRAY

These United States have had many advantages over other countries. Our temporal blessings have been multiplied on every hand. Nevertheless, we must confess that there is much of mere outward forms of godliness here, much of ceremony, hypocrisy, dishonesty and crime. Great light has been given and largely ignored. Therefore it would seem that sooner or later our land may become involved in turmoil. There is much of Christian profession here, an outward form of godliness devoid of its power. Consequently it seems hardly possible that America will fail to have a full share in the judgment of the nations.

There is much restlessness among the people everywhere. Indeed, the whole world is becoming crazed as the angry passions of men are being stirred up against one another. In the countries at war, where the soldiers in the trenches are killing one another by the thousands—sometimes sixty thousand in one day—necessarily a hardening influence goes with this course of action. The soldier must become more or less benumbed in their sensibilities, as a natural result. As a whole, the world today seems to be telling the Lord, telling His people—who are not of this world—and telling the angels—who are looking on—what their spirit really is, and demonstrating that it is not the spirit of the Lord.

It reminds us of the spirit of James and John, the two Apostles whom our Lord surnamed "Sons of Thunder," because of their courage and fiery zeal. On one occasion they wished to bring down fire from heaven to destroy the people of a little Samaritan village because the villagers had refused to sell bread to our Lord and The Twelve. But the Master reproved them, saying, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of"; that is, they had become His disciples, but had not yet realized what is the spirit of a true disciple. It was therefore no wonder that they did things contrary to the Lord's spirit.—Luke 9:51-56.

After the disciples received the begetting of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, they would not have even thought of doing such a thing; for then they received the Heavenly illumination and could discern that the spirit of Christ prompted its possessor to help others, not to destroy them. Previous to Pentecost these disciples were zealous Jews, courageous in defense of what they thought right as against wrong. And so it is now in Europe. Many are zealous, and are trying to find some good reason for what they are doing.

The leaders tell the people various things. In some cases the people are told that their liberties and the development of their country are held in check by jealous neighbors. On the other hand the people are led to think that militarism is their greatest foe and therefore must be crushed. On both sides of the question at issue the people seem to have hypnotized themselves into thinking that theirs is the righteous cause. But more and more it is being manifested that some great wrong is being promoted, that some great misconception is influencing the people.

SELFISHNESS THE ROOT OF THE TROUBLE

The true explanation is that the Lord is judging the nations—letting them manifest their real condition. More and more the world is revealing just what is behind all this trouble which is spreading everywhere—SELFISHNESS. Note the case of Greece, for instance. What pressure was brought to bear upon that country to force her to enter the war contrary to her own will! Bribes have been held out to the various kingdoms—offers of certain territories, etc.—to induce them to take part in the conflict. There is almost an insanity behind it.

None of these nations see what Bible students see. They do not know that the Kingdom of God is just at the door, that the Reign of Righteousness is at hand. Therefore they do not have the degree of responsibility that we have who do see. All know, however, that it is wrong to take life; and yet they are plotting both to take and to surrender life in order to hold a little more territory or to gain some commercial advantage over their rivals. Everywhere selfishness is manifest. It has kept up rivalry between the nations for cerfuries. It has cost them millions of dollars in the way of preparation for war, and now it is costing them millions of dollors more to fight it out—besides the appalling loss of life, etc.

DESOLATION AND DESTRUCTION

This great war is far from Christian. Each nation is fighting for its own selfish interests. What an impressive lesson it is for the world! How boastful the nations have been! The Lord now says, "Let loose the winds, and let the nations show what they can do!" The nations are manifesting to themselves that they are not Christian, and all the world is taking knowledge of the fact. Everywhere Christian people are wondering what these current events may mean.

We are not able to foretell all that will take place; and so we leave the matter, merely knowing that the Lord has arranged to grant this great opportunity for the world to deceive themselves and to destroy themselves. The people are all more or less deluded. Many noble souls are going down into death under the impression that they are doing a good work for the coming generations.

Poor humanity! Oh, that they know what we know about God's great Plan of the Ages! That they knew about the coming Kingdom of Messiah, which is just at the doors! But as yet the knowledge is hidden from them. It is just as when our Lord Jesus wept over Isreal, saying, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent to thee! How often would I have gathered thy children together even as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings; and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate; and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see Me until ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of Jehovah."—Luke 13:34, 35.

Just so now it is with these professedly Christian nations. Desolation is coming upon them even as it came upon the Jews in the end of their Age. Bible students have expected this state of affairs to develop; for the Bible long ago foretold that it would be thus in our day.

JUDGMENT OF GOD'S PEOPLE

If then, dear friends, God is now judging those who are only nominally His people, and permitting them to demonstrate that they are not His, will He not judge also His true people? Indeed, He has been judging this class for more than eighteen hundred years, in order that they might not come into condemnation with the world. But now, in the end of the Gospel Age, He is especially judging them; for "judgment must begin at the House of God." (1 Peter 4:17; 1 Corinthians 11:31, 32.) We may not know all the saints in the countries at war. We do know, however, that there are some very loyal children of God there; and we sympathize deeply with them in their trials. But they are greatly blessed; for they see what we see. Not withstanding their close contact with the trouble upon Christendom, they are lifting up their heads and rejoicing; for they realize that their redemption draweth nigh.—Luke 21:28.

Yes, God is now judging His people. (Hebrews 10:30.) But let us not wait for Him to judge us personally. Let us see to it that we are proving faithful to Him, faithful to our responsibilities as His children. Let us examine ourselves, and correct whatever we find to be out of alignment with His instructions to us. Let us put some kind of chastisement upon ourselves in order that we shall not need to be corrected by Him, in order that we shall not be condemned with the world.

We have reached the "Time of the End," the close of the Gospel Age and the dawning of the New Dispensation, the time when the judgments of our Lord are designed to accomplish a seperating work which is especially appropriate and needful at this period. Let us see to it, then, that we make our calling and election sure.

HELP OTHERS' FUND.

The Tribune last week published a letter from a well-known Truth friend in Washington, Pa. This friend wants us to have a fund to help others to get the benefit and uplift of the weekly sermon of Pastor Russell and the other good things that appear week by week in the National Labor Tribune. We have decided to act on the advice of our friend and will have a fund devoted exclusive to the helping others to get the Tribune every week. We have decided to call this fund "HELP OTHERS", and every week we will publish the receipts and expenditures of this fund. Who will be the first to start this worthy object?

WILLIAM MILLER.

Essay VI.

PRE-MILLENNIALISM.

The Baptist denomination has produced three men, whose influence upon their times was marked, and has affected civilization since their day; these men were Roger Williams, the founder of the state of Rhode Island; Dr. Aleander Campbell, the founder of the Bethany College of West Virginia and sect known as "Disciples"; William Miller, the leading spirit of the remarkable religious wave that aroused the whole civilized world, known as the "Miller Movement." These men stand respectively for Free Speech, Open Bible and Pre-Millennialism. These men paved the way for each other; without the first the second and third could not have been, and all contributed to the production of Pastor Russell. It is needless to say that these men did not succeed because they were Baptists but in spite of it; they were assisted by their brethren by their opposition—we need our enemies to develop and our friends to sustain, and our enemies are mostly our friends that misunderstand us. We are strong only as we stand related with like and isolated from unlike. You say, "It is harder to stand alone than to die"? Well, that is further along—it is the goal and we call it Gethsemane and it is created by our enemies that are not our friends through misunderstanding.

William Miller, like Russell, Luther and many of the Apostles, came from the humble walks of life—he was a farmer from Massachusetts. That he labored with his hands was considered an offense to many of his brethern in the ministry who have apparently forgotten that most of the apostles were fishermen, Paul made tents, Luke was a Doctor, and Jesus was a carpenter. Those who fling the epithets "haberdasher" and "spirit-waists Russell" remind us of the Pharisees of old who, when hearing the fame of Jesus, raised their eyebrows in pretended surprise and inquired," Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary?"

MILLER'S ORDINATION

Miller was tendered a pulpit by the Baptist denomination in 1833, and looms into the limelight in his fifties. In this respect he resembles Luther, Arminius, Wesley and Russell. These men were all at their best when Prof. Osler calls for the chloroform. Miller's ordination by the Baptist cleries was not of value in suporting him in his doctrines, for he soon incurred their enmity—this upright and honest-hearted farmer soon got the dogmatics on his heels. While drawing crowds of attentive and intelligent audiences and becoming increasingly popular, his name was seldom mentioned by the religious press except by way of ridicule and denunciation—epithets and witticism were flung at him without just reason. The falsehoods and abuse heaped upon him called forth indignant remonstrance from the secular press. The manner in which he met this persecution proved his greatness—genuine worth is manifested in our sympathies for those who through ignorance and prejudice malign us. This also was one of the seals of his ordination, not the clerics' approval when he was ordained by them—"The SPIRIT of the Lord hath annointed me to preach." The Satanic spirit of his opponents disproved their ordination—"To the wicked the Lord saith, what right hast thou to declare my statutes?" The genuine test of Christian ordination is to be governed by principle, not passion—"Light is sown for the righteous and gladness for the upright in heart." The following from the pen of Miller reveals the soul of this humble man of God:—

"What have we believed," said Miller, "that we have not been commanded to believe by the Word of God, which you yourselves allow is the rule, and the only rule, of our faith and practice? What have we done that we should call down such virulent denunciations against us from the pulpit and press, and give you just cause to exclude us (Adventists) from your church and fellowship? If we are wrong, pray show us wherein consists our wrong. Show us from the Word of God that we are in errer; we have had ridicule enough; that can never convince us that we are in the wrong; the Word of God alone can change our views. Our conclusions have been formed deliberately and prayerfully, as we have seen the evidence in the Scriptures."

From all accounts Miller got his education in the "University of Hard Knocks" from which we do not graduate until death. The same could be said of Russell! those who found fault with him because he did not graduate from their Seminaries, which manufacture such a variety of preachers (some liberals in speculation, others so opinionated that their brains are petrified and poise with the dignity of a plasterparis owl), soon discovered that he had quite sufficient education to hold his own single-handed against the pedigogic crowd—his sermons on the question of Ordination have been circulated broadcast and have not been refuted. Time will vindicate Miller and Russell. Those that have contributed to the world's stock of knowledge in any department of research have not been men that absorbed all the learning of the age before they launched upon the life of the world—but after. Out of all the men that have produced the new material for Colleges of our day only one has been a graduate from some university and he admitted that his alma mater was of no value to his system of thought, and that man was Charles Darwin. Judge J. F. Rutherford says that "the greatest lawyer this country has produced—Benjamin Harrison—never attended a law school." Rutherford supplies us with the following from the pen of Dr. G. W. Bull, from a treatise on "The Gospel of John":

"AN IRREGULAR (John 7:15). That is what they all say. The crime of Christ was that He had not taken a course in their college. 'Whence hath He learning?' There are some professional policemen who must protect all learning; medicine, law, gospel, or what not. If you never went through their schools of learning you are a freak, and there is something suspicious about good sense. These men thought there was only one way of learning—they would ask a certificate of the sun! There are many schools and school-masters in God's universe. Cease your criticism of any Christian scholar. Let him learn in his own way; the Kingdom of God is going to make great progress when some of these high brows are removed to Heaven. Sometimes a man's utterance of profound Truths is stated in poor grammatical form, and the philosophers are puzzled by his power. They wonder where he got it: I do not know—probably his alma mater was his mother's knees—then let him speak. Remember today: 'God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the mighty' ".

"CLASSES AND MASSES (John 7:47-50). The patronage back of a man or a movement is often responsible for the prejudice against him or it. The cultured will often condemn a form of religion which is favered by the common people; in turn the common people will look in scorn upon the religion of the 'silk stocking society.' Yet again, the blind reverence for bosses and the aping of aristocracy will make a man attach more importance to the infidelity of 'upper-tendom' than to the weighty credentials and perfect character of Jesus Christ Himself. The question here is not a form of worship, but it concerns the very person of the Son of God. About this there can be no difference without eternal issue. I can understand why those in authority wanted to silence Him; it was not because of the conservatism of scholarship, but because He was undermining their influence and reducing their bank account. They need not lay their opposition to the friendship of Jesus for the under world, but to their own falseness to the upper world. Never mind to what class you belong, follow Christ if you have to walk alone in the procession, or walk next to the man you never meet except at the Throne of Grace.

Sheriff Richards Must Fight for Coroner.

defeat of the workmen in successfully carrying through their plans.

Sheriff Richards has been exceptionally impartial in the administration of his office and those who have had business with him or his deputies have been treated with the utmost care.

Any acts of deputies not in absolute accord with the rules of the office that demanded honesty and justice when brought to Sheriff Richards' attention was promptly corrected even at the expense of dismissing an employe. The Sheriff is a sticker for right against wrong and he defends his position of "Justice to all and special privileges to none" with the utmost vigilence and force.

These characteristics of Sheriff Richards have made him many friends and he is in special favor with the miners from among whom he comes. His friends are now anxious that he shall be thoroughly understood by the men in the mills and factories and to this end the Sheriff's candidacy for Coroner is announced and the campaign is on for him. Later the Sheriff will be forced to command his army of supporters and there will be some physical exertion and some political battling going on until the close of the primary election.

The enthusiasm with which Coroner Jamison's friends are lining-up the organization for Jamison for Mayor impresses the friends of Sheriff Richards with the belief that Coroner Jamison may be chosen the apostle of the Straight Republican organization. In this event Sheriff Richards will respond to the call of his friends and throw himself entirely into the leadership of the contest for Coroner.

14 LABOR LEADERS CONVICTED.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Fourteen of 17 union labor leaders tried in the Circuit Court here on charges of conspiracy to extort and to destroy property, were found guilty in a verdict returned today.

Business men testified that the labor men carried on a campaign of window glass breaking and that to obtain permission for the resetting of glass property owners were compelled to pay money to the defendants.

WORKERS' LAND PLAN UP TO OREGON VOTERS.

SALEM, Ore., July 19.—Secretary Stack, of the state federation of labor, has filed with the secretary of state petitions of over 25,000 voters that the proposed people's land and loan law be submitted to the next referendum. As the law requires 21,136 names, organized labor is now preparing to conduct an active educational campaign in behalf of this measure.

The law was first proposed by the Portland Central Labor Council, on recommendation of a committee appointed to investigate unemployment. It was later indorsed by the state federation of labor and the executive council of the A. F. of L. to which it was referred by the San Francisco convention of the A. F. of L.

The law is based on the theory that as the state has never been able to limit taxation a state land tax will be levied per year that will equal land rent, whether the land is used or not. A third of this rental will be placed in a homeseekers' loan fund, from which men and women in the city and country can borrow from the state a sum equal to $1,500 for 20 years. For the first five years no interest will be charged except for administration purposes. No tax can be levied except by a vote of the people. If property is sold for delinquent taxes the state will pay the taxes and the value of the improvements that have been made. When the state acquires property under these conditions it can be leased but not sold.

The purpose of the bill is to pry land loose from speculators who hold it at exorbitant prices, thereby making a real "back-to-the-land" movement impossible.

PORTO RICO WRETCHEDNESS.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, July 15.—Justicia, official trade union newspaper, prints the following report from the Porto Rico bureau of labor:

"The strike among the cannery workers in Mayaguez last week was on account of the miserably low wage being paid. The men were receiving 5 cents an hour, the women 2 1-2 cents per hour.

"About 400 people were involved in the strike. After several conferences with the chief of the bureau of labor the employers offered to increase the wage 1 cent per hour for both men and women. At first this proposition was refused by the strikers, but many women who were not on strike offered to work for the old wage, and consequently the Porto Rico Canning company started up again with practically a new force."

"An inspection made during the week of the number of small tobacco stripping shops in Manati disclosed that in nearly all the factories very little attention was being paid to the laws governing the employment of women and minors. The sanitary conditions were particularly bad."

HITS LIABILITY COMPANIES.

JACKSON, Ohio, July 19.—In a speech last week ex-Governor Cox made this reference to the effort of private liability companies to destroy the Ohio compensation law:

"Instead of cheerful acquiescence in an evolution that every humanitarian impulse indorses, the liability insurance companies continue to be dominated by promptings of brutality and greed. In an attempt to re-establish their harvest of dollars, made out of injured workmen and industrial deaths they are seeking by a plan, artful and insudious, to so emasculate the workmen's compensation law as to kill it."

WIN FREE SPEECH FIGHT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 19.—A jury in Judge Berry's municipal court has dismissed Organizer Frank Morris of the International Association of Machinists who, together with other trade union officials, were arrested on every occasion because they insisted on making noon-day speeches in front of non-union factories. Policemen testified that they were ordered to suppress all speech making and distribution of literature.

ST. PAUL AT CORINTH

Acts 18:1-11.—July 23.

Lessons From St. Paul's Experiences. Corinth a Better Field For the Gospel Than Was Athens—As Usual, the Message Was Opposed and Blasphemed by Those Who Preferred "the Traditions of the Elders."

"Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace."—Verse 9.

ATHENS did not prove to be a very successful field for the Apostle Paul's labors. He quickly perceived that science and philosophy, falsely so-called, occupied the attention of its citizens, and so satisfied their minds that they were not so ready for the Truth as were some others less highly educated. In this respect his experience coincides with that of all who sincerely preach the Gospel of Christ stripped of all human invention and philosophy, and also illustrates his declaration that not many wise, great or learned, according to this world's standard, will be amongst the heirs of the Kingdom.—1 Corinthians 1:26-29.

Tent Making.

Leaving Athens, St. Paul journeyed about forty miles to Corinth, a prominent commercial city, noted for its manufactures. It was much less moral than Athens, much less refined, but nevertheless a better field for the Gospel. Where religious forms and ceremonies become popular, they are apt to have correspondingly less weight. But where sin, immorality and irreligion are popular, minds having a religious trend are apt to be more free, more open for the Truth. Unsatisfied by formalism, this class more keenly recognize righteousness because of its sharp contrast with the sin abounding.

Apparently St. Paul was considerably downcast at this time. His rough experiences at Philippi, his small success at Athens, the slenderness of his purse and his need of fellowship contributed to make him so; and he informs us that the Lord encouraged him with a vision. Soon after his arrival at Corinth he found Aquila and Priscilla his wife. They were tent-makers; and this being the Apostle's trade, he abode with them and labored. At that time it was customary that the sons of the upper classes should learn a trade, however well educated otherwise. St. Paul's trade enabled him to provide for his necessities while preaching the Gospel—not that it would have been a sin for him to receive support from the believers, but that he hoped that the Gospel would commend itself the more if its chief expounder preached the Truth without charge, laying down his life for the brethren.

The Progress of His Mission.

Notwithstanding his discouragements and the fact that his labors barely provided for his maintenance, the Apostle never forgot that his chief mission in life was the preaching of the Gospel. We read that every Sabbath day he reasoned with the Jews in the synagogue. Finally Silas and Timothy arrived, bringing with them not only good fellowship and encouraging news, but also a gift—quite probably from Lydia, the seller of purple dyes. The effect of these encouragements was that the Apostle felt a fresh vigor urging him to present his Message more zealously and thus to bring matters to a focus at the synagogue.

After testifying with great boldness and finding that the Message was repelled by the majority of the synagogue, the Apostle forced the crisis by shaking his garment, as if not to take from them even the dust, and saying to those who had opposed and blasphemed, "Henceforth I go to the Gentiles."

The effect was good in two ways: (1) It helped Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, to take a decided stand; whereas otherwise he might have been stunted in his spiritual development.

"Jesus is The Christ."

(2) The fact that the Jews had repudiated the Apostle's Message drew the attention of the Gentiles the more particularly to the Gospel. Some of these Gentiles already believed. The new meetings were held in the home of Justus, near the synagogue. Thus those who attended the synagogue would be continually reminded of St. Paul's Message and possibly would enter the house of Justus and hear more respecting the fulfilment of the prophecies in Jesus.

The result was that a considerable number of Corinthians believed and were baptized, thus symbolizing their consecration to do God's will. Thus we see that opposition is not necessarily an injurious thing to the Cause of the Lord. On the contrary, a most dangerous condition is stagnation. Evidently the Lord saw that His servant Paul needed some encouragement at this time. Hence another vision was granted, in which the Apostle was told, "Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace; for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to harm thee, for I have much people in this city."

What an insight this incident gives us as to the Divine supervision of the Gospel Message and its servants! That vision and its Message, we may be sure, were not merely for the Apostle, but for all of the Lord's people from that time until now.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—Teamsters' union No. 100 has secured a one year agreement with the Cincinnati Omnibus company. Wages are raised with time and one-half for all overtime and legal holidays. The company has agreed to the union shop.

TRACKMEN ASK MORE.

TORONTO, ONT., July 19.—Representatives of the Maintenance-of-Way Employes' union are conferring with the Canadian Northern railroad over the question of wages. The present rate is $1.70 a day and the trackmen are asking for a 20-cent increase.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 19.—Representatives of the United States department of labor are attempting to adjust wage differences between the Maintenance-of-Way Employes' union and the Missouri Pacific railroad. The workers are demanding an increased wage, a 10-hour day and time and one-half for overtime and Sunday work and extra pay when they are temporarily taken from their homes.

RE-ELECT PRESIDENT CARTER.

DENVER, July 19.—W. S. Carter was re-elected president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen by that organization's convention last week. John F. McNamee was re-elected editor and manager of the brotherhood magazine.

The convention voted to move the brotherhood's headquarters from Peoria, Ill., to Cleveland. In the latter city are the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. The firemen voted to hold their next convention in Louisville.

HANDLE MAKERS WIN.

NEWARK, N. J., July 19.—The Handle Makers' union has secured a union shop contract, which they insisted upon to protect their active members. These workers make handles for suit cases and hand bags. Their employers wanted to run non-union shops and secured a lawyer to expound statutes and decisions covering the question. The son of Blackstone was helpless, however, before the solidarity of the men who work.

WILL NOT BUILD POTTERY.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 19.—The convention of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters made short work of a resolution which provided that sufficient funds be taken from the defense fund to build a pottery, same to be located in that part of the country offering the best inducements in the way of 'bonus, fuel and freight rates."

One delegate said: "The organization has trouble enough of its own without going out of its way to borrow more trouble."

METAL WORKERS RAISE WAGES.

OMAHA, Neb., July 19.—After a month's strike the Sheet Metal Workers' union has raised wages 17 1-2 cents an hour. Better shop conditions have also been secured.

MACHINISTS WIN.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The Labor Council has been communicated with officials of the Mare island navy yard with a view of placing all machinists employed there on a $4 basis. These workers have been demanding that the government establish the same rate paid by private employers.

STREET CAR MEN STRIKE.

EL PASO, Tex., July 19.—Organized street car men were compelled to suspend work because of victimization "Unsatisfactory service" was the company's excuse for dismissing active union workers.

LABORERS' WAGES RAISED.

SAN MATEO, CAL., July 19.—The city and county of San Mateo are now paying laborers $3 a day for eight hours as the result of agitation conducted by the Central Labor Union.

TEAMSTERS MAKE GAINS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Organized teamsters have secured a wage increase of $1.50 a week and improved working conditions. Strong organization and a strike vote induced the employers to accept the teamsters' viewpoint.

Here is another thought: Someone has suggested that we have a "farm clean-up day" the same as we have in towns and cities. That is a good idea, for there are many farms scattered throughout the country which need "dressing up" a bit just the same as residence property in town needs overhauling, says Lufkin (Texas) News. Look over your plantation, if you happen to have one, and try to make it as attractive as possible; it will be a source of pride to you, and will be an advertisement of your place that you could not hope to gain otherwise.

The Toughest Proposition Around the Plant---

"All right," said the Superintendent of a Steel Mill in St. Louis, "I'll let you test out your gear dressing, but I'm giving you fair warning. I picked out the toughest proposition around the plant."

You may be sure he did, for the place selected was a set of gears and pinions out in the foundry on the sand mill running at 100 R. P. M. These gears were SEVERELY EXPOSED. The men transferring sand from the cars did not make any great effort to keep the sand from going on the gears. The longest life of these gears was SIX WEEKS.

Accordingly, the gears were cleaned and was applied. This was on September 27th, 1914.

Since then there have been only two renewals, bringing the average life of the gear up to six months, an increase of 300%. There has been but one renewal of the pinion. This was on November 1, 1915, after a run of one year, one month, and four days. We know this is an unusual instance, but on April 19th of this year, we made another call and found the second pinion in excellent condition after more than 5½ months' service.

This Company is now using TEXACO CRATER COMPOUND on all gears including the annealing furnace and the locomotive cranes.

These people have saved a small fortune on gear replacement. Furthermore, they have been able to secure a material increase in service from their equipment.

And the whole cost of the CRATER used in one year was about equal to the cost of one gear and its pinion.

We want to be absolutely fair in this matter, and so we'll admit that perhaps there was more attention given to the gears, after it was found that these gears COULD be lubricated. But even so, the tremendous increase of gear life points out to you a desirable saving in your plant, particularly now when gears cost so much.

Tell us about your conditions—we'll tell you how CRATER helps.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE

New York Publ. Library 476 Fifth Ave.

TRIMMING THE PEOPLE BY FURNITURE FAKIRS

Old Reliable Stores Made Victims of Frauds--Pay for a Stove and Get a Hot Plate---How the Police are Tricked.

The fake furniture dealer is now the topic of conversation among the shopping public and the way the people have taken up the exposures made by the Tribune is indeed more than gratifying.

The articles appearing in the Tribune have brought to light a varitable army of victims and the stories told of how the "trimming plants" are operated surpasses even the tales told by the celebrated fakirs with uninterrupted privilages at a country fair.

The "jays" who are the country people are picked clean; and there is nothing to boast about the profession of covering left on the city victims. Customers are picked up along Penn Avenue and some along Liberty street. Big fake bargains in the windows are generally used as allurements but these are not always necessary.

The business is referred to as "wholesale" and after the money is paid and the articles delivered to the home there is no question whatsoever as to the plundering having been done in "wholesale" fashion.

Police Magistrate John Sweeney, declares his files are full of complaints and there are informations that would send away a regular rubbish wagon heeped up and overloaded Magistrate Sweeney invited the Tribune to spend a few hours going over the informations while he refreshed his memory, and rehearsed the troubles of the unfortunates. "Come to my office" he said "and I will give you stories that will startle you."

"The fakirs have sold $40 and $50 rugs for $15 and $20 and $25 but the poor duped fools never got the rugs. The fakirs will sell anything in the furniture line that is three or four times the actual value of the articles they deliver." "Do they skin them?" asked the Magistrate and then answered it, he emphatically declared "Skins them alive."

They will advertise under the name of a person whom the advertisement declares is breaking up house keeping and is going to leave the city. The advertisements reads, call at the storage house No.—— Penn Avenue. Here some fake rugs are on exhibition and in a fake furniture store. The articles are misrepresented and a grand carnival of lieing about expensive Turkish or Oriental rugs is lavished upon the victim. The older the rugs are the more brilliant the figures become, and the more richly polished the rugs. Now this rug was worth $—— name you own price. Deliberately, wilfully and maliciously receiving. The articles are misrepresented.

Magistrate Sweeney has a batch of these experiences and was willing to take time to relate some. However, said he, "wait until the furniture season opens up and I'll have a few select ones set aside for the Tribune. There seems to be no end of them and its time for a general cleaning up." See Captain Arch Mackrell; the magistrate suggested, he has a batch of them. The Captain is tired getting money back for those who have been duped, and the consensus of opinion is, we should go through with a few cases."

There are innumerable instances related regarding the scandelous manner purchasers are treated and while victims call at these places with the expectation of purchasing goods on the installment plan the fake houses do not really sell on that plan. Under such circumstances the prospective purchaser enters the store and states her intentions. A bill of furniture is sold to her and she pays down the largest amount of money the "trimmer" under the guise of a "salesman" can extract. The purchaser returns to her home fully convinced the delivery will be made as promised. The result is she only receives some of the articles she has selected. She appears at the furniture store to inquire about the remaining articles, she is given a rude jolt. She is told the articles she paid for have been delivered and if she wants the remaining articles she must pay cash for them. It is no uncommon thing it is said for a woman to purchase a stove paying probably $10 cash as the first installment for the stove of which the total cost is $25.00. Instead of sending the stove selected, a hot plate is delivered. The original price of a hot plate would be $5 to $8. If she demands the stove she is asked for the cash in full.

Fall into the hands of one of the barkers, who is picking up the shopping public and inquire for Pickering's, he will pretend to take you to Pickering's but instead you are taken to a fake establishment, where you are deliberately robbed.

"Is this the Household Furniture Company?" asked an inquiring lady, looking for The Household stores.

"Yes," said a barker, "this is the place come right in."

"I want to pay my bill,' said the lady who had made a purchase from this legitimate house.

"Oh, there is The Household" said the trimmer who had been bit.

These fakirs do not collect money belonging to other houses, but they represent themselves to be any legitimate house along Penn avenue.

CHURCH MEN AFTER FAKE FURNITURE MEN

Big Movement Started Against Merchants Practicing Frauds and Cheating the Shopping Public.

The exposure of the fake furniture dealers being made through the National Labor Tribune is having its effect and the character and standing of the people who are taking notice of the frauds assures the public that nothing will be left undone to bring the perpetrators of the foul practices to justice.

Effort has already been made to silence the Tribune by an at tempt to insert advertising in its columns but the Tribune refuses to permit the use of its columns to questionable advertising. For 45 years the Tribune has had the confidence of the men in the mills, factories, shops and mines and under no circumstances will the Tribune permit any mercenary or commercial motives to sway it from the path of justice in which it has traveled for almost a half century.

Success of ridding any community of fraud and corruption cannot be achieved if the financial interests of the enterprise are to supersede the moral obligation due the public. When the Tribune assails corruption, deception, cheatry and trickery it refuses to become an accessory to any dishonest and criminal practices by lending its columns to any alleged business enterprise furthering vicious schemes that actually belong to the underworld.

There is no better evidence of an awakened conscience and an aroused public sentiment than the communication from the Men's Bible Class of the Mt. Washington Baptist Church which promises to go to any extreme to bring the frauds to the attention of the church-going public. The letter herewith printed was read and unanimously endorsed by the class and a committee has been appointed to arrange the details for what promises to be a campaign which is to begin at once.

The letter is as follows:

MT. WASHINGTON BAPTIST BIBLE SCHOOL
SYCAMORE NEAR SHILOH STREET.

MT. WASHINGTON,
Pittsburgh, Pa., July 17, 1916.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Sirs:—

The members of the Men's Bible Class of the Mt. Washington Baptist Church are deeply interested in the exposure the Tribune is making of the fake furniture houses and their methods of operation.

If any arrangement can be made without burdening the Men's Bible Class with a financial obligation, we should be glad to send copies of the Tribune containing these articles, with an appeal to every Minister, Sunday School Worker and Sunday Schol Scholar in Allegheny and adjoining counties.

There are 86 Baptist Churches in the Pittsburgh Baptist Association and these are distributed throughout Allegheny, Washington, Westmoreland, Butler, Beaver, and Fayette counties.

In the Allegheny County Sabbath School Association there are 15,914 Officers and Teachers. These added to the Sabbath School enrollment brings the total up to 218,483. Among these are represented the Sabbath School, the Home Department, Teachers Training Classes, Missionary Departments, Vacation Bible Schools, etc., etc.

It the adults and the parents of these children, who are largely among those being victimized, through the frauds the Tribune is revealing. We feel it the duty of the members of this Class to bring these frauds to the attention of the entire Sunday School membership, and with the army already enrolled every home could be easily invaded with the articles now appearing in the Tribune.

In addition to the Sunday School Scholars every minister of the 1500 or more, occupying pulpits in Allegheny county, could be requested to make these fraudulent practices a subject of a whole or part of a service, and thus the people could be arroused to the necessity of caution against entering these places.

The uncovering of these frauds having already been made a subject of discussion by our members, we urge you to keep up the great work, and any assistance the Men's Bible Class may be able to render will be forth coming.

Assuring you of our hearty co-operation, we beg to remain

Very truly yours,
MEN'S BIBLE CLASS.
REESE I. EVANS, President.

W. C. THOMPSON, Secretary.

The complaints being made are chiefly against stores along Penn avenue and in order that confusion may be avoided it is but fair to make known the responsible houses. The list given below includes houses in which implicit faith may be placed that any article purchased will be delivered and that the shopping public when making purchases will be treated fairly.

Among the responsible and reliable houses are:

B. White Sons Company, where articles of value as represented may be purchased and delivered as selected.

May Stern & Company, 914 Penn avenue, one of the largest concerns doing business in Pittsburgh, where values as advertised are sold and delivered.

The Household Furniture Company, 908 Penn avenue, like the other houses has suffered intensely through fraudulent houses misrepresentaing it and this house like others has been made a victim

Labor Congress Considers Food Supply.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, July 13. 1916.

Food supply and prices occupied the primary position in the agenda of the Special Trade Union Congress, held at the Memorial Hall, London, on June 30, but the most absorbing topic was that of military service, and a proposal that the Military Service Act (this is the so-called conscription act), should be repealed was defeated most emphatically. The record on a card vote, was as follows:

For repeal of the Act..... 577,000
Against 1,796,000

There were 596 delegates present, representing two and three-quarter million members, the Miners' Federation of Great Britain holding the power of 600,000 votes. Other leading organizations were: National Union of Railwaymen, 307,135; Amalgamated Association of Weavers, 180,000; Gas. workers' Union, 131,711; Joint Committee of Post Office Associations, 84,938; Boilermakers, 75,000; Carpenters and Joiners, 75,000; Amalgamated Union of Labor, 75,000; and Card and Blowing Room Operatives, 58,000. There were seven women delegates.

When a delegate, supporting the proposal to repeal the Military Service Act, said he did not intend to be a soldier, there was considerable interruption, and a delegate rose excitedly in front of him. Many delegates got on their feet, and in the general confusion the heated remarks of the conscientious objectors opponent were lost. There were outspoken opinions on the means the Government was alleged to have used in connection with war service, but the opinion of the vast majority on the nation's need for undivided support was evidenced in the vote recorded above.

On the food question there was decided unanimity that the increase in cost was due to shippers and others who controlled the supplies, and that the Government must take steps to control and own the mercantile marine or be prepared for Labor's demand for higher wages.

The Chairman said that was a strictly business meeting, called to consider the following matters:

Regulation of food and fuel prices.
Increases of old age pensions.
Trade Union organization and administration.
Industrial conscription.
Conscription of riches.
Position of boys of 18 under the Military Service Act.

A resolution was carried expressing the opinion that the Government ought to have brought in a bill for the conscription of riches as a natural corollary to the conscription of men, and, to obtain financial provision for the war, to impose a war tax on war wealth and increase the tax on earned and unearned incomes over $2,500 per annum or a sliding scale rising to 20 shillings in the pound.

Will Thorne, M. P. said that every commercial industry they liked to mention had been making huge profits or the Government would not have been able to realize $400,000,000 from the excess profits tax. Every man who was making more than he was in pre-war days was absolutely immoral. All incomes over $5,000 a year should be conscripted, for the idle rich should be made to pay more towards the cost of the war than they were doing at the present time.

Another resolution was carried expressing the dissatisfaction of the Congress with the position of boys of 18 years of age under the Military Service Act and calling upon the Government to instruct the military authorities not to send any man under 20 out of this country. The Parliamentary Committee was instructed at the close to bring the resolutions before the Prime Minister, and also to take active steps to bring them before the House of Commons at once.

The strike of woolcombers, which has caused a serious dislocation of business in Bradford for the past fortnight has been settled. The workers demanded 72 cents advance. The employers offered 25 cents immediately and 25 cents in January next.

Sir George Askwith had a conference with the representatives of both parties in London on June 25, and suggested 25 cents immediate advance and another 25 cents in September, the agreement to be for twelve months, but if the cost of living increased materially meanwhile, Sir George to decide what further modification is necessary and justified. Employers and employed accepted the compromise on June 30, and work was resumed on June 26.

On Monday, June 26, about 5,500 engineers and allied tradesmen went on

LAWYERS TO DO BATTLE FOR JUDICIARY HONORS

Candidates are Not Discouraged by the Heat and a Personal Canvas is Promised--Plenty of Timber and More to Be Rolled in Later--Contest Will Be Interesting.

During these sweltering days when stories of the frigid zone, the intrepid Perry and even the illustrious Dr. Cook are looked upon as the only refreshing gossip there are those who persist in talking about judicial honors while the number of candidates seeking the judiciary toga are piling in at a lively rate.

Each day puts the contestants nearer the goal and although there is plenty of time intervening for addittional announcements the bargain day rush keeps up. Several familiar names are at present being withheld but there is no occasion for unnecessary alarm lest these perpetuals should fail to be in line when the real start is made.

There are five places held as the prizes to be sought during the next big local combat and it may be regarded premature to close with the dozen or more candidates already recognized as aspirants.

The members of the judiciary whose terms expire are Hon. John D. Shaffer, Hon. Josiah Cohen, Hon. T. H. D. Carnahan, Hon. Joseph M. Swearingen, and Hon. Thomas J. Ford. These candidates form an extraordinary brilliant galaxy of judicial timber. It is not definitely determined whether they are to handle their campaigns separately or collectively but if the present methods prevail the indications are each candidate will go it alone. Probably none of the present members of the bench whose terms expire next year have seen any real individual action for the particular office they seek save Judge Cohen, who passed through the strenuous campaigns of the Citizens Party. This campaign alone cost the late Thomas S. Bigelow at the lowest calculation $150,000 and while Judge Cohen was defeated during this teriffic conflict there was no reflection on Judge Cohen. His successful opponents would have met the same fate had they been on the same ticket with Judge Cohen. While the approaching contest promises some interesting incidents and much enthusiasm there may be lacking the abundance of lucre so essential to political sentiment.

The Judiciary prizes are valued at $500,000. A small amount when compared with the earning capacity of John D. Rockefeller but quite a liberal allowance when measured by the average earning power per capita established by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The Judiciary, however, has not only the salary that seems so delightfully captivating but there is the honor of being on the Bench; of wearing the title of Judge; of being recognized by present generations as well as posterity of having handed down judicial opinion which, perchance, may some future day be referred to as eminently fitting and profound.

The candidates whose qualifications, legal learning, aspirations and ambitions with experiences fit them for judiciary honors according to those who are vitally interested in their success are numerous but probably none more prominently mentioned than Judge James B. Drew, whose present experience, training and education make him a factor to be feared. He is active, energetic and has covered the county in previous contests. He is regarded as a logical candidate and prophesy puts him fairly in the running.

There, too, is the Hon. Charles Kline, Lawyer, Statesman, Politician—Genial Charlie. A smile with every solicitation. A genuflection with every urgent appeal; a bow in obesiance to every passing citizen. Who will dare to reject the Senator's entreaties. Come along, roll your hoop—give her a little more gasoline. Everybody's on the curb waiting as impatiently as a child waits for the elephant in the passing circus. All looking for Charlie. The Honorable Charles Kline. The approaching Senator pro tem. of the Senate.

Charles P. Lang, once City Solicitor of Allegheny. Schooled among the incomparables with all the secrets of a Murphy and a Wyman. Trained amid the best and the matchless. A community that did big things but of all the monumental achievements Allegheny failed, utterly failed in every effort, to drive Bob McAfee away from the trough. Persistent Bob who bore the title of Director of Department of Public Works but whose chief burden was to call monthly and collect his salary. What has Lang to do with that? Nothing only Lang is a candidate for judiciary honors and he has had experiences with objects whose inanimation make them especially alluring to the political morgue. Mr. Lang knows a dead one.

Mr. Lee C. Beatty is a candidate for Judge to succeed any one of the five present incumbents. It makes but little difference to Mr. Beatty which. Mr. Beatty seeks recognition and is generous enough to leave it to the public to select the place for him.

Mr. A. T. Morgan, lawyer, formerly Junior member of the splendid and well known firm of Irwin, Wylie and Morgan, of Washington, Pa. Mr. Irwin, senior member of the firm is now Judge Irwin of Washington County, and Mr. Morgan being a well qualified member of the Allegheny County bar seeks to be elevated

IN GOD'S OWN WORDS.

TO THE READER.

Many books have been written about the Bible by devout students who have earnestly striven to interpret its teachings correctly, and its upon the writings of such men, Luther, Calvin, Wesley, etc., that the numerous Christian sects of our day have been founded.

The existence of so many sects, each with its individual creed, shows how greatly the most careful students of God's Word have differed respecting its teachings. Failing themselves to interpret it alike, their followers must also disagree, producing that familiar confusion of religious tongues so aptly termed the modern "Babel."

He who reads the Bible as a single book instead of a library of 66 volumes finds apparently the same confusion there, and is apt to join the chorus of those unthinking ones who say the Bible contradicts itself and is an "old fiddle" upon which one may play any tune he pleases.

The Christian should have a better "ear" for music. Only discords are made by playing on a single string of the instrument. It is because Bible musicians have been doing this that we have the discords of sectarianism. One plays only on the "string" of election, another only on the "string" of "free grace" and another only on the "string" of baptism. All make more or less noise, but there is no harmony, no tune.

Only one tune can be played upon this great musical instrument, and that is the one for which God, not man, has written the music—"The Song of Moses and the Lamb," and it can be played only in the way God has instructed us to play it—by "rightly dividing the Word of Truth."—II Tim. 2:15.

This little volumne is the result of following God's method of interpreting the Bible and is written entirely in His own words. Beyond this introduction you will find no word of comment or explanation made by man. God is His own interpreter, and He tells the story through His Son, the apostles and the prophets; the story of a plan more wonderously beautiful, loving, just and wise than could have been conceived by any mortal mind; the only story that will perfectly harmonize every statement of the Word of Truth.

Whether you accept this story or reject it is altogether your own responsibility. In accepting it you testify to your belief in the Bible as the inspired Word of the Creator of the universe; in rejecting it you signify your greater confidence in the interpretations and traditions of men. Friend, your faith in God's Word is on trial.

Yours in the service of the Kink of kings,

J. W. GILBERT.

Philadelphia, March, 1915.

THY WORD IS TRUTH

To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them.—Isa. 8:19-20.

Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth.—II Tim. 2:15.

Knowing this first, that no prophecy of Scripture is of any private interpretation.—II Peter 1:20.

Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.—Matt. 4:4.

Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.—Psa. 119: 105. The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.—Prov. 4: 18.

Let God be true, but every man a liar.—Rom. 3:4.

COME, LET US REASON TOGETHER, SAITH THE LORD.
Isaiah 1:18.

To us there is but one God, the Father, of Whom are all things (I Cor. 8:6), and one Lord Jesus Christ, by Whom are all things (I Cor. 8:6), the beginning of the creation of God.—Rev. 3: 14.

God standeth in the congregation of the mighty; He judgeth among the gods (Psa. 82:1); for the Lord is a great God and a great King above all gods.—Psa. 95:3.

In a beginning was the Word, and the Word was with THE God, and a god was the Word (Jno. I: I) (Diaglott), and the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him.—Jno. 1: 14, 2, 3.

Jesus answered them. I and My Father are one.—Jno. 10:25,30.

O Father, keep through thine Own name those whom Thou hast given me, that THEY MAY BE ONE, AS WE ARE. . . Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their word. . . THAT THEY MAY BE ONE EVEN AS WE ARE ONE.—Jno. 17:6, 11, 20, 21, 22.

My Father is GREATER than I.—Jno. 14:28. I proceeded forth and came from God.—Jno. 8:42. I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father. I cam of mine ownself do nothing.—Jno. 5:30.

I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end.—Rev. 21:6. The beginning of the creation of God (Rev. 3::14), the first begotten of the dead (Rev. 1:5), the first fruits of them that slept (I Cor. 15:20), the first born from the dead; that He might in all things have the pre-eminence.—Col. 1: 18.

IN THE BEGINNING.

God created the Heaven and the earth (Gen. 1:1), by Jesus Christ (Eph. 3:9), that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Jesus Christ.—Eph. 2:7.

And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle and over all the earth.—Gen. 1:26.

And the Lord formed man of the dust of the ground,

And breathed into his nostrils the breath of life.

And MAN became a living soul.—Gen. 2:7.

What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? * * * for Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels.—Psa. 8:4.

And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there He put the man whom He had formed.

And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food; the tree of life also * * * and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.—Gen. 2:9.

And the Lord God said, it is not good that the man should be alone, I will make him a helpmeet for him.—Gen. 2:18. And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam * * * and the rib which the Lord God had taken from man made He a woman, and brought her unto man.—Gen. 2: 21, 22.

And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and they were not ashamed.—Gen. 2:25.

And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day thou eatest of it thou shalt surely die.—Gen. 2:16, 17.

And God saw everything that He had made, and, behold, it was very good.—Gen. 1:31.

Wide is the gate and broad the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat.—Matthew 7:13.

That old serpent called the devil and Satan.—Rev. 12:9. He was a murderer from the beginning.—Jno. 8:44.

Now the serpent was more subtile than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made, and he saith unto the woman, yea, hath Gad said ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

And the woman said * * * of the fruit of the tree that is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it * * * lest ye die.—Gen. 1-3.

And the serpent said unto the woman, thou shalt not surely die.

And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof and did eat, and gave also unto her husband and he did eat.—Gen. 3:4-6.

Adam was not deceived (1 Tim. 2:14); wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin (Rom. 5:12), for the wages of sin is death.—Rom. 6:23, so death passed upon all men. Romans 5:12.

Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one.—Job. 14:4. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.—Matt. 7:18.

And the Lord God said unto the serpent * * * I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head.

And unto the woman He said. In sorrow shalt thou bring forth children.

And unto Adam He said: Cursed is the ground for thy sake * * * thorns and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; * * * in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return.—Gen. 3:14, 19.

And the Lord God said: And now, lest * * * he take also of the tree of life and eat and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden * * * and placed * * * cherubims and a flaming sword * * * to keep the way to the tree of life.—Gen. 3:22-24.

And all the days that Adam lived were 930 years, and he DIED.—Gen. 5:5. But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years.—II Peter 3:8.

The dead know not anything * * * for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge in the grave.—Ecc. 9:5, 10. His breath goeth forth * * * that very day his thoughts perish.—Psa. 146:4. All are of the dust and all turn to dust again.—Ecc. 3:20. The dead praise not the Lord.—Psa. 115:17. The wicked shall not be.—Psa. 37:10. The soul that sinneth it shall die.—Ezek. 18:4.

If a man die, shall he live again?—Job. 14:14.

Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne.—Psa. 89:14.

The law of the Lord is perfect (Psa. 19:7), for I am the Lord, I change not. Mal. 3:6. Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.—Ex. 21:23, 25. Life shall go for life.—Deut. 19:21.

Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins.—Heb. 9:22. For the blood is the life.—Deut. 12:23.

It is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sin. —Heb. 10:4.

The soul that sinneth it shall die.—Ezek. 18:4. What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?—Matt. 16:26. None can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him (Psa. 49:7), for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.—Rom. 3:23.

How, then, can man be justified with God?—Job. 25:4.

Mercy and truth shall go before thy face.—Psa. 89:14.

The things which are impossible with men are possible with God (Luke 18:27), who will have all men to be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth.—I Tim. 2:4. As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked.—Ezezk. 33: 11. Thy dead men shall live.—Isa. 26: 19; I will ransom them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death.—Hos. 13:14. I have found a Ransom.—Job. 33:24.

Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.—Luke 2:10, 11. For the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice (Zeph. 1:7), the man Christ Jesus * * Who gave Himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time.—I Tim. 2:5, 6. For as in Adam all die * * * so in Christ shall all be made alive.—I Cor. 15:22.

When the fullness of time was come, God sent His Son into the world (Gal. 4:4); the Word was made flesh (Jno. 1:14), was made in the likeness of men (Phil. 2:7), a little lower than the angels (Heb. 2::9); made of a woman (Gal. 4:4), holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners.—Heb. 7:26.

Being found in fashion as a man, He became obedient unto death.—Phil. 2:8.

THE SECOND ADAM.

I Cor. 15:45.

For since by man came death, by man (the man Christ Jesus.—I Tim. 2:5) came also the resurrection from the dead.—I Cor. 15:21.

The Son of man came to give His life a ransom.—Mark 10:45. Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by His own blood.—Heb. 9:12. Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things * * * but with the precious blood of Christ.—I Peter 1:18.

The wages of sin is death.—Rom. 6:23. Christ died for our sins.—I Cor. 15:3.

The soul that sinneth it shall die.—Ezek. 18:4. He poured out His soul unto death; His soul was made an offering for sin.—Isa. 53, 12, 10. For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God.—I Peter 3:18.

I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.—Jno. 12:47. For God hath appointed a day in the Which He will judge the world in righteousness.—Act 17:31.

The Son of man is come to save that which is lost.—Matt. 18:11.

The Lord God * * * drove out the man, and He placed at the east of the Garden of Eden cherubims * * * to keep the way to the tree of life.—Gen. 3:23, 24.

The Son of man is come to save that which is lost.—Mat.. 18:11.

As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive (I Cor. 15:21,22), for the hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear His voice and shall come forth.—Jno. 5:28, 29.

After this manner, therefore, pray ye: Our Father which are in Heaven, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is done in Heaven * * * —Matt. 6:9, 10.

The earth abideth forever (Ecc. 1:4), for thus saith the Lord. * * * God Himself that formed the earth. * * * He created it not in vain, He formed it to be inhabited.—Isa. 45:18. The Heaven, even the Heavens, are the Lord's, but the earth hath He given to the children of men.—Psa. 115:16.

The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and the chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.—Mark 8:31. Whom the Heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began.—Acts 3:21.

Ye shall see Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets in the Kingdom of God (Luke 13:28), whom thou shalt make princes in all the earth.—Psa. 45:16 (R. V.) * * * Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses and the prophets, these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us (Holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling.—Heb. 3:1), that they, without us, should not be made perfect.—Heb. 11. For David is not ascended into the Heavens.—Acts 2:34. No man hath ascended up to Heaven but He that came down from Heaven.—Jno. 3:13.

And it was the third hour, and they crucified Him. * * * And with Him they crucify two thieves, the one on His right hand and the other on His left.—Mark 15:25, 27.

And one of the malefactors * * * railed on Him, saying, If Thou be Christ, save Thyself and us. But the other * * * rebuked him, saying, * * * we receive the due reward of our deeds, but this man hath done nothing amiss. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.

And He said to him, Indeed I say to thee this day thou shalt be with me in Paradise.—Luke 23:43 (Diaglott).

And when they had fulfilled all that was written of Him they took Him down from the tree and laid Him in a sepulchre.—Acts 13:29. For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.—Matt. 12:40.

Him God raised up the third day and showed Him openly. Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead (Acts 10:40), unto the Apostles whom He had chosen * * * being seen of them forty days.—Acts 1:2, 3.

This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven shall so come in like manner (not to all the people Acts 10:40); unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time. Heb. 9:28, as ye have seen Him go into Heaven.—Acts 1:11.

Simon hath declared how God * * * did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name * * * and to this agree the words of the prophets. After this I will return and will rebuild the tabernacle of David which is fallen down * * * that the residue of men might seek after the Lord.—Acts 15:14-17.

Many shall be purified and made white and tried (Dan. 12:10), and this Gospel of the Kingdom (of Heaven.—Matt. 4:17) shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.—Matt. 24:14.

Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.—Luke 21:24. In the days of these kings shall the God of Heaven set up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed.—Dan. 2:44. At that time shall they call Jerusalem the Throne of the Lord, and all nations shall be gathered unto it.—Jer. 3:17.

The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. For the earnest expectation of the creation waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.—Rom. 8:22, 119.

We speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, which none of the princes of this world knew * * * but God hath revealed unto us by His Spirit.

The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritusually discerned.—I Cor. 2:7-14.

For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh, but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.—Rom. 8:5.

But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be the Spirit of God dwell in you.—Rom. 8:9.

Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

sociated the time of the glorification of the last members of the church at the wrong place—he placed it on the wrong side of the date that witnessed the start of the great "world war" now in progress in Europe, October, 1914. This he anticipated and published nearly a year in advance, noting many unfulfilled prophecies that could not be crowded into such a short interim of time. Instead of experiencing the ridicule that Miller had to face, the public are awakening to a realization of the fact that a prophet has been standing amongst them. His publications are now being read with interest. They are recognizing that he keys the theological symphony and is a reliable authority on questions pertaining to the time features of theology, a sadly neglected phase of Bible Study by those that have been in authority. He can give a sensible account for things as they occur and have occurred in the past.

As to Miller's disappointments, it will be recognized in the light of Russell's teaching that Miller was expecting the right thing in the wrong way at the right time. Miller applied a misconception to the wrong thing at the right time—that is to say, he made the mistake of supposing the "fire" was literal which was to cleanse the earth ("Sanctuary") from its defilements and misapplied texts to the world that should have been applied figuratively to the church. His mistakes led to the fulfillment of the very thing he expected, but not where he expected it. The "cleansing of the sanctuary," washing the defiling errors of Papacy and her daughters from the minds of the Christian people, principally the Catholic doctrine of the Mass, was what led to the discovery of the two salvations (1) of the church and (2) of the world, distinct and separate, yet inseparably linked together; the salvation of the world being effected through the Church Triumphant, not Millitant. Another important feature that developed later was that Christ came on one of the dates set by others (1874) but not in the manner expected—he came as a "thief in the night," spiritual, invisible, and is yet to be "revealed in flaming fire" of human passion that will wreck Satan's kingdoms of the present evil world and bind him for a thousand years.

The general results of Miller's efforts, and those of his school, is that today Protestants are divided as to whether Christ's Kingdom was set up at Pentecost, at His first advent, or whether it is still future, at His second advent. As indicating the rapid general spread of Miller's doctrines we mention that in 1878 great conferences of Pre-Millennialists were held in London and New York.

Cleveland, O., July 22.

We admire the spirit of close scouting and investigation of the Tribune. The public desire that deceptions and missrepresentations be uncovered, not only in a commercial and political sense, but also from a religious standpoint. One of the foremost along that line is that which comes from the pen of the scholarly and courageous Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, who, though facing the objections of many of the most powerful opponents, expounds the Bible in harmony with itself and good common sense reasoning. Success to the Tribune. Have renewed subscription for another year through the W. T. B. and Tract Society.

Parsons, W. Va., July 22.

I am this day renewing my subscription to the Tribune through the Watchtower office. I am glad you notified me by card, I really had forgotten when my subscription did expire. We have learned to love your paper so much that we don't see how we can get along without it. As I am a laboring man I enjoy very much the labor news that appears in your paper from time to time, but especially we love your paper for the truth features it bears from time to time, especially our dear Pastor's sermons, and the letters from the dear friends everywhere. I want to say that we will endeavor to support your paper as long as it maintains its present standard, and continues to publish our Pastor's sermons. We continually ask our Heavenly Father to bless you in the good work you are doing. If there is a reward to be given for only a cup of cold water, given in His name, we are sure that the time you spend, and opportunity you take, and space you use in your valuable paper, for the spreading of the good tidings of great joy, which will soon be to all people, is the equivalent of many cups of cold water.

I am, yours respectfully,
R. S. POLING.

Sheridan, Oregon, July 20.

We highly appreciate any one that fearlessly stands for the rights of men on every line of humanity's affairs, or dealings with one another, and one situated as you are, publishing a weekly paper of large circulation, your power for justice and right is that much more powerful for good. Your fearless manner of exposing unjust practices nullifies the wrongs. Light, truth on any subject is to uphold it and truth shown on any injustice in doctrine or practice is condemming wrong.

Few editors now have the courage that all should have along this line. Popularity and money or power is their goal for self. This is small when contrasted with justice and righteousness among all and for all.

True, we love you more because of your kindness along the line of Theology as presented in your paper.

BY THE BIBLE STUDENT.

P. S.—By mistake the Watchtower office sent me a subscription to Labor Tribune. This makes me two subscriptions to your paper. Please cancel one and send one subscription to anyone desiring your paper.

FATHERHOOD OF GOD AS SHOWN IN SCRIPTURE.

ONLY THOSE WHO ARE SONS OF GOD BY ACCEPTANCE OF HIS TERMS MAY CALL HIM FATHER.

Signification of the Word Father—This Relationship Means Responsibility—How Mankind Lost Their Sonship—God's Character Sadly Misunderstood—the Heavenly Parent's Love for His Human Offspring—Who Are Now Sons of God—All of the Fallen Race to Have Opportunity of Becoming God's Sons—Human Sons and Spiritual Sons—Blessing of Present Harmony With God.

PORTLAND, Maine, July 23.—Pastor Russell spoke here today before the I. B. S. A. Convention being held in our city this week. His discourse was based upon the opening clause of the Lord's Prayer—"Our Father, which art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name." (Matthew 6:9). A condensed report follows:

The word father and the thought behind it should be very impressive to us all; yet it is sadly true that many who bear this name manifest but little regard for what is right and obligatory in connection with their fatherhood. It is very different, however, with the Heavenly Father, who is the Perfect One, who meets fully all the obligations resting upon Him, and who is a Father in the truest sense. The imperfection and weakness of human fathers only manifest the more by contrast the glorious perfections of the Father in Heaven—His Love, His Power.

The term father signifies life-giver, one who bestows life. The Bible declares that the great Jehovah God is the Fountain of Life, the One from whom everything proceeds, the One "in whom we live and move and have our being." (Acts 17:28). All life emanates from Him alone. Without Him nothing could exist. When we have before our minds the thought that God is a great Father, a true Father, we also have the thought which is properly connected therewith—that He recognizes the responsibility of a Father—a matter which very many of the fallen race of Adam little appreciate, but which Bible students are coming more and more to appreciate.

Every earthly parent has a responsibility in connection with his children. It is his duty to see that they are provided for, as respects clothing, shelter, food for both mind and body, etc. To make such provision is a part of a father's duty; and whoever does not expect so to provide or has no good reason to believe that he will be able to do so has no moral right to bring a child into the world. Thoughtful provision for such child should be made before it is brought into being. This seems to be a just and right principle, and one generally recognized by all intelligent people.

PEOPLE MISLEAD BY FALSE THEOLOGY.

Then surely this principle would apply to the great Father from whom comes every blessing. But this contradicts much of the theology that has been given to us; for when the creeds tell us that God is all-wise, all-loving, kind and good, they spoil it all by stating that, notwithstanding His Love, Justice and Wisdom, He is sending the vast majority of our race to endless torture. In other words, the creeds imply that God has made a miserable failure in creating mankind, and that His Plan of Salvation is a farce. We should have known better than this, even without a Bible. Could we not have seen that the Plan of the great Father of Mercies, from which cometh every good and perfect gift, who has all power at His command, could not be such a failure—that in harmony with His glorious character, He could not bring into existence an entire race, knowing that 999 out of every 1,000 of them would spend eternity in torture?

The only reasonable explanation for our credulity in this respect is that which the Apostle Paul gives; namely, that the Adversary, the Devil, has greatly misrepresented our just and loving Creator. Satan, the god of this world, has so blinded the minds of many by the delusive theories which he promulgated during the Dark Ages that the majority seem unable to reason intelligently upon the subject of religion. St. Paul declares that "the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." (1 Timothy 4:1.) This prophecy has been fulfilled. There has been a great falling away from the primitive faith of the Church; and heathenish theories, which were no part of the Scriptures, were introduced to frighten the people and to bring them into submission to ambitious leaders.

We have been deluded into thinking of our Great God as a great demon, all-powerful and all-wise, but not all-good, who has brought into existence millions of people whom He knew would be compelled to suffer eternal torment. The Adversary has a shrewd way of continuing his deceptions. When the thought is suggested that if God knew that the result of Adam's disobedience would be that the majority of his posterity would suffer eternally, He could not be just to have permitted the propagation of the race, Satan is quick to suggest, "God would have destroyed Adam if He could; but, having made man with an immortal soul, even the Creator cannot destroy mankind now."

From no other source than from the great Adversary of God and man did this idea emanate—that in creating man God gave him something that even the Almighty cannot take from the race. How puerile such a God would be! This prevalent but erroneous thought is directly contradicted by our Lord Jesus Himself, who said, "Fear Him who is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna."—the Second Death. (Matthew 10:28. The Almighty God, who knew the end from the beginning, would bring no beings into existence whom He could not destroy when they had proved themselves unworthy of the blessings of life.

NO ETERNAL LIFE IN MISERY.

Furthermore, the Bible declares, "All the wicked will God destroy." (Psalms 145:20.) How simple, how reasonable, the Bible is! We get our confusion of thought by neglecting the Word of God and taking instead the traditions and vagaries of men, which have been handed down from the Dark Ages. Bible students, however, are finding the wisdom of going directly to the Word of God. The wisdom from Above is what we need, not the wisdom of this world, which is foolishness with God, and which is becoming more and more foolish to all thinking people. The Heavenly wisdom comes only from the Word of God.—Corinthians 3:19-21; James 3:17.

In taking the text which I have chosen, and in saying that I greatly appreciate the thought there presented of a loving Heavenly Father, do not misunderstand me to mean what many today mean when they speak along this line. Some very learned people talk about "the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." Doubtless they mean well enough in referring to God as the Father of the entire human race in their present fallen condition; but they speak contrary to the Bible. The Scriptures exhort us not to lean to our own misunderstandings, nor to that of other people, but rather to inquire, "What saith the Lord? Does God's Word say anything about the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man?"—Proverbs 3:5, 6; Isaith 8:20.

There we find that mankind are the offspring of God, that He is their Creator, the One who gave them being. But the Bible does not say that He is now the Father of the race, in the sense in which many think that He is. These urge the theory of universal salvation of mankind, saying that because God is the Life-giver of the world therefore He will save the entire race. We are not faulting this class; for they are sincere in their thought. Personally, I would greatly prefer to believe in universal salvation than in universal damnation. But the Bible takes neither of these extreme positions.

WHAT THE BIBLE TEACHES.

The plain declaration of the Bible is that our first parents, Adam and Eve, received life from God, and its perpetuity was promised them only upon certain clearly specified conditions. They were plainly forewarned that if they met these conditions, they would continue to live; if they failed to be obedient, they would die—cease to live. There was not even a hite given of a life continued eternally in torture, as the penalty of disobedience.—Genesis 2:17; 3:19; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; Romans 6:23.

In forewarning our first parents as to the sure results of disobedience, God also intimated that in such a case He would disown them, would no longer be their Father. They became disobedient, and thereby lost all right to life. Thus from God's standpoint, the entire race of Adam is dead—condemned, not to eternal torment, but to death. The right to life has been taken away. They are under legal condemnation to death.

Thus we see that the human family are not now the children of God. Adam was a son until he forfeited that blessed relationship; but from his day onward no member of his race is called a son of God, except our Lord Jesus, while He was in the flesh. He was a Son of God before He came to earth a man; but His spiritual life was given up in order that He might become a perfect man, to die for Adam and his race, and thus to open up the way whereby the whole world might come back into the relationship of sons of God, might regain what Adam lost for himself and for his family. "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man." (Hebrews 2:9.) This does not mean universal salvation, however.

GOD'S PLAN JUST AND REASONABLE.

When our Lord Jesus came into the world, He opened up a way whereby those who would believe on Him and would sacrifice as He did, becoming His followers, might become sons of God on the spiritual plan, yea, the very highest plane in existence—the Divine plane. These, if faithful unto death, would share the glorious reward which the Father had promised to our Lord Jesus—immortality, life in its highest form. But the religious leaders of His day did not believe on Him, did not receive His message; and during His ministry only about five hundred of the people believed. The god of this world—Satan—blinded their eyes.—2 Corinthians 4:4.

The people asked, "Have any of the Scribes and Pharisees believed on Him?" When they learned to the contrary, they concluded that there was nothing in the Message. They took the course that many are taking today. The Adversary was behind it all. There were many refined people amongst them. The Sadducees were an aristocratic class. Perhaps some of them were not bad men. The Apostle Peter afterwar d declared that in ignorance the people crucified the Prince of Life, as did also their rulers.—Acts 3:13-18.

It may be asked, why did our Lord not open the way for the whole world to become spiritual sons of God, instead of for only an elect class? We answer, We are sure that God is taking the best way; for the whole Plan is of Him. He could have kept the way of salvation closed until the Millennium, and then have done for all alike. But this was not His Plan. He purposed first to gather out of the world an elect Church. This is not an arbitrary Plan, however; for He is not selecting any contrary to their own wills. All who are called have the privilegt of accepting or rejecting the Call. Whoever prefers to wait until the next Age, and take the opportunity then to be offered to the world, may do so; but the offer then to be made will not be nearly so glorious as that now held out.

There are some who desire to know and to do the will of the Lord, if only they are shown what it is. To this class God purposes to show His Plan and to give them His choicest blessings. He gives them the opportunity to join with Jesus in His sacrificial work for humanity, the privilege of suffering with Him now that they may reign with Him by and by, in the Kingdom. Foreknowing that there would be a class of this kind, who would gladly give up the pleasures and the ambitions of the present life for the far grander blessings which He has to bestow, God has given them the privilege. He has sent forth His Message far and wide, to let this class know of their opportunity.

THE CLASS WHICH GOD NOW SEEKS.

For over eighteen hundred years this Call to saintship has gone forth in a quiet way. But comparatively few have responded, and the world has generally set it at naught. People in general do not think it worth while to go to some small upper room to attend a little prayer-meeting or to some ordinary hall to hear preaching. They prefer to go to some fine edifice to hear an eloquent oration and charming music. God has permitted His Truth to be thus obscured from the worldly-wise and self-sufficient, and to let it appear as if the Gospel were accomplishing little or nothing. But all along He knew just what He was doing. He was accomplishing just what He had designed. He has always known them that were His.—2 Timothy 2:19; Isaiah 55:8-11.

The class which God is selecting now have sharp ears for the true Gospel Message. When they hear of the Love of God in Christ, they believe it. They listen to God's Word, rather than to human theories and traditions. They become pupils in the School of Christ, followers of the Lord Jesus. The Master did not have a smooth way. His path was rough and thorny. Some, when they learn this fact, stop immediately. Others, however, press onward, even though they know the way to be narrow and rough. They desire to get back to God; for they find satisfaction nowhere else.

These hear that our Lord Jesus will become an Advocate for whoever contracts to follow in His steps, and that the Father will not receive them without this Advocate to make good for their weaknesses and blemishes. They learn that our Lord will become the Advocate of any who will accept His terms—"If any man will be My disciple, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me." To deny self means to give up one's own will and take the Master's will instead. Whoever takes this step will find various crosses and difficulties along the way. The contract is not to last for a month or for a year, but for life. Our Lord guarantees that His grace will be sufficient for all who follow Him, that His strength is made perfect in weakness Surely this is sufficient assurance.

There are not many of this class anywhere. But it is only to these that God now becomes the Father. These are the sons of God, through the begetting of the Holy Spirit. These say with their Master, "I delight to do Thy will, O my God! Thy Law is written in my heart." If in their hearts they should say, "I know that I have to do God's will, and so I will do it." He would say to them, "Go back; for I am seeking only those who love My will, not those who serve merely through fear or compulsion." Those who take a stand with Christ must burn all the bridges behind them when they enter the narrow way. They are to follow the Lamb whitercbsoever He goeth. Only such will constitute the Bride class.

"THE FATHER HIMSELF LOVETH YOU."

It is only after we have received the begetting of the Holy Spirit that we are privileged to say, "Our Father which art in Heaven." The world cannot call God their Father but through our Redeemer the Church has this privilege. And so the Apostle says, "Now are we the sons of God." (I John 3:1, 2.) But as such, we are not free from the aches and pains incident to the groaning creation. While in the flesh we must suffer, but still we are the sons of God, in the sense that we have the begetting of the Holy Spirit. In the resurrection change, however, we shall really be the children of God.

By nature we were children of Adam, condemned to death in him. But when in our consecration we gave up everything pertaining to the human nature, our Lord received us and made us acceptable to the Father, who then begot us with His Holy Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, "Abba, Father!" This is a blessed position; for our Heavenly Father is in perfection what earthly parents should be. He has made every provision for us. Our Lord Jesus is simply carrying out our Father's Plan.

WILLIAM MILLER.

Essay VI.

"Another evidence that vitally affected my mind," continues Miller, "was the (past) chronology of the Scripture. I found that predicted events, which had been fulfilled in the past, often occurred within a given time. The one hundred and twenty years to the flood, Gen. 6:3; the seven days that were to preceed it, with forty days of predicted rain. Gen. 7:4; the four hundred years of the sojourn of Abraham's seed, Gen. 15:13; the three days of the butler's and baker's dreams, Gen. 40:12-20; the seven years of Pharaoh's, Gen. 41:28-54; the forty years in the wilderness, Num. 14:34; the three and a half years of famine, 1 Kings 17:1; the seventy years' captivity, Jer. 25:11; Nebuchadnezzar's seven times, Dan. 4:13-16; and the seven weeks, threescore and two weeks, and the one week, making seventy weeks, determined upon the Jews, Dan. 9:24-27; the events limited by these times were all onec a matter of prophecy, and were fulfilled in accordance with the predicitions."

MILLER'S DISAPPOINTMENT

That Miller was no fanatic, or emotionalist, but of rational temperament and had rational religious sentiments, is indicated by the following letter addressed to his associates after the disappointment. It reveals his character to be Christian, in keeping with the thought that Christian character must go with those who bring forth progressive Christian knowledge, and it shows that the jeers of the world only served to deepen his love for Christ and faith in the Bible—this is his best credential and evidence of his consecration to God, and from this standpoint, he sets the brilliant Henry Ward Beecher into the shade. His leter runs in part:—

"We thank God always on your behalf, when we hear, as we already have, that your and our late disappointment has produced in you, and we hope in us also, a deep humiliation, and a careful inspection of our hearts. And though we are humbled, and in a measure pained, by the jeers of a wicked and perverse generation, we are not terrified nor cast down. You can, all of you, when inquired of for the reasons of your hope, open your Bibles, and with meekness and fear show the inquirer why you hope in the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ. You need not in a single instance refer the inquirer to your minister, for the reason of your faith. Your creed is the Scriptures; * * * your philosophy is the wisdom which cometh down from God; your bond of union is the love and fellowship of the saints; your teacher is the Holy Spirit; and your professor is the Lord Jesus Christ * * * We exhort you, by all the love and fellowship of the saints, to hold fast to this hope. It is warranted by every promise in the Word of God, it is secured to you by the two immutable things,—the council and oath of God, in which it is impossible for him to lie. It is ratified and sealed by the death, blood, and resurrection, and life of Jesus Christ * * * Never fear, brethern; God has told you what to say. Do as he bids you, and he will take care of the consequences. God says, Say unto them, 'The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision." * * * It is to me almost a demonstration that God's hand is in this thing. Many thousands have been made to study the Scripture by the preaching of the time. * * * God's wisdom has in a great measure marked out our path, which he has devised for such good as he will accomplish in his own time and manner."

MILLER'S DISAPPOINTMENT, GOD'S APPOINTMENT.

The last sentence of Miller quoted above has proven to be true by developments since his death, that "which He has devised for such good as He will accomplish in His own time and manner." In the first place the 'Miller Movement' set the dogmatic element into action. Noting the effect of the disappointment of the Millerites was to promote, instead of discourage Bible study, and fearing that Christendom would be divided into a thousand sects, they formed the Evangelical Alliance in 1846 and labelled the items of faith that were to be "orthodox," others being "heterodox."

Any one preaching without being sanctioned by the ordination boards of this Alliance was considered "irregular," so as not to repeat the "mistake" in sanctioning Miller's preaching made by the Baptist denomination. This kept those that still investigated these questions in the open, away from the foul air of institutionalism, and resulted in the development of a remarkable Bible Chronology, then known as "Bowen's Chronology," that fell into the hands of young Russell after the disappointment of 1874.

These numerous disappointments at the many dates set soon brought the question into disrepute and kept many bright minds from the question for fear of the odium—even the name of Adventism caused a smile. We can stand anything but to be laughted at without losing our poise. Amongst those that smiled at these people was a young merchant in Pittsburgh, Pa. Destiny had decreed that he should be recompensed in his own coin. Here we see the unusual spectacle of a man of genius espousing an unpopular cause—a young man with a bright future in the business world equipped with the proclivities that made him the owner and manager of three stores at the early age of eighteen. All cast to the winds, in this age of commercialism. Could there be any selfish motive in taking up the question with all this odium attached? God puts a price upon his choice gifts and cloths them with a garb of hypocrisy to hide them from the vulgar and unworthy!

THE MERCHANT PAYS THE PRICE AND GETS THE REWARD.

This is an age of monopolies in many professions. We have steel kings, oil kings, cotton kings, beef kings, financial kings, etc.; the various professions under the control of some one man. This is peculiarly of the age and this characterizes the question of theology as well. Just as others slept in the business world while the gods of commerce got under control of some genius who had the rare gift of seeing an opportunity, we find the clergy nesting in repose and rudely awakened from their slumbers to discover that an intruder has possession of all their goods. This merchant, awake to his possiblities in commerce, of whom it has been noted that, "he would have been a dangerous rival for John D. Rockefeller, had he gone into the oil business," suddenly disappeared. But like Foy, the French soldier, who was defeated at Waterloo, and rose on the rostrum an orator, this young merchant arose again, a theologian, orator, author, editor, traveler, logician, seer, but still a merchant, a steward, "that faithful servant whom the Lord hath made ruler of all His goods." The young merchant paid the price of temporal wealth in exchange for the odium attached to Adventism with nothing else in sight! Does the Lord reward faith? Listen to the following prophecy of King David which is now a matter of history, addressed to the unfaithful shepherds of the Lord's sheep, who have lorded themselves over God's heritage instead of feeding them with the truth pointed out by His "Stars" from time to time, Luther, Williams, Campbell, Miller, Russell, etc. It follows paraphrased in parenthesis (Psa. 50:17:

"'What hast thou [the unfaithful shepheards—the dogmatic element of the clergy] to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldest take my covenent in thy mouth?—seeing thou hatest instruction [from faithful shepherds who are in advance of you theologically] and casteth my words [quoted by them] behind thee. When thou saweth a thief [the stealthy and wily tactics of misrepresenting the faithful shepherds] then thou [the inactive] consentest with him [in keeping silent], and hast been partaker with adulterers [by a conscious affiliation with institutions governed by the "thief" type which is styled a harlot in Revelations]. Thou givest thy mouth to evil [perpetuating error when truth is presented], and thy tongue frameth deceit [misrepresenting incidents of the life of those that present advance truth, as for instance, partial quotations from court records]. Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother [by profession in Christ] and slandereth thine own mother's son [like Cain did Abel of yore]. These things hast thou done, and I have kept silent; thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself [represented by the creeds of the Dark Ages that molded your character]; but I will reprove thee, and set things in order before thine eyes. Now consider this, ye that forget God [His principles of Christian demeanor], lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver. Whoso offereth praise [in the institutions] glorifieth me, and to him that ordereth his conversation aright [by rebuking those described and leaving their institutions] will I show the salvation of God [respecting the world's future probation in addition to the elective salvation of the church]."

CLEANSING OF THE SACTUARY.

Russell's reward for facing the odium of Adventism was in being the instrumentality to "set things in order" by his splendid genius, assisted by the guidance of the Holy Spirit. The preparatory work of cleaning the house before setting things intheir proper places had been accomplished by the American reformers, and its historic features have been recorded by Russell in his analysis of the "Miller Movement," considered in the light of prophecy and parables of Christ. Suffice it here to say that the principal fact arived at by these men was the recognition of the true character of the Catholic doctrine of the Mass. True, Zwingli saw this feature, but he failed to make any impression upon Luther in his contention for this truth. It remained for Luther's followers to cut two of his Theses containing features of the Mass, and split two others, thus keeping the original number of ninety-five. But the American reformers were the first to recognize the philosophic disaster that the doctrine of the Mass had upon the foundation of the Christian religion—the doctrine of the Atonement. The second important fact in connection with the doctrine of the Atonement was brought out by Russell in defining the nature of the "Man Christ Jesus" who gave himself as a sin offering for the world. His definition is a mean between the two extreme views of the Trinitarian and Unitarian schools. This also led to the discovery of the nature of man, for the first and second Adams were obliged to be alike in order for the second to be a ransom for the first—a "corresponding price." The Scripture used to support the doctrine of the Mass found their place and significance as applied to the sufferings of the Corporate Christ, the members of His body which had no actual part in the Ransom sacrifice and, the Passover Supper commemorationg His death and sufferings and the sufferings of His church.

Friend & Company, 810 Penn avenue, has been another house which has suffered through the fakirs by the vicious and lieing agents of the fraud stores picking up customers from in front of the windows of this firm and taking them, under the pretense that they are going to Friend's, to the fake "wholesale" house.

Murphy Brothers Company, 808 Penn avenue, are responsible furniture men. The shoppers when looking for this concern have fallen into the hands of the fakirs and the fakirs have said "this is Murphy's, come right in." The store was none other than a fake furniture house and the fraud was a deliberate misrepresentation. Murphy Brothers have suffered through these frauds. This firm is absolutely reliable and articles are sold on their merits and accordingly delivered as selected and represented.

The Michigan Furniture Company, 623 Penn avenue, is a large and absolutely reliable firm. Its methods of doing business are so far above those of the tricksters that its reputation is extensive for fair and honorable dealing.

The McElveen Furniture Company, 527 Penn avenue, is another reliable house and while this with the Michigan Furniture Company is a little distance away from the zone of the fakir these houses have been misrepresented by the fake agents picking up customers looking for these houses and while pretending to lead the unsuspecting victim to the responsible houses they are taking them to the "wholesale" house to fleece them.

The Church folk have already selected a committee and this committee has offered its services to the Tribune for an investigation of every case and with the aid of the police department foul and malicious deceptions as well as misrepresentations are to be prosecuted. There is no such thing as "getting the money back" only, but the money will be returned and the prosecutions will go on until the law has been satisfied. The Men's Bible Class has taken a hand to break up the thievery being practiced under the name of business.

HIGHEST RATE FOR PUDDLING ESTABLISHED.

By the provisions of the new wage scale established at the Detroit conference between the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers and the Western Bar Iron association and which was not finally agreed upon until Saturday at m'd-night, puddlers in the mills governed by the contract entered into, will receive $8.80 during August, the wages to be paid for the balance of the scale year to be determined by the bi-monthly examinations.

This is an increase of 40 cents a ton over the rates existing during this month and prior to July 23, as fixed by the bi-montly examination held in Youngstown, July 11. It is the highest rate paid puddlers in the history of the trade, considering that is practically no maximum limit. It is predicted in some quarters that the rate for boiling will reach $10 a ton before the close of 1916.

Under the new scale there is no change in the base rate. On a 1.30 cent card puddlers will receive $6.50 a ton, the price advancing 20 cents for each one dollar increase in the price of bar iron up and including a 1.75 card, when the increase will be 25 cents for each one dollar advance.

The increase in the bushelling guide and bar mills, heating on boards and muck mills will be on a general average of five and one-half per cent.

At the present time a 1.85 cent card prevails, entitling puddlers to $8.80 a ton, an advance of 40 cents a ton over the scale existing during the first 22 days of July under the bi-monthly examination for July and August.

Mills of the Western Bar Iron association in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Missouri, operating under the A. A. agreement will pay the new rate that goes into effect today. At the present time bar iron is selling at $2.35 per hundred pounds.

30-DAY LEAVE AT NAVY YARDS.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The senate adopted Senator Pithman's amendment to the naval appropriation bill which provides for 30 days' leave with pay each year for all employes of navy yards, gun factories, arsenals, naval stations, etc. These employes now receive 15 days a year, and the Nevada senator insisted that they be placed under the same conditions as departmental clerks and employes of the goveernment printing office and the bureau of printing and engraving.

POTTERS TO RE-ADJUST RATES.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 25.—At the twenty-sixth convention of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters resolutions were adapted affecting the wage scale of the sanitary ware branch. A two-year agreement expires next October and the potters will submit their changes to employers some time next month. The latter are organized in the Unted States Potters' association and maintain contractianal relations with the pottery workers.

NEW SCALE ON RAILROADS.

BOSTON, July 25.—It is announced that the 1,600 men and women employed in the raincoat making industry in this city have started on their new wage scale, which carries with it all shops the owners of which are members of the Boston Raincoat Manufacturers' association.

This schedule is the one agreed on last February when the strike of these workers was settled. Under the new scale the women are given a minimum wage of $8 a week, after three weeks' experience.

OPPOSE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 25.—The San Francisco Restaurant Men's association has resolved against the eight-hour day, favored by their organized employes. The restaurant and hotel men say "the time is inopportune." The workers have been conducting an organizing campaign and announce their intention of reducing the 10-hour day to eight. The movement includes cooks, waiters and cooks' helpers.

GLORYING IN THE CROSS OF CHRIST

1 Corinthians 1:18; 2:2.—July 30.

The Cross of Christ No Longer Preached—Redemption Doctrine Falling Before Evolution Theory—The Two Theories Antagonistic—Few Under the Banner of the Cross With Jesus and the Apostles.

"Far be it from me to glory, save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."—Galatians 6:14.

NONE can dispute that the preaching of the Cross of Christ is dying out. Those who still preach it give the impression that at most it means renouncement of sin and the incidental self-denials. Rare indeed would it be to find a minister in our day preaching the necessity for the Cross of Christ—the necessity for Jesus' death as the Ransom-price for the sins of the world.

Some would say that they have become Christian Scientists, and no longer believe that there is such a thing as sin or as death; and that hence they could not believe that Jesus died for sins. Others would answer that they have gotten too wise to believe any longer that in the Divine Plan Jesus' death was necessary for human redemption and reconciliation to the Father. Their view is that the Apostles and Jesus, in setting forth the Cross, were laboring under the delusion of the darker time, which present-day education shatters under a brighter light. Still others would say that they have become Evolutionists and Higher Critics, that they have adopted the opposite theory to the Bible—the Evolution theory.

The Cross Under Foot.

From the standpoint of Evolution there could be no justice, no propriety of any kind, in a Ransom-sacrifice by a Redeemer. According to the Evolution theory, man is merely developing, and is not yet perfect, not yet ready for trial along perfect lines, but is merely merging from a brute to an intelligent creature. Evolutionists would claim that without any redemption or any interference whatever upon God's part the process of Evolution will continue until by and by there will be a family of mankind that will reach an aristocracy of wisdom, efficiency and power which will enable them to live everlastingly by their own wits.

Small comfort is there in this for Evolutionists of today or of the past. If they boast of their children, of the future and of the everlasting life to which these children will gradually evolve, they admit that personally they have nothing beyond the tomb; that any future life of their part will be representatively in their children. As for their parentage, some of them do seem to boast of their ancestry, after all—that they were monkeys, frogs and, earliest of all, simply protoplasm.

Significance of the Cross.

These theories are the products of human wisdom, and indicate a misunderstanding and neglect of God's Word. How beautiful is the Cross of Christ as compared with any other! It assures us that God made man in His own image and likeness; and that man's fall from that perfection to his present condition of demoralization came as a result of disobedience to Divine Law and of the enforcement of the Divine penalty—"Dying, thou shalt die." (Genesis 2:17, margin.) For six thousand years our race has been dying—physically, mentally and morally. With all the experiences of the past and all the education of the present, nobody has hope that our race can be lifted up out of its present unsatisfactory condition back to perfection. All we can do is to combat the evil in ourselves, combat disease, combat death, and help others along the same lines.

But meantime, from the very beginning God had planned the blessings of the Cross — had planned that in due time He would send forth His Son, who would die for human sin, "the Just for the unjust," and thus open up the way for man's return to Divine favor and everlasting life. (1 Corinthians 15:21-23.) For four thousand years the world waited for the redemption accomplished at Calvary. For nearly two thousand years the results of that redemption have been confined to a special class, under a special call to be the Bride of Christ—"the Church of the First-borns, written in Heaven." (Hebrews 12:23.) The Scriptures assure us that this selected company is to be associated with Jesus in the great Kingdom of God, which the Bible shows is to roll away the curse from mankind and, instead, bring back favor.

The Cross Overhead.

The Kingdom cannot come until the Royal Family is ready to take the Throne. Jesus, indeed, has long been ready; but in harmony with the Father's Plan He has waited and has been doing a work in the preparation of the Church, who are to be His joint-heirs in the Kingdom. Then for a thousand years the Restitution privileges will be open to the whole world of mankind. It will then be no longer necessary to preach; for all will know the Lord, and unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. (Jer. 31:34; Philippians 2:9-11.) All this will come as a result of the Cross.

OPPOSE PRISON LABOR.

OMAHA, Neb. July 25.—Organized labor is opposing the plan of city commissioners to work city prisoners on the streets and buildings in competition with free labor.

HOW LABOR INJUNCTIONS STARTED.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Writing in the American Federationist, President Gompers traces the injunction process from its beginning, when it was developed for use in cases not covered by law, until the present time, when injunctions set aside constitutional guarantees.

"Our legal theories and judicial institutions were inherited from England," says President Gompers. "In England, in the early times, the only recourse for losses or damages was through legal procedure in the civil courts to secure an award for damages. But monetary awards were not always full compensation for losses, nor did they ample protection against encroachments of feudal overlords upon property or property rights of their retainers.

"There developed the custom of direct appeal to the king or to a representative of the king, known as the chancelor, or the "keeper of the king's conscience."

"The matters involved in such controversies as were brought directly to the king were questions of equity rather than law.

"The chancelor, who heard both parties, would report to the king advising that either matter be dismissed or that the order be issued that the offender do what he ought to do or refrain from doing something that would work injustice.

"As time went on these precedents developed into customs and customs into accepted law. Equity courts became an important part of the judicial machinery of England. The chancelor became judge, who, without a jury, heard cases for which there was no adequate remedy at law and issued decrees directing that a certain course be carried out.

"These fundamental principles of chancery, or equity, were developed:

"(1) It was to be exercised for the protection of property rights only.

"(2) 'He who would seek its aid must come with clean hands.'

"(3) There must be no adequate remedy at law.

"(4) It must never be used to curtail personal rights.

"(5) It must not be used to punish crime.

"Equity courts have been invoked in times of industrial disputes for the purpose of securing from equity judges restraining orders or injunctions restraining workers from collective action, assuring that unity of purpose necessary to make a strike effective; from saying orally or publishing information or doing things necessary to induce employers to agree to better terms and conditions of work, and from profiting by aid and counsel in carrying on industrial contests.

"More than 20 years ago federal courts began to issue such restraining orders and injunctions with great frequency. Since equity courts have jurisdiction only over controversies involving property or property rights, the only seeming justification for the issuance of these restraining orders is the theory that employers' right to do business includes a property right in the labor of employes necessary to carry on the business profitably.

"They assume that property and property rights are infinitely more important than human beings or human rights and demand that these shall be subordinated to profits and uninterrupted production or transportation.

"It has no bearing upon this argument to stigmatise wage earners wrongfully as lawless and doers of violence. When workers violate law or commit crimes there is adequate remedy at law. No judge has a right to issue an injunction forbidding commission of crime in advance—neither has an equity court the right to try criminal cases.

"Injunctions have been issued that set aside rights guaranteeing workers and all citizens of the states and the United States both by statutory and constitutional law. Restraining orders and temporary injunctions were drawn by lawyers in the pay of employers, presented to equity judges and often signed without even being read, pending, of course, a future hearing. But between the time when they were issued and the future hearing they constituted an order of the court, violation of which could be punished as contempt of court and penalized by fines or imprisonment.

"The terminology used in these edicts was such as to create prejudice against the purposes and activities of the workers by designating them by epithets that carried with them the insinuation of lawlessness and malicious purposes.

"The use of the writ of injunction in industrial disputes was so often in contravention of law and legal justice and subversive to the regular institutions of justice and government that it was fittingly designated as government by injunction. It secured to employes immunity and special privileges and denied workers rights and opportunities. All of this was accomplished under guise of superficial legality in a manner that was outwardly respectable and sanctioned by institutions of justice.

"Thus, like many another benificient institution, the writ of injunction, which was intended to serve the best interests of the people, became an instrument of injustice and tyranny."

SCORE SHAM EFFICIENCY.

BOSTON, July 25.—Guy Emerson, finance commissioner expert, has discovered that the best way for the city to "save" money is to discharge mechanics, and so recommends.

In reply, Secretary Commerford, of the Metal Trades Council, says:

"The metal trades has saved the city of Boston much more money than was ever saved by Mr. Guy Emerson. With the help of the members of the council, the metal trades saved the city $1,500,000 in the street lighting contracts alone, and for doing this we paid our own council fees. While this fight was on to save the money of the citizens and taxpayers, Mr. Emerson was conspicuous by his absence."

The Toughest Proposition Around the Plant---

"All right," said the Superintendent of a Steel Mill in St. Louis, "I'll let you test out your gear dressing, but I'm giving you fair warning. I picked out the toughest proposition around the plant."

You may be sure he did, for the place selected was a set of gears and pinions out in the foundry on the sand mill running at 100 R. P. M. These gears were SEVERELY EXPOSED. The men transferring sand from the cars did not make any great effort to keep the sand from going on the gears. The longest life of these gears was SIX WEEKS.

Accordingly, the gears were cleaned and

was applied. This was on September 27th, 1914.

Since then there have been only two renewals, bringing the average life of the gear up to six months, an increase of 300%. There has been but one renewal of the pinion. This was on November 1, 1915, after a run of one year, one month, and four days. We know this is an unusual instance, but on April 19th of this year, we made another call and found the second pinion in excellent condition after more than 5½ months' service.

This Company is now using TEXACO CRATER COMPOUND on all gears including the annealing furnace and the locomotive cranes.

These people have saved a small fortune on gear replacement. Furthermore, they have been able to secure a material increase in service from their equipment.

And the whole cost of the CRATER used in one year was about equal to the cost of one gear and its pinion.

We want to be absolutely fair in this matter, and so we'll admit that perhaps there was more attention given to the gears, after it was found that these gears COULD be lubricated. But even so, the tremendous increase of gear life points out to you a desirable saving in your plant, particularly now when gears cost so much.

Tell us about your conditions—we'll tell you how CRATER helps.

TROUBLE FOR THE FAKIR WILL LAND HIM IN JAIL

Committee Appointed to Push the Work. The Women Want to Do Their Part--After Other Fakirs.

There is nothing that will demonstrate the interest displayed in corruption, fraud and deception more than the determination to uncover it and hang the danger signal in the most conspicuous place.

This is being done by the Men's Bible Class of the Mt. Washington Baptist Church, and their practical methods is clearly exhibited in the selection of a Primary Committee of three, whose duty it is to secure the names of the officers of the Men's Bible classes, of every church in Allegheny and surrounding counties, irrespective of denomination, and urge them to join in an effort to protest, particularly the church folk as well as the public in general, from being defrauded by fake furniture stores.

The committee to formulate the plans consists of John Davis, N. R. Tite and E. A. Saalmuller. These men represent the business interests of the city, as well as the men in the industries. This committee will be enlarged to take in representative men from other denominations, and in addition to the lawyers offered by the National Labor Tribune, the committee is discussing the advisability of securing the services of private counsel, which shall be made a part of the committee.

There is an interesting feature to the exposure now being made and that is the enthusiasm the women are displaying and their determination to have part in the work.

The women declare they will bring the matter to the attention of the members of the Women's Club, and the women of the Missionary Societies as well as the members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be enlisted.

The women declare they are as much interested as the men and, indeed, they have been the victims and only by united action can the evils be eradicated.

The fraud furniture stores are sandwiched in between the legitimate furniture houses and the unsuspecting shopper looking for Pickerings or Spear & Company, or some other reliable furniture house, is picked up by one of the "barkers" of the fake stores and deliberately robbed.

A story is told of an old couple, probably past the age of 60, who were on their way to one of the legitimate and responsible houses, to buy a bed spring and mattress.

They were picked up by a "barker" of a fake furniture store and were induced to buy a bed spring and mattress for which they paid $25.00.

When the articles arrived they found they had been hopelessly swindled. They returned to complain and demanded their money.

They were put off from time to time and eventually thrown out of the store. They had no money to prosecute; they knew not to whom to look for assistance; for them there was no redress; they were compelled to suffer the sting of deception and the thieves got away with their foul and despicable plunder.

There is not only one instance but this is going on constantly to the extent of $250,000 a year, as admitted to the representative of the Tribune by one who is in possession of the actual facts.

The intention is to clean up these frauds and as they are a detriment to the public in general the sooner they are destroyed the better.

As soon as the plans have developed far enough the facts will be brought to the attention of council. President J. P. Kerr, will be asked to submit a resolution for an investigation and the police department will be expected to take a hand.

Why furniture in the windows marked far below actual cost of manufacture, simply for the purpose of practicing fraud, should be permitted is now being closely scrutinized. The police department is all ready in possession of the facts and if Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong desires to know the name of the principle fake furniture house he needs only ask Captain Arch Mackerell or Police Magistrate John Sweeney of Central Police Station.

Already word has been left with the Tribune that "if you know anyone who has been robbed at my store all you need to do is telephone me and I will return the money at once."

The Tribune will act in conjunction with Captain Arch Mackrell. No one shall use the Tribune as a collecting agency but nothing will be left undone to bring furniture crooks to justice.

The police make no distinction between a thief and a safeblower and a furniture faker is in the class. The latter is of the criminal class and must be treated accordingly.

Within a few weeks there will be under way one of the largest bodies of men and women ever organized for destroying fake furniture houses and this will sweep into other lines such as the fake jeweler, the fake cheap suit man, the fake horse dealer, and the fake piano man recently breaking into the Pittsburgh shopping public.

To destroy these criminal cliques will be a monumental task but already the work is started, and the letters endorsing the action of the Tribune are coming in from all sections.

IN PITCAIRN'S DEATH THE CITY LOSES A FRIEND

Was Chosen to Take Personal Charge of President Lincoln's Car Enroute to Washington to Forestall Plot to Assassinate the President.

The citizens of Pittsburgh were shocked last week when the news of the death of John Pitcairn was received. This representative citizen was much admired here and in his death the city realizes it has lost a most remarkable and philanthropic businessman.

In the August number of Patton's Monthly, we find the following, which the Tribune reproduces.

John Pitcairn, aged seventy-five years, died at his home, Bryn Athyn, near Philadelphia, Saturday, July 22nd. In his passing away the world has met with a distinct loss. The loss is not merely due to the fact that Mr. Pitcairn was one of the best known and one of the wealthier business men in the United States, but because he was endowed with many and unusual qualities. Always an untiring worker, among other prominent characteristics, he possessed a remarkable facility for dispatching whatever business he had in hand, however complex or diverse might be the nature of the affairs. One noteworthy element of his greatness consisted in the rare power to enlist the services and co-operation of other men of unusual ability who became zealous in the transaction of matter in his behalf.

Besides his business ability Mr. Pitcairn was also an earnest reader and student, and among his accomplishments was a considerable knowledge of several languages. In religion he was a Swedenborgian and it was through his zeal and financial aid that the church and a college for the study of the doctrine of Swendenborg were established at Bryn Athyn. He has always been held in the highest esteem by his associates, and especially by those in his employ. He was a man of extraordinary modesty, but of a quiet, determined perseverance, coupled with fearlessness and independence.

No better illustration of these qualities could be offered than the fact that he went alone into war-ravaged Belgium in October, 1914. He was the first American to go to Brussells via Antwerp after the country was occupied by the Germans. This trip was one which called for power of endurance as well as courage, and it must be remembered that he was 74 years old. In January, 1915, Mr. Pitcairn sailed with one of his sons and in the company of Captain Charles W. Brown, on the "S. S. Kroonland" for a cruise around South America. It was a few months after his return from this voyage that he was attacked by pneumonia, from which disease he never rallied.

Mr. Pitcairn was born in Johnstone, Scotland, January 10th, 1841, and when he was five years of age his father and mother moved to America, locating in Allegheny City, Penna. There the lad attended the public school which he left at the age of fourteen to work as a messenger in the office of the General Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Altoona. There he learned telegraphy and acquired the rudiments of his later knowledge of railroading. Afterward he went to Fort Wayne, Indiana, entering the office of the Superintendent of the Western Division of the Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne & Chicago Railway. Just before the outbreak of the Civil War he was called to Philadelphia as clerk to the Superintendent of the Philadelphia Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and while there his knowledge of railroading was considered

British Parliament Amending Insurance Act

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, July 20,

Although the war has rendered everything else of slight account, the British Parliament has still time to concern itself with the conditions of the workers. It is a striking evidence of the practical nature of the British genius that at this critical moment the House of Commons can sit down quietly to consider amendments to the Insurance Act. In ordinary times some clauses of the amendming Bill would have attracted a good deal of attention and have aroused much controversy; today they will go through with little discussion for, however philosophic members of Parliamen may be, their sense of proportion is very different from what it was in peace time.

As a mater of fact, one of the clauses is of great importance, both from the employers' and the workmen's point of view. It gives the Home Secretary tremendous powers in regard to factories and workshops. He will be able to order employers to make proper arrangements for the preparation of work-people's meals, for the supply of drinking water, protective clothing, even for the provision of ambulances and first-aid and other desirable things. Certainly, the proposals go no further than many decent employers have already gone, and, like much of the factory legislation of the past, it is a case of pursuing the levelling-up process. At the same time, the Bill marks a big advance, for there is no doubt it frequently happens that where these provisions are most necessary they are most neglected.

Apparently, power will be given to compel colliery owners to provide baths for their workmen at the pithead, an experiment that at first will most likely meet with more opposition from the colliers than from the owners. The cost of such installations would probably in the long run be thrown upon the consumer of coal. Still, as everything in the end gets back to the consumer nowadays there is no particular need to worry about this matter. The great thing is to secure the welfare of the workers and the Government move in this direction is welcome and timely.

The Postmaster-General on July 11th received a deputation on behalf of the National Joint Committee of the Post Office Association, respecting upwards of 100,000 Post Office workers of all grades, claiming an increase of wages on account of the higher cost of living. The increase demanded are briefly as follows:

Up to $10.00 ..... $1.25 per week
From $10.00 to $16.25 ..$1 per week
Over $16.25....72 cents per week

Increases are also claimed pro rata for part-time operatives and employes. On this occasion equal claim is made for women employes. Since the war those employes earning under $10 per week have received a 72 cent bonus, dating from March 1, 1915, and those earning over $10 per week 48 cents, the women received half the bonus.

The Postmaster General, replying, said he would lay the whole of the points before his colleagues in the Government.

The annual conference of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain opened on July 11th. Robert Smillie, the president, in the course of his address said they had done everythnig in their power to carry out the pledge given in London that, so far as the miners were concerned, they would do everything possible to secure the largest output of coal. There had been several wage advances during the year, and this had led people to believe that the miners were rapidly becoming millionaires.

Wages, continued Robert Smillie in the course of his speech, generally speaking were higher than they probably had ben in the history of mining, but in no district had the increase kept pace with the increased cost of living, when they realized from the board of Trade figures that five dollars of 1914 was only worth three dollars at the present time. The real cause of the enormous increase in the cost of living had been the unjust exploitation by certain grades of capitalists—by the owners of ships in the first class—who had been the greatest sinners—who, although they called themselves patriots, had not hesitated to take advantage of the people's food in order to earn enormous profits. He felt that Dick Turpin (the famous English highwayman of the old days) was a gentleman com-

MEXICAN LABOR WANT TROOPERS CALLED OFF

Representatives of Sixty Labor Unions Confer With President Wilson Through President Gompers

By GEORGE P. WEST.

WASHINGTON, July 25—While every big special interest newspaper and every jingoist in the country is shouting for war with Mexico, five officials representatives of the Maxican labor movement are meeting with the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in complete harmony and friendship.

At the Federation headquarters in Washington, the common interests of the people of the United States and of Mexico are being emphasized in the conferences that are proceeding with a view to removing misunderstandings and preventing war.

The Washington meetings are historic as being the most effective ever made by the workers of two countries to avoid war. Mexican delegates to the conference are in close touch with First Chief Carranza, while American labor through President Gompers is making its wishes known to the American administration.

The Mexican labor representatives include Carlos Lovera, Baltazar Pages, Luis Morones, Salvador Gonzalo Garcia and Colonel Edmund Martinez. They are here at the invitation of President Gompers.

Women and children will join with the men of Mexico in resisting American occupation, the Mexican delegates told Washington newspaper correspondents who had asked what would happen if the American troops are not withdrawn.

The interview was arranged in the office of the Committee on Industrial Relations by Lincoln Steffens, who led the questioning with a view to bringing out the attitude of the Mexican people.

"We represent 60 Mexican labor unions with a membership of 100,000", said Carlos Lovera, of Yucatan, and chief spokesman for the Mexicans. "We realize that it is quite possible we shall have to go to war when we have no quarrel, and we are here to do what we can to prevent it. It may be that we shall fail, just as labor failed in Europe.

"Since we arrived here we learned that the American people do not want war, and especially the working people. To a certain extent we can carry that news to the Mexicans and give them that impression, that the American people have no quarrel with us and do not want war. We believe the trouble is made by the special interests, and not by the people.

"Mr. Carranza does not want war, nor do the men around him.

"As far as we know, we don't think there is anyone in Mexico that wants war.

"Labor and the government of Mexico are working together. The government recognizes us, and the labor movement agrees to help the Constitutionalist revolution. We had regiments in the field, under our own officers. They were called the 'red batallions.'

"When we have a big strike now, the military does not help the employers. They do not interfere, they do not help us, but they leave us free to use the strike weapon. The government of Yucatan is helping all they can. We have the 8 hour day and the English week of 44 hours. We quit work at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning and are paid for the full day.

"On the day we left Mexico, we had the first actual distribution of land in Yucatan."

The Mexican delegates were told that Americans say Mexicans are treacherous. They said that the Mexicans believed the same thing about Americans. Asked why, Lovera said:

"In the first place, the war of 1848. The United States took California and Arizona, New Mexico and Texas, nearly half our country. General Grant and many other Americans have condemned that war. After that, the United States government and press tried to support the Diaz government, which was bad for the Mexican people. Then there was the part we believe Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson took in overthrowing Madero. He was a friend of Huerta and used his influence to put Huerta in power.

"Now we see a punitive expedition taking heavy artillery into Mexico to capture a bandit. They have set their military base 150 miles south of the border. Besides, they are talking of building military railroads. Do you use heavy artillery to chase bandits?

"Even Mr. Carranza would not be able to control the people and prevent war if the troops stay in Mexico. Mr. Carranza feels no different about it from all the people of Mexico.

The Mexicans were asked about American owneship of mines and railroads.

"Until the revolution" said Lovera, "employees on the railroads with $100 a month were all Americans. For thirty or forty years the Mexicans did all the track work and all the hard labor, under the command of Americans. No matter how bright or capable a Mexican might be, he could not be promoted. The American employees were paid in gold. The Mexicans got silver, they got about one-half or one-fourth of what the Americans used to get. It was the same in the mines."

After answering many questions from the newspaper men, the Mexican delegation through Mr. Lovera questioned the correspondents.

"Why is it", he asked, "that there is such a difference between the feeling of the American people and the way the American press ex-

IN GOD'S OWN WORDS.

Straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be who find it.—Matthew 7:14.

The mystery which was kept secret since the world began (Rom. 16:25); which hath been hidden from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to His saints, to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery * * * which is Christ in you the hope of glory (Col. 1:26, 27); that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together all things in Christ, both which are in Heaven and which are on earth.—Eph. 1:9-12.

To Abraham and his seed were the promises made.—Gal. 3:16. In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed.—Gen. 22:18. He said not, And to seeds, as of many, but as to One * * * to thy seed, which is Christ.—Gal. 3:16.

If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed (Gal. 3:29), for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.—Gal. 3:27. For as the body is one, and hath many members, * * * so also is Christ.—I Cor. 12:12.

The law and the prophets were until John * * * since which time the Kingdom of God is preached.—Luke 16:16.

When Jesus heard that John was cast into prison He departed into Galilee. From that time Jesus began to preach the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.—Matt. 4:17. His fame went through all Syria * * * and there followed Him great multitudes of people.—Matt. 4:24, 25. But without a parable spake He not unto them (Mark 4:34) that seeing, they may see and not perceive; and hearing, they may hear and not understand.—Mark 4:11.

When He unto His disciples (Matt. 9:37), Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill * * * one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled. Whoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the Kingdom of Heaven.—Matt. 5:17, 18.

Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist. Notwithstanding, he that is least in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than he.—Matt. 11:11.

For the Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified.—Jno. 7:39. Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter the Kingdom. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.—Jno. 3:3, 5, 6. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom.—I Cor. 15:50 Ye must be born again.—Jno. 3:7.

A NEW AND LIVING WAY

Heb. 10:20.

The way into the Holiest was not yet made manifest while the first tabernacle was yet standing, but Christ * * * an High Priest of good things to come * * * entered in once into the Holy Place (Heb. 9. 8, 11); into Heaven itself.—Heb. 9:24.

That which is born of the flesh is flesh.—Jno. 3:5. The Word was made flesh (Jno. 1:14); made a little lower than the angels (Heb. 2:9); made of a woman (Gal. 4:4); holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners (Heb. 7:26); the second Adam. I Cor. 15:45, 47.

The man Christ Jesus gave Himself a Ransom for all (I Tim. 2:5, 6), being put to death in the flesh.—I Peter 3:18. Wherefore, * * * though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now, henceforth, know we Him no more.—II Cor. 5:15,16.

Except a man be born again (not of flesh * * * nor of the will of man, but of God.—Jno. 1:13) he cannot see the Kingdom of God.—Jno. 3:3. Except a man be born * * * of the Spirit he cannot enter the Kingdom.—Jno. 3:5.

Jesus said, * * * I came * * not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me.—Jno. 6:38. Jesus came from Nazareth * * * and was baptized of John. Coming up out of the water, He saw the Heavens opened, and the Spirit * * * descending upon Him.—Mark 1:9, 10.

Though He were a Son, yet learned He obedience by the things which He suffered.—Heb. 5:8. In the wilderness forty days, tempted or satan (Mark 1:13); despised and rejected of men; a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.—Isa. 53:3. He humbled Himself and became obedient * * * even to the death of the cross.—Phil 2:8.

Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him (Phil. 2:9), according to the working of His mighty power which He wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead (the first that should rise from the dead.—Acts 26:23), and set Him at His own right hand is the heavenly places, far above allprincipality and power and dominion * * * and gave Him to be Head * * * over the Church which is His body.—Eph. 1:19-23.

Put to death in the flesh, but quickened in the Spirit.—I Peter 3:18 (R. V.).

Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world.—I Jno. 5:4 Jesus answered them, * * * Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.—Jno. 16:33.

Hereunto were ye called * * * that ye should follow His steps.—I Peter 2:21. No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God.—Heb. 5:4. Straight is the gate and narow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be who find it.—Matt. 7:14. Many will seek to enter in and shall not be able.—Luke 13:24. No man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him (Jno 6:44); for by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God.—Eph 2:8.

How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord (Heb. 2:3), who brought life and immortality to light.—II Tim. 1:10.

Which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and counteth the cost?—Luke 14:28.

Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after Me cannot be My disciple.—Luke 14:27. Ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake. I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. A man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother * * * son or daughter, more than Me is not worthy of Me.—Matt. 10:22, 34-37. Whosoever forsaketh not all that he hath, cannot be My disciple.—Luke 14:33.

Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?—Matt. 20:22.

All that the Father giveth Me shall come to Me; and him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out.—Jno. 6:37.

He that endureth unto the end shall be saved.—Matt. 10:22.

Many are called but few are chosen.—Matt. 22:14. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.—Eph. 6:12. For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh.—II Cor. 10:3. To him that overcometh I will grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in His throne.—Rev. 3:21.

For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil.—I Jno. 3:8. For even hereunto were ye called (I Peter 2:21), unto the fellowship of His Son (I Cor. 1:9), to be joint heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with Him.—Rom. 8:17; to be saints.—Rom. 1:7.

Do ye know that the saints shall judge the world * * * and angels? (I Cor. 6:2,3); the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation (Jude. 6:); which were disobedient * * * in the days of Noah.—1 Peter 3:20.

Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you.—Jno. 15:16. If ye continue in My word, then are ye My disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.—Jno. 8:31,32.

It is given unto you to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven. * * * Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear. For verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.—Matt. 13:11, 16, 17.

Ye are a chosen generation, a Royal Priesthood.—I Peter 2:9. Elect according to the foreknowledge of God.—I Peter 1:2. Whom He did foreknow He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son.—Rom. 8:28, 30.

Not many wise after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called. But God hath chosen the foolish things of this world * * * and the weak things * * * to confound the things which are mighty.—1 Cor. 1:26, 27.

He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But to as many as received Him ,to them gave He power to become the sons of God, (Jno. 1:11,12) even as many as the Lord your God shall call (Acts 2:39); who also hath sealed us.—II Cor. 1:22. And there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand.—Rev. 7:4.

Every man that hath heart, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto Me.—Jno. 6:45. He that believeth on Me hath everlasting life.—Jno. 6:47.

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus (Rom. 8:1); being justified, by faith, we have peace with God.—Rom. 5:1.

He that findeth his life shall lose it.—Matt. 10:39.

Present your bodies a living sacrifice.—Rom. 12:1.

Cursed be the deceiver who sacrifices unto the Lord a corrupt thing (Mal. 1:14), for that is an abomination unto the Lord thy God.—Deut. 17:1.

Ye are clean, through the word which I have spoken unto you (Jno. 15:3); and the blood of Jesus Christ * * * cleanseth us from all sin (I Jno. 1:7); draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.—Heb. 10:22. Present your bodies a living sacrifice. holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.—Rom. 12:1.

NOW IS THE "ACCEPTABLE" TIME.

Behold, now is the day of salvation. We then, as workers together with Him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.—II Cor. 6:2,1. When once the Master of the house is risen up and hath shut the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, open unto us; * * * He shall answer and say unto you, I know you not, whence ye are.—Luke 13:25.

The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a certain King which made a marriage for His son.—Matt. 22:2. I have espoused you to one Husband, as a chaste virgin to Christ.—II Cor. 11:2. Hearken, O daughter, and consider * * * forget thine own people and thy father's house.—Psa. 45:10-15.

At midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the Bridegroom.—Matt 25:6. The marriage of the Lamb is come, and His wife hath made herself ready.—Rev. 19:7-9. Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh. They that were ready went in with Him to the marriage; and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But He answered and said, * * * I know you not.—Matt. 25:13, 10-12. Whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in Heaven.—Matt. 10:33.

If we be dead with Christ we shall also live with Him. If we have been planted together in the likeness of His death we shall be also in the likenes of His resurrection.—Rom. 6:8, 5.

In the days of Noah * * * eight souls were saved by water. the like figure * * * baptism * * * doth also now save us, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Not the putting away of the filthiness of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God.—I Peter 3:21.

Therefore we are buried with Him, by baptism.—Rom. 6:4. John baptized with the baptism of repentance.—Acts 19:4. So many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death.—Rom. 6:3. John baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit.—Acts 1:5.

He that loseth his life for My sake shall find it.—Matt. 10:39.

If we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him.—Rom. 6:8. Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead? If the dead rise not at all, why are they then baptized for the dead?—I Cor. 15:29.

But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept.—I Cor. 15:20.

It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He doth appear we shall be like Him (I Jno. 3:2), the image of the invisible God.—Col. 1:15. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the Divine nature (II Peter 1:4) far above all principality and power and dominion (Eph. 1:21); joint heirs with Christ if so be we suffer with Him.—Rom. 8:16, 17.

Ye must be born again.—Jno. 3:7. This mortal must put on immortality.—I Cor. 15:53.

How can a man be born when he is old?—Jno. 3:4.

Not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.—Jno. 1:13. Not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God.—I Peter 1:23. Of His own will begat He us with the Word of Truth.—Jas. 1:18.

It is the Spirit that quickeneth * * * the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.—Jno. 6:63.

My thoughts are not your thoughts, saith the Lord.—Isa. 55:8. Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind.—Rom. 12:2. For as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.—Prov. 23:1-7. A good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is good; an evil man, out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is evil; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.—Luke 6:20, 45. Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man, but that which cometh out of the mouth.—Matt. 15:11.

Put off * * * the old man * * * and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.—Eph.4:22-24. Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 2:5. To be spiritually minded is life and peace.—Rom. 8:6.

MY LITTLE ALL.

By Brother Barton.

Such love for God burns in my heart
That all possessed I've given Him,
And in my heart I feel I'm blest,
And granted grace and lightly rest,
Since all I have was given Him.

My offering is so very small,
Even though my all I've given Him,
That of't I say, when I recall
The meanness of my little all,
Unworthy all I've given Him.

How gladly I would give him more,
But then my all I've given Him.
His name I'll praise, His name adore,
With heart and lips and earthly store,
And all I have I've given Him.

Sometimes I suffer special loss,
Because of all I've given Him,
But what I lose is only dross
Beside the crown, beyond the cross,
I'm glad my all is given Him.

ALL THINGS ARE FULL OF LABOR.

Eccl., 1:5-6-7-8. Psalm 19: 147: 4-18. 148:8. 135: 6-7. 137:6-8-9. Hbr., 51: 16. 10:11-12-13. Prov., 3:20. Rev. 22: 15. 21:1-4. 20:4. Acts 3:19-21. Gen. 3:9-24. Mat. 24:14.

The planets in their courses run
Each in its orbit around their sun,
They all keep time as on they race,
And each must return to its starting place.
Apparently the sun on a journey goes,
And hasteth to the place where he arose.
The winds sweep on from pole to pole,
And around the earth the waters roll.
"The stormy winds obey God's Word."
They go where Alpine snows are stored,
They melt the Alps with waves of heat,
Their snows the ocean waters meet,
And clouds doth oft obscure the skies
Where their chilly vapours rise.
The rivers run along so free
In their journey to the sea
And from whence their water came Thither they return again.
All systems in their orbits run
Circling around the central sun;
That beautiful star named Alcyone,
The seat of the Great Jehovah's throne,
Whos power set the suns affame.
And calleth all the stars by name.
The heavens declare thy glory Lord,
And we believe Thy holy Word.
We view Thy wonder from afar,
While we go whirling on a star.
Wise men say we are speeding through
A desert place in the ether blue.
That we started out from a golden strand
And are moving on to a place more grand.
A command from the Lord has now been given,
To connect this old world up with heaven.
For what was lost must be restored,
This promise came forth from the Lord.
Father Adam lost his home so fair,
Its life giving fruits we do not share,
But the secrets of the heavenly father's plan
Has been revealed to fallen man.
The end of this age is drawing near,
And "the Kingdom of God" will soon appear.
Then sin and death shall pass away,
Oh this will be earth's gala day.
And now we hope to soon be home,
Connected up with the Great White Throne.
From beneath the throne will flow a river
Of which we may drink and live forever.
And "God shall wipe away all tears,"
Down at the end of a thousand years.
Once more "the morning stars" shall sing,
And health and cure eternal spring.
"The sons of God" will shout for joy
All peace and bliss without alloy.
Then in the Kingdom of the Lord,
When Paradise has been restored,
His praise shall all creation sing,
There in the presence of the King,
Where sorrow never more shall come.
Oh this will be earth's harvest home.

Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soonthey recommend it verbally.

Since last October the Marvel Products Company, 316 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., received over 1,500 letters from regular users of Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea in which the writers state their health has been improved; that their former sickness was cured and that they would not be without this wonderful all-nature herb remedy in their homes. I take the tea regularly myself and am personally known to hundreds who use it. I also assert that Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea is used by tens of thousands of men, women and children, and that it is being sent by parcel post to many thousands in the United States, Canada and throughout the world; also that it is appreciated by users who express gratitude in letters they send renewing their orders.

commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and pervert any Scripture into support of the theory, as do the Protestant clergy today, but were content to let it rest on their authority. It may be that this was the first official notification of the theory by the church, although Dante had fused it into his Commedia and said that nothing short of the knife was good enough for those who denied it. Luther had his respect for the councils turned into contempt by his visit to Rome where he saw the profligacy, corruption, and licentiousness of the Papal dignitaries. Two references to this particular article of faith by the Lateran Council has been discovered in Luther's works and we present them here. In his Defence, prop. 27, "Adversus Execrabilem Antichrist Bullam," (Luther's Works, Vol. 2, folio 107, Wittenberg 1562) published in 1520, he said:

"I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful—such as 'the soul is the substantial form of the human body,' 'that the soul is immortal,' with all those monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals."

The other reference to the Lateran Council's decree on immortality, is found in Luther's Works, Weimar 1897 Vol. 7, par. IV., page 425. Commenting on the text, "there shall be false teachers among you, who shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them" (2 Pet. 2:1), he said:

"Hence it came that recently at Rome (at the Lateran Council—1512—17) by a masterly Collussion the articles were drawn up, 'That the Soul WAS IMMORTAL,' for it had been forgotten in the common faith, wherein we all say: 'I BELIEVE IN ETERNAL LIFE'. . . . . and many more such brilliant articles, which are very becoming to the Papal church, that she retain dreams of men and doctrines of devils, because she is treading under foot and destroying faith in the doctrine of Christ."

The last quotation above is from Luther in the German where he spoke plainly in addressing the people, but in Latin he is brief by using theological expositions. The original text in both languages follow:

"ADVERSUS EXECRABILEM ANTICHRIST BULLAM."

"VICESIMUS SEPTIMUS—(Article 27.)

"Certum est, in manu Ecclesiae aut Papae proprsus non esse stateure articulos fidei, imo neo leges morum seu bonorum operum."

"PERMITTO TAMEN, QUOD PAPA CONDAT ARTICULOS SUAE FIDEI ET SUIS FIDELISUS, QUALES SUNT, panem et vinum transsubstantiari in sacremento, Essentiam deineo genare nec genera ri, "ANNIMAAM—ESSE-FORMAM SUBSTANTIALEM CORPORISHHUM ANI . . . . "ANIMAM ESSE IMMORTALEM,' et omnia illa 'INFINITA PORTENTA' in Roma no sterquilinio Decorotum, ..." (Luther's Works, Weimar 1897, vol. 7 pp. 131 and 132, par. 11.)

"Grund und Ursach aller Artikel D. Martin Luthers, so durch roemische Bulle unrechtlich verdammt sind."

"Wieder die Bulle des ANTICHRIST."

"Der Sieben und zwanzigste artikel."

"Es ist gewiss, das der Pabst gar nicht macht hat noch die kirche zusetzen Artikel des glaubens noch gebot der sitten oder guter wercke."

2. Petri 2:1—"Daher ists nummen, das neulich (Auf dem Lateranconcil, A. D. 1512-17) zu Rom furwahr meisterlich beschlossen ist der heilige Artikel, "DAS DIE SEELE DES MENSCHEN SEI UNSTERBLICH,' denn es war vergessen in dem gemeinen glauben, da wir alle sagen:—'ICH GLAUBE an EIN EWIGES LEBEN' . . . . und derselben FEINER Artikel viel mehr, die aufs allerziemlichst wohl anstehen der PABSTLICHEN kirchen, auf das sie Menschen traum und TEUFELS LEHRE behalte, dieweil sie Christus Lehre und den Glauben mit Fuessen tritt und vertilget." (Luther's Works, Weimar 1897, Band 7, seite 425, par. iv.)

Ungefahr gleichzeitig mit der Lateinischen Erwiederung auf die pabstlich Banbulle begann Luther mit seiner Deutschen Schrift ueber denselben Gegenstand, ... von dieser Deutschen Bearbeitung sagt Luther nicht nur, dass sie "Planior et similor" werde als die Lateinische, sondern gradezu:——"melior est, quam sit latina" . . . . . Der Unterschied ist wesentlich darin begruendet, dass die Lateinische Schrift sich an die Gelehrten, die Deutsche an das Volk wendet. Darum redet Luther hier einfacher, und unterdruekt gewisse theologische Ausfuehrungen. (Luther's Werke, Weimar 1897, Bd. 7, seite 299 und 300, Par. i und ii.)

I am glad for the many helpful articles which appear in each number, and especially the Russell sermon.

In these days when the columns of the average secular paper are so full of matter which has a tendency to demoralize rather than to uplift, it is certainly refreshing to find such a paper as the Tribune.

JEHOVAH'S WAY ALONE GIVETH LIFE.

MANKIND TO LEARN THAT THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR IS HARD.

The World Going the Wrong Way—Most of Them Unknowingly—Why They are so Deceived—The Broad Way to Destruction—Present Narrow Way to Life—Future Highway of Holiness—The Ransomed of the Lord to Go Up Thereon—Necessity for Vigilance to Those Now in the Narrow Way.

NORFOLK, Va., July 30.—Pastor Russell is here, in attendance upon the I. B. S. A. Convention assembled here. Today he delivered a very impressive discourse from the text, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." (Proverbs 14:12.) The Pastor said in part:

This text is used particularly in respect to the world in general. It is not necessary for us to suppose that mankind are hypocritical and doing the wrong thing knowingly and intentionally; but rather, as the text implies, that the ways of the world are those which they think right. Their course seems to them to be the proper one. Yet they are in the wrong way. How does it come that the wrong way seems right to a people? How is it that they are deceived as to what is the right and proper course for them to take? What is the secret of their being in the wrong way and not being able to discern the right course?

The Scriptures answer these questions. When God created our race representatively in Father Adam, our great ancestor had no doubt about the right way. When he transgressed, he was not deceived into thinking that he was taking the proper course. (1 Timothy 2:14.) He knew that the way which he took would lead to death. Why, then, did he take it? Mother Eve had been disobedient to God, and had therefore come under the Divine condemnation to death; and Father Adam thought that it would be better for him to die with his wife than to live without her. Although he knew that in choosing the wrong way he was disobeying God, yet he did so under the delusion that it was preferable.

But with Adam's children it is different. All of them have been born in sin, shapen in iniquity. (Genesis 3:20; Psalm 51:5.) Our minds and our judgments are imperfect. The great Adversary who led astray our first parents is still deceiving and misleading the world, putting darkness for light and light for darkness. In their fallen condition mankind are poorly able to withstand him. The whole world is under the death sentence pronounced upon Adam in Eden. Satan does not wish any of them to see the goodness of God or the light of the blessed Gospel of Christ; for he well knows what the effect would be. There is something wonderful about our God that whoever sees Him in all His glorious attributes of Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power is inspired to walk in the right way. But for the moment, as it were, the great mass of mankind are blinded and deceived.—2 Corinthians 4:4.

WORLD STILL BLIND—FEW CAN SEE.

As we look out over the world today, we see sixteen hundred millions of people, nearly all of whom are blind. Very few see the real character of God. Very few understand the right way of the Lord. Their eyes are holden, their minds darkened. We feel great sympathy for them; and naturally the question arises, Is there any hope for these people? Then we think of all the efforts put forth by the people of God to show them the goodness, the wisdom and the love of God, in order that the knowledge might change their course, that they might commit their way unto the Lord. But still the masses are not doing this. They are going their own way—the way that seems right to them. "What is the use in spending one's time in other ways?" they ask. "We intend to enjoy ourselves. We wish to make a fortune. Everybody does that way." They measure themselves by themselves instead of taking the Lord's way.

People in general do not wish to do wrong. Often they start out in life with noble intentions. In early childhood, they were very innocent, candid and honest, as a rule. The child grows into an attitude of hypocrisy, deceit and evil-doing because he finds his elders frequently deceiving him and others. All mankind are born under more or less adverse conditions and unfavorable environments; and the majority follow on in the way in which they are born. This is the Broad Way that leads to destruction, of which our Lord Jesus tells us.—Matthew 7:13, 14.

Some of us have, by the grace of God, left this Broad Way, and have entered into the Narrow Way. We have learned something which has changed our course. One of the first lessons which we have learned is that we were not competent to guide ourselves. We came to feel the need of a mightier than human friend to lean upon, a wiser teacher than man to guide us. In our need we cried to the Lord for guidance; and He led us into the Woy of life and salvation.

If all the world knew that they were not doing the best that could be done, we believe that the vast majority could be taught. Looking out into the world, we see many people who have noble minds and making noble efforts. They were born on this comparatively high plane. But sooner or later they find out that they are following merely their own wisdom, which is very defective. By the time that such reach maturity of life, they are conscious of an aching void; and they do not know what it means. Many say, "I thought that I was able to shape my course satisfactorily; and I did so. I have attained much thus-and-so, but I am not happy."

How thankful we may be who have learned this needful lesson and have found the good way! "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear," said the Master to this class. Others cannot yet comprehend. Are we wiser than the rest of mankind? Only in the sense that we have learned that of ourselves we do not know much of anything. Realizing this, we have been wise enough to commit our ways unto the Lord, to come to Him for guidance, to come into His family on His terms. We are striving to walk in the footsteps of Jesus.

"FOOLS FOR CHRIST'S SAKE."

The world says that all this is foolishness. "You cannot be happy that way," they declare; "let us show you how to get the best out of life." But we reply, "It is a question as to which is right. 'There is a way that seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death.' We prefer to take the way which the Lord has pointed out to us. We have found that Jesus is the Way, that He is the Door, and that no man can come to the Father except by Him. We needed His redemptive work first of all to make satisfaction before the Father for us, and then He became our Head."

My dear brethren, we have found that we do not know how to do our own thinking, that we did not know how to guide ourselves and how to think right. We did not have sufficient knowledge to form a proper judgment upon a great many subjects. Others may guess for themselves. We will do what the Lord tells us to do through His Word. He is guiding His people in the right way. We are being taught of the Lord. We are not boasting of what we know; for we do not know, except as we are taught of Him. Other people think that they know. We know that they do not know.

If others think us fools for getting our instructions from the Bible, we are willing to be called fools for Christ's sake. (1 Corinthians 4:10.) We intend to get what satisfies us—"the wisdom from Above, which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." (James 3:17.) This we get from the Bible. If we receive the Word of God into good and honest hearts, we receive through that Word more and more of His spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love. This is our blessed privilege.

THE THREE WAYS.

Very few who profess to be Christians have carefully studied their Bible or have any clear idea of its teachings Not many of them know that the Lord tells us that eventually there will be three ways. The third way has not yet been opened, but it will be broad enough for whosoever will to enter upon it. The first is the Broad Way, which our text declares will end in death. The second is the Narrow Way, the Way of Sacrifice, which our Lord Jesus opened up. The third way will not be opened up until the Narrow Way shall have been closed.

For six thousand years mankind have steadily pursued the Broad Way, driven thereon by Sin and Death. Not until this Fospel Age was a way of escape brought to light. Had not God made this provision, eternal death would have been the fate of all the race of Adam. But Divine Love and Mercy came to their rescue. A Redeemer has died for the whole world—our Lord Jesus Christ. He has opened up a new way—a way to life. The new way has first been opened up for the Church class, those now being called out of the world. This is the Narrow Way. Its end has almost been reached. The called out class is nearly completed.

Soon the way of life will be opened up for the world of mankind—the dead as well as the living. This will be the great Highway of Holiness. (Isaiah 35:5-10.) Then whosoever will may walk up this grand Highway to human perfection and life everlasting. If any fail to attain life, the fault will be their own. Every obstruction will be removed from their path—every stone of stumbling, every lion of temptation or of rapacity; and every needful assistance will be granted to encourage them up the good Way, back to all that was lost for the race when Adam fell through disobedience in Eden.

No one had come up out of that Brood Way which leads to destruction until our Lord Jesus came and opened up the Narrow Way to His disciples. Even the Jews were in that Broad Way. Few of them were able to enter the Narrow Way when it was opened up to them. Throughout the entire Gospel Age some have been turning from the Broad Way into the Narrow Way. This is the good Way of the Lord. Are we seeking to walk in this Narrow Way that leadeth unto life? The way that seemeth right to the world will end in death.

GLORIOUS EPOCH NOW AT HAND.

When the great Highway of the Millennial Age shall have been opened up for the world, the way will be made so plain, the Prophet Isaiah explains, that the wayfaring man, though simple and unlearned, shall not err therein. "The redeemed of the Lord shall walk there; and the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads." "The ransomed of the Lord" are all mankind; for "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man." He "gave Himself a Ransom for all, to be testified in due time." (Hebrews 2:9; 1 Timothy 2:5, 6.) All mankind will have the opportunity to go up on this Way; for Christ and the Church are to open it up for the blessing of all the families of the earth.

Does it not seem that the majority of mankind, when they shall see the vast difference between the way of Jehovah and the way of Satan, will be glad to walk in the good way? But none will be coerced. The way of life and the way of death will be before them. Each must make his own choice. Whoever refuses to go up thereon will go down into the Second Death, or destruction.

Some are now turning from the Broad Way into the Narrow Way, where they are receiving blessings. Others, on the contrary, do not see now. Millions of heathen do not see—even those living in Christendom itself. They must be permittted to follow their own judgment, however. We are not to find fault with them; but we are to rejoice that our Heavenly Father and our Heavenly Lord Jesus have in mind the blessing of all the families of the earth, and will not permit any to go down without being informed as to the course they are taking and being given an opportunity of going up on the Highway of Holiness.

To those who now are God's dear children the very thought is precious that at the end of the present Narrow Way we shall enter upon the glorious privilege of uplifting and blessing the peoples of the earth, helping them up out of their difficulties, their sorrows and their sins, rewarding them for their good deeds and punishing them for their wrong acts. What a blessing this will mean to us! What an incentive to be faithful unto death! Jehovah's Plan is wonderful. There is nothing like it in all the Universe. No one could possibly duplicate God's great arrangement. No one else could ever have thought of anything like it. The Divine Plan manifests our Heavenly Father's Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power. We are coming to see this more and more as we learn to understand His Word, and therein behold the glorious character and purposes of our God.

GREAT WATCHFULNESS NOW NECESSARY.

For those of us who are in the strait and narrow way, there is a special lesson in our text. If at any time we begin to lean to our own understanding, to attempt to guide ourselves, we are in danger. Our wily Adversary is watching our steps, seeking to trip us. Our own flesh would entice us into thinking that we can manage our own affairs. We need to be constantly on the alert; for if we lean to our own understanding we shall surely go astray. The Lord assures us in His Word that we need to be guided by him; and He gives us lessons to demonstrate to us how dependent we are upon Him. He watches every step of our journey.

"Do all to the glory of God," should be our watch-word. In every matter that concerns us we should consider what is to His glory. No Christian should think of buying clothing or of eating or drinking or of going here or there, etc., without considering whether or not our course will be in full harmony with our Covenant of Sacrifice, without asking what is God's will in the matter. For us to do otherwise would be to live after the flesh.

We should shape every act, every word and every thought so as to bring glory to our God and to our own well-being as New Creatures. If we become heady and wish to think for ourselves, outside of the limitations which God has placed in His Word, we are in great danger. We need constantly our Heavenly Shepherd's care. We are to look always for His leading.

THE VOICE OF OUR SHEPHERD.

The Bible uses the shepherd's of Palestine as an illustration of the great care which our Heavenly Father and His Heavenly Son exercise over the people of God. There the shepherd goes before his flock, and the sheep follow him, ever listening to his voice. They will never follow the lead of strangers. So the Lord's flock listen to the voice of the Shepherd; and a stranger's voice they will not follow, if they are true sheep.

We hear this voice behind us—the words of our Lord Jesus and His Apostles. This voice is still guiding the people of God. The world does not now hear that voice; they do not recognize it; they do not think that it is worth heeding. But by and by they will begin to hear. They will then have the ability to hear the voice that we now heed. "Thine ears shall hear a voice behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand and when ye turn to the left," (Isaiah 30:21.) This voice is the Message contained in the Word of God. If we faithfully heed it, we shall never wander into the ways of death.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The following letter expresses the enthusiasm and the appreciation felt over starting of the "HELP OTHERS" fund:

POST-MILLENNIALISM.

Post-Millennialism has had full sway all the way down the centuries through the Dark Ages from the days of the Apostles. St. Paul fought it when he remarked ironically: "Ye have reigned as Kings without us." It is the idea that God's Kingdom on earth was set up at Pentecost—expecting the right thing at the wrong time—at Christ's first Advent instead of at His second. This was the error that led to the establishment of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy which drenched Europe in human blood! It still lingers in Protestantism and is the basis of the Foreign Mission enterprises. Beecher was Miller's contemporary and his popularity and culture put the humble farmer into the shade. His disappointment made him appear ridiculous in the eyes of the smug clergymen that were influenced by Beecher. Beecher stood for Post-Millennialism, or an Evolutionary process of establishing Christ's kingdom on earth, and Miller stood for Pre-Millennialism, a Revolutionary establishment. Russell stands for both; the evolutionary to follow the revolutionary which introduces it—the gradual Restitution to perfection of human kind; the dream not only of Evolutionists but also of every poet of every age and clime!

Beecher's work has been lost in the mass of American thought—he tinctured the whole but produced nothing definite. Miller produced something definite that would not blend with "orthodoxy" and produced a new color—its effects upon "orthodoxy" was to daub it like the white spots of the leopard. In other words Miller has done for Pre-Millennialism what Roger Williams did for Religious Toleration—he heralded it extensively and fastened it upon the common mind. The Pre-Millennialists have since been tolerated by the old school—Post-Millennialism and the Evangelical Alliance. Sermons on the Second Coming of Christ with the prelude of trouble and fire are no sensation since the Moody and Sanky evangelistic campaigns. Why did the clergy tolerate this radically different view of the Kingdom of Christ? It is because these doctrines reflected on the rank and file of their own flocks. They preach for pay and cater to the demands of the pew in order to get it. Just as sure as the so-called "Russellism" gets a firm hold of the people by being proven by their own Bibles, they will preach it just as they have now embraced Darwinism, which they previously fought. This has actually occurred in one of the foreign mission fields where the missionaries of the I. B. S. A. have been at work.

STAGNANT POOLS AND RUNNING WATER.

Miller's work has had a two-fold effect: (a) of becoming crystalized and preserved as permanent articles of faith and incorporated into "orthodoxy," and (b) to become a stream of running water, "Heterodoxy" which refreshed the "irregulars." "Billy" Sunday is dishing out Pre-Millennialism that ornaments orthodoxy and is making some noise. Russell dabbled into the same but found them stagnant pools of water, but water nevertheless. Russell was on the verge of launching upon a business career, having lost all his faith in orthodoxy, and having made an examination of the heathen religions, when he was directed to the running stream of water and found it pure and refreshing. "Heterodoxy" was an absorbing and alluring quest and infected young Russell through the medium of L. H. Paton of Michigan, and N. H. Barbour of Pennsylvania. This led to two important discoveries. The first was that God had a definite and orderly plan which involved long periods of time to which not only these Time Prophecies related, instead of a momentary fulfillment, but, additionally, all the truth of the entire Reformation. The second discovery was that all the truth of the Reformers was being distorted by being made to conform to the literal phase of the Platonic theory of immortality, man's supposed indestructable soul, which is a philosophical statement of Satan's original lie in the garden of Eden: "Ye shall not surely die."

The pioneers in the Reformation saw more than their contemporaries could appreciate and for this reason did not promulgate and emphasibe all their discoveries. These two discoveries young Russell made were anticipated by them. Luther discovered the error of man's supposed immortal soul and Wesley anticipated the Divine Plan of the Ages in connection with the question of Future Probation which he said he was going to bring before the church before he died. Both of these discoveries were inopportune and have since been suppressed. Luther referred to the fiction of man's supposed indestructible soul among "the numberless prodigies of the Romish dunghill of decretals." Wesley's Calvinistic enemies made it appear that he was advocating the Catholic doctrine of Purgatory when he talked Future Probation.

LUTHER'S SUPPRESSED UTTERANCES.

Wesley's suppressed teachings on prayers for the dead would be a revelation to present-day Methodists, as also will Luther's discovery to Lutherans who brand the Associated Bible Students as "Soul Sleepers." Luther was also a "Soul Sleeper" for "in one of Luther's articles he said that the Pope made his pot to boil with such decretals as indulgences and the immortality of the soul." True, Luther centered principally on "the just shall live by faith," and fought the doctrine of the Indulgence, and this was the timely issue, but he must have said considerable against immortality of the soul, for it set the theological squatters at Rome to chatting about it. As was their custom in those days, these occasional needlessly pious gents got together to center their traditional guns on this lone reformer; the Council of the Lateran, held A. D. 1573, under Pope Leo X., pronounced the immortality of the soul to be an orthodox article of Christian faith. The following is a translation of the rule which was adopted by this council, as given by Caranza, P. 412, 1681:

"Whereas, some have dared to assert concerning the nature of the reasonable soul, that it is mortal; we, with approbation of the Sacred Council, do condemn and reprobate all those who assert that the intellectual soul is mortal, seeing that the soul is not only truly and of itself and essentially the form of the human body, as is expressed in the Canon of Pope Clement the Fifth, but likewise immortal; and we strictly inhibit all from dogmatizing otherwise, and we decree that all who adhere to the like erroneous assertions shall be shunned and punished as heretics."

The existence of this decretal suggests that this Platonic theory of man's immortal soul was almost forgotten amongst the laity and it was for this reason principally that the Council took notice of Luther's denial of it and re-affirmed it. The council did not

STOCK JOBBING BLAMED FOR LOW WAGES ON R. R.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Testifying before a federal board of arbitration, in the wage controversy between the New York Central lines and its telegraphers, President Perham, of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, said that stock watering is the reason why signal men and telegraphers are denied decent wages.

The unionist declared that between 1870 and 1914 the company paid $151,429,357 dividends on watered stock, averaging about $3,387,000 a year. He said that the wages of the Central's telegraphers, from 1888 to 1894, inclusive, amounted to $11,707,486, and in the same period the railroad paid $73,722,187 dividends on stock that did not represent one dollar invested.

The witness was interrupted by officials of the company, who protested to the board that this testimony should not be admitted, as it was "incompetent, irrevelant and immaterial." The board, in executive session, quickly decided to admit the evidence. Continuing, President Perham read into the record documents and reports to substantiate his testimony. He said that from 1870 to 1910 the company wasted more than $36,000,000 in bonuses, commissions in connection with its stock transactions and in flotations of watered securities. During the same period the company issued bonds, receiving $168,785,510, when they were worth on the market $175,335,718.

"We concede," said Mr. Perham, "that these financial managers are not those of the present managers of the Central, but the figures I have given are evidence that if the road is not in a position to increase wages it is not due to overpayment of wages in the past."

T. W. Evans, a New York Central official, assured the board that "all the talk we have heard about 'tense' conditions and starvation wages is b-u-n-k, with a capital B. The trouble is with the men, not with the job. Andrew Carnegie would not be living on Fifth avenue today had he been willing to remain a telegrapher and complain of wages and conditions."

Mr. Evans' solution was for dissatisfied telegraphers to "have initiative enough to get out of it." He failed to see that the logical result of his theory would mean that no telegrapher, with intelligence enough to protest, would be employed in this life-protecting work.

STREET CAR MEN STRIKE.

YONKERS, N. Y., July 31.—Street Car Men's unions Nos. 490 and 498 are on strike against the Yonkers Railroad company and the Westchester Electric Railroad company because of wage differences, which the companies refuse to arbitrate.

In large advertisements in the public press the companies assure the "business men and residents of Westchester county" that their employes are contented, and that:

"The whole situation may be briefly summed up in this question:

"Shall these roads be operated in the interests of the people who have invested their money in them, the general public and of the employes?

"Or shall the employers be permitted to dictate entirely the policy of the operation of the roads?"

CHAUFFEURS GAIN.

CINCINNATI, July 31.—The Carriage Drivers and Chauffeurs' union has signed a one year agreement with the Zumstein Taxicab company. The union is recognized, arbitration agreed to, and employes are given one day a month with pay. The company will assume all responsibility for accounts and do the prosecuting in all cases involving arrests of persons for failure to pay their fare or following accidents.

TEXTILE WORKERS WIN.

MILWAUKEE, July 31.—Thirteen hundred girl textile workers have won their strike. Hours are reduced from 10 to 9 per day and wages are increased. All other differences will be adjusted by an arbitration board.

THEORY VS. PRACTICE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 31.—The president of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, who unceasingly declares that every man "has the right to run his own business," makes public anouncement that local business interests will not countenance the employment of union longshoremen by Los Angeles vessel owners.

TINNERS REDUCE HOURS.

GRANITE CITY, Ill., July 31.—Several hundred employes of the tinning department of the National Stamping and Enameling company have reduced hours from 12 to 8, after a short strike that involved 2,000 other employees, who struck in sympathy. The tinners have also received wage increases. Representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers assisted in the negotiations.

ABANDONS NON-UNION THEORY.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, July 31.—A. Abel, connected with a large firm of painting contractors, has abandoned the non-union shop theory and announces that his next business venture will be conducted along union lines. He has tired of the 20-months strike of the Painters' union, which has made it impossible to secure competent workers.

PLAY OLD DIVIDING GAME.

JEROME, Ariz., July 31.—The city council has ordered that public speeches on the highways of this municipality shall cease forthwith. This action was taken because of a petition from a committee of Mexican residents who aver that agitation on "any subject" would tend to cause misunderstanding between Mexicans and Americans.

Trade unionists laugh at this statement. They say the United Verde Copper company is behind the move, and is only interested in checking any agitation that will bring American and Mexican workers together.

RAISE WAGES, $9.50 to $15.

PHILADELPHIA, July 31.—Last March, when workers employed by the Rex Storage Warehouse organized and affiliated to the A. F. of L., their wage rate was $9.50 and $11 for a week of 60 hours.

These working conditions have resulted in several strikes. Last week a final adjustment was made, which raises wages to $15 a week, providing for a 56-hour work week, time and one-half for overtime and double time for Sundays and holidays. The company will employ members of the union when same can be secured.

BAKERY WORKERS WIN.

DENVER, Col., July 31.—The Lindquist Cracker company has discharged its strikebreakers and agrees to take up the matter of wage increases with a committee representing Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union.

These employes were forced on strike after the state industrial commissioner vetoed their request for higher wages, on the ground that eastern competition made advancing impossible.

DETROIT STRIKERS WINNING.

DETROIT, Fich., July 31.—The Detroit Mirror Works is the one remaining firm that refuses a 50-hour week to members of the Ornamental Glass Workers' union. About a half dozen firms have accepted the new scale of this recently organized union. The non-union concern works its employes 10½ hours a day for from $15 to $17.50 a week at labor that is declared to be nerve racking and unhealthy.

FREIGHT HANDLERS STRIKE.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., July 31.—Illinois Central railroad freight handlers suspended work to enfore a 10-hour day and wage increase of 2½ cents an hour for truckers and $5 a month for checkers. Former conditions were a 11 and 12-hour day at 17½ cents an hour.

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WHOLE WORLD

1 Corinthians 13.—August 6.

God-Likeness In the Heart, In the Tongue, In the Hands, In the Thoughts—Love the Essence of the Divine Character—Different Kinds of Love—The Spectrum of Love Reveals the Characteristics Essential to Membership In Christ's Glorified Body.

"Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love."—Verse 13.

LOVE is a quality beyond the power of man to describe. The best that we can do is to describe its conduct. Those who possess this quality can appreciate it, but cannot explain it; for it is God-likeness in the heart, tongue, hands, thoughts, permeating all the human attributes and seeking to control them.

There are different kinds of love, however; and the Apostle is not speaking of general affection, but of that particular kind of love which belongs to God and to the New Creation, begotten of Him. There is an animal love, such as the brute creation exercise toward their young—a love which frequently leads to the sacrifice of life itself in its devotion. This kind of love inheres in the natural man. It is more or less selfish; for it will even rob others to lavish good things upon those it favors.

Natural Affection.

But this is not the love which the Apostle describes, nor is he addressing the natural man. He addresses the New Creation, and informs them that the natural man cannot appreciate that which he presents. In order to have a clear comprehension of this love and a hearty acceptance of it as the rule of life, we must be begotten from Above.

The "More Excellent Way."

St. Paul has been gradually leading the minds of his readers up to a higher appreciation of their blessings. In the chapter preceding today's Study he calls attention to the various "gifts of the Spirit" conferred upon the early Church for its establishment and development. He closes with the exhortation that while esteeming these gifts, each member of the Church should covet earnestly the superior ones. Then he adds, "Yet I show you a more excellent way"—something still better than those gifts of the Holy Spirit. Our Study pertains to this more excellent ambition; namely, the acquisition and development of the spirit of love.

With the early Church the gifts of the Spirit took the place of blessings which we now enjoy. They had no Bibles, no helps to Bible study. Therefore they needed the miraculous gifts to draw them together to consider the Lord's Message and to edify one another—until the books of the New Testament had accumulated. After the death of the Apostles and the consequent cessation of the miraculous gifts, these Divine providences of the written Word were quite sufficient, as St. Paul sets forth in our lesson.

Boldly the Apostle presents a great truth, more and more recognized amongst Christian people everywhere, in proportion to their development in the character-likeness of their Redeemer. He declares that neither knowledge, wisdom, talents nor gifts of any kind are the things to be sought above all else, but that love should be the most highly esteemed. God is Love. Therefore whoever would be pleasing to Him must develop this disposition; for according to the Divine Law no one will ever have the Divine approval and life everlasting without the full establishment of this Divine quality in the heart, in the character.

To those who have never studied out the constituents of love, the Apostle's suggestions will seem like a revelation. He enumerates nine component parts:

(1) Patience—"Love suffereth long";
(2) Kindness—"And is kind";
(3) Generosity—"Love envieth not";
(4) Humility—"Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up";
(5) Courtesy—"Doth not behave itself unseemly";
(6) Unselfishness—"Seeketh not her own";
(7) Good Temper—"Is not easily provoked";
(8) Guilelessness—"Thinketh no evil";
(9) Honesty—"Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the Truth."

If every member of the human race were perfect in these qualities, what a wonderful world this would be! However, it would be useless to chide others because, like ourselves, they are not perfect in love. The Scriptural key to the situation is the fact that the race was shapen in iniquity, in sin did Mother Eve conceive them. (Psalm 51:5; Genesis 3:20.) The calamity of death has injured the world mentally, morally and physically. For this reason the Bible does not address the natural man; for his mind is so sodden with selfishness that his eye of pity and ear of sympathy are almost closed.

Spiritual Love Symbolized.

The Scriptures address those who through faith in the blood of Christ have made a full consecration of themselves to God, have been begotten of His Holy Spirit and thus become New Creatures. These, as children of God, must develop in knowledge and character, thus to be made fit for a share with their Redeemer in His Kingdom.

TEAMSTERS ADVANCE.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 31—During the last fortnight Teamsters union No. 174 has signed contracts with nearly a score of firms and has increased its membership.

WAGE INCREASE ORDERED.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 25.—The anthracite conciliation board has ordered a 3 per cent wage increase for mine laborers at Georgetown and has also ruled that they should work eight instead of 10 hours a day.

The board awards the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western company's electricians a 7 per cent wage increase. The company had offered a 3 per cent increase.

RAILROAD SHOPMEN WIN.

DU BOIS, Pa., July 25.—About 1,000 employes of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg railway car shops have won a three days' strike, and secure 15 per cent wage increases, the eight-hour day and recognition of their union, which is affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

These workers discovered that when they tied up the sops and yards that the management abandoned its policy of simply acknowledging receipt of their demands.

UNION FOR WOMEN URGED.

FOND DU LACK, Wis., July 31.—Organization among women workers was urged by Frank J. Weber, of Milwaukee, general organizer of the Wisconsin state federation of labor, in his report to the annual convention.

"The modern factory system," he said, "has brought a great change and the old law that the female must honor and obey, because she was considered a dependent, is no longer applicable to our present industrial system because the female has been compelled to become a part of our modern factory system as a wage earner. Since she has so entered the field of industry it is of the greatest importance to have her become a constituted part of the organized labor movement to better her condition as such."

The unionist recorded sharp criticism of the practice of importing armed men and giving them the authority of peace officers in districts where strikes are in progress.

So-called scientific management he declared, would produce an army of middle aged workers, crippled in mind and body, unable to keep the pace demanded by the system and who would prove a burden to society.

The convention voted a ½-cent-a-day tax on all members in the state for the benefit of Milwaukee machinists now on strike for an eight-hour day. Convict labor on roads was favored, as was shorter night hours for postal employes. Ashland was selected as the next convention city. Secretary-Treasurer Handley and General Organizer Weber were re-elected.

STATUTES COVER LAWLESSNESS

DETROIT, Mich., July 31.—The Evening News befogs the question of labor injunctions in an editorial protesting against the extensive use of these writs, which, the editor declares, "should cover only lawless acts."

Trade unionists deny any judge the right to decide what constitutes a violation of police statutes. One of the most important sections in the United States constitution is the trial by jury guarantee. Judges usurp this right when striking workingmen are involved, but they would be impeached if they dared extend it to other elements of society.

Organized labor insists that a jury shall always decide what constitutes a lawless act, a violation of the criminal code, if the accused so desires. On this theory it rests its opposition to labor injunction. Unionists refuse to agree that judges have the right to "nibble" at the foundation of one of their fundenmental guarantees.

U. S. ARMOR PLATE FAVORED.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—By a vote of 51 to 17 the senate rejected a motion by Senator Oliver of Pennsylvania to strike the government armor plate plant section from the naval appropriations bill. Another motion by the same senator to refer the question to the federal trade commission was defeated by a vote of 49 to 16.

Advocates of a government owned armor plant claim that about 95 per cent of the iron oar used in this country comes from Lake Superior and that practically all of this tonnage is shipped through the Soo canal, which could be put out of commissin in time of war by a few sticks of dynamite. It is stated that a government plant could exploit iron ore fields in the interior of the country.

WIN STREET CAR STRIKE.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 31.—The Street Car Men's union has secured an agreement with the local traction company after a 24 hours' strike. All men discharged during the organization of the union are reinstated and the other demands, including wage increases and readjustment of hours of labor, will be submitted to an arbitration board.

TRENTON, N. J., July 31.—After several conferences, Street Car Men's union No. 646 has raised wages from 27 to 23 cents an hour.

OPPOSE ILLEGAL STRIKES.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The executive council of the United Textile Workers' union has declared against strikes called in violation of laws every member has agreed to uphold. It is declared that these illegal strikes are easy to inaugurate by a few who would curry popular favor while some agitation is on for better conditions.

The executive council intimates that this law should be obeyed by the men and women who made it and they annonce that in the future advocates of illegal strikes will be expelled from the union.

INCREASED WAGES WON BY MINERS

Five Companies Sign Pact With Lower Allegheny Coal Workers--Going After Other Fields.

Peace between the coal operators and miners of the lower Allegheny valley was established last week by the signing of a scale by representatives of the employers and employes of that district.

The scale, which, according to officers of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, will mean an increase in pay of $150,00 for the men affected during its life of two years, was drawn up during conferences which have been held daily for the last 10 days in the auditorium of the Oliver building.

The signatory companies are the members of the Coal Operators' Association of the Freeport Thick Vein, comprising the Ford Collieries Company of Curtisville, the Bessemer Coal and Coke Company of Russelton, the Allegheny Coal and Coke Company of Harwick, the Superior Coal and Coke Company of Russelton, and the Kinloch Coal and Coke Company of Arnold. This organization was formed within the last few weeks for the purpose of making possible a collective agreement with the miners.

The main provisions of the scale follow:

There shall be a uniform contract in the district, the terms of which are the terms of the scale.

Wages are increased as follows: Firemen, from 25 cents to 33 cents an hour; pick miners, from 49 cents to 56 cents a ton; double shift entry workers, from 41 cents to 53 cents a yard; loaders from 33½ cents a ton to 35 cents; shot firers, from $2.80 a day to $3; pumpers, from 25 cents an hour to 35 cents; common laborers, from $2.75 to $2.80 a day; dumpers, from $2.18-$2.35 to $2.42 a day; all men paid by the hour to work eight hours a day.

Safety lamp charges reduced from five cents to four cents a day.

Companies to collect union dues of 50 cents a month from each man and turn them over to the organization.

The union to have a check weighman at each tipple to safeguard miners' rights.

Penalty for striking other than in accordance with regulations and procedure agreed upon, reduced from $2 a day per man to $1 a day.

Remission to the men of $14,000 in fines assessed during the last spring and summer.

A recognized scale of payment for "dead work." Heretofore, casual contracts have been made between men and their employers for the removal of clay and other foreign matter from mines. A graded scale of payment for such work is part of the agreement. This scale is so drawn as to guarantee each man, as nearly as possible the same pay for doing this "dead work" as he would receive for the same amount of time spent at taking out coal.

The signing of the scale yesterday marks the completion of the first of three steps in the organization of the Allegheny valley coal district by the United Mine Workers of America, an undertaking that so far has proved to be not only a source of difficulty for the operators of the district, but fraught with danger to union officials. Already one administration of District No. 5 of the miners' organization has fallen as a result of the extension attempt.

Up until last spring the union had never been recognized in the Allegheny valley. On April 1 the men struck, closing down practically every mine in the region, which was organized by the union as sub-district No. 7 of District No. 5. Recognition of the union and establishment of a scale were demanded by the men.

First of the companies to yield were those which yesterday signed the scale. Their mines were reopened upon thir recognition of the union, and the men returned to work pending the drawing up of a prmanent agreement.

At that time Van Bittner was president of District No. 5 and he led the miners in the subsequent negotiations over the scale. Dealing with each of the companies individually he prepared and presented to the men scales for the government of each of the mines involved.

His efforts met with little approval from the miners and a storm of dissension arose, which resulted in Bittner's resignation a few weeks ago. Phillip Murray was chosen to succeed him, and the administration built up by the new president, set about immediately to approach the settlement of a scale by a different method.

He and his assistants persuaded the operators to organize and deal with the union collectively, so that a uniform agreement might be drawn up . One of Bittner's principal difficulties had arisen from the impossibility of drawing the discussion within his organization to any definite point, there being as many scales under consideration as there were mines and local unions.

So one scale for the whole region was decided upon. The operators chose their representatives, and the officers and international representatives of District No. 5, together with three delegates from each local union affected, were authorized to represent the men in the negotiations in the Oliver building. The present scale is the result of their deliberations.

The union officials will next take up the settlement of the

THE BABCOCK BLUES PREPARING TO MARCH

President Hildorfer Busy on Republican Marching Club --- Other Counties Want In, and Men in Mills, Factory, Shops and Mines Want to March for Babcock.

That the Hughes and Fairbanks Republican marching club under the title of the Babcock Blues is going to be an overwhelming success is assured by President Joseph P. Hildorfer, who is leaving nothing undone to make the enrollment at least 5000 active marchers.

President Hildorfer is pushing the work of organizing the club with all the speed possible and the interest displayed in the adjacent counties far surpasses his earlier expectations.

Recorder J. C. Sutherland, of Washington, is making inquiry as to the details and is arranging for a conference with President Hildorfer in regard to organizing the cavalry squad in adition to the marchers from the outlying counties. Washington county delegations will include marchers from Washington, Brownsville, Charleroi, Donora, Monongahela, McDonald, Claysville, Canonsburg and towns extending back to the West Virginia lines.

There is no man in Washington more familiar with the situation than Recorder Sutherland and he will be able to advise President Hildorfer the course to persue in bringing into line the largest number of influential men in all walks of life.

There are those who likewise are making inquiry from Westmoreland, Beaver, Butler, Lawrence and Eric counties and towns like Sharon, Meadville and Johnstown are anxious to have representatives.

The intention of President Hildorfer is to have the Babcock Blues recognized as the Official Republican Marching Club and this will enable marchers who do not belong to other social political clubs to become active members without being compelled to put up an initiation fee or pay membership dues. It will also extend far beyond the confines of the political social organizations of Allegheny county and thus the interest will be aroused and the political zeal fired with such enthusiasm that many who are of doubtful opinion will be won into the Republican ranks and to the support of the Republican standard bearers.

President Hildorfer is udertaking the great work of organizing the Babcock Blues with an absolute conviction that the approaching presidential campaign is not going to be a cinch. He looks upon the matter with seriousness and he is applying himself to the minutest details with a determination that Western Pennsylvania shall again be brought back to the old time Republican majorities.

As soon as the ground work for organizing Pittsburgh is completed and the details for Allegheny and the adjacent counties are worked out committees representing the various units will be brought together and uniforms decided upon.

The amazing feature is the men who have already voluntarily signified a willingness to march, include Pittsburgh's foremost businessmen and labor is well represented by men who are recognized in the mills, factories, shops and mines as practical workmen and influential in the communities in which they reside. There is no room in this organization for the piking, grafting political labor skate. This is an organization that wants none of the offscouring who are constantly playing to the gallery. This organization seeks honest, consciencious and active men from every industrial walk and the pubbler is as welcome as the millionair.

E. V. Babcock, after whem the club, is named wil have no lines of distinction. Mr. Babcock has been an active toiler himself and the golden spoon is passed on to the pigmy in the pallace while the toiler goes up front.

President Hildorfer is discreet and exceptionally solicious about his marchers; he wears no kid gloves and the hand is out to Pennsylvania's finest for the greastest club the state ever organized and the finest body of Republicans since the days of Freemont.

The executive officers of the Babcock Blues are Joseph P. Hildorfer, President; C. W. Robinson, Vice President; Verner Dawson, Recording Secretary; Robert Murray, Financial Secretary; F. E. Shaughessy, Treasurer. John A. Beck is chairman of the Advisory Committee.

As early as possible President Hildorfer will make known his plans and he has many interesting features over which he is now busy pondering. When he has thoroughly developed his ideas he will begin to put them into execution. One of the best features is to invite the men in the mills, shops, factories and mines to take an active interest so that every industrial enterprise will be recognized and personally represented.

It is the intention when the time is appropriate to take the Babcock Blues to other cities to awaken interest and the indications are that trips to cities like Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and other Ohio as well as Pennsylvania cities will be made. This will necessitate large expenditures but the club will ask for contributions and there are ample men still living, who are as generous today as they were in campaigns of generations ago when with their en-

Foreign Labor Leaders See England

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, July 27.

The French and Belgian Labor leaders now in this country under the auspices of the General Federation of Trade Unions, after visiting the Fleet, were passed on to the Ministry of Munitions and shown the gigantic arrangements for supplying the fighting forces of ourselves and our allies. The working man on the Continent has hitherto been given more opportunities of reading about "scandals" and "slacking" than about the enthustiastic, untiring work of hundreds of thousands of men and women all over Great Britain. At a famous shipbuilding yard, after watching naval construtions of all sorts in progress, the visitors saw guns of every size and type being mounted. They were especially impressed with the amount of work being done for the Russians and the Italians. At this one piece 24,000 men and several thousand women are employed, and work proceeds wothiut cessation night and day.

At one of our national shell factories it was stated that five months ago the site was a farm. Now between two and three thousand hands are at practically all women. The interpreters were kept very busy questioning the girls as to what they did before the war, how much they earned then and now, whether it was possible for them to save and whether, in fact, they did save, how the work affected their health, and so forth. As an example of improvisation, the visitors were taken to what was formerly a factory for textile machinery, but which is now almost entirely given over to munitions—and is doing exceedingly well. The plant has been adapted to the making of such light things as hand grenades, rifle grenades, fuses, and the smaller shells. The visitors were struck by the great care taken to provide comfortable conditions for the employees.

Now the delegates have been placed in the care of the military authorities and are to see how our new armies are being trained.

A very important trade union meeting was held in London on July 18th. This was attended by delegates from the principal trade unions and resolved itself into a conference with members of the Government on the question of holding up all vacations in munition works wherever possible for some time ahead. There should have been a two days' national general holiday on August 7th and 8th. This has been cancelled by the Government. The above-mentioned trade union convention was called to endorse this and it did so. A special letter addressed to the organized workers of Great Britain from Commander-in-Chief Sir Douglas Haig, of the general headquarters of the British army in France, was read, in the course of which he said:

"The unition workers at home very generously gave up their Whitsuntide holiday, and were promised two days in August instead. I fully appreciate how tired they must be, and how much they must be looking forward to that promised holiday. Yet, I feel confident that if they could but see their comrades here, both day and night, with heroism and determination which is beyond all praise, they would not hesitate to surrender those two days' rest, and would devote them to maintaining and, if possible increasing, the supply of guns and shells, without which victory is impossible. I ask you to put the facts before the workmen, and I know they will consent. Two days' cessation of work in the munition factories must have the most serious effect on our operations. It might even mean the addition of many months of the war."

After a certain amount of discussion and explanation by the Minister, the following message in reply to Sir Douglas Haig's leter was unanimously accepted with acclamation, after speeches in support of it had been made by Clynes, M. P., Dawtry, Ben Tillett, Baker, Miss Verley, and John Hill:

"To General Sir Douglas Haig:

This meeting of representatives of organized trades, including both men and women engaged on munitions work and in other occupations, assure you, and, through you, the British army, that we will not relax our efforts to maintain and increase the supply of amunition, guns, and other war material.

For this purpose we have resolved to recommend the postponement of all holidays, general and local, which involve interruption of production, until such time as we are assured by you that military exigencies permit of the postponed holidays being taken."

For about six weeks the miners employed at Rosehall and Viewpark Colliers, Lanarkshire, Scotland have been on strike in consequence of the own-

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS IN SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

The Russell Sage Foundation of New York Issue Report on Labor Conditions in Illinois Capital.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 3.—That trade-unionism is a first line of defense against lang hours and low wages is the testimony of the survey report on industrial conditions in this city made by the Department of Surveys and Exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation. The evidence is offered in the calm language of a non-partisan statement of fact. Investigators from the New York headquarters of the Foundation collected the original data and half a score of experts collaborated in checking the results and preparing the recommendations.

The full report will say, among other things, that the investigation ervealed "shorter hours as the rule in union shops." Among employes in these shops, for example, 54 per cent had an eight-hour day, while in the unorganized establishments only 7 per cent worked eight hours or less. Only 13 per cent of the men in the union shops, morcover, worked ten hours as compared with 37 per cent in the non-union work places. These figures tend strongly to support the trade unionists' point that organized workers are able to gain, and do gain, for themselves advantages which workers acting individually do not enjoy; and they refute the claim of many employers who oppose organization of their workers that they voluntarily grant all of the benefits which employes might secure through the union.

Hours of Work.

"The long list of trades in the eight-hour column in ates something of what labor organizations have been able to accomplish in reducing hours; for in the not distant past all of these groups were working nine hours per day, or more. Moreover, even in the case of some trades shown in the ten-hour column, the union had reduced hours. The brewery drivers, for instance, whose ten-hour day still seems long, can look back to the time when they were required to complete their rounds regardless of time. Likewise ice drivers at the time of the survey were required to work from six to twelve hours per day, depending on the weather, whereas formerly their hours extended from daylight even into the night.

"The strongest labor union group in Springfield undoubtedly is the miners, who have 10 local unions with a total membership of about 2,500. The mines of the vicinity are run on a strictly closed shop basis and since 1898, when the unions won a great victory in this industry, the eight-hour day has prevailed.

"Most of the other trades represented in the table, however, were not thoroughly organized; and while the hours given are those of members of the union, other workers in the trade were working longer hours. This was true, for example, of many boilermakers, machinists, iron moulders, and carpenters.

Unionism and Wages

"Among skilled and semi-skilled workers in factories, the building trades, and on railroads, as we have seen, labor unions have had an effective influence in increasing wages. In fact wage conditions among all union workers were generally better than among non-union workers in Springfield, though probably this fact is not due entirely to union influence.

Union Achievements.

"Judging from the data supplied by over half of the various local unions, these organizations had been effective in increasing wages for their members. Most of the unions reported increases in the five years prior to the survey. * * * There were no important decreases.

"Similarly, as to hours, many of the locals reported reductions in hours per day or per week in the last five years. Sheet metal workers, for example, with an eight-hour day five years before, had recently reduced their hours per week from forty-eight to forty-four. Hours of journeymen stone cutters had been reduced in the same way; hours of union die and steel makers, from fifty-four to fifty; of ice men, from sixty-six to sixty; of electrical workers, from forty-eight to forty-four. In a number of cases where there had been no reduction in hours, the eight-hour day had been gained five years before. In the majority of cases the improvements both as to hours and wages had been brought about without strikes.

Hours of Women Workers.

"It was clear from our investigations that a much larger proportion of male than female workers in Springfield were enjoying an eight-hour day. The carpenters, painters, bricklayers and other building trade workers, the miners, the printers, the cigar makers and other male workers through the strength of their unions had been able to make this gain. But their wives and sisters and daughters, whose physical resistance to the strain of industrial oc-

IN GOD'S OWN WORDS.

As new born babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby.—I Peter 2:2. Study to show thyself approved unto God * * * rightly dividing the Word of truth (II im. 2:15), that ye might be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding.—Col. 1:9. 10. For this is the will of God, even your sanctification.—I Thess. 4:3.

Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness love. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.—II Peter 1:5-8. Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect.—Matt. 5:48.

GOD IS LOVE.

I John 4:16.

Love suffereth long, and is kind,
Envieth not,
Vaunteth not itself,
Is not puffed up,
Doth not behave itself unseemly,
Seeketh not her own,
Is not provoked,
Thinketh no evil,
Rejoiceth not in iniquity,
Rejoiceth in the Truth,
Beareth all things,
Believeth all things,
Endureth all things.—I Cor. 13:4-7.

He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. There is no fear in love * * * perfect love casteth out fear.—I Jno. 4:16, 18.

FOLLOW AFTER LOVE.

I Cor. 14:1.

Love your enemies.
Do good to them that hate you.
Bless them that curse you.
Pray for them which despitefully use you.
Be merciful, as your Father also is merciful.
Judge not, and ye shall not be judged.
Condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned.
Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven.
Give, and it shall be given unto you.—Luke 6: 27, 28, 36 38.

That ye may be the children of your Father which is in Heaven. For He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust.—Matt. 5:45.

Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice.—Eph. 4: 31.

Fret not thyself because of evil doesrs.—Psa. 37:1.

Speak evil of no man (Titus 3:2); and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your hearts (Zech. 7:10), for out of the heart proceed evil thoughts.—Matt. 15:19. Michael, the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation.—Jude 9.

Be ye angry and sin not? Let not the sun go down on your wrath. Neither give place to the devil. Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth; but that which is good to the use of edifying that it may minister grace unto the hearers.—Eph. 4:26.29.

And be ye kind to one another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another as God, for Christ's sake, has forgiven you.—Eph. 4:32.

Be not conformed to this world.—Rom. 12:2. My Kingdom is not of this world.—Jno. 18:36. Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth; do not your alms before men; swear not at all; agree with thine adversary quickly; resist not evil.—Matt. 6:19, 1:5; 34:25, 39.

Using this world as not abusing it (I Cor. 7: 31); not slothful in business; provide things honest in the sight of all men. If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Be not wise in your own conceits.—Rom. 12:11, 17, 18, 16. Prove all things, hold fast that which is good.I Thess. 5:21. Do good unto all men especially unto them who are of the household of faith.—Gal. 6:10. Lend, hoping for nothing again * * * and ye shall be the children of the highest, for He is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.—Luke 6:35.

Submit yourself to every ordinance of man, for the Lord's sake. Servants, be subject to your masters * * * not only to the good and gentle, but also to the forward.—I Peter 2: 13, 15, 18.

Having food and raiment * * * therewith be content; for we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.—I Tim, 6:8, 7.

Exercise thyself rather unto godliness, for bodily exercise profiteth for a little time, but godliness is profitable unto all things.—I Tim. 4:8, 7.

Whether therefore ye eat or dring, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.—I Cor. 10:31. Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. They * * * who run in a race * * * do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we * * * an incorruptible.—I Cor. 9: 24, 25.

Lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us.—Heb. 12:1.

Let all things be done decently and in order.—I Cor. 14:40. For God hath given us the spirit of power, and love, and a sound mind.—II Tim. 1:7.

The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, goodness, gentleness, faith, meekness, self-control.—Gal. 5: 22, 23. Be ye filled with the Spirit.—Eph. 5:18, 20.,

But we have this treasure in earthen vessels.—11 Cor. 4:7. For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil, which I would not, that I do. I delight in the law of God after the inward man, but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind. Then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. For I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing * * * for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good, I find not.—Rom. 7:19, 22, 23, 17, 18. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.—I Sam. 16:7.

If we would judge ourselves we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord.—I Cor. 11:31, 32. For whom the Lord loveth He chaseneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth. We have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us * * * after their own pleasure; but He for our profit, that we might be partakers of His holiness. No chastening for the present seemeth joyous * * * nevertheless,afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.—Heb. 12:6-11.

He shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire.—Matt. 3:11. Think it not strange, * * * the firey trial which is to try you, * * * but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings (I Peter 4:12,13); and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ Col. 1:24); knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience (Jas. 1:3), and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given us.—Rom. 5:4, 5.

Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man. But every man is tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed.—Jas. 1:13, 14. There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man. God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above what ye are able, but will, with the temptation, also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it.—I Cor. 10: 13.

Walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh.—Gal. 5:16. Whatsoever things are true, * * * honest, * * * just, * * * pure, * * * lovely, * * * of good report, * * * think on these things (Phil. 4:8); bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ.—II Cor. 10:5.

Let every man prove his own work.—Gal. 6:4. Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith.—II Cor. 13:5. If we love one another God dwelleth in us and His love is perfected in us. Hereby know we that we dwell in Him and He in us.—I Jno. 4:12, 13. If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His.—Rom. 8:9.

Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation.—Matt. 26:41. And when ye pray, use not vain repetitions * * * for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him.—Matt. 6:7, 8. When ye pray believe that ye receive, and ye shall have.—Mark 11:24. According to your faith be it unto you.—Matt. 9:29.

Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss * * * that ye may consume it on your lusts.—Jas. 5:3. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you.—Jno. 15:7. Pray with the Spirit (I Cor. 14:15); in faith, nothing wavering.—Jas. 1:6. Pray for one another.—Jas. 5:16.

And if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous. And He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.—I Jno. 2:1, 2. If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins.—I Jno. 1:9.

THERE IS A SIN UNTO DEATH

I Jno. 5:16.

For if we sin wilfully we have received the knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more sacrfice for sins.—Heb. 10:26. It is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, and have tasted of the good Word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them unto repentance.—Heb. 6:4-6.

Having done all—stand!—Eph. 6:13.

He that endureth unto the end shall be saved.—Matt. 24:13.

And I will raise him up at the last day.—Jno. 6:44.

Ye which have followed me, * * * in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones.—Matt. 19:28.

I go, to prepare a place for you * * * I will come again and receive you unto Myself, that where I am, there ye may be also.—Jno. 14:2, 3.

Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the First Resurrection. On such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall be Priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years.—Rev. 20:6.

WHEN SHALL THESE THINGS BE?

Matt. 24:3.

Of that day and hour knoweth no man.—Matt. 24:36. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you (Acts 1:8); the Spirit of Truth * * * will guide you into all truth * * * and * * * will show you things to come.—Jno. 16:13.

The words are closed and sealed till the Time of the End. Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried. At that time shall Michael stand up. Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased * * * none of the wicked shall understand; but the Wise shall understand.—Dn. 12:9, 19, 1, 4.

Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the Times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.—Luke 21:24. (God * * * did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name.) * * * After this, I will return, and will rebuild the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, * * * that the residue of men might seek after the Lord.—Acts 15: 14, 16, 17.

This Gospel of the Kingdom (of Heaven.—Matt. 4:17) shall be preached in all the world.

As a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.—Matt. 24: 14.

Ye, brethren (partakers of the Heavenly calling.—Heb. 3:1) are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief.—I Thess. 5:1-4.

And the angel * * * lifted up his hand to Heaven and sware by Him that liveth forever * * * that there should be time no longer, but in the days of the Voice of the Seventh Angel, when he shall begin to finished.—Rev. 10:7.

An highway shall be there, the way of holiness, the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein.—Isa. 35:8.

THY KINGDOM COME

Matt. 6:10.

In the last days perilous times shall come * * * men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, * * * lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof.—II Tim. 3:1-5.

Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.—Dan. 12:4. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches; they shall run like the lightning.—Nahum 2:3, 4.

Upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth.—Luke 21:25, 26. For the indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, and His fury upon all their armies. * * * He hath delivered them to the slaughter.—Isa. 34:2. Go to now, ye rich men * * * your riches are corrupted; * * * your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness agains you and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers * * which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them * * * are entered into the ears of the Lord. Jas. 5:1-4.

For thus said the Lord of hosts: I will shake the Heavens and the earth * * * I will shake all nations (Hag. 2:6) that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.—Heb. 12:27.

Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; Prepare war! wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near, let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say; I am strong. Let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehosophat; for there will I sit to judge all the heathen. * * * Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe * * * for the Day of the Lord is near.—Joel 3:9, 14.

Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His Saints, to execute judgments upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly * * * of all their ungodly deeds.—Jude 14, 15. For my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them Mine indignation, even My fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy.—Zeph. 3:8.

The Day cometh that shall burn as an oven. But, unto you that fear My name shall the Son of righteousness arise with healing in His wings; and ye shall go forth and grow up as calves in the stall.—Mal. 4:1, 2. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.—Psa. 30:5.

At evening time it shall be light.—Zech. 14:7. In the days of these kings shall the God of Heaven set up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed. * * * It shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.—Dan. 2:44.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS SHALL COME.

Hag. 2:7.

For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with ont consent.—Zept. 3:9.

Let us be glad, and rejoice * * * for the marriage of the Lamb is come and His wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.—Rev. 19:7, 8.

I will show thee the Bride, the Lamb's Wife.

And He * * * showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of Heaven from God; having the glory of God * * * prepared as a Bride adorned for her Husband.—Rev. 21:9, 11:1. The Church, which is His body (Eph. 1: 23), espoused to one Husband, as a chaste Virgin to Christ.—II Cor. 11: 2. A woman clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet, and upon her Head (Christ is the Head of the Church.—Eph. 5:23) a crown of twelve stars.—Rev. 12:1.

And, lo, a Lamb stood on Mount Sion, and with Him an hundred and forty and four thousand, having His Father's name written in their foreheads. And they sang as it were a new song * * * and no man could learn that song but the 144,000 which were redeemed from the earth.

COMING BY AND BY.

A better day is coming, a morning promised long,
When Truth and righteousness, with holy might shall overthrow the wrong.
When Christ the Lord will listen to every plaintive sigh.
And stretch His hand o'er sea and land with Justice by and by.

The boast of haughty tyrants no more shall fill the air,
But age and youth shall love the truth, and speed it everywhere.
No more from want and sorrow shall come the hopeless cry,
But war shall cease and perfect peace will flourish by and by.

The tidal wave is coming, the fear of Jubilee,
With shout and song it sweeps along like billows of the sea.
The Jubilee of nations shall ring thru the sky,
The dawn of grace draws on apace—'tis coming by and by.

O! for that glorious dawning we watch and wait and pray
Till o'er the height the morning light shall drive the gloom away;
And when the heavenly glory shall flood the earth and sky,
We'll bless the Lord for all his works and praise Him by and by."

A WOMAN'S PRAYER.

The following beautiful poem has been sent us by a friend in Chicago:

O Lord, who knowest every need of mine,
Help me to bear each cross and not to pine;
Grant me fresh courage every day,
Help me to do my work alway
Without Complaint!
O Lord, Thou knowest well how dark the way,
Guide Thou my footstpes lest they stray;
Give me fresh faith for every hour,
Lest I should ever doubt Thy power.
And make complaint!
Give me a heart, O Lord, strong to endure,
Help me to keep it simple, pure;
Make me unselfish, helpful, true
In every act, whate'er I do,
And keep content!

Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

IS DEATH EXTINCTION?

The spark of animal energy which God supplied to Adam and which he in turn dispensed to his offspring, and which was forfeited for him and his posterity by his act of disobedience, passes at death from the individual, as absolutely as it does from the beast. But the word "life" as used in a large number of instances does not stand for the mere spark of animal energy, but is a synonym for soul or being.

In God's purpose and arrangement this being has not in death become extinct, because He has provided for it a future. There is, however, no sentient being in the sense of consciousness, or knowledge, or appreciation of pain or joy, or of any other experience, but the Divine Creator who first gave being has declared in the case of Adam and his children it is his purpose to provide a Redeemer through whom all may be restored as completely as before they came under the death sentence. The world, which does not recognize God or His power, and which has no knowledge of the promise of resurrection through the merit of Christ's redemption work, might properly enough speak of one in death as being as extinct as a dead animal; and this is the standpoint of the agnostic; but by those instructed of God respecting His purpose in Christ, and the ressurrection of the dead, eventually, and the opportunity of eternal life to every one, this matter is to be viewed from the same standpoint that our Lord viewed it when He said: "Lo God all live"—that is, God purposes their awakening, and speaks of the present condition of Adam's death as merely a suspension of life, and not as extinction.

Some Types of the Ressurrection.

Some types very forcefully illustrate our Lord's ressurrection. The one mentioned by himself being amongst the most important,—for two reasons: First, because He mentioned it Himself and thus gave it importance, and second because it alone of all other types gives the exact length of time of his entombment.

Our Lord's words were, "As Jonah was three days and nights in the belly of the fish, so shall the son of man be three days and nights in the heart of the earth" indicating that he would be raised on the third day from the grave as Jonah was brought forth from the fish, styled "the belly of hell" the grave, the death condition.

Another was Abraham receiving Isaias from the dead in a figuri. The wave sheaf offering was a prominent type of our Lord's ressurrection, occurring as it did on the morrow after the Sabbath, the fiftieth day before Pentecost.

Other types illustrate the world's ressurrection. The crossing of Jordan into Canaan. The Jubilee, the restoration of every man to his former estate. The miracles of our Lord in awakening some of the sleeping ones, Lazarus, Jaria's daughter, and the son of the widow of Nain.

Moses blessing the people after the second sprinkling of the blood, illustrates the removal of the curse and the uplifting of the people, from sorrow, sighing and crying, to life and happiness.

Appreciations

WOODRUFF, S. C., Aug. 4.

Dear Editor and through your kindness greetings to your happy readers of whom I appreciatively subscribe myself one:—

I am a little late in renewing but you will forgive me, won't you? Well, whether you do or not, I'm sending you a new subscription also.

For two years the Husbandman has been pruning this branch severely for which I'm thankful, now the sunshine of His favor is beginning to shine again. Next Sunday I will have the pleasure of administering water baptism to three or more, one of them has many times helped me over rough places, called to mind some of the exceeding great and precious promises at a time when I needed a stimulant, and oh, how good to dwell together in heavenly places as we have so often done.

We have now renewed our covenant of sacrifice and want to be among those who will not, no never, deny the faith but will do our best to provide for the household both spiritual and temporal food.

Continue, dear Editor, to stand for truth and against error and graft and you will have a friend that sticketh closer than a brother though you may have some enemies, and if He be for us who can be against us?

Very sincerely,
T. W. BROCKMAN.

JEFFERSON, O., Aug. 6.

Doubtless all good honest people are glad to see the grand work accomplished by the Tribune in bringing to light, and routing out these furniture fakirs, and all other business fakirs.

While the I. B. S. A. readers say nothing in particular along these lines, it is not that they fail to see and appreciate these reforms. They see the complete elimination of all earth's evil on a larger scale. The tree that bears them is hydra-headed, and they see by faith that the axe is laid at the roots, that all forms of evil amongst its branches will fall as their support gives away. Dan. 4; 4th ch. Symbolically here is given a view of Gentile Times, a period of time in which man is given permission to rule the earth. The shortcomings and corruptions growing out of his misrule are fast approaching an end. Many good philanthropic people attempt reforms in various ways. Some try to eliminate the drink evil, the evil of white slavery, graft, oppression, war, etc.—but tho doing a noble and good work for the purity of life, we see the entire tree must go, in the overthrow of which vice and evil will be eliminated forever and ever. Scripture Studies evl. II. page 93, 94. Dan. 4:15, 26. We see the approaching fulfillment, and "The Time is at hand."

Respectfully yours,
R. L. JONES.

"SPEAKING THE TRUTH IN LOVE"

We learn that amongst Bible Students there is a division of sentiment in respect to some of the newspapers publishing Pastor Russell's sermons. Surely each person is at liberty to patronize whichever paper he finds most convenient in price, etc., and, in his judgment, most likely to be helpful in scattering the sermons amongst the people who are not acquainted with the Truth! Each should consider the Lord's will in the matter, and each has a perfect right to express his judgment to others. We counsel that all papers publishing the sermons be considered as friendly, and advise that the Brethren in expressing their views use logic and not bitterness, and that the Lord's will and not personal prejudice shall prevail—"Speaking the Truth in Love."

The Society's thought is that the Truth is best served by the encouragement of newspapers which reach large numbers of outside readers.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

—it really becomes a problem to keep them quiet. They give vent to their thoughts in their natural way, which is not always in line with the accepted rules of grammar. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings will He perfect His praise." Clergymen who come into contact with these Associated Bible Students soon learn to fear and avoid them—they know that they are equipped with a fund of knowledge concerning the Bible that renders them capable of giving a good account of themselves. They advise "their" flocks to avoid them also, explaining that "they have such nice and winning ways that once you get under hypnotic influence it will be hard to extricate yourself from them."

These small classes develop the educated and gifted for the platform, and when seasoned with the Spirit and character-likeness of Christ which constitutes their ordination, they are sent out into the field. Should they lose their most important qualification—the spirit of Christ, their real ordination—they are subject to "recall" by losing out in the annual elections of the congregations, who keep vigilant watch upon their representatives for whom they are responsible. The manifest contrast between the I. B. S. A. public speakers and those of the clergy were also noted in the followers of Luther and the Catholic clergy during the Reformation period in Germany. Says one authority:

"Opposed to the old defenders of the hierarchy, who had neglected the acquirement of the languages and the cultivation of literation, were generous minded youths, most of them devoted to study and the investigation of the Scriptures, and acquainted with the literary treasures of antiquity. Gifted with quickness of apprehension, elevation of soul, and interpidy of heart, these youths soon attained such proficiency that none could compete with them. So that on public occasions, on which these youthful defenders of the Reformation encountered the Romish doctors, their assaults were carried on with ease and confidence that embarrassed the dullness of their adversaries, and exposed them before all to deserve contempt."

We admire the spirit of close scrutiny and investigation of the Tribune. The public desire that deceptions and misrepresentations be uncovered, not only in a commercial and political sense, but also from a religious standpoint. On eof the foremost along that line is that which comes from the pen of the scholarly and courageous Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, who, though facing the objections of many of the most powerful opponents, expounds the Bible in harmony with itself and good common sense reasoning. Success to the Tribune. Have renewed subscription for another year through the W. T. B. and Tract Society.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

PRESENT BURNING OF FALSE FAITH STRUCTURES

NOW—THE GREAT DAY OF THE LORD.

This Day of The Lord A Period in the Close of This Age—Burning Now Under Way—Faith Structure of Many Destroyed—Text Deals Only With Christians—Only These Have Had a Structure Built on Christ—Structures of Gold, Silver and Precious Stones Will Stand—Those of Wood, Hay and Stubble are Now Being Consumed—Some Saved so as by Fire—The Faithful Being Manifested.

NEW YORK CITY, August 6.—Pastor Russell was at the New York City Temple today, and delivered an address of great power. His text was, "Every man's work shall be made manifest; for the Day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." (1 Corinthians 3:13.) He said in part:

We have now come to the time to which the Apostle refers as "the Day." Both Old and New Testament refer frequently to this period as "that Day." The reference is not to a twenty-four hour day, but to a period of time in the end of this Gospel Age, in which things will be different from what they had been before. We are greatly pleased to be living in this time; for in it occur not only special trials—"the fire of that Day"—but also special blessings and enlightenment.

It has always been true that trials and testings are proportionate to knowledge and privilege. What a wonderful blessing is ours to be able to understand God's Word as we may today! In this respect especially is our day superior to all previous time. We possess the Bible in a most convenient form with marginal references, concordances, good type, etc. We have the ability to read; we have superior lights, comfortable houses, and shorter hours of labor, thus having more time for study than people have previously had. In fact, we have every advantage; and this means greater opportunities, greater blessings, greater responsibilities and greater trials.

As shown by our short context, the Apostle clearly points out that the fire of "the Day of the Lord" will burn up the faith structure of some. Our Lord Jesus, speaking of this same Day, said, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find the faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8.) He intimated that very few then would have the faith of God's Word, the true faith. The faith structure of many is likened in our text to "wood, hay and stubble"—combustible materials. He indicates that such Christians have the proper Foundation—Christ—but a poor superstructure, because they did not build with proper material. Wood, hay and stubble represent a flimsy, inferior, unsuitable material, while gold, silver and precious stones represent substantial, superior, indestructible material. Those who have built with the wrong kind of material will suffer the loss of their entire faith-structure; but those who have used the right kind will pass safely through the fire. The faith structure will endure.

WHAT IS THE PROPER MATERIAL?

By contrasting these two kinds of building material, we believe that we are quite right in understanding that the gold, silver and precious stones represent the promises of God's Word, the teachings of Christ and the Apostles. This proper material must be built upon the only true Foundation—Christ Jesus, our Ransom-sacrifice. (Acts 4:12; 1 Cor. 3:11.) Evolution is no foundation. The creeds of the past are no foundation. The creeds were merely poor superstructures built upon the true Foundation. Christ is the one Foundation. Upon this substantial Foundation were built the twelve Apostles, who are Scripturally represented as precious stones. In these twelve foundation stones of the Church are the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb—St. Paul taking the place of Judas.—Rev. 21:14, 19, 20.

Upon this Foundation which God has furnished His Church, we are to build ourselves up the most holy faith. Using the teachings and promises of the Bible for the erection of our faith-structure, we should make sure that we add to these nothing which men say. We are not to inquire what Calvin or Wesley or Knox says, and build their opinions into our structure, except as we prove every Word by the Holy Scriptures. Rather, we are to ask, "What says the Word of God?" and to build with that alone; for it is all-sufficient. (2 Tim. 3:16, 17.) We may get good suggestions from these various teachers; but we must build with the Word of God alone, if we would stand the test of "the fire of the Day of the Lord."

"THE WOOD, HAY AND STUBBLE."

Having considered the true Foundation, we next inquire, What is meant by the wood, hay and stubble with which many build upon it? These represent the creeds of the past and of the present, not founded upon the Bible, not established by the Word of God. These are "the traditions of men," to which our Lord referred at His First Advent, when He said to the Jewish teachers, "Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition." (Matthew 15:1-9.) There are many of that kind today, who always wish to know what the Church fathers or commentaries and theological works have to say about a subject. All this is the wood, hay and stubble which will be consumed in the fire of our day.

We believe that we have come down to the testing time, the Day of reckoning. For the past forty years the fire has been under way. Those Christians who have built with the gold, silver and precious stones of the Word of God will not be injured by this fire; but those Christians who have not built wisely or carefully will suffer loss, and will have a great deal of trouble as a result of that loss. Already this burning has consumed much wood, hay and stubble theology.

For instance, in nearly every public audience which we address, perhaps three-fourths of them, as Christians, have lost their faith-structure. If asked what they believe, many of them will reply, "I do not know what I believe, I only know that I believe in Jesus; but I do not feel very sure as to what to believe about Him." Such have no faith-structure; but if they are still on the Foundation, Christ Jesus, they may thank God. Probably they are the better off for the loss of any part of their faith that was erroneous. Some of us have had what wood, hay and stubble we possessed burned up; and we are all the better off for the loss. We did not know how poor we were until our false theology was consumed. Something has occurred that has burned out this false doctrine. It is the fire of this Day.

MAN'S SIX GREAT WORK DAYS.

The Lord has divided the world's history under its sin and death experiences into six great Days of a thousand years each. As the Apostle declared, "A Day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one Day." (2 Peter 3:8.) God used the six days of our ordinary week to symbolize man's great Work-Week of six thousand years—from the fall of man until the time for the beginning of his recovery as a race—until the great Seventh Day should begin.

God has given fallen man these six thousand years during which to show what he can do toward his own uplift, to prove how the race can manage themselves. Mankind have tried to overcome the weaknesses and infirmities of the race—mental, moral and physical. They have sought to rid themselves of sickness, pain and death, have sought to find some exilir of life which would heal their diseases and restore their youth and health. The ablest physicians have been unable to discover the secret of perfect life. Their only hope is to keep abreast with the new diseases that are coming up; but they cannot prevent sickness and death. Man's best efforts have been in vain. Is man, then, ready to look to the Lord for help?

Gradually the whole world is being convinced that unless God shall bless mankind and give back life to the race, unless He shall come to the rescue of humanity, they are both helpless and hopeless.

With respect to the morals of the world, the case is a bad or worse than their physical condition. As we read of the morality of some of the heathen kings of the remote past, we are astonished; for it seems far beyond that of today. It puts to shame much that may be found amongst kings and princes of our day, as well as amongst the common people. Has morality increased, then, in modern times? We think not.

We see a striking example of present-day immorality amongst the so-called Christian nations now at war, where the theory of the "Survival of the Fittest" no longer holds. On the contrary, it seems now like the destruction of the fittest. Despite their assertions, their claim that they are fighting for God, for civilization and for humanity, nothing is clearer to the on-lookers that the rival combatants are waging a war for commercialism. One holds the commerce of the world by sea power. The other wishes to get a share of that commerce. And so the struggle continues,—a selfish strife for place and preferment above their neighbors, a spirit of rivalry. For a century past, these warring nations have been engaged in land-grabbing and in holding these possessions, at times, against the best interests of the peoples from whom they were taken.

ALL THIS FORETOLD IN THE BIBLE.

How these nations have haggled about this war! It took Italy three months to decide which side to join—which side would pay the higher price for her services. Yet she claims to be 100% Christian. One might as well hire a man to sandbag a personal enemy as to pay a nation to take part in a war. The principal would be identical. The same condition obtained with Japan. That little kingdom suggested that if the price were paid, she would send five hundred thousand soldiers to become murderers. "If you will give us Cochin China [a section of land stolen from China by the French], we will go into the wholesale killing business for you," was the sentiment. What gross immorality!

All this is not hurting real Christianity, however. It is only manifesting the false claims of those nations which have called themselves Christians. We are now in the Day of the Lord, when every hidden thing is being brought to light, as He forewarned us. There are saints in all these countries; but they are not making these false claims and professions, nor are they responsible for this war. In any country, the true saints are very greatly in the minority. The utter falsity of the claim that for eleven hundred years the world has been governed by Christian nations—Christendom, Christ's Kingdom—is being made clear. The Word of the Lord is now shining forth as never before. The world is taking knowledge that the present condition of things is radically wrong.

The fire of this Day is spreading, and the light goes with it. The whole world is becoming involved, just as the Bible has predicted for this Day. As the fire of trouble spreads, the light of Truth spreads also. God represents Himself as "a consuming fire." (Hebrews 12:29.) We also read that "God is Light, and in Him is no darkness at all." (1 John 1:5.) The figures of fire and light are both applicable to Him. The sun is a ball of fire, and at the same time a source of light. God is a consuming fire to every form of iniquity and injustice; and all systems founded upon selfishness and inequity must go down during this great Day of the Lord, when He has risen to shake terribly the earth.—Isaiah 2:12-19.

In the present time of trouble and distress of nations, however, there is light for the "children of light," while the consuming fire is doing its work of destroying everything that is wrong. We have come down to "that Day," wherein "the fire shall try every man's wrok of what sort it is." The fire has already started.

SPIRITUAL NEED OF OUR DAY.

The fire which is consuming the false faith-structure of many in our day is the light of knowledge. This fire is burning up false faith and doctrine, and all that is built thereon. Much that is generally taught and accepted as Truth today is utterly subversive of all true faith and doctrine. The fire of God in this Day of Christ is destined to destroy all false teaching and the works resulting therefrom.

The great institutions of learning of Europe and America today are hot-beds of infidelity. Most of these institutions were founded by the churches as mediums for the Christian education of our youth, and were called the custodians of Christianity. Today there is hardly one Christian college. The young people who are sent to these schools soon have whatever faith they possessed destroyed. They hear the Bible story laughed at and ridiculed. Faith in the fundamental doctrines of the Scriptures is met with sneers. Those whose faith in God and in His Word has been destroyed by the influence of the religious institutions of our day need our help. We should do all in our power to build them up.

There has never been a time when the people seem so anxious to hear as now. They are like bewildered sheep, longing to hear the voice of the true Shepherd. They refuse longer to believe the eternal torture doctrines of the past; and they find no soul-satisfaction in the Christless, loveless teachings held out to them today as spiritual food. Let us give them the Truth of God's Word, which will satisfy their hearts as nothing else can do.

When we tell them about the fall in Adam, the Redemption in Christ, the selection of the Church in this Age, and the blessing of the whole world in the coming Age, now so near at hand, when through Christ's Kingdom all the willing and obedient shall be helped up out of death, sin and sorrow into life, joy and peace, there is something soul-satisfying in this Message. To a hungry, sorrowing heart the doctrine of Evolution is poor comfort indeed!

WHO SHALL ABIDE IN THESE BURNINGS?

This great burning of our day will not stop with the church. The fire of this great Day will continue its work until all of the tares are consumed—not as individuals, but as imitation Christians. Heretofore there has been no separation of wheat and tares in the nominal church systems. In His parable of the Wheat and the Tares (Matthew 13:24-30, 36-43), our Lord directed that both were to be permitted to grow together until the Harvest, and that then the separation would come. This time of separation is here. For nearly forty years the work has been under way, and is nearing its completion, we believe. The whole field must be cleaned up for the new crop of the incoming Age.

Who shall be able to abide in these burnings? (Isaiah 33:10-17.) Only those who have built with the gold, silver and precious stones of the Truth of God's Word. Everything but the Truth and the structures built thereupon will be consumed. The social "earth," as well as the ecclesiastical "heavens," with all its various elements—political, industrial, financial, etc.—will be burned up. (2 Peter 3:10, 14.) The fire will cease only when there is nothing left to burn. It will be a lasting fire—one that will continue until everything of the present order of things shall have been consumed. It will burn even down into the Millenial Age; "for our God is a consuming fire," and is irreconcilably opposed to all wrong, injustice, impurity and unrighteousness. There will be a clean world when His work is completed.

For many centuries men have tried to patch up this old order of things, and the Lord has permitted them to do their best. Now is His time to work. He will not patch up the old order. If the world were in that condition in which a little patching would do, it would have been done. If Babylon could have been healed, the healing would have been done. But the case is too desperate for anything less than just what God now purposes. (Matthew 9:16, 17; Jeremiah 51:8, 9.) The world has failed to hear the Message which God has sent through Christ and the Church; and therefore the curse is coming—The Time of Trouble. But after that curse of trouble will come "the desire of all nations"—The Messianic Kingdom of peace and righteousness.

THE "HELP-OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The following is the standing of the fund to date:

A MAN OF ACTION.

These two discoveries young Russell made, (1) the theory of the immortal soul which distorted the teachings of the Bible, and (2) the Plan of the Ages, which threw a flood of light upon the Time Prophecies, so completely revolutionized and set things in order that where confusion was, harmony is. The order and system of the Truth of the Reformation produced in the light of these discoveries so absorbed Russell that he lost no time in endeavoring to publish the fact to the world. His first endeavor of any consequence was to publish and distribute free of charge a pamphlet of 166 pages "Food for Thinking Christians," at all the church doors in the leading cities of the United States, Great Britain and Canada, by the messenger boys of the District Messenger Service and through the mails to smaller towns, at a cost of $42,000. This was in 1881. He has since been on the platform and has traveled and preached in all the principal cities of every nation of importance in the world, leaving a trail of friends and enemies behind him—who thoroughly trust and love or fear and hate him. His writings have traversed the globe and he has succeeded in getting his weekly sermons in upwards of 2,000 of the leading newspapers in North America and Europe, and now bears the distinction of being at the head of the only systematic and effectual movement in the entire field that is saving God's people from Modern Rationalism running amuck, the "Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society," a business (not church) organization. He is now the recognized pastor of the Brooklyn and London Tabernacles, on the same basis as that of any pastor of the Evangelical churches which have recognized the ordination of the pastors of their respective denominations since the formation of the Evangelical Alliance. He has proven by the Bible that the principal articles of agreement that formed the theological basis of the Evangelical Alliance (the most progressive churches) are errors—he has demonstrated the astounding fact that they have agreed on Error and divided on Truth!

Such are our credentials of Pastor Russell who is still in the arena facing the east with his star still in the ascendant. Multitudes still flock to hear him, Jews, Heathens and Gentiles of every shade of belief and unbelief. Many read his sermons and books in private through fear of criticism and ostracism, and those who make a bold stand for the Truths he advocates are well cared for without rounding them into a new sect to fetter their minds again.

Pastors in the Making.

The only feature of his propaganda that bears any resemblance to Sectarianism is the Associated Bible Students which consists of both large and small Bible classes called "Ecclesias" scattered throughout the civilized world, very much like those which Wesley instituted after the Church doors of England were closed against him and formed the circuit over which he traveled yearly on his faithful horse. These Bible classes use in connection with their Study the publications of the Society, but not to the exclusion of other works that any member may choose to present on the subject of study. Hence, it is worked on the "Seminary Extension" plan.

The form of government of these classes is outlined in the sixth of the series of "Studies in the Scriptures," and is a democratic affair with everything left into the hands of the congregation instead of its representatives—the Elders and Deacons. The only restrictions are, what the majority agree to in preserving order, and that all discussions must be in compliance with the fundamental principles of the gospel which are so comprehensive as to include all believers in the Atoning Blood of Christ irrespective of the denomination to which they may belong. This is the only test of fellowship. These Bible Students, like the Bereans of old who searched the Scriptures daily to see if these things be true, subjected these "Bible Keys" (Millennial Dawn) to the most rigid scrutiny and criticism that sanctified reason can command and these text books lead to the controverted doctrines of all denominations which the International Sunday School lessons cautiously avoid. As a result these students invariably become "live wires" and any who attempt to rout them on questions of Scriptures must have considerable knowledge of the Bible.

Tyndale, in a debate with a learned Catholic doctor, said, "I defy the Pope and all his laws; and if God spares my life, ere many years I will cause a boy who driveth a plow to know more of the Scriptures than you do." Tyndale's statement came true. He translated and printed the Bible for the English people and taught them. He was burned at the stake for his endeavors. Others have carried on the work of teaching the people much to the consternation of the dogmatic clerics who would keep the people in ignorance. They still continue to "roast" those that teach the people but modify the nature of "roasting" to conform to the laws of the land. Wholesale denunciation are resorted to now. Since education has become general the work of teaching the people has been felicitated considerably. Russell's literature for this reason does more towards educating the people than the former methods of preaching.

But more than this, the democratic church government outlined in Russell's literature, put into effect by the Associated Bible Students, does more than educate the student—it produces preachers. The liberty of expression afforded at these religious gatherings develop the talent of the naturally gifted students and they develop into proficient public expounders of the Bible that surpasses the ordinary product of the Theological Seminaries. In this we have exemplified the statement of St. Paul that "God hath chosen the weak and foolish things of the world to confound the things that are mighty."

The students of the Seminaries center on the languages and the art of expression. To this end they use such works as the writings of Virgil, Dante and Milton. In being taught the art of expression, the students absorb the ideas of the Masters in this art and the vast learning of these men hypnotizes them into conformity—it destroys initiative. They become opinionated without conviction. Hence they "are ever learning and never coming to a knowledge of the truth." On the other hand the conviction and enthusiasm produced in centering on the teachings of the Bible in a systematic and orderly way, inspires them to do and become recognition and scale questions with another group of companies farther up the Allegheny from Pittsburgh. The principal companies in this group are the McFetridge Coal and Coke Company, the Cornell Coal and Coke Company, and Hite's Coal and Coke Company, all of Creighton. These and a few others have already agreed to meet with the union representatives, and conferences will open next week.

The third step planned by the mine workers' organization is the conquest of the Kiskiminetas valley. Five thousand men are on strike now in that district. If the union is able to obtain recognition and establishment of a scale in the Kiskiminetas field, it will complete the organization of the coal industry in the Allegheny valley, a region that has long been a thorn in the side of organized coal labor. Hope for early success was expressed by union officials last night. The international organization is directing a great deal of attention to the fight along the Allegheny, indicating the importance with which it is esteemed in labor circles.

The union officers signing the new scale are President Murray, Vice President Robert R. Gibbons, Secretary Robert Wood, William Hargest, district representative; James Oates, member of the board from sub-district No. 7, and Bernard Harrigan and Warren Pippen, international representatives. The three delegates from each of the affected locals also affixed their signatures.

CANAL ZONE CONDITIONS WILL REMAIN THE SAME.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Wilson has signed an order continuing working conditions on the Panama canal zone.

Two years ago, when this work passed to the permanent maintenance period, the president, according to law, issued an order putting into effect the charging for rent, fuel and light to employes occupying government houses. The metal trades department of the A. F. of L. succeeded in having the enforcement of this order postponed until June 30, 1916. Efforts were made to have congress enact legislation that would continue conditions maintained during the construction period, but the house rejected this plan, which was approved by the senate. The unionists then appealed to the president direct, who referred the matter to Secretary of War Garrison and Secretary of Labor Wilson for investigation. The attorney general ruled that an executive order was within the law and last week President Wilson accepted the recommendation of his cabinet officials, who agreed with the trade unionists.

The workers on the canal zone can see no difference as far as their labor is concerned between the construction period and the maintenance period, and they protested against what virtually amounted to wage reductions, while officers in charge of the work have received what is equivalent to a pension.

ROCKEFELLER "UNION" DISCARDED BY MINERS.

TRINDAD, Cal., Aug. 7.—Miners at Sopris and Piedmont, mining camps near this city, have organized a trade union, with 163 members and applied to the United Mine Workers' union for a charter.

It is declared that there was not a distract or a national officer of the United Mine Workers' union present and the men acted on their own initiative. One speaker stated that miners all over the United States have received wage increases during the past four monts because they are organized, and that the miners of Colorado had received nothing because they are not organized.

It was also stated that officers of the United Mine Workers' union have not visited them at any time. "We organized ourselves," said one miner. "Of ccurse we would like to have the national officials visit us after we get our new local started."

Because these workers are employed by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, their action is most significant. It is an answer to the claims of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his press agents that the Rockefeller theory of conducting a "union" is acceptable to coal diggers, who now disregard the advice of managers, superintendents and petty bosses, because they note the gains made by miners who rely on trade union methods.

These miners believe the Colorado Fuel and Iron company "will not cause any trouble." The action of the state supreme court, in ousting Jeff Farr, sheriff of Huerfano county, gunman and operators' thug, from office because of election irregularities, will be a factor in convincing the coal companies that their reign of terror is over and that it is impossible to deny workers the right to organize in its decision the court said that the public election machinery had been turned over to the absolute domination and imperial control of the coal companies and that it was used by them "as absolute and privately as were their mines, to and for their own private purposes."

The court sustained the charge that Farr had not only denied citizens who opposed the coal companies the right to vote, but that he had packed juries with representatives of the operators.

On this decision Editor O'Neill, of the Trinidad Free Press writes:

"The journey from darkness to light has been long and weary, but the decision of the supreme court marks the beginning of the end, for the dethronement of the political highwaymen of Huerfano county purples the herizon with the dawn of that coming day when law shall be respected and when the sovereign power of the people shall no longer be menaced by corporate might, backed by the pistol of the thug and the rifles of a state militia, farmed out to industrial monarchs, to maintain and perpetuate the reign of soulless greed."

TELEGRAPHERS GET INCREASE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—An arbitration board has awarded wage increases to the telegraphers and towermen of New York Central and Nickel plate railroads. The average increase is 9 per cent. West of Buffalo the men will get 8 per cent, and those east 10 per cent. The demand was for 15 and 13½ per cent respectively.

Men employed for two years will get seven days' annual vacation and those who have worked three years and longer will get 10 days. The demand was for vacations of 14 days. Then men will receive double pay for Sunday work and need not work overtime unless the interests of the lines demand it.

These employes are members of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, affiliated to the A. F. of L. To have their wage demands considered, they were forced to submit a strike vote to their members, which carried by a large majority. Then the companies agreed to arbitrate.

THE GRACE OF GIVING

2 Corinthians 9.—August 13.

The Secret of Israel's Blindness to the Gospel—The Better Classes of Gentiles Attracted by the Truth—Systematic Giving Better Than Spasmodic Charity—Generosity Inculcates Breadth of Mind and of Heart.

"In all things I gave you an example, that so laboring ye ought to help the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that He Himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35. R. V.

CHRISTIAN benevolence—almsgiving—is the lesson inculcated in today's Study. A severe famine had prevailed in the vicinity of Jerusalem, and apparently the saints at Jerusalem were poorer than were those at Corinth. Therefore it was appropriate for St. Paul to suggest to the latter the propriety of sending a gift to the former. Living in a time when conveniences for transferring money were very inferior, the various congregations could send their gifts only by the Apostle when he should go to Jerusalem.

The question naturally arises, Why should the Gospel attract the well-to-do classes in Asia Minor and Greece, and repel that same class in Judea? The answer would seem to be that amongst the Jews a religious pride had developed, especially amongst the wealthy and learned. Because their religious system was in advance of every other religious system in the world, the learned attributed a like superiority to themselves individually. (Luke 18:9.) This was the secret of Israel's blindness to the Gospel. The religious leaders and theologians were so self-conscious, and relied so implicitly upon their interpretations of the Divine promises as centering in themselves, that they could not regard the humble Nazarene and His unlearned followers except as impostors.

Later, when the Gospel began to be preached to the Gentiles the opposition of the Jewish theologians was increased; for it was utterly contrary to their every thought that God would accept either the humble Jews or the Gentiles, and reject the leading representatives of Israel. (John 7:43-53.) Amongst the Gentiles, however, the case was very different. While the illiterate masses were firmly bound by superstition, those of honest mind amongst the better educated were quick to discern that many features of their own religion were merely superstitions. Probably they had been attracted to the Jewish religion as being much more reasonable than their own. To such, the Gospel would naturally commend itself as being the real explanation of the Jewish doctrines and their grand outcome, the meaning of which had long been hidden.

A Self-Conscious Pharisee.

Benefits of Systematic Charity.

The opening verses of today's Study intimate that St. Paul's suggestion to the Corinthian Church nearly a year before had been well received, and the collection zealously entered upon. In his previous letter to them he had suggested methodical charity. (1 Corinthians 16:1, 2.) It was his experience, as it is the experience of all thoughtful people, that systematic charity is better than spasmodic almsgiving. Not only is the result generally larger, but the influence upon the giver is better; for it keeps before the mind an object, a service to be rendered to the Lord.

Therefore the Apostles felt very free to recommend to the Church the grace of giving and even to press upon them the fact that their liberality, in proportion to their ability, would largely be an index of their love for the Lord. But we note, in contrast, that St. Paul did not ask alms of these believers when first they received the Lord's grace, lest they should get the impression that the Gospel was being preached from mercenary motives.

Now he was absent from them, and felt free to draw to their attention the great blessing which would result from liberality in the Lord's Cause in proportion to their ability and their love. To impress the matter, he gave a parable, saying, "He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." This reminds us of the proverb, "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is proper, but it tendeth to poverty. The liberal soul shall be made fat." (Proverbs 11:24, 25.) The evident lesson is that the Lord is pleased to see His people cultivate breadth of heart as well as of mind—generosity in proportion to their knowledge of Him and of His generosity.

Systematic Giving.

The Scriptures nowhere declare that cases of absolute privation amongst the Lord's people are proofs that at some time in their past life, when possessed of means, they failed to use a portion of it in charity, in the Lord's service. But the inspired words above quoted come very close to giving this lesson. At all events, it is profitable that we lay this testimony to heart, and that every child of God henceforth be earnestly careful that out of the blessings coming daily from the Lord some measure be lovingly laid aside to be used in the Lord's service.

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

A number of well-known persons who have passed the allotted three score and ten period all have a defiance against old age, says Pittsburgh Dispatch. Hetty Green, the world's richest woman, says: "The best advice I can give those who live to an extreme old age and still retain their mental and physical health is to keep the mind occupied on some business endeavor, walk as much as you can and chew a baked onion between meals." Chauncey M. Depew says the reason he is so well at eighty, is because he keeps busy. "My universal observation has been that men who led active lives and who stopped work when they arrived at eighty years or thereabouts, died, while those who continued at their tasks lived for many years more." Mrs. Thomas Whiffin, who has passed her eightieth year, says early to bed and early to rise makes old people young. Charles R. Flint, the well-known captain of industry, says that sunshine and not moonshine is the real thing.

Home is the half-way house between earth and heaven. As such it needs the practical and the ideal, both combined, more than any other human institution, says The Independent. The earth side of a home must be absolutely practical, if the home is to be a home. There is more need for science in the home than for science anywhere else. Not because science is the most important thing in the home, but because the most neglected thing is always the most important. The average home is a conglomeration of guesswork, patchwork and overwork. The guesswork is the fault of the man, the overwork of the woman, the patchwork of them both. A little science in advance would prevent most of the trouble.

A series of spelling matches in the schools of New York state will terminate in a state-wide contest September 12, at the Syracuse state fair, to which winners of the preliminary matches will receive free transportation, with an opportunity to win one of four $50 prizes. A novelty in connection with these spelling matches is the publication of a bulletin by the University of the State of New York, containing 3,200 words which will be made a basis of the contest, and a subsequent bulletin will contain another thousand words, including some real stickers. It will be interesting to see whether to decide the contest it will be necessary to go outside these lists.

The annual report of the district attorney of New York county, New York, shows that during the year 1915 some 2,480 single men and 1,240 married men were arraigned in the criminal court. The report also shows that about 70 per cent of the male criminals arraigned in the last ten years were bachelors. These figures would seem to indicate that marriage is conducive to good behavior in the male of the species, says Pathfinder. More crimes were committed by men between the ages of twenty-one and thirty than those of any other ages, the figures show.

The statement that Patrick Harmon, pedestrian, has completed in 239 days, on a wager of $5,000, an undertaking to walk backward across the continent from San Francisco to New York is interesting as an attestation of human endurance. But there are too many people in the United States who never see anything till they have passed it, and therefore there is no reason for commending his achievement for imitation by the youth of the land.

The days of old Dobbin as the beast of all work on the farm are numbered, so far as the heavy work on the farm is concerned. The tractor will take his place. A tractor of the size to meet the needs of the farmer, as serviceable and as economical as the large tractors, is what is demanded by the farmers. The motor and size must fit the work at hand to give the best results.

Soon the issue will be drawn between those who contend that this country is prosperous because of the war and those who contend that it is prosperous in spite of the war. Neither is right, but the contention at least furnishes something to quarrel over.

Two silver forks and a spoon were removed lately from the stomach of a California man. He found no comfort in the silver lining of the cloud upon his digestive delights.

Between food scarcity and higher taxes, the people of the various belligerent nations will soon cease to see the practical benefits of mere glory in the war.

At this time of year it is easy to stir up an irascible fat man by advising him to keep cool.

The periscope of vacation looms up in the distance. Let the purse beware.

The Toughest Proposition Around the Plant---

"All right," said the Superintendent of a Steel Mill in St. Louis, "I'll let you test out your gear dressing, but I'm giving you fair warning. I picked out the toughest proposition around the plant."

You may be sure he did, for the place selected was a set of gears and pinions out in the foundry on the sand mill running at 100 R. P. M. These gears were SEVERELY EXPOSED. The men transferring sand from the cars did not make any great effort to keep the sand from going on the gears. The longest life of these gears was SIX WEEKS.

Accordingly, the gears were cleaned and

was applied. This was on September 27th, 1914.

Since then there have been only two renewals, bringing the average life of the gear up to six months, an increase of 300%. There has been but one renewal of the pinion. This was on November 1, 1915, after a run of one year, one month, and four days. We know this is an unusual instance, but on April 19th of this year, we made another call and found the second pinion in excellent condition after more than 5½ months' service.

This Company is now using TEXACO CRATER COMPOUND on all gears including the annealing furnace and the locomotive cranes.

These people have saved a small fortune on gear replacement. Furthermore, they have been able to secure a material increase in service from their equipment.

And the whole cost of the CRATER used in one year was about equal to the cost of one gear and its pinion.

We want to be absolutely fair in this matter, and so we'll admit that perhaps there was more attention given to the gears, after it was found that these gears COULD be lubricated. But even so, the tremendous increase of gear life points out to you a desirable saving in your plant, particularly now when gears cost so much.

Tell us about your conditions—we'll tell you how CRATER helps.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE

ESTABLISHED 1872—No. 38. PITTSBURGH, PA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1916. FIVE CENTS A COPY.

New York Public Library 476 Fifth Ave.

LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Child Labor Bill Passed by Senate 52 to 12--Postoffice Employes Make Gains--Immigration Restriction Answered.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The postal appropriation bill, passed by congress, contains a number of remedial features and wage increases for clerks, carriers, printers and laborers. Thousands of clerks and carriers will receive annual raises under the salary classification law, and 12 printers can be promoted to $1,200 and 900 clerks to $1,300. Post office laborers will hereafter receive $840 annually, the lower salary grades having been abolished, and the postmaster general is ordered to restore demoted carriers to their former salary grades. This action sustains the position taken by President Gompers when these men were reduced from $1,200 to $1,000 The A. F. of L. executive protested in person to the postmaster general without avail and the fight was then taken to congress.

The obnoxious 150-day limitation placed by the department upon employes incapacitated by sickness has been repealed. Under this rule employes, when unable to report for work within 150 days, or who had recovered from an illness extending over that period, were dropped from the rolls. Congress heeded the request of the organized employes and extended the time limit to one year. Clerks and carriers will hereafter be assured release from toil upon the principal holidays.

"Thanks to the ardent support of the American Federation of Labor the postal workers have made noticeable progress during the present session of congress," said Thos. F. Flaherty, secretary of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks. "Due to our affiliation with the trade union movement, members of congress are at last realizing that we are wage earners—not pampered political pets—and our requests are treated with greater consideration than formerly. Ever since we affiliated to the American Federation of Labor in 1906 we have made progress and we are still going ahead."

Because of United States Senator Barah's recent threat that he would offer the immigration restriction bill, now pending in the senate, as an amendment to the child labor bill, he has received numberless protests against connecting these two measures.

Although the Idaho senator favors child labor, has voted for it and defended the bill just passed, he has answered these protests in the same vigorous spirit of the objectors, as the following signed by him, illustrates:

"My dear Madam—I have your telegram in which you state: 'Please remember that women are watching the child labor legislation.' I am greatly pleased to hear this. I trust your view and your sympathy will be broad enough also to include not only the child which is working in the factory but also the child which may be forced upon the streets to beg or to commit crime or to starve. It would be an act of folly worthy of people of limited and narrow views if we should pass a law which would provide for the taking of the child out of the factory, a law which I very much favor, but at the same time have our immigration laws in such condition that after the war shall have closed, or even before, foreign immigration may force the parents of that child out of their position so that they can neither educate it nor clothe it nor withhold it from the vagrancy upon the streets. I am in favor of child legislation. I am also in favor of the immigration bill so that the parents of children of this country may have a decent wage and such a standard of living that they will be able to take care of and educate their children. I sincerely hope that some of our friends in favor of child labor legislation do not dwell so close to the large shipping interests as to obscure their views as to the necessity of immigration lebislation."

In answer to another protest, Senatir Borah replied:

"Thousands and hundred of thousands of immigrants will come here (after the present war) to reduce the price of labor and lower the standard of living and deprive the working people of this country of that competency which will enable them to take care of their families and educate their children. I have been astonished that men like yourself do not seem to realize that the child labor bill and the immigration bill are kindred measures ,serving one and the same cause, to-wit, the children or the country and the citizenship of the country.

"I am not at all disturbed by the criticism of a few narrow gauged or sinister controlled people who exploit their love for the child by advocating child labor laws and who exemplify their devotion to the almighty dollar by opposing immigration laws."

The American Federation of Labor holds that persistant agitation and education develops such a public opinion that old forms and customs will be finally overthrown.

This position has been indorsed by the congress of the United States, which has just passed a federal child labor bill, disregarding contrary opinion held by former national lawmakers.

On February 6, 1907, the house judiciary committee made the following unanimous report:

"In the opinion of your committee there is no question as to the entire want of power on the part of congress to exercise jurisdiction and authority over the subject of women and child labor. In fact, it is not a debatable question. It would be a reflection upon the intelligence of congress to so legislate. It would be casting an unwelcome burden upon the supreme court to so legislate."

During the discussion of the bill, last week, Senator Overman said that the 1907 judiciary committee of the senate was of the same opinion.

Last Tuesday the senate passed the federal child labor bill by a vote of 52 to 12. The two Pennsylvania senators—Penrose and Oliver—were the only northern senators who voted against the bill. The other 10 were: Senators Hardwick and Smith, Georgia; Bryan and Fletcher, Florida; Bankhead, Alabama; Overman and Simmons, North Carolina; Smith and Tillman, South Carolina; Williams, Mississippi.

The bill provides, in effect, that products in which the labor of children under 14 years of age is employed, shall be denied interstate commerce. In the case of products of mine and quarries, the age limit is raised to 16 years. The bill passed the house Febauary 2, 1916.

While the bill was under discussion in the senate Senator Overman of North Carolina voiced the opposition when he declared that if the bill is constitutional "there will be an absolute absorption of the police powers of the sovereign commonwealth and there will be no barier in the way of centralization of all power in Washington, to which goal we are now rapidly drifting."

FAKE LABOR ENDORSEMENT HELD TO HELP SWINDLERS

American Fair Trade League Making Terrific Fight for Honesty Among Merchants and Business Men.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—Effort is being made to tie organized labor up with the fake advertiser and the corrupt merchants who are not only opposed by organized labor but are opposed by every honorable merchant and business man in America. The National Labor Tribune has been fighting fraud and deception as well as the labor grafter and there are times when the latter is influential enought to have passed an endorsement supporting some vicious fraud but this doos not commit all trades unionism to a swindle. As soon as these vicious practices are made known the better element among the artisans and laborers immediately repudiate the indorsement.

The American Fair Trade League, one of the best organizations in America, with headquarters in New York is viciously assailing the crook in the commercial world and Secretary Edmond A. Whittier, of the League in an interview given out charges that the reported opposition of labor organizations to the Stephens-Ashurst Honest Advertising Bill, is a deliberate misrepresentation of the facts by trading stamp and other interests.

"Heretofore," said Mr. Whittier, "our trading stamp opponents and their trade disturbing allies have at least made a pretext of having some basis for their press agent matter but they are now letting their imagination or their malice build from the ground up.

"An example of the reckless disregard of the truth which they are now showing is a news story referring to the Stephens-Ashurst Bill, printed in the Paterson News of June 15th, the last paragraph of which reads as follows:

> "'This bill, which has been condemned by almost every labor organization in the country, would give the manufacturer the right to set the price at which retailers should sell their goods."

"The statement that the Stephens Bill has been condemned by 'almost every labor organization in the country' is a down right, plain, unvarnished falsehood out of whole cloth. The fact is that only one small local in the whole United States has taken adverse action, and that, we are informed, was done under misapprehension and will probably be reversed.

Standard Prices Guarantee Standard Wages.

"The suggestion that organized labor can intelligently oppose the Stephens Bill is absurd on its face. The principale on which labor organizations are founded is identical with that underlying the standard price measure. The former seek to standardize the prices of labor and the latter seeks to standardize the prices of identified products of labor. Moreover, the members of labor organizations are well aware that stable production and stable markets spell steady employment at satisfactory wages and that living conditions are vastly better under standard price conditions than otherwise. Find me a plant whose workers are comfortably housed and pleasantly surrounded — where sanitation, efficiency and happiness go hand in hand and I will find you, nine times out of ten, a product of standard quality and sold at a standard price by a manufacturer who believes in the principle of 'live and let live."

"If any members of labor organizations have allowed themselves to be misled into opposing the Stephens Bill, it is more than likely they will change their minds when they learn that the leaders of the opposition are active workers against measures which very closely concern the welfar of the workers. The comparatively small sensational class of stores which use dishonest advertising methods are notorious for failure to pay a living wage to women employees. The facts concering wages and living conditions have been clearly and authoritatively set forth in the report of the National Commission on Industrial Relations and in Bulletin 182, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor.

"The National Trade Association is leading the fight against the Stephens Bill. Its Vice-President, who is not only the head of a cut rate concern but is also the most prominent individual opponent of the honest advertising measure, made a strong attack on the 'minnum wage' proposition at the annual banquet of the National Retail Dry Goods Association last year.

Cut-Throat Competition Depresses Labor Conditions.

"A strikingly vivid and sympathetic description of sweat-shop living conditions, the direct result of conscienceless cut-throat competition, is found in the words of Raymond Robbins, Chairman of the recent Progressive National Convention. In speaking of the need for 'preparedness', he said:

> "'Narrow-chested and gray-blooded children living in dark rooms in congested tenement districts, eating adulterated food and corrupted in their childhood by an environment of dives, gambling dens, and brothels, are a poor foundation for a first line of defense. Men and women who receive regularly less than a living wage or work exhausting hours in daily toil under anti-social conditions will have little enthusiasm in defending a country that has so poorly defended them. The social human waste from insanitary homes, sweated labor and immoral living conditions is as much a fact of national weakness as the lack of guns and ammunition. 'A nation must be worth living in to be worth dying for.'

Aid to Labor

"The trade disturbing elements have done a good many foolish things, but we cannot believe that they are rash enough to seek the support of organized labor, which must be opposed to them on fundamental social as well as personal grounds.

"The beneficent purpose of labor organization is the amelioration of conditions of employment; to this splendid end the standard price system is an efficient and necessary aid.

"American labor will never permit itself to be made the tool of business iconoclasts who deny an honest living wage to their women employes and who are responsible for much of the misery and malodor of modern merchandising methods.

"There are two significant facts, concerning the appearance of this baseless story in this particular newspaper, which emphasize anew the lack of scruple and disregard of ordinary ethics, which have been shown all through the Stephens Bill fight by our amazing and apparently desperate opponents:

(1) "The editor of the Paterson News, which printed the story, is a director of the National Trade Association, which was specially organized.

Industrial State Insurance of Unemployed

Thomas Reece, Staff Oorrespondent.

LONDON, August 4.—This week the Royal assent has been given to an important Act extending the scope of unemployment insurance. In the former Acts there were seven scheduled trades, namely: Building, construction works, shipbuilding, mechanical engineering, iron-founding, construction of vehicles, and sawmilling when carried on in connection with any of the other six insured trades.

The new Act applies to all munitions work and to the following seven trades, whether the workman is engaged on munitions or not.—

1. The manufacture of ammunition, fireworks, and explosives.
2. The manufacture of chemicals, including oils, lubricants, soap, candles, paints, colors and varnish.
3. The manufacture of metals and the manufacture and repair of metal goods.
4. The manufacture of rubber and goods made therefrom.
5. The manufacture of leather and leather goods.
6. The manufacture of bricks, cement, and artificial stone and other artificial building materials.
7. Sawmilling, including machine machine woodwork and the manufacture of wooden cases.

Unemployment insurance in these trades will be compulsory from September 4 onwards. How many workpeople will be affected in the Manchester district is not easy to calculate, because of the uncertainty of the number employed on the manufacture of munitions, but 45,000 is a pretty reliable estimate. More than half of this number will be women and girls. In pre-war times there were in the Manchester area about 5,000 women entitled to unemployment benefit. Today there are at least six times as many. Other big industrial districts here show a similar expansion owing to the war.

The seven added trades inclunde a great variety of employments. The first pretty well speaks for itself, though it is perhaps advisable to explain that it embraces, along with all engaged in making explosives, those who fill shells and fuses and, among others, chemical light makers. The manufacture of chemicals includes at one extreme perfumery makers and at the other artificial manure makers. In between come the workers in oil and cake mills and in ink manufactories. Goldsmiths and horseshoe makers both have a place in the category of metal manufacturers, and probably it will be found that the village blacksmith's trade is not omitted. Fountain-pen makers are classified with the manufacturers of rubber goods, as well as the manufacturers of rubber heals, and, now that sawmilling is scheduled, packing-case makers must be insured against unemployment.

The munitions work (so far as it is not otherwise an insured trade) which the Act specifies is "the manufacture or repair of (a) any articles or parts of articles intended or adapted for use in war, and (b) any materials specified in orders made by the Minister of Munitions." Articles intended for use in war include foodstuffs. The Act therefore applies (for example) to beer and spirit manufacturers and to makers of chocolate and cocoa, jam and pickles, mustard, and many varieties of patent foods, and also to sugar refiners. Tobacco and cigarettes are also articles adapted for use in war, and it is not easy to tell precisely what escapes so wide a description. Among manufacturers of clothing it includes collar makers, helmet and cap manufacturers, and military tailors; and when we come to consider articles of equipment even musical instrument makers are affected, and so are rope and twine makers if their output or a considerable part of it, is going into use in our own or any other army. The woodworkers who make tent poles and the match manufacturers are clearly within the scope of the Act; and to the many trades already specified the Minister of Munitions may add as many as he pleases by special order.

A strong protest was made at the meeting of the executive of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, in London, on July 20th, against the action of the Government in sanctioning an increase of 60 cents per ton in the colliery selling-price of coal intended for home consumption. A resolution was carried unanimously urging united action on the part of organized labor, and expressing "willingness to co-operate in any movement that may be necessary to secure the revocation of this concession to the coal owners." Mr. Smillie, the president declared that in some districts the

BUFFALO IS FATTENING ON MUNITION CONTRACTS

Disaster Threatened in the Shifting of Vast Lake Tonnage from Here as Soon as the Welland Canal is Improved,

BY J. H. VITCHESTAIN.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 9th.—This city like other great industrial centers is also enjoying one of those unprecedented eras of prosperity, superinduced or augmented, if you choose, through the unexpected demands for war munitions.

Every man seeking employment here can find it and if he is lethergeric or indifferent, he need not waste energy seeking, he will inadvertently run against something.

In generations to come, when the details have been forgotten and mankind confronted with only the cold glaring figures, future followers of the policies of the present administration at Washington, will undoubtedly speak of this prosperity as the "Golden Age of Democracy."

None here are decrying this industrial thrift nor are they ringing the church bells calling the people to meet and resolute against European barbarity.

They are inclined to the opinion here as elsewhere in this country of ours, that if there is such a thing as a National Godsend it is this conflict, arriving only in time to avert a National calamity.

If you are brutal enough to administer a shock to the business men here delicately intimate the munition contracts are growing scarce and the belligerent Nations are now capable almost, of supplying their own demands.

The very thought of the warring nations being able to supply their own needs strikes terror to the hearts of the business interests and the occasional rumor that contracts have been completed and no others are in sight, create visions of a National catastrophe.

To me Buffalo was a Democratic City—a city whose citizens believed implicitly in the principles of Democracy and would defend them at all hazards.

This, of course, by swinging in line right behind the banner of Wilson and Marshall. Today I met many of Buffalo's captains of industry as well as her commercial and financial leaders; they are found in the mills, the factories, shops, banks, the great commercial houses and shipping centers. Their hope of industrial progress and National prosperity lies in the election of Hughes and Fairbanks. I asked point blank "Which candidate for president do the manufacturers and business men of Buffalo look to for continued prosperity?" The answer was: "To Hughes."

"I've always been a Democrat" said Mark A. Daly, Secretary of the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants of New York state "but I'm disappointed in the present administration at Washington. The blunders made are too serious. President Wilson is too much ground and valuable measures vitally effecting the interest to the people have been delayed too long."

The Chamber of Commere is not a political organization but a few moments with the members will reveal a tremendous Hughes sentiment. The Employers Association likewise reflects Republican harmony and a decided thrill is evidenced in the strengthening of the Republican lines throughout the entire State for a vigorous campaign. Hughes is a favorite with both employer and employe and Hughes was twice Governor of New York State. There are gamblers who do not like him but the great voting masses seem to idolize him. All praise him for smashing race track gambling and none fear him lest he might champion measures too radical.

Labor respects him and the employes regard him safe and sane.

The mention of a probable visit to Buffalo of the "Babcock Blues" caused considerable interest and a desire to learn more about the Republican Marching Club of Pittsburgh that is reviving the old time marching campaign.

The business men here would delight in a visit and an invitation can be secured forthwith should President Hilldorfer decide to put Buffalo on the list. This City is where much good may be accomplished as here a desperate effort will be made by the Democrats to continue themselves in office. The business interest, however, are emphatic in declaring that the Nation would have been knocked upon the shoals of Democracy had it not been for the munition orders. The re-election of Wilson and peace in Europe will hurl the American people into the midst of undesirable disaster and nothing save a high protective tariff can assure prosperity. Realizing the extreme importance of meeting entirely new conditions created by the war, special efforts are being directed in arousing every Republican voter to the necessity of transferring the handling of the Nation's affairs to the Republican party—a party competent to handle the business after four years of Democratic rule.

The business interests of Buffalo are being aroused over the threatened destruction of considerable Commerce that will be moved

LUCIFER

Son of the morning.—Isa. 14:12. Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth and I have set thee so; thou wast upon the Holy Mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire; every precious stone was thy covering. Thou wast perfect in the ways, from the day thou wast created till iniquity was found in thee—Ezek. 28; 13-15.

When the morning stars sang together and the sons of God shouted for joy (Job 38:7), thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty. For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into Heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars . . . I will be like the most High.—Isa. 14:13, 14.

Thou hast been in Eden, the Garden of God (Ezek. 28:13); that old serpant called the devil and satan.—Rev. 12:9.

The serpent said unto the woman, Thou shalt not surely die. She took of the fruit . . . and did eat, and gave unto her husband and he did eat. Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken. —Gen. 3:4, 6, 23.

He was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it.—Jno. 8:44. For the wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23), the soul that sinneth, it shall die.—Ezek. 18:4.

I beheld satan as lightning fall from Heaven.—Luke 10:18. How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer . . . which that made the earth as a wilderness and destroyed the cities thereof, that opened not the house of his prisoners. —Isa. 14:12, 17.

But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for him suffering of death . . . that through death He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil. —Heb. 2:9, 14.

The God of Peace shall bruise satan under your feet shortly.—Rom. 16:20.

THE WORLD THAT THEN WAS

II Peter 3:6

God created man in His own image. —Gen. 1:27. Adam begat a son in his own likeness . . . and he begat sons and daughters (Gen. 5:3, 4), shapen in iniquity.—Psa. 51:5.

When men began to multiply on the fact of the earth, and daughters were born unto them . . . the sons of God (the angels which kept not their first estate (Jude 6) . . . which were disobedient in the days of Noah.—I Peter 3:20) saw the daughters of men that they were fair, and they took them wives of all which they choose . . . and they bare children to them.—Gen. 6:1, 2, 4.

There were giants in the earth in those days . . . the earth was corrupt and . . . filled with violence . . . the wickedness of man was great . . . and . . . every imagination of the thoughts of his heart only evil continually.—Gen. 6:4, 11, 5.

SWEET DAY OF REST.

I know some day my Lord will come,
And stand within my humble home;
His glorious presence in the room
Will make it like a rose in bloom.
Chorus.
Then Haste, Oh! hasten, day of rest,
When I shall be forever blest!

His voice, like music on my ear,
Will banish every thought of fear;
He'll fold me closely to His breast,
And there in peace I'll sweetly rest.

And oh, my Lord, on that sweet day,
I know the words that thou wilt say;
"It is enough my child, come home,
Thy work is done, beloved, come."

Then I'll arise and go with Thee,
Across the shining, crystal sea,
Until we reach that blissful shore,
Where we shall dwell for evermore.

THE LABRINTH OF LIFE.

"A labyrinth is a species of structure full of intricate passages and windings, so that when once entered it is next to impossible for an individual to extricate himself without a guide. The one in ancient Egypt, near lake Moeris, was composed of twelve great palaces containing, according to Herodutus, three thousand chambers and halls. The palaces were connected by courts, around which ran a vast number of most intricate passages. Around the whole was a wall with ouly one entrance."

"Some years ago," writes Hawthorne, "a minister was rambling in the famous labyrinth of Henry VIII, Hampton Court near London, where the common children's puzzle is wrought out on a large scale by paths between high and thick evergreen edges. He wandered about it for a time, but when the time for closing drew near, with all his efforts he could not find his way out, and he feared that he might have to remain all night. At last he looked up, and saw a man in the tower in the center of the labyrinth who has been watching him all the time, and waiting to catch his attention. The eye above could see all so hidden from the man within, and soon guided him out of his difficulties. Visiting this labyrinth with Deacon Olney, we purchased a chart for our guide, remembering my friend's experience. When the time came for us to find our way out, we took the chart, and by careful study and exactness in following the designated way, we threaded the mazes ot the labyrinth with success.(Life is such a labyrinth. No person knows enough to guide his course unaided. He cannot see where the paths lead. The picture of the future is a sealed book to all."

THE DEVIL'S RESIGNATION.

The devil sat by the lake of fire
On a pile of sulphur kegs.
His head was bowed upon his breast,
His tail between his legs.
A look of shame was on his face,
The sparks dripped from his eyes,
He had sent his resignation
To the throne up in the skies.

"I'm down and out," the devil said.
He said it with a sob.
There are others that outclass me
And I want to quit my job.
Hell isn't in it with the land
That lies along the Rhine.
I'm a has-been and a piker
And therefore I resign.

One ammunition maker,
With his bloody shot and shell,
Knows more about damnation
Than all the imps of hell.
Give my job to Kaiser William,
Or to the Russian Czar,
Or King George or J. P. Morgan,
Or some such man of war.

I hate to leave the old home,
The spot I love so well,
But I feel that I'm not up-to-date
In the art of running hell."
And the devil spit a squirt of steam
At a brimstone bumble bee,
And muttered that he guessed he'd go

Appreciations

My subscription to Labor Tribune expires August 8th. With many thanks to kind friends whoever they are for sending same to me.

I prize the religious features, especially our beloved Pastor Russell's sermons and all of his writings. God is surely using that servant to scatter the darkness of the evil one, so that God's love can be seen in its true light. We truly admire the great stand of Pastor Russell for Truth and right against all opposition. We have read much of his work and pass it along to others, but there is much opposition here against what they term Russelism, but God surely has a rich reward for his faithful service. I also wish to congratulate you as editor of the Tribune for your endeavor in holding up the freedom of the press and the truth, we wish the editor and all readers many blessings.

Yours in His name,
W. K. FORSEY.

Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appeafance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

wanted kings to rule over them in spite of the warning that they would eventually be enslaved by them..

The "Miller Movement" set the machinery in motion that led to the discovery that the Platonic theory was a philosophic statement of Satan's original lie, "Ye shall not surely die." Russell is now heralding this fact to all that give an ear, who are chiefly the common people. Scholars are now making the same discovery also, but by a different route. They are scanning the old records and noting the facts just stated, that our so-called orthodoxy is poluted with Platonism and Paganism. We conclude this essay on William Miller with a brief review of the historic facts bearing on the case and cite some of the statements of scholars proving Pastor Russell's contention.

PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANS HOPE OF IMMORTALITY.

History has exemplified the culminating effects of wrong principles adopted as a rule of conduct. The "dark ages" is a period of history beginning about four centuries after the introduction of Christianity into the world and extends to the Age of Napoleon. It is a very singular period in that it is admitted to be the darkest period in the hsitory of the human race. Why is it that mankind sank into such depths of ignorance and degradation?—especially since this period of the Roman Empire was preceded by an age of enlightment and culture—Greece? The existence of this strange fact would lead the inquiring mind to give an account for it. A pecular thing about it is that it follows the launching of Christianity upon Europe by St. Paul, and this fact had led many writers of an agnostic tendency to attribute it to that, and acounts for their strenous denunciation of St. Paul and all theologeons that follow. A sensible account of this dark period of the world's history can be given from the standpoint of the Bible and defined by Luther and Pastor Russell in his essay on "The Man of Sin", in which he proves it to be "the master-piece of Satanic ingenuity". But here we note a consistency in the relation of the experience of man and the experience of the race—the one mirrors the experience of the other; just as a man gifted with a good moral and intellectual endowment, if not properly applied in life, will sink below the less gifted man in immonality and stupidity (as is also illustrated in the degradation of gifted women who sink lower in the brothel and rise higher in moral purity than man), so the race that does not properly appreciate and utilize what they fall heir to, will sink lower in ignorance and superstition than others not so well favored. In other words Europe's ignorance and sensuality of the Dark Ages is a retribution for not properly appreciating and following the greatest Beacon Light that the world has ever seen—the life and teachings of Jesus Christ!

What! you exclaim, did not St. Paul launch Christianity upon Europe? Yes! But Plato has crossed the path of Christ after His Apostles fell asleep! St. Augustine embraced the Platonic philosophy and fused it into the teachings of St. Paul, and to this compound Paganism was added. This triune compound in the form, the Nicene Creed produced the Dark Ages.

St. Augustine's version of the doctrine of Immortality differs materially from that of St. Paul. Pastor Russell, in defining St. Paul's teachings on this question, in conjunction with the teachings of Christ on inherent (self-existent) life, has pointed a marked distribution between Everlasting Life and Immortality, a being may live everlastingly with the possibility of death, hence not immortal or indestructible, and that the word Imomrtal means more than indestructibility. In the case of Christ after His resurrection, He was endowed with power of imparting life to others, or resurrecting powers, or a "life giving spirit." The Church, the Bride of Christ, is to share in this work of resurrecting the world from the dead, figuratively the Second Eve who nurses the life from the Second Adam in the work of regeneration. Immortality, in the sense of indestructibility, does not apply to the soul, but to the body, and is held out to the Christian Church as a hope—to be sought for and is a reward ("He giveth it", the soul, "a body that pleaseth Him") not an inherent quality of the soul as taught by St. Augustine. That this was the hope of the Primitive Christians prior to the days of Augustine, we quote the words of Prof. Frederick Palmer, A. B., D. D., Harvard Divinity Faculty, from the preface of his book: "The Winning of Immortality":—

"I have endeovored to sketch the growth of the doctrine of a future life from its apearance in Hebrew history through the line of Christian development to the present time. In doing this we come upon the fact that the belief which was counted orthodox in the first Christian centuries was different in one notable respect from that generally counted orthodox today. For while we regard it proper and Christian to hold that immortality is necessarily inherent in humanity, this was then regarded as improper and unchristian, the only true Christian view being that immortality was a victorious prize to be won through fellowship with Christ."

"I canot but think that their orthodoxy was wiser than ours. For I am sure that one great deterrent to believing in a future life is, with many persons, the dread thought of the vast multitudes, the majority of mankind, according to some theologies, who, it is asserted, are condemned to conscious existence in wretchedness and torture forever. Such much be the result if perpetual existence is a necessity inherent in humanity. But if it is contingent; if the soul is not necessarily immortal, but may become so; if the failure to attain immortality proceeds along ordinary non-arbitrary lines, and reaches a result which we see here imaged in the gradual elimination of decadent life, then the processes of the next world are redeemed from horror and made intelligible, almost verifiable."

"Immortiality as a necessity seems to me to have little to say for itself. As a goal to be attained, it is the prize of the Hight Calling of God in Christ Jesus."

STEPPING STONES, OR STUMBLING STONES.

I have been sorely tried, dear Lord,
been sorely tried today,
The sun hath veiled his brightness,
and a cloud hangs o'er my way;
Why is my heart so heavy, and the daylight cold and gray?
I've tried to please Thee, I have striven to faithful be and true,
I've sought for heavenly wisdom in the thing that I should do;
Yet I've been "put to grief;" and oh,
can I have grieved Thee, too?

A fellow-pilgrim on the road a wound hath given to me,
Its sting and smart I keenly feel—its need I cannot see,
Stumbling stone or stepping stone, O
Lord, which shall it be?

A sorrow came to me today—a grief
so dense and deep,
The shades of deepest darkness about my heartstrings creep;
The tears have flowed unceasing, till no power is left to weep.
I bow beneath my weight of woe, speechless and stunned; my heart
Sinks down like lead within my breast, its bitter ache and smart
Seem almost more than I can bear,
A sharp and cruel dart
Hath pierced me, and I prostrate lie.
O Father, speak to me!
Thy hand lies hard upon me: can this triel come from Thee?
Stepping stone or stumbling stone, which shall this sorrow be?

A blessing came this day to me, a joy surpassing sweet,
A glad way opens up to me, wherein my willing feet
Turn joyfully; how blest I am wthin this dear retreat!
My way had dark and lonely been for many a weary year;
My Lord hath brought this gift to me
when all was sad and drear;
Now, where my path was bleak, the flowers of love and bliss appear.
And, yet, dear Lord, this blessing which Thy love hath given to me
May fill my heart to fully, and may wean my soul from Thee—
Then, stepping stone or stumbling stone, my God, which shall it be!

Momentous question! on its answer
my eternal joy
Hangs trembling; shall I be refined as gold without alloy?
These woes and blessings potent are to save or to destroy.
The tmie flies on! the "harevest" wanes, the glorius end is near!
O Master, shall I lose e'en now the "prize" I hold so dear?
Shall woes or joys of life have power to dull my listening ear?
Shall I be lured by siren song, while strains of heaven break
On ears attuned? Oh, guide me, Lord, and keep me still awake,
May I rejoice to walk with Thee, and suffer for Thy sake!

But I am weak; O Master, dear, do
Thou my spirit thrill,
Grant me Thy grace, and strength impart to do Thy perfect will,
And in affliction or in joy obey and love Thee still,
Almighty Lord, to Thee I fly—no other help I know;
Oh, aid me in my need, I pray, and make my heart to glow
With holy fire, and on me, Lord, Thy precious love bestow.
I hear Thee speak, I will obey, I stretch my hands to Thee,
In every providence to Thine, Thy changeless love I see,
And stepping stones to heavenly heights each pain and joy shall be.

FROM DEATH UNTO LIFE IN CHRIST JESUS.

SOME FROM THE CONDEMNED RACE CALLED TO SPIRITUAL SONSHIP

These Sons of God Once Dead in Sins Like the Rest of the World—Adam Originally a Son of God—Holy Angels are Sons of God—Dominion of Sin in Fallen World Gave Opportunity for the Preparation and Testing of a Chosen Class—This Class to be God's Instruments for the Blessing and Instruction of Others—Jehovah's Plan Wonderful—No Human Being Could Ever Have Conceived it—Spiritual Sons of God, Now Preparing, Soon to be Glorified—Their Marvelous Exaltation.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, August 13.

Pastor Russell delivered a very instructive and interesting address here today. His text was, "And you hath He quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins" (Ephesians 2:1. He said in part:

In these words of our text a great deal is expressed. The Apostle is addressing the Church. These were formerly dead in the sense that they were condemned in Adam, with all the rest of the world. They were under the death sentence, lgally, dead. From the Divine standpoint all the race of mankind is a dead race. None have life in a legal sense except those who have obtained it from God through His provided channel—Christ Jesus. The Church of Christ have life now by meeting the terms which God has laid down. They "have passed from death unto life."

The world in general are still under condemnation to death. They can gain life only through the great Life-giver whom God has provided. The life.He will give to the world in God's due time will be the life purchased for them by the sacrifice of His own human life—the life of the Man Christ Jesus. Adam and his race may receive back all that was lost by Adam's disobedience—whosoever will—through the merit of the sacrifice given at Calvary. It will be the sacrifice given at Calvary. It will be a restitution to human perfection in a perfected earth. The Scriptures speak of Adam in his original perfection as a son of God. (Luke 3:38.) He was created in God's image, "very good." (Genesis 1:26, 27, 31; 9:6 Ecclesiastes 7:29.) He was a human son.

The holy angels were also sons of God. They are thus spoken of in the Bible. The Lord through the Prophet Job tells us that at the creation of our race, "The Morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." (Job 38:6, 7.) They were united in praising God for His wonderful works of creation. They rejoiced in Him and all His doings. God created all these different orders of beings, angels and men, through the great Logos, "the First Born (first brought into being) of all creation." (Colossians 1:15.) He was the active Agent of Jehovah in all His creative works. "Without Him was not anything made that was made."—John 1:3.

SONSHIP REGAINED ON A NEW PLAN

Through means provided in Christ, God has been extending an invitation during the present Age to some from the fallen race of Adam to become His sons, and on a new plane of being—the Divine. This is higher than anything man has ever known, higher than anything the angels have ever knewn. In bringing forth this New Creation Jehovah God is utilizing the conditions under which sin pervails in the world.

We may suppose that He said to Himself, "This would be an opportunity for making a grand character-test. I will therefore take a class from the fallen family of Adam and make them associates of My Son in the great work which I have for him to do; for the fact that they will be amongst men and have the same weaknesses of the fallen nature to contend with during the period of their development and preparation will serve only so much the more to test their loyalty and the strength of their character. I wish them to be associated with Myself in My great work of blessing all mankind, of uplifting the human family."

Thus the Father's thought is expressed in the Bible. "This will be an excellent opportunity for Me to take a specially select class from amongst all peoples, nations, kindreds and tongues. For when I shall have gathered them out they will be exactly the ones suited to My purpose, to perform good pleasure in uplifting the world from their sin and imperfections back to perfection. Not only so, but certain great principles will be demonstrated that otherwise would never be known by either angels or men. It will show that I can take the mean things, the ignoble things, and so transform them that they shall be useful on the viry highest plane of existence. Then if any of my intelligent creatures on any plane of life should in the future be offered a high position, they would know that they could attain it. If I offered a reward for any service, all would know that it could be gained."

So we see, dear friends, how the Lord has embraced the opportunity to call out and train a very special company for a very special purpose. And the arrangement by which He does this is suggested in our text: "And you who were dead in trespasses and sins hath He quickened!"—Made alive.

WHEN THESE SONS WERE QUICKENED

The Apostle Paul is not speaking here of the complete making alive of this class in the First Resurrection, when they will be perfected as Divine spiritual beings but of a present condition—"You hath He qickened." They were quickened, made alive as New Creatures, when, after they had accepted Christ as their Savior and presented themselves to God in full consecration, they were received and had the merit of Christ's blood imputed to them as sacrifices, and were begotten of God's Holy Spirit (His power) to a new nature. There the new life in Christ had its beginning; and this embryo life is to grow and develop until it is perfected in the resurrection, when they will receive their new spiritual bodies.

Though these spiritual sons are the creation of the Heavenly Father, yet it is His arrangement that their quickening, both in its present stage and in its completion at their resurrection, is not accomplished without the Son. All things are of the Father and by the Son. (I Corinthians 8:6.) It may be asked, Why could God not quicken these without the Son? We answer, Because they were dead in trespasses and sins, and must have a perfect, sinless Redeemer to deliver them from death before God could have any dealings with them.

Moreover, as they must still use their imperfect mortal bodies, it is necessary that the merit of their Redeemer should continually cover them as a robe as long as they remain in the flesh; and because of their daily imperfections they need that this Redeemer be also their Advocate before the Father, that they may continue to be acceptable. It is the Father who quickens these, but it is not without the Son. "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ hath begotten us," says the Apostle—I Peter 1:3.

CHURCH'S AND WORLD'S SALVATION DIFFERENT

So we see that the receiving of life in the case of the Church class is different from the way in which the world in the next Age will receive life. Our life is from the Father, through Christ. The life of the world will be a direct gift from the Son, who alone will deal with the world during the incoming Age. He will be their "Everlasting (Age-lasting) Father." (Isaiah 9:6, 7. He is not the Father of the Church, but their Elder Brother. The world can have no access to the Father until the close of the Millennial Age.

The Church have access to the Father now, through the imputed merit of Jesus. We are being dealt with in a peculiar way and for a specific purpose. What the world are to receive will be something purchased for them directly by Christ. What the Church receives is something far above what was purchased by Christ. This purchased human life they laid down as a joint-sacrifice with Jesus, that they might share in His glory. This higher life and glory they receive as a reward for their sacrifice, just as Jesus Himself received it as a reward for His sacrifice.

The Church are New Creatures in Christ. The New Creature was never condemned. The New Creature was never redeemed. It starts out on a new plane altogether. To the world our Lord Jesus is to give His merit, the merit of His death. In the Church He only imputes it in order that it may at once be laid down as a sacrifice. The Church, as members of the human family for whom Jesus died, have as much right as the world to receive the restitution provided for them in Jesus' sacrifical death. But these have relinquished their right to the perfect human life that they may attain with their Lord the far higher and grander life—the Divine. They have become dead with Him to the human life, human rights and blessings in order that they may live and reign with Him on His Throne.

Let us represent the matter thus: We will say that a thousand dollars represents the perfect life with all the rights and privileges which would have been ours in common with the world. We still have, as members of the fallen human family, some remains of the original likeness of God in which our first parents were created. This has a certain worth; but as all the race were born under the death penalty, this worth or value could not be used by God in our fallen condition. But God has made an arrangement whereby this value can be made available. Let us say that this value which we have is represented by a hundred dollars. This represents our present life, our present influence.

To us who now offer ourselves to God to be dead with Christ, Jesus says, "I will take what you have and add to it by imputation sufficient of My sacrificial merit to make it perfect in God's sight. In other words, I will impute nine hundred dollars to your hundred and thus make the full thousand. Thus I can present you to the Father a perfect sacrifice, perfect as was My own." He does this, and the Father accepts the sacrifice. At once it is killed by our great High Priest, Jesus, and at the same moment the Father begets us by His Holy Spirit to the new spiritual nature. Thenceforth we are counted dead as human beings; we are partakers of Jesus' Sacrifice, sharers in it. We are New Creatures in Christ.

DIVINE PREDESTINATION GLORIOUS

Jehovah's great Plan is being carried out on a wonderful scale! And I am sure that, had we not been instructed as to what is His Plan, we would never have thought of such a nicety of justice and such a marvel of mercy and love as His has demonstrated in His arrangement for the Church and for the world. Such a Plan would never have occured to us. We see that our God is a wonderful God and His Plan a most wonderful Plan; and the farther into it we see, the more confidence we have in Him, and the more we grow in knowledge, in grace, in His character-likeness and in the likeness of His dear Son our Saviour and Advocate.

God has foreordained, predestinated, that the members of the Body of Christ, the Church shall be conformed to the image of His Son. He has not predestinated, as many once thought, that so many are to go to Heaven and all the remainder—the vast majority—to endless torture. We are greatly enamored of the Lord's predestination; we could not ask for anything better, nor half so good. Surely we should show Him our great appreciation of His wonderful Calling in Christ to those who "have ears to hear." Jesus says, "No man cometh to the Father but by Me," and "Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out." So we have come. Does the Father accept of such? Yes; He accepts us and gives us the gegetting of His Holy Spirit. That is our start as New Creatures in Christ. "You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins."

QUICKENING THAT FOLLOWS BEGETTING

There is another sense in which the Bible speaks of us as being quickened. As we had stated, when we consecrated ourselves to God and the merit of Jesus was imputed to us, the sacrifice was killed, legally, and we were begotten as spirit beings. But as we still have to use the human body which was legally killed, it must be made the servant of the New Creature. By the Holy Spirit dwelling in us God quickens, energizes, this body that it may render service to Him. Thenceforth this mortal body is the property of the New Creature. He is to bring it fully into subjection to the new mind. It is to be used to develop the new mind until the New Creature is perfected in character and ready for his glorious spiritual body, which he is to receive in the resurrection.

If we fail to develop and bring forth fruitage in proportion to our talents, our opportunities for service, we cannot ask to be of that great, highly exalted Body of Christ. As soon as the newly begotten child of God comes to the point of activity in the Lord's service, he has been quickened. This quickening, energizing, of the New Creature to labor for God, to lay down his life for the brethern, should follow the begetting of the Holy Spirit in a comparatively short time. Until this time he has not begun to walk in the footsteps of the Master; the embryo new life is yet too feeble to manifest itself. As in a natural begetting the conception takes place some little time before there is a quickening, so it is with the spiritual begetting. But the quickening should follow in a reasonably short time! Otherwise something would be wrong. The Truth requires a little time to impregate the heart and mind, and then the evidence of quickening begin to manifest themselves.

JEWELS IN PROCESS OF PREPARATION

This called-out class the Father denominates. His jewels, "They shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that Day when I made up My jewels." "Thou shall also be a crown of glory in the hand of Jehovah, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Malachi 3:17; Isiah 62:3.) Some may be inclined to critize as they see evidences of imperfection in the mortal flesh of those whom the Lord is preparing now for the Kingdom. But the Lord looks beneath the surface. He knows who have the jewel quality. He knows who have the requisite decision of character, the necessary heart-loyalty to the principles of righteousness, the proper humility. Certain qualifications are absolutely essential on those whom God is now choosing for the highest positions in the Universe next to Himself and His First-begotten Son.

Jewels are scarce; and these jewels that the Lord is now taking out of the world have the right heart-condition, whatever may be the natural blemishes of the mortal body, which they are endeavoring to conquer to the best of their ability. "Blessed are the pure in heart," said the Master. These pure-hearted ones shall be the Lord's in this Day, now present, when He is making up his jewels, His royal diadem. God is to make a glorious exhibition of them to the entire Universe—human and spiritual. He is to have a wonderous diadem of glory and beauty.

Each of these jewels, must be cut and polished for his Place in the diadem. The various difficulties and trials of life are making us ready for that position. We are to "think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try us as though some strange thing happened unto us," but are to rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer with Christ." Thus only can we glorify with Him. If we submit to the process of the great Heavenly Lapidary we shall be mounted in gold.

This time of mounting will be when we, as developed New Creatures, shall be given our new spiritual bodies in the First Resurrection. The Lord tells us that He will display this crown, or diadem, in His hand as His masterpiece, the crowning work of all God's great creation. It will be an entirely new creation upon the very highest plane—a position never offered to any but our Lord Jesus and those who walk in His sacrificial footsteps. Then let us "lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and finisher to our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down on the right and of the throne of God."—Hebrews 12-2.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The following is the standing of the fund to date:

WILLIAM MILLER.

Essay VI.

THE GREAT SATANIC DELUSION.

The principle theme of the pastors of the I. B. S. A. propaganda is the "Second Coming of Christ. Why? How? When?" This is precisely the same theme emphasized by Miller and those that followed, and would indicate that it is one continuous movement under different leaderships. Miller and his school looked forward to the second advent and Russell points out that it is a thing of the past—that Christ came personally in the spirit, invisible, in 1874. Prior to Miller's day this subject of Bible study was sadly neglected.

Along with this subject of Christ's second presence, comes logically the doctrine of the resurrect'on of the dead, for they are associated both in reason and Scripture. The doctrine of the resurrection has no logical place in the so called orthodox system, for if the dead do not die, why should there be a resurrection of the dead? This left the question in the background by being given in the system in the unreasonable theory of the body. This neglected subject, so prominent in Scripture, did not receive any attention until Miller appears. In the words of Dr. Adam Clark:

"The doctrine of the resurrection appears to have been thought of much more consequencé among the primitive Christions than now! (Early in the ninteenth contury). How is this? The Apostles were continually insisting on it, and exciting the followers of God to diligence, obedience and cheerfulness through it! And their successors in the present day seldom mention it! So Apostles preached, and so primitive Christians believed; so we preach, and so our hearers believe. There is not a doctrine in the Gospel on which more stress is laid; and there is not a doctrine in the present system of preaching (orthodoxy) which is treated with more neglect!"

The next logical question following the doctrine of the resurrection is the subject of the soul—does it die?—or is it immortal? Intelligent and thinking people began to wonder why the Lord would resurrect the dead, if they are in either heaven or hell, their final judgment passed upon and unalterably fixed. Miller, in common with others, believed the soul immortal, but his preaching the doctrines of the resurrection led to the discovery of the fiction of the Platonic theory and the fact that this is a philosophic statement of the Satanic lie—"Ye shall not surely die." Note for instance, the following expression from a representative of the Advent Movement, cut adrift from the ancient moorings of orthodoxy, just before Russell looms into the lime-light. (E. G. White:—

"The only one who promised Adam life in disobedience was the great deceiver. And the declaration of the serpent to Eve in Eden,—"Ye shall not surely die",—was the first sermon over preached upon the immortality of the soul. Yet this declaration, resting solely upon the authority of Satan, is echoed from the pulpits of Christendom, and is received by the majority of mankind as readily as it was received by our first parents. The divine sentence, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die', is made to mean, The soul that sinneth, it shall not die, but live eternally. We cannot but wonder at the strange infatuation which renders men so credulous concerning the words of Satan, and so unbelieving in regard to the word of God."

That the key to this discovery of the Satantic theory of man's supposed indestructible soul, was the doctrine of the resurrection, is further indicated by the words of Tyndale, who, like Luther, was led to discover the same fact, for we hear him say to the Romish dectors: "Ye, in putting them (departed souls) in heaven, hell, and purgatory, destroy the argument wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be? And then what cause is there of the resurrection?" The doctrine of the resurrection from the sleep of death was clearly appreciated by Luther as well. Luther in commenting on Solomon's words in Ecclesiastes (9:5, 6, 10) "the dead know not anything" etc., remarked: "Another proof that the dead are insensible. Solomon thinks therefore, that the dead are altogether asleep, and think of nothing. They lie, not recokoning days or years, but when awakened, will seem to themselves to have slept scarcely a moment."

The only sensible solution to the prevalence of this Platonic theory amongst people who profess to be Bible students is that given in the Bible itself—that "the God of this world (Satan) hath blinded the minds of them that believe not" by his insidious methods. Man in his depraved condition is as prone to sin as the sparks fly upward, and takes to Satan's precepts readily, especially when they promote man's personal ambition; his precepts are foistered upon man automatically. An instance in point where man's ambition is envolved, we mention the fiction of the spiritual lineage of Apostolic Succession of Bishops: the blood lieage of Kings as Divine (?) Right. Again, wars have been perpetuated between supposed Christian nations by the old time worn proposition that to insure peace we must be prepared for war; this precept is at the bottom of the dragon of Militarism that is devasting Europe in the "world war" now raging.

As if to answer the question that might properly be raised, that if man was left to himself without Satan's supervision he would not be enslaved by the shackles of superstition and his own passions, the Jewish race was made immune from Satan's precepts by the Mosaic Law and it's Priesthood; this law had also rigid restriction against the baneful influence of Satan's demands of witchcraft which operate today through mediums of Spiritualism, who personify the dead—thus perpetuating the original lie that the dead are not dead. The Jews as well as the Gentiles "Sought out many inventions and defiled himself." An instance of this might be mentioned in connection with their form of government—they

THE RIOT AT EPHESUS

Acts 19:29-41.—August 20.

Completion of St. Paul's Second Missionary Tour—His Third Tour Begun. The Gospel Preached In Ephesus. Opposition by Deluded Agents of the Adversary — Business Depression Charged to Christianity—Real Secret of Opposition to True Gospel.

"The love of money is a root of all kinds of evil."—I Timothy 6:10. R. V.

AFTER leaving Corinth, St. Paul completed his second missionary tour and returned to Antioch. En route he stopped at Jerusalem, where he greeted the Church and doubtless gave them an account of the Lord's blessing upon his recent ministries in Europe. Aquila and Priscilla went with him as far as Ephesus. The vessel upon which he sailed remaining at the port over the Sabbath, St. Paul improved the opportunity to speak in the synagogue. His discourse there was in the nature of a preparation for a future work which he hoped to do in Ephesus.

We are not informed how long the Apostle remained at Antioch; but "after he had spent some time there, he departed and went over all the region of Galatia and Phrygia, in order, establishing all disciples." (Acts 18:18-23.) While energetic in the establishment of new companies of the Lord's people, he was not slack in looking out for the spiritual growth of those which he had already established, as is evidenced by the fact that this was his third visit to these churches.

On his return to Ephesus, St. Paul found that during his absence a Christian brother named Apollos had come there and had preached in the synagogue, using such logical arguments that he had secured twelve converts to Christianity. St. Paul speedily found these twelve converts and further instructed them in the way of the Lord. Apollos had explained to them the Gospel merely to the extent of repentance from sin and of faith in Christ as the Redeemer. He had no knowledge of the deeper meaning of baptism as explained by St. Paul (Romans 6:3-5)—a baptism of consecration, to suffer with Christ, to be dead with Him, and ultimately to share with Him in His Kingdom. When the Ephesian converts heard this, they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus, to fellowship in His sufferings, even unto death.

St. Paul Preaching at Ephesus.

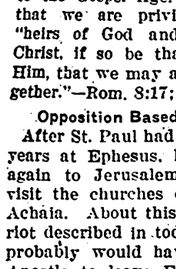
There are many believers today who, like these Ephesians, are members of the Household of Faith, but not members of the Body of Christ—who have gone as far as a baptism of repentance, reformation and faith in the Redeemer, but who have not been instructed respecting the great privileges belonging to the Gospel Age. They know not that we are privileged to become "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may also be glorified together."—Rom. 8:17; 2 Tim. 2:11, 12.

Opposition Based on Selfishness.

After St. Paul had spent nearly three years at Ephesus, he purposed going again to Jerusalem, but first would visit the churches of Macedonia and Achaia. About this time occurred the riot described in today's Study, which probably would have determined the Apostle to leave Ephesus, if he had not already so purposed. The Lord permitted persecutions to drive St. Paul out of every place—this seemingly indicating the proper time for terminating his ministry at each point.

Ephesus was one of the great cities of that time. At the head of its harbor stood one of "the seven wonders of the world," an immense temple of "Diana of the Ephesians"—the deity of Asia Minor. Of course the fame of this great idol attracted general attention; and those who could not go to Ephesus to worship at her shrine purchased from merchants certain charms, which consisted of small silver copies of the shrine. In the Apostle's day the business of making these shrines employed thousands of men.

A man named Demetrius was the representative of the silversmiths' union. Incensed at the propaganda of the Church at Ephesus, he aroused his fellow-craftsmen by a stirring speech, in which he painted a black picture of the business depression that would result if this man Paul were permitted to preach much longer in their city. With a wonderful cunning he combined the thought of their duty of supporting the religion of their city with that of looking out for their pocketbooks. Soon the city was in an uproar, touched to the quick on humanity's tenderest spots—religion and worldly prosperity.



Tumult at Ephesus.

St. Paul's place of residence being known, the mob rushed thither. The Apostle was absent; but two of his assistants were hurried to the theatre. Learning of the commotion, St. Paul would have courageously entered into the thick of the trouble; but the brethren suffered him not. The Lord, however, assisted the two brethren who were arrested. The town clerk came to their relief, and showed that the meeting was nothing short of a riot, which if reported to the imperial government at Rome, would greatly reflect against their city. With this he dismissed the assembly.

"AMERICA FIRST AND AMERICA EFFICIENT."

We come to state in a plain and direct manner our faith, our purpose and our pledge. This representative gathering is a happy augury. It means the strength of reunion. It means that the party of Lincoln is restored, alert, effective. It means the unity of a common perception of paramount national needs. It means that we are neither deceived nor benumbed by abnormal conditions. We know that we are in a critical period, perhaps more critical than any period since the Civil War. We need a dominant sense of national unity; the exercise of our best constructive powers; the vigor and resourcefulness of a quickened America. We desire that the Republican Party as a great liberty party shall be the agency of national achievement, the organ of the effective expression of dominant Americanism. What do I mean by that? I mean America conscious of power, awake to obligation, erect in self-respect, prepared for every emergency, devoted to the ideals of peace, instinct with the spirit of human brotherhood, safeguarding both individual opportunity and the public interest, maintaining a well-ordered constitutional system adapted to local self-government without the sacrifice of essential national authority, appreciating the necessity of stability, expert knowledge and thorough organization as the indispensable conditions of security and progress; a country loved by its citizens with a patriotic fervor permitting no division in their allegiance and no rivals in their affection—I mean America first and America efficient. It is in this spirit that I respond to your summons.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

ADEQUATE FEDERAL WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAWS.

I stand for adequate Federal Workmen's Compensation laws, dealing not only with the employes of government, but with those employes who are engaged in interstate commerce, and are subject to the hazard of injury, so that those activities which are within the sphere of the constitutional authority of Congress may be dealt with under a suitable law.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

THE NATION IS SHOCKINGLY UNPREPARED.

It is apparent that we are shockingly unprepared. There is no room for controversy on this point since the object lesson on the Mexican border. All our available regular troops (less, I believe, than 40,000) are there or in Mexico, and as these have been deemed insufficient the entire National Guard has been ordered out; that is, we are summoning practically all our movable military forces in order to present bandit incursions. In view of the warnings of the past three years, it is inexcusable that we should find ourselves in this plight. For our faithful guardsmen, who with a fine patriotism responded to this call and are bearing this burden, I have nothing but praise. But I think it little short of absurd that we should be compelled to call men from their shops, their factories, their offices and their professions for such a purpose. This, however, is not all. The units of the National Guard were at peace strength, which was only about one-half the required strength. It was necessary to bring in recruits, for the most part raw and untrained. Only a small percentage of the regiments recruited up to war strength will have had even a year's training in the National Guard, which at the maximum means one hundred hours of military drill, and, on the average, means much less. Men fresh from their peaceful employments and physically unprepared have been hurried to the border for actual service. They were without proper equipment; without necessary supplies; suitable conditions of transportation were not provided. Men with dependent families were sent; and conditions which should have been well known were discovered after the event. And yet the exigency, comparatively speaking, was not a very grave one. It involved nothing that could not readily have been foreseen during the past three years of disturbance, and required only a modest talent for organization. That this Administration while pursuing its course in Mexico should have permitted such conditions to exist is almost incredible.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

HOD CARRIERS GAIN.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 14.—The newly-organized Hod Carriers' union has won a short strike for union recognition, a $3 minimum and an eight hour work day.

Letter from the National Capital.

Senator Vardaman of Mississippi disagreed with his southern colleagues. He said: "the constitution is usually the refuse of the stateman whose interests or preconceived notions are to be supported by the invocation of the terms of that instrument." He said that he has observed that the constitution "has never stood in the way very long of the enactment of the measure which public sentiment demanded should be enacted for the good of mankind." In an eloquent manner the Mississippi lawmaker swept aside the argument of constitutional pleaders and urged that the question be viewed from man's higher impulses.

"This bill deals with immortal stuff," he cried. "Its effect upon the affairs of today are of inconsequential concern when we consider the larger issues of the future. The salvation of the child is the hope of the race—the source of strength and life of the republic—the highest function of a great government. The temporary moral welfare of society depends upon it, the glory of our civilization draws life and inspiration from it, and the attainment of the individual of the infinite consummation is the realm of eternity is impossible without it."

By implication Senator Tillman gave organized labor credit for being the real power behind anti-child labor agitation. He declared that "the congress of the United States trembles every time the labor unions frown." He said he believed in organized labor, "but unless labor is restrained by real leaders and persuaded to act reasonably and justly instead of being fondled and slobbered over by vote seekers and demagogues, as is done now, I shudder to think what may happen." He further declared that "capital" with its brutal, cynical disregard for humanity, started the conflict, and labor in self defense, organized for the struggle," and that "if the fight must go on, I am for labor, because capital started the trouble." After thus proving that he was independent of capitalists and trade unionists, Senator Tillman voted against the bill.

Imediately after the bill was passed the senate ordered the appointment of a conference from the house of representatives to agree on several changes made by the senate.

"HIGH" WAGES DISSECTED.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 14.—The scale of organized pavers in this city is $3.50 a day, which many good citizens will insist is "high wages." In a letter to Mayor Kiel this union states that for the first six months of 1916 they had 96 working days, which made their wages, per month, $38.40 for pavers and helpers and $44.80 for rammers.

NEW YORK GARMENT WORKERS VICTORIOUS

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Ladies Garment Workers' union has defeated their organized employers, who abrogated an agreement and locked out 60,000 workers April 28.

During the lock-out numerous conferences were held and the employers offered every solution except the one the workers insisted on—the creation of machinery to settle grievances.

Last month the union's representatives submitted an agreement without this clause, and it was rejected by the strikers. Conferences were again resumed and the manufacturers surrendered and a contract was agreed to that was later accepted by the strikers, who are now returning to work. Both sides agree to discipline any member who violates the agreement and provision is made for the settlement of grievances. Prices for piece work are to be fixed by committees selected by workers in the various shops. Under this arrangement employes will have a voice in setting prices.

Other sections, which were included in the rejected agreement, provide for a 49-hour week and an average of 6 per cent increase for week workers.

The strikers' victory is complete and marks what is believed to be the end of a series of efforts by the manufacturers to crush this union. Last year eight officials of the union were arrested on murder charges, but were later acquitted. This was followed, on April 28, 1916, by the manufacturers abrogating a two years' agreement, signed July 23, 1915, which provided for a conciliation committee to which all differences were to be referred.

ONE CHILD LABOR INSPECTOR.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 14.—The state senate has defeated an amendment providing for two factory inspectors to enforce the child labor law. It was agreed by these lawmakers that one inspector, at a salary of $1,200 a year, is sufficient to cover this state, which is 320 miles from north to south and 254 miles at its extreme width.

ROCHESTER WAITERS STRIKE.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Cooks and waiters in hotels in this city and in summer resorts near here struck for higher wages and better working conditions. Waiters are now paid $30 a month. They ask $9 for a work week of 60 hours. Other demands include wholesome food, decent living quarters and the abolition of fines.

RAILWAY EMPLOYES USE MINERS' PLAN

Big Manufacturers Declare Trouble Ahead if Wilson Establishes Eight Hours Without Making It Universal.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 21.—In the great railway situation in which 400,000 men are involved directly, President Wilson is in a similar position to that which the miners had President William McKinley prior to his second election when Senator M. A. Hanna was called into action. The negotiations were not concluded until sufficient concessions were granted to give the United Mine Workers an additional start to that which they received when Michael Ratchford was the Moses who led them through their first great victory.

Michael Ratchford had won for the United Mine Workers their first great battle when in 1897 they declared their great strike in which at least five competitive states were involved. It was during this contest that the first joint conference was secured with the operators and in the second election of McKinley a move was made to take in the Anthracite. This contest was won to save McKinley in his re-election and Senator Hanna received the credit for it.

The railroad men have learned the secret of pressing their demands on the eve of an election and the power lies with the Democratic Party now in absolute control.

The granting of an advance to the railroad men is not all that is involved but if the railroad men should win this means that eight hours shall become the established day's labor and this would take in every manufacturer in the country for whom employes are working longer than eight hours.

The eight hour day is to be the established basis but that basis it is argued cannot be perfectly established until it becomes a national law, thus bringing all competitors under the same conditions. A state law is absolutely worthless, as such enactments have no jurisdiction in competitive markets. The meaning of this is, that while Pittsburgh pays $4.00 a day for eight hours, other cities are paying $3.85 for nine hours and the manufacturers in Pittsburgh have been the goats. The problem, therefore, confronting President Wilson is to amicably adjust the contending differences with the railway men that will not prove a hardship to other manufacturers, who will be compelled to readjust their wage scales and thus start a contention that may involve the whole nation in a general strike. The railways may readily be able to establish the eight hour basis, but the question involved, and one which has brought the manufacturers into the struggle, is how can Pittsburgh compete with other states if the eight hour law is to be forced in one state and not in another?

The United States Steel Corporation and the other manufacturing interests control at least 80 per cent of the men employed in this country and a victory for the railway men will mean that eventually eight hours will be demanded elsewhere, and while it cannot be enforced by all, some will be compelled to meet the conditions and be forced to settle irrespective of the cheap labor of other states, with which they will have to contend.

The employes now appreciate the delicate situation and the political position of the Democrats is rather ticklish. President Wilson wants to win and he cannot do anything that will lose favor with the working men, thus he is throwing his influence toward the vast army of employes and his influence is playing a remarkable part in the controversy.

A letter from George Pope, President of the Manufacturers' Association presents the side of the manufacturers thus:—

"Hartford, Conn., Aug. 18, 1916.

"The President, the White House—On behalf of 3,700 manufacturing organizations employing 3,000,000 persons, and utterly dependent upon uninterrupted railroad service for their continued operation, I beg to at once express our deep appreciation of your efforts to prevent the threatened destructive stoppage of national railroad service, and to respectfully urge that you will with all the power of your great office and personality assert and maintain the principle of arbitration for industrial disputes affecting national intercourse. No just demand can fear such a test, no unfair demand can or should survive it. We sincerely believe no man in history has possessed such an opportunity to fortify this essential principle of public security against future attack by employer or employe.

"GEORGE POPE,
"President National Association of Manufacturers."

The President replied: "Allow me to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of August 18th and to say in reply that I hold to the principle of arbitration with as clear a conviction and as firm a purpose as any one, but that unfortunately there is no means now in existence by which arbitration can be secured. The existing means have been tried and have failed. This situation must never be allowed to arise again, but it has arisen. Some means must be found to prevent its recurrence, but no means can be found offhand or in a hurry or in season to meet the present national emergency. What I am proposing does not weaken or discredit the prin-

MEETING TO ORGANIZE THE BABCOCK BLUES

Big Feast, New Hughes and Fairbanks' Campaign Songs, a Smoker and an Old Time Political Rally August 31st.

If Pittsburgh business men or her matchless industrial champions are looking for those who are capable of personifying the slogan of the greatest industrial centre in the world that "Pittsburgh Promotes Progress"; if the Iron City is looking for real industry personified with abundance of enthusiasm to demand or enforce national recognition, a moment's reflection over the work being whipped into shape by President Joseph P. Hilldorfer and Vice President C. W. Robinson in the organization of the Babcock Blues will undoubtedly suffiice.

The Babcock Blues are going to bring to Pittsburgh, as well as the Keystone state, a national reputation, and the task of working out the details and putting them into execution is requiring the most strenuous efforts, besides the labor is constant and unremitting.

President Hilldorfer and Secretary Robinson have so well

E. V. BABCOCK,

One of Pittsburgh's most popular business men and financiers after whom the Babcock Blues are named.

mastered the details that preparations have been made to call the first general meeting on Thursday evening, August 31, at the commodious headquarters of the club 222 and 224 Diamond street. This meeting will be inaugurated with a smoker and the evening is to be one of well spent moments of retrospection and business suggestions, during which time "ye" marching clubs of "ye" old days may be reviewed and "ye" old time methods will be smothered with the new and brilliant ideas of the present day an abundance of which President Hilldorfer and Secretary Robinson have already worked out.

On the opening evening preparations have been made to serve lunch and the occasion will be doubly enlivened by one of the best Glee Clubs in the State. These entertainers are to be a part of the Babcock Blues and the newest Hughes and Fairbanks campaign songs will be introduced for the first time.

It is the intention of the Babcock Blues to carry with them their Glee Clubs and in all probability there will be more than one with revivifying and rejuvinating transparencies, instruments of clamor and attractive schemes which shall arouse interest in the campaign and expose the falacies of the long eared gentry under whose folly the nation has been merely wriggling along during the last four years.

The club will typify the great city of Pittsburgh and its industrial position and the members will be from all walks of life. It is the intention to have the commercial and financial interests represented as well as the mills, factories, shops and mines. This is absolutely essential to the success of the club and its purpose, and all these are included in the details of information.

Discussion of After the War Problems.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, August 10.—The Prime Minister consented to receive in his room at the House of Commons on August 3rd a deputation from the joint executives of the Triple Industrial Alliance—the Miners' Federation, the National Union of Railwaymen, and the National Transport Workers' Federation—on questions connected with demobilization after the war.

In the interests, first, of the 500,000 or more mine, railway, and transport workers who have enlisted, and secondly, of those who have temporarily filled their places, and three executives hold that it is the duty of the Government to see that the standard conditions of life secured and maintained by generations of trade union effort shall not be allowed to fall, or labor to be cheapened, by a flooding of the labor market with discharged soldiers and sailors. They will, therefore, put before the Prime Minister the following demands:

(1) That departures from trade union practices made to accelerate production and distribution shall cease when peace is resumed.

(2) That all men or women employed as substitutes shall, when disemployed, be given other work at stadard living rates or full maintenance.

(3) That the demobilization of those who have joined for the duration of the war shall be arranged in such a manner as will lead to their gradual absorption into civilian occupations.

(4) That all who so desire shall be granted extended furloughs at full Army pay with full separation and billeting allowances in order to recuperate.

(5) That registration bureaux and an employment board (one-half of the members to be appointed by trade unions) shall be set up to deal with the transition stage.

(6) That men who have severed their connection with the Army shall, if unable to procure work, be assured maintenance allowance.

Mr. Robert Smillie, president of the Miners' Federation, referring at Blyth on July 31st, to these demands, said that if an evasive answer was given by the Prime Minister trade unionists would have something to say. Governments that were not amenable to reason, he declared, were amenable to force.

Individual trade unions all over the country are taking up more briskly now than ever before the discussion as to what is to happen to labor after the war. As is no doubt well known, industrial conditions in this country have changed remarkably because of the war. In the first place unemployment has almost vanished. One big union, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, whose members are fitters, machine shop workers, etc., and which has a membership of over 200,000 only had 28 drawing out-of-work benefit recently. A similar story can be told of most other big unions. Of course many of these trade societies are directly helped by the big boom in the war material business. Even where this boom does not affect the unions, however, it does so indirectly in that the members frequently leave those occupations where work is perhaps slack and get into the munition factories. There is a curious story of a strike of house painters and decorators in Yorkshire apropos of this. There the local painters put in a claim for an extra two cents per hour. Upon the masters refusing this point blank the men locked up their tools and went and applied for work at a local munitions factory. Here they have become sufficiently skilled within a fortnight and are now earning rates substantially higher than they earned at their own trade. After the war of course all this will be altered and that is why this question as to what is to happen is being discussed far and wide.

The actual problem falls into two distinct lines. They are:

(1) The transitional problem—the problem of demobilization of the armies and what is going to happen when the war ceases: and

(2) The more permanent problems of whether we are going to try and find a settlement of the old pre-war questions and how far those questions have taken on a new character as the result of changes brought about by the war.

While at the beginning of the war a large number of men were taken off the labor market, millions will be put back at the end. Government or-

FAKIRS ATTEMPT TO BRIBE THE TRIBUNE

Advertising Rejected and the Exposure Goes On While Letters Pour in from Different Sections of the Country.

It may as well be thoroughly understood that it requires nerve for burgalary and the fake furniture man must have nerve as well as the porchclimber or the safe-blower and rarely has any newspaper been invaded with such daring as the Tribune experienced since it began the exposure of the prince of fakirs, who are operating fake furniture houses in Pittsburgh and trimming the dear public to the tune of $250,000 a year.

Having had experience in exposing corrupt constables, who accept bribes to close their eyes while crooks, sharks, sure-thing men, working paddle-wheels, shell games, jewelry fakes and operators of all kinds of devices are robbing the unsuspecting at the country fair little was thought that a legitimate furniture house would send its agents to bribe a newspaper but that's just what happened. The Tribune can grow fat and hearty if it wishes to accept advertising and no mention was made of stopping the exposure. No question about advertising rates such incidentals are entirely too trival. The only question is accept our ad and become an accessary before the fact. Take our ad and set the seal of approval upon our business methods no matter how putrid or currupt they are. The acceptance of advertising from a fake house gives the crooks a clean bill of health and by printing the advertisment the Tribune would be approving the infamy and scoundralism. The Tribune will aid no crook. The "advertising copy" was chucked into an insolated corner and later returned to the agents who called in person. The Tribune refuses to permit its columns to be used either by criminals or for criminal practices.

How much interest is being created in the exposures made is clearly shown by the letters pouring into the office of the Tribune. The following extracts were taken from letters just received:

"Jefferson, Ohio, August 14, 1916.

Doubtless all good honest people are glad to see the grand work accomplished by the Tribune in bringing to light and routing out these furniture fakers.

While the average reader say nothing in particular along these lines, it is not that they fail to see and appreciate these reforms. They see the complete elimination of all earth's evils on a larger scale. The tree that bears them is hydroheaded and they see by faith the axe is laid at the roots that all forms of evil amongst its branches will fall as their support gives away.

* * * * * * * * * * *

Many good philanthropic people attempt reforms in various ways. Some try to eliminate the drink evil, the evil of white slavery, graft, oppression, war, etc., etc., but the doing of good work for the purity of life we see the entire tree must go in the overthrow of which vice and evil will be eliminated forever.

Another reader endorses the action of the Tribune in exposing the fake furniture dealers and in her letter enclosing a subscription for another subscriber in substance she writes:

"Chicago, Ill., August 12th, 1916.

Would also say the work the Tribune has undertaken in exposing fake furniture dealers has found an echo in my heart. I surely admire your honesty, courage and stand for truth and righteousness.

Respectfully yours,
Mrs. H. Momzke,
7828 Green street."

History from Dispatch Files.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY

Former Police Magistrate Vitchestain was nominated for State Senator by the Union Labor party in the Thirty-eighth district.

On Tuesday, August 15, 1916, the Pittsburgh Dispatch recalled an item of news, wherein the popularity of the editor of the National Labor Tribune a decade ago is shown. At that time he was a Police Magistrate of the city of Pittsburgh and had as he has today practically the support of those employed in the mills, factories, workshops and mines in this thriving centre.

Mr. Vitchestain is probably one of the best informed writers on industrial matters in Pennsylvania, if not in the country, having filled the most responsible places on the big dailies as a writer on labor and industrial news. The item from the Dispatch revives memories of many interesting contests in which he took part and his famous fighting qualities are well known to the people of Pittsburgh. The politicians of the city of Pittsburgh and Allegheny county will long remember the strenuous conflicts through which he passed in an effort to correct the prevailing evils a generation ago. It was during this series of political contests that the Political Bosses were completely routed and the Political Machine was smashed. So badly emasculated was the old Ring that all hope of ever reviving it has been lost. The famous battles in which he was a mighty force destroyed forever Boss Rule. This resulted in the overthrow of Flinn and Magee, who had held sway and dictated politics in the Iron City and Allegheny County for a quarter of a century. So long as Mr. Vitchestain remains as editor of the National Labor Tribune, there can be no mistake as to its policies for the highest standards of morality, efficiency and justice. If he decides upon a course no one questions his fearlessness in pressing the issue to a successful finish.

IN GOD'S OWN WORDS.

But Noah, found grace in the eyes of the Lord. Noah was a just man, and perfect in his generations.—Gen. 6:8, 9.

God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come . . . I do bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh.—Gen. 6.13, 17. But with thee will I establish My covenant . . . And of every living thing of all flesh two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark.—Gen. 6:17, 18, 14, 18, 19.

Thus did Noah.—Gen. 6:22. And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the earth . . . . Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.—Gen. 7:23.

And the whole world lieth in wickedness (I Jno. 5:19); for we wrestle not against the flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places (Eph. 6:12); the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience.—Eph. 2:2.

strenously fought against it as a Pagan error which brought to naught the work of Christ.

"They were defeated, however, and the conception prevailed which is vulgarly current today, of an immortal soul and a mortal body, temporarily joined, then severed, then reunited in an imperishable personality. Its currency has probably confused and obstructed the work of Christ among man more than all other obstacles combined. A Pagan speculation has masqueraded as long as an elemental Christian truth that now, when the intelligent world it well disposed to receive and comprehend Jesus' revelation of a life to come, Plato stands across the path and is commonly mistaken for Christ."

ST. AUGUSTINE

Since it is the consensus of opinion amongst historians and scholars that St. Augustine was the greatest of the early "Christian Fathers", a little journey to the home of this master mind of all subsequent thinkers of Institutionalism would not be amiss here. From the following data concerning this genius, it will develop that the Truth which Luther resurrected from St. Paul was generally lost sight of by the Error that Calvin resurrected from St. Augustine and that the principles of conduct of St. Augustine tallies with that of Calvin, in contradistinction to those of St. Paul and Luther, the theological product of which, is now known as Calvinistic Christianity as against Evangelical Christianity.

St. Augustine's "first impression" of religion in his home, was of Pagan persuasion. His father being a Pagan until advanced in years, and was only baptized as a Christian shortly before his death. Augustine's pious mother gave him his inclinations toward religious topics. He was educated at Madaura ad Carthage. At Carthage the impetuous and passionate nature of his youth gave place to riot and sensuality. In his Confessions he paints the frightful abyss into which he had plunged himself during his youth. Augustine in later years was a libertine turned saint—he had run the course of sloth and revolted, but unlike St. Paul and Luther, who, in trying to measure up to the best of their abilities, their ideal standards felt their weaknesses and sinful tendencies and trusted in the Atoning Blood of Christ for righteousness, Augustine was started to a purer life by Philosophy. "The thing which appears to have first stirred his deeper being into life was a passage which he suddenly came across in the Hortensius of Cicero, treating of the worth and dignity of philosophy. Fascinated by 'the delusive pretensions of the Manichaen set, which, instead of a blind belief in authority held out the promise of clear knowledge and a satisfactory solution of all questions relating to things human and divine' Augustine now became a professed Manichaen." In about ten years time he absorbed all the learning of Manichaeism and left the sect at about thirty in disgust and bewilderment.

Augustine later formed the acquaintance of the Bishop of Milan who was the eloquent and devout St. Ambrose, who was a zealous student of Plato and became infected with the Greek learning. "Augustine confesses that the Platonic writings 'enkindled in his mind an incredible ardour'; they awakened his deeper spiritual nature, which keenly upbraided him with his sins." In other words Augustine was not brought into a realization of his need of a Saviour who would have been his sufficiency for the justice of God's laws, nor was he "begotten to a newness of life" by the transforming power of God's Word, "begotten with the water and the word", but was really an intellectual child of Plato—not a follower of Christ and His apostles.

Here we have the situation: Augustine was a Pagan by pre-natal tendency fostered upon his mother's knee. He became wayward and is arrested from this by, philosophy not the repentence mingled with a faith in the blood of Christ, which would have set his mind at ease and permitted the fecondating ecects of the Holy Spirit leading to an enlightening of his mind along the lines of his faith in the death of Christ and it's necessity. Next he became an ardent follower of Plato instead of a "New Breature in Christ." Inoculated with Platonism he turns to study the Bible to fall into line with growing popular religion of the times. This renown "greatest intellects the world has seen" formulates "Platonic Christianity" and shapes the doctrines of the Bible according to it. Then he through his weaknesses succumbs to temptations and "borne down by the ungodly impulses which he thought he had already subdued" * * * "The necessity of a living and personal God and Savious to rescue him from the condemnation of his own conscience, and impart a sanctifying vitality to the abstract truths which he worshipped, shown clear through all the stormy struggles of his heart." He was finally baptized by his Platonic tutor St. Ambrose at Milan. In short we got Paganism and Platonism fused with the Theism of Judaism and Christianity distilled through the intellect of the great St. Augustine which supplants the pure and unadulterated teaching of Christ passed through the magnificent inspired intellect of St. Paul.

Augustine's works are considered as "not only the grandest and most philosophical of the earliest monuments of Christian theology, but one of the most profound and lasting monuments of human genius" * * * No mind ever exerted a greater influence on the church than that of Augustine." In view of these facts it will be interesting to note what doctrines of the Bible that have molded into conformity to this "Platonic Christianity"? Here are some of the thesis he taught: Predestination, Perseverance of the Saints, Irresistible Grace, and other kindred doctrines. It will be noted that this is the Calvinistic Christianity that spurred Knox into action and later Armenians who clearly defined the Evangelical Christianity and has been at warfare ever since. And, just as we have noted in Essay III the fruits of this species of Error culminated in the burning of Servetus at Geneva, we also note that it had the same effect upon Augustine. It is said of him that "the chastisement of religious errors by civil penalties, even to burning, was estiblished and confirmed by the authority of Augustine, and thus transmitted to succeeding ages."

The reason for the hardening of the hearts of these men lies in the fact that the nature of the punishment of the Pagan, torture, coupled with the Platonic theory that man's soul never dies, hense the torture is eternal, and they reason that a heretic at death goes into eternal torment, there would be nothing wrong in giving him a foretaste of what they believed God was about to give them eternally, unless he retracted. There is here a beautiful consistency even if it is diabolical. Grant their promises and you will admire their actions—they were, Augustine, the Catholics that followed all the way down to Calvin, simply consistent with their theology. Here are the words of Augustine to a civil magistrate who shrank from putting into force a cruel edict of burning a heretic: "It is much better that some should perish by their own fires, than the whole body should burn in the everlasting flames of Gehenna, through the desert of their impious dissensions." Here is a fine reason for burning a heretic—if the one who was burned did not recant, it saved the other intimidated from the everlasting fires of Hell. The root error of this tendency noted amongst the "Christian Fathers" to unite with the state through which they so cruelly punished heretics, is the delusion started in St. Paul's days, that the Kingdom of God was set up at Pentecost. Paul fought this error when he remarked ironically, "Ye have reigned as kings without us, and I would to God ye did reign, for then we (The Apostles) would be reigning with you.

Luther, as well as the rest of the Protestant reformers, and the Catholics that fought the reformers, appealed alike to his authority. But the teachings of St. Paul influenced Luther profoundly, especially the doctrine "the just shall live by faith" and made him fight against his associates in resorting to force to establish the principles of the reformation, for he said that "the very essence of faith is liberty." Calvinism is nothing but a reassertion of Augustinianism and the same could be equally said of the rationalistic teaching of the Swiss reformer, Zwingli. Luther's tampering with St. Augustine's writings was due to the circumstances of him being an Augustinian Monk and found the writings of St. Paul in the same monastery.

THE TRUE CHURCH.

One Sabbath morn I roamed astray,
And asked a Pilgrim for the way:
"O, tell me, whither shall I search,
That I may find the one true Church?
He answered, "Search the world around;
The one true Church is never found.
You ivy on the abbey wall
Makes fair the falsest Church of all."
But, fearing he had told me wrong,
I cried, "Behold the entering throng;"
He answered, "If a Church be true,
It hath not many, but a few!"
Around a font the people pressed,
And crossed themselves on brow and breast.
"A cross so light to bear,' he cried,
"Is not of Christ, the Crucified!
Each forehead, frowning, sheds it off;
Christ's cross abides through scowl and scoff!"
We entered at the open door,
And saw men kneeling on the floor;
Faint candle, by the daylight dimmed,
As if by foolish virgins trimmed;
Fair statues of the saints, as white
As now their robes are, in God's sight;
Stained windows, casting down a beam,
Like Jacob's ladder in the dream.
The Pilgrim gazed from nave to roof,
And, frowning, uttered this reproof;
"Alas! who is it understands God's Temple is not made with hands?"

We walked in ferns so wet with dew
They splashed our garmets trailing through,
And came upon a church whose dome
Upheld a cross, but not for Rome.
We brushed a cobweb from a pane,
And watched the service in the fane,
"Do prayers," he asked, "the more avail,
If offered at an altor rail?
Does water sprinkled from a bowl,
Wash any sin from any soul?
Do tongues that taste the bread and wine
Speak truer after such a sign?
Just then, upon a maple spray,
Two orioles perched, and piped a lay,
Until the gold beneath their throats
Shook molten in their mellow notes.
Resounding from the church, a psalm
Rolled, quivering, through the outer calm.
"Both choirs," said I, "are in accord,
For both give praises to the Lord."
"The birds," he answered, "chant a song
Without a note of sin or wrong:
The church's anthen is a strain
Of human guilt and mortal pain."
The church's anthem is a strain
And in the pulpit rose the priest.
The Pilgrim whispered in my ear,
"It profits not to tarry here."

"He speaks no error," answered I,
"He teaches that the living die;
The dead arise; and both are true;
Both wholesome doctrines; neither new.
The Pilgrim said, "He strikes a blow
At wrongs that perished long ago;
But covers with a shielding phrase
The living sins of present days."
We turned away among the tombs—
A tangled place of briers and blooms.
I spelled the legands on the stones;
Beneath reposed the martyrs bones,
The bodies which the rack once brake
In witness for the dear Lord's sake,
The ashes gathered from the pyres
Of saints whose zeal our soul inspires.
The Pilgrim murmured as we passed,
"So gained they all the crown at last.
Men lose it now through looking back,
To find it at the stake, the rack;
The rack and stake are old with grime;
God's touchstone is the living time!"

We passed where poplars, gaunt and tall,
Let twice their length of shadow fall.
Then rose a meeting-house in view,
Of bleached and weather-beaten hue.
Men, plain of garb and pure of heart,
Divided church and world apart.
Nor did they vex the silent air
With any sound of hymn or prayer.
God's finger to their lips they pressed,
Till each man kissed it and was blessed.
I asked, "Is this the true church,then?"
He answered, "Nay, a sect of men;
And sects that shut their doors in pride
Shut God and half His saints outside.
The gates of Heaven, the Scriptures say,
Stand open wide, by night and day.
So, then, to enter, is there need
To carry key of church or creed?"

Still following where the highway led,
Till elms made arches overhead,
We saw a spire and weathercoock,
And snow-white church upon a rock—
A rock, where centuries before,
Came sea-tossed pilgrims to the shore.
My sandals straightway I unbound,
Because the place was holy ground.
I cried, "One church at last I find,
That fetters not the human mind."
"This church," said he, "is like the rest;
For all are good, but none is best.

Then far from every church we strayed—
Save Nature's pillared aisles of shade.
The spuirrels ran to see us pass,
And God's sweet breath was on the grass.
I challenged all the creeds, and sought
What truth, or lie, or both, they taught.
I asked, "Had Augustine a fault?"
The Pilgrim gazed at heaven's high vault,
And answered, "Can a mortal eye
Contain the sphere of all the sky?"
I said, "the circle is too wide."
"God's truth is wider!" he replied.
"Though Augustine was on his knee,
He saw how little he could see;
Though Luther sought with burning heart,
He caught the glory but in part;
Though Calvin opened wide his soul,
He comprehended not the whole.
Not Luther, Calvin, Augustine,
Saw visions such as I have seen."
While yet he spake, a raptune stole
Through all my still inquiring soul.
I looked upon His holy brow,
Entreating, "Tell me, who are THOU?"
But such a splendor filled the place,
I knew it was the Lord's own face;
I was a sinner, and afraid!
I knelt in dust, and thus I prayed:
"O Christ, the Lord! end Thou my search,
And lead me to the one true Church."
He spake as never man may speak—
"The one true Church thou shalt not seek,
Seek thou, forevermore, instead,
To find the one true Christ, its Head!"
The Lord then vanished from my sight,
And left me standing in the light.

CO-OPERATORS FAVOR UNIONISM.

STAUNTON, Ill., Aug. 14.—At the second convention of the Illinois State Co-operative society, which had double the number of delegates in attendance at the first convention, 16 months ago, it was voted that every branch insist that every person employed must be a good-standing member in whatever union they are eligible to, and that the branches recognize the minimum working conditions of said unions. Other resolutions adopted were:

Every officer and member of the branches should do everything in their power to push the sale of union label goods; injunction limitation bill, urged by organized labor; approved; instructed executive board to enlist support of farmers' organizations in patronizing co-operative stores and in the establishment of canning factories, dairies and packing houses.

It was stated that the delegates to this convention represented almost treble the membership and merchandise, property and financial ownership on the part of the co-operative movement that they did in the previous convention.

PUEBLO, Col., Aug. 14.—The Pueblo Chieftain, which was a staunch defender of the coal operators' "law and order" theory during the recent strike of southern Colorado coal miners, approves the dismissal of numerous indictments by Attorney General Farrar. The Chieftain makes this acknowledgment that the miners were correct when they charged that justice was denied them:

"Following the strike and during it there were arrests by the wholesale. After the calmer judgment of the state had asserted itself it was plainly to be seen that hundreds of the indictments were not sufficiently supported by evidence to secure convictions."

LAUGHTER A GOOD TONIC.

I have a grand remedy which I wish to recommend to all suffering humanity. I have tried it myself. A number of my acquaintances have tried it. All speak highly of the benefits received. It has helped others, why not you?

It is—Laughter.

Not smiling, not mere good humor, but laughter, the kind that explodes, shakes you, and goes on exploding and shaking like a rapid-fire gun, until the massed battalions of worry are shot to pieces.

To laugh is probably the best medicine ever discovered. One hearty laugh is better than a wagonload of roots and herbs, better than seven stores full of dope.

"There is not," says the 'London Health', 'the remotest corner of the body that does not feel some wavelet from the great convulsion produced by the hearty shaking of the central man. The blood moves rapidly, and probably its chemical, electrical, or vital condition, is distinctly modified."

In other words, one good laugh is equal to a dose of salts. * * * bromo seltzer, and a spoonful of quinine.

If you have got into such a condition that nothing can make you have a fit of mirth, a regular whoopee, more's the pity.

This is rather an oppressive world; there are so many burdens and perplexities that any one is liable to be crushed. Laughter is nature's defense against the world burden. By laughter a man shakes off his pack, for a few minutes at least, and capers like a loose colt in the pasture. When he returns and is saddled again he is refreshed, is stronger.

It doesn't make much difference what you laught at. Children laugh at nothing at all, and are happier than we.

Goldsmith says of a happy group that "What they lacked in wit they made up in laughter."

One of the best laugh makers is the good story; not the pleasant little quip, but the "regular scream," the kind that makes you hold your sides, rock to and fro and yell.

Pass it along. Save up two or three, and when you meet a friend hand them to him. Who can tell how much health and sanity are caeated by the good stories that are continually going the rounds?

Don't be afraid to laugh? Don't get out of practice. Laugh, and he human. Not that you should be ever giggling, or set out to be a professional humorist, but rather that you should learn the Lincolnian art of knowing and being able to tell a "good one" upon occasion.

God bless the laughers. Their roar goes up over all the earth, the brave protest of the live force within us against the glooms and scarecrows of this fearsome world.

Appreciations

Pittsburgh, N. S., Aug. 19.

Seeking the Truth in love I am still appreciating your good paper and glad to be on the subscription list. Would like to state that one time one of the pilgrim brothers asked another one a question and was surprised at the answer, and stated to the brother, "why, brother, I thought you were a good Hebrew and Greek scholar?" 'So I am, brother,' was his answer, "but it was not Hebrew or Greek that brought me into the Truth and it will not be Hebrew or Greek that will take me out of the Truth." So it was rather heart conditions between him and his God. So I will also state, it was not what I eat or what I wear or how I was housed along the temperal lines that brought me into the Truth, and I am going to take good care that it will not be what I eat or what I wear or how I am housed along temperal lines that will take me out of the Truth, for God is love, and in thy light we see light. Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

MOMENTOUS TYPES OF GLORIES TO COME.

NATURAL ISRAEL ESPECIALLY TYPICAL OF BLESSINGS FOR CHURCH AND WORLD

Many Significant Old Testament Pictures—Moses as Prophet and Mediator—Christ the Great Antitypical Prophet and Mediator—Law Covenant vs. New Covenant—Israel's First-Borns—Church of First-Borns—Israel's Priesthood—Melchizedek Priesthood—Day of Atonement—Antitypical Priests Now Sacrificing.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., August 20.—Pastor Russell delivered an address of great interest today before the I. B. S. A. Convention being held in our city. His theme, The Types and the Antitypes of the Bible, was based upon the text, "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." (Romans 15:4) He said:

The Old Testament Scriptures abound in significant types. God selected the one nation of Israel, and made that nation a picture of what He is now doing, and what He purposes to do, through Christ and the Church to the whole world. From one viewpoint the twelve tribes of Natural Israel typified the twelve tribes of Spiritual Israel. (Exodus 19:5, 6; 1 Peter 2:9; Revelation 7:1-8.) In another picture, the Atonement Day, Israel pictured the unsaved world, while their priesthood typified the Gospel Church. In the days following the Atonement Day, Israel represented the world during Christ's Millennial Reign, under the instructions of the glorified Priesthood.

Again, Israel's first-borns, who were passed over by the destroying angel on their last night in Egypt, typified the Church of the First-borns, now being passed over because the blood of Christ has been sprinkled on their hearts, during this night of sin. The first-borns of Israel were afterwards represented in the tribe of Levi, set aside for a holy purpose. This tribe represented the Household of Faith of this Gospel Age, from which the Royal Priesthood are chosen. The Christ class, the Royal Priesthood, were typified by Melchizedek, the king-priest of Salem, who lived in the days of Abraham. (Genesis 14:17-20; Psalm 110:4; Hebrews 7:1-17, 21.) Melchizedek fitly represented The Christ, Head and Body, in glory; for these unite in themselves the office of both kings and priests, Jesus being the great Chief King and High Priest.

It is very necessary, however, to keep all these various types and pictures separate and distinct; else confusion will result. The New Testament throws great light upon this subject. The Apostle Paul tells us that the Jewish Law foreshadowed good things to come, and that Israel's priests served as a type of Heavenly things.—Hebrews 8:1-6; 10:1.

THE TWO ISRAELS

The Scriptures mention two Israels—Israel after the flesh and Israel after the Spirit. (Romans 9:8; Galatians 6:16.) In the typical pictures wherein Natural Israel represents the world during the Millennial Age, we see that all mankind will then be in covenant relationship with God, and will have His blessing as the nation of Israel. When during that Age the world shall be restored and become the people of God, they will be a part of Fleshly Israel; for only Israelites are to be saved everlastingly.

This will be a gradual work. At the beginning of the Millennial Age, the blood of the "better sacrifices" will be applied for the world, the New Covenant will be inaugurated with Natural Israel, and gradually the whole world will become attached to Israel as a part of Abraham's earthly seed. (Jeremiah 31:11-34; Isaiah 2:2-4; Micah 4:1-4; Genesis 12:3; 22:16-18.) Spiritual Israel will then be their invisible rulers, as glorified spirit beings, reigning in the Kingdom of Messiah. His Kingdom shall be "the desire of all nations" and unto Him "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess."—Haggai 2:7; Isaiah 46; 23-25.

As Moses was the mediator of the Old Law Covenant of Fleshly Israel, so Christ will be the Mediator of the New Law Coventant, the great Prophet of who mMoses foretold, saying, "A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from among your brethren like unto me. Him shall ye hear in all things that He shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall not hear that Prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." (Deuteronomy 18:15, 19; Acts 3:22, 23.) This great Mediator will be able to do for the world what Moses was unable to do for Natural Israel. Moses could not forgive their sins and lift them up to perfection, restitution. But the antitypical Mediator will do this for the world—for "whosoever will."

The Head of this great Prophet and Mediator was raised up from amongst their brethren over eighteen hundred years ago. Since then, God has been raising up the Body of the Mediator. Only consecrated believers in Christ become members of this Body, the faithful ones at this time coming in as the feet members of the Body of Christ; for we are down at the end of the Gospel Age, when this great Messiah is about completed. Jesus, the Head of this Messiah, having bought the whole world with His precious blood, has imputed of His merit to His Church, in order to unite them to Himself as a part of the great Sin-offering for the world; and as soon as the sacrificing work shall have been completed, He will begin His great work for the restoration of mankind to human perfection. In other words, as soon as all those who are to compose the spiritual phase of the Messianic Kingdom shall have passed beyond the veil of death, the Kingdom work will begin.

BLOOD OF BULLS AND GOATS

The work of that glorious New Dispensation will be to re-write in the hearts of mankind the Law of God, and to bring the world back to the physical, mental and moral perfection enjoyed by our first parents before their disobedience. Then mankind not only will be able to keep the perfect Divine Law fully, but will delight therein. Our Lord Jesus is the only One who can thus recover mankind from their lost estate. No one else has the ability; for our Lord is Jehoviah's Channel for accomplishing this stupendous work. He is the perfect One, the sinless One, who by Divine arrangement laid down His life for Adam and His race.

When Moses was preparing to mediate the Law Covenant, he took the blood of bulls and of goats, and sprinkled first the tables of the Law and afterwards all the people of Israel. (Exodus 24:3-8.) Thus the Law Covenant was established, bringing the people into covenant relationship with God. This arrangement typified the establishment of the New Law Covenant by the great antitypical Mises, Christ, who first satisfied God's Justice, represented in the books of the Law, and then, during the thousand years of His Mediatorial Reign, will sprinkle "all the people," the world, with the blood of the "better sacrifices"—those of The Christ, Head and Body—thus bringing the world into covenant relationship with God. —Hebrews 9:15-23.

It may be asked, "If the blood of these bulls and goats represent the blood of Christ and His Body members, why were many bulls and goats slain, instead of one?" We answer, As there was a great concourse of Israelites, all of whom had to be sprinkled, the blood of many bulls and goats was required to sprinkle all Israel. But this was only a necessary repetition of the same thing. It represented the sacrifice of the one antitypical Bullock, our Lord Jesus, and of the one antitypical Goat, the Body of Christ. On the Day of Atonement, only the one bullock and the one goat were used to picture the same sacrifices.

BLOOD PRESENTED BY HIGH PRIEST

We have noted that in the type the tribe of Levi was set apart by God to represent the first-borns of Israel. (Numbers 8:14-19,) From this tribe the priestly class was selected—the family of Aaron. The High priest and the under priest represented the great High Priest and His under priests of this Gospel Age, the "little flock." The remainder of the tribe of Levi represented those Christian believers who fail to make their calling and election sure to the Royal Priesthood, and who are called in the Scripture "a great multitude"—the Great Company class—Revelation 7:9-17; Psalm 45:9-14.

The high priest was the one who offered the Day of Atonement sacrifice, and who carried the blood into the Most Holy to present it to God, upon the Mercy Seat. He presented the blood of both the bullock, representing our Lord Jesus, and the Lord's Goat, representing the Body members of Christ. (Leviticus 16:14, 15: Hebrews 13:11-13. So after His ascension our Lord Jesus appeared in the antitypical Most Holy—Heaven itself—with His own blood, which He presented for those who would be of His Body. (Hebrews 9:24.) At the close of this Gospel Age, after His Body members have been offered, He will again appear before the antitypical Mercy Seat to present the blood of the Lord's Goat class, which is "for all the people," all mankind. The merit of these latter sacrifices, however, is all His own, being really only another presentation of His own merit, through His Body. All this work is the work of the Gospel Age.

WORK OF THE MEDIATORIAL REIGN

Amongst their other duties the priests had entire charge of teaching the people. They taught the Israelites especially what was God's will, how to approach God, how to render sacrifices—whatever the people needed to know. Furthermore, they offered both gifts and sacrifices for the people, who brought their sacrifices and gifts to the priests.

This was an illustration of the arrangement in the Age to come. The people will come to The Christ, Head and Body. God will have no direct dealings with the world until the close of the Mediatorial Reign of Christ, for He has committed all judgment unto the Son, who will deal with mankind throughout their judgment Day of a thousand years. (John 5:22-27; Acts 17:31; 2 Peter 3:7, 8.) The great Mediator will be the "go-between," representing God to the world, and the world to God.

When the Mediatorial work is completed, and mankind have been fully restored, then the Kingdom will be delivered over to the Father. The Christ will step out from between the world and God, and mankind will be directly in the hands of Jehovah. All who then shall prove worthy under Jehovah's testing shall be granted eternal life. Those who prove unworthy shall die the Second Death, from which there will be no recovery.—1 Corinthians 15:24-28; Revelation 20:7-9.

THE DAY OF ATONEMENT FIRES

On the Jewish Day of Atonement the bullock and the Lord's goat were used to picture the "better sacrifices" of the Gospel Age—those of The Christ. The bullock was a fitting representation of our Lord Jesus as a man; for he was perfect in mind and body, full of zeal and strength. The young bullocks of sacrifices were prime animals, with much fat. When this fat was offered, it made a great smoke, thus representing our Lord's heart devotion to the Heavenly Father.

The fat of the Bullock was burned upon the Brazen Altar in the Court of the Tabernacle, in the sight of all within the Court. This typified the fact that our Lord's loving zeal and sacrifice is seen and appreciated by all within the antitypical Court—justified believers. The burning of its flesh, hide, etc., outside the camp sifinifies that our Lord's sacrifice is a stench in the nostrils of those outside the Court—the world of unbelievers. The third fire, burning simultaneously on the Golden Altar in the Holy, consumed the incense, from which arose a sweet odor, and represented God's appreciation of our Redeemer's sacrifice—that it was a sweet odor in Jehovah's sight.

In our Lord's case, all these fires were burning at the same time. God saw His sacrifice, the Levites—including the priests—saw it, and the people in the Camp saw it. All these fires ceased at the moment when our Lord's sacrifice was completed at Calvary. The sweet incense had already preceded Jesus into the antitypical Most Holy; for in the type it rested over the Mercy Seat when the high priest entered the Most Holy with the blood. Consequently the Father raised our Lord from the dead on the other side of the veil, as a glorious spirit being. Then, when He ascended on High, He entered into the antitypical Most Holy, where He sprinkled the blood of His sacrifice before the antitypical Mercy Seat, when He "appeared in the presence of God for us"—the Church.

THE TWO GOATS

There were two goats tied at the door of the Tabernacle; but only one of them was chosen to be the sin-offering for the people. The Lord's Goat was given the same treatment as was the bullock. A goat fittingly represents the Body members of Christ; for the goat is a very lean small animal as compared with a prime young bullock. Our zeal and our love are far less than are those of Jesus. We are weak and imperfect from the Adamic fall; and it is only the merit of our Saviour that gives our sacrifices any value. It was the high priest that killed both the bullock and the goat in the type. In the antitype it was our Lord Jesus who first offered Himself up, and then the Church. He as the High Priest first killed His human nature, represented by the bullock in the type. Then He kills the human nature of His Church. We merely present ourselves to Him for sacrifice, desiring to suffer with Him in order to reign with Him.—Romans 12:1, 2;2 Timothy 2:11, 12.

The other goat, while presented for sacrifice, was not killed as a sacrifice, but was sent out into the wilderness to die, bearing the sins of the Israelites, though not as a part of the sin-offering. It typifies a class who present themselves to be sacrificed, but who fail to keep their consecration vow faithfully. Hence they fail to be of the antitypical Lord's Goat class. They will be the Great Company. Although they presented themselves for sacrifice, yet they held back, did not fulfill their Covenant of Sacrifice. All their lifetime they have been subject to bondage through fear of death—a sacrificial death with our Lord Jesus. They smell the bad odor of the burning goat without the Camp, and they wish to avoid being associated with it. But in avoiding it, they lose the privilege of becoming members of the glorified Body of Christ. They will lose the Kingdom.

Those who are faithfully following their Lord are now sacrificing priests. Our great High Priest is doing the sacrificing, and we are co-operating with Him. We are in harmony with this burning outside the Camp. The New Creature says, "Let the flesh burn." We suffer in this burning, but we do so willingly. We know that it is only if we suffer with our Lord that we shall reign with Him. We had quite a severe warfare with our fallen flesh; for the interests of the New Creatures are in opposition to those of the human nature. Therefore we must bring our hodies under and keep them in subjection to the new mind.

If the old creature wins in this conflict, we shall be no part of the sacrifice of Christ.

THE BLESSED ROYAL PRIESTHOOD

The work of sacrificing is not yet entirely finished. The last members of the Body of Christ are now laying down their lives. Day by day these faithful ones are asking, "What is the Lord's will concerning me? What is the meaning of this providence?" Their wills are fully given up to the Lord's will. They realize that whatsoever they do they are to do all to the glory of God. In all their daily providences they seek to read His will. They seek to avoid whatever would incapacitate them or hinder them from doing the Lord's work. This is not a slavery to them; on the contrary, it is the most blessed freedom.

These blessed ones are daily fed with the antitypical shew-bread in the Holy. They are enlightened with the light of the antitypical Golden Candlestick. Daily they offer incense at the antitypical Golden Altar. They are children of the light; they are not of the night nor of the darkness. For all their imperfections they have an Advocate with the Father. (1 John 2:1-2.) They seek continually to judge themselves and correct their shortcomings, in order that they may not be judged of the Lord for unfaithfulness. If they find that in any way they have wronged another, they make haste to right the wrong, and then go to the Throne of Grace for forgiveness and cleansing. Then they endeavor to profit by the lesson which they have learned in the School of Christ and to develop still more carefully the character likeness of Christ.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

THE "CHRISTIAN FATHERS"

Hypothia's attempt to revive the classics of Greece in Alexandria failed, but resulted in establishing sects known as Nec-Platonists and Manichees. Marcion of the second century, made a similar attempt and also failed; his mixture of Platonism and Christianity was known as Gnosticism. It, as well as the sephism of the Neo-Platonists and Manicheese, passed into the common stock of knowledge. The Greek learning was persistently forced upon the early "Christian Fathers" and they absorbed it into their literature which later was embraced by the clergy who in turn foistered upon the people with their misconceptions of Christianity. This was during the declining days of the Roman Empire. Rome had conquered Greece and the fusing of races and people under their rule caused the fusing of their isms. Since the "Christian Fathers" were losing interest in the inspired writings of the Apostles, and laying equal stress upon their own opinions, it is not to be wondered at that Christianity became contaminated by the isms that were forced upon them. Says Kingsley in the preface of his book, Hypatia:—

"The general intermixture of ideas, creeds, and races, even the more physical facilities for intercourse between different parts of the (Roman) Empire, helped to give the great Christian fathers of the fourth and fifth centuries, a breath of observation, a depth of thought, a large-hearted and large-minded patience and tolerance, such as, we may say boldly, the church has since beheld but rarely, and the world never; at least if we are to judge those great men by what they had, and not by what they had not, and to believe, as we are bound, that had they lived now, and not then, they would have towered as far above the heads of this generation as they did above the heads of their own. An thus an age, which, to the shallow insight of a sneerer like Gibbon, seems only a rotting and aimless chaos of sensuality and anarchy, fanaticism and hypocracy, produced a Clement and an Athanse a Chrysostom, and an Augustine; who absorbed into the sphere of Christianity all which was most valuable in the philosophies of Greece and Egypt, and in the social organization of Rome, as an heirloom for nations yet unborn; and laid in foreign lands, by unconscious agents, the foundations of all European thought and Ethics."

Kingsley does not specify what was "most valuable" in Greek and Egyptian learning which became "the foundation of all European thought and Ethics." S. D. McConnell, D. D., D. C. L, Rector of All Souls Church, New York, in his book, "The Evolution of Immortality," specifies the particular items. We present from pages 45 to 48 as follows:

"A careful study of the ante-Nicene "Fathers" can bue convince one that in and among them a number of ethic notions were struggling to express, each in its own terms, the truth which Christ had dropped among them. The early Christians had all been reared either in the religion of Judea or Greece or Rome. Those among them who had been reared Jews unconsciously transferred their idea of a corporate or tribal immortality from their old faith to their new, and their idea of a corporate or tribal immortality from their old faith to their new, and their imaginations were filled with the hope of a 'Second Coming' and a 'New Jerusalem.'

"Those who were Greeks brought to the new religion the Platonic idea that the individual soul is indestructible, being in fact an articulate portion of the substance of the mind of God. Those of Roman antecedents, having no inherited belief of a future life of any kind, were better prepared to comprehend the truth of Christ. The interaction of all these fragments of previous philosophy produced a confusion and uncertainty of mind which was not clarified for five centuries, Then the masterful Augustine, the man who fixed the lines in which the thought of the civilized world ran from the sixth century to the nineteenth, took Plato's doctrine of the inherent immortality of the soul, disengaged it from metempsychosis and transmigration, and gained for it a general credence which it has held to this day."

"Tertullian in his treatises On the Soul and On the Resurrection of the Flesh gives by far the fullest presentation of what was commonly believed in his circles; but it is quite impossible to make him consistent with himself or with other Christian writers of the same period. Upon the whole, however, he leaves the impression, afterwards confirmed and fixed by Augustine, that he believes the soul to have an independent existence of its own, and to be of its own nature indestructible. The truth of the case seems to be that as the Greek influence gained the domination in the early Church the Platonic doctrine of a natural immortality which it brought with it came to be accepted. The notion was withstood from the beginning as being subversive of the very essence of Christianity. Theophilus (Ad. Autolycum 11. 27), Irendues (Adv. Haeres. II. 34), Clement of Alexandria (The Pedagogues, 1. 3.), Arnobius (Cont. Gent. II. 24), and most weighty of all, Athanasius in his treatise on the Incarnation of the Word of God, all

St. Paul's Address to the Elders of the Church at Ephesus—A Brief Review of His Own Experiences—The Kingdom the Theme of His Preaching. Double Responsibility Upon Elders. Warning Against False Teachers.

"I commend you to God and to the Word of His grace."—Verse 32.

AFTER St. Paul had fled from Ephesus, he made a tour of the European Churches which he had founded. Passing through Macedonia to Corinth, he came by vessel again to Miletus, about fifty miles south of Ephesus. He was accompanied by representatives of several Churches of Greece and Asia Minor, and was en route for Jerusalem, for whose poor he had suggested that collections be made in the four provinces where he had preached. The vessel on which the party were traveling was detained indefinitely at Miletus. So word was sent to the Elders at Ephesus, and they came to Miletus.

Today's Study calls attention especially to the Apostle's address to these Elders. We are not to think of it as a boastful statement, but rather as a plain rehearsal of matters which his hearers would fully concede. It was given, not for his own sake, but with a view to making the lesson of the hour the more impressive. He reminded them that for three years they had known him intimately—his manner of life, his devotion to the Lord, to the service of the Truth and of the brethren. He also reminded them of his humility of mind—that his conduct had not been haughty and overbearing, that he had not sought to lord it over the Church, but that he had endured amongst them many trials and difficulties with the Jews, with "false brethren."

St. Paul and the Disciples.

The Elders knew of his work, his endurance and his holding back from them nothing that would be helpful to them. He had taught them both publicly and privately. To both Jews and Greeks he had testified that there is but one Gospel of Christ, to be accepted through faith and turning away from sin. By calling attention to these elements of his own character, he was laying the foundation for his subsequent exhortation that they should copy his zeal, his fidelity. He had been a faithful overseer, or bishop, watching over their interests; a faithful pastor, guiding their welfare and seeing to their nourishment in spiritual things.

Although possessed of his physical liberty, St. Paul felt a mental restraint which he could not shake off. He must go to Jerusalem; for this was the Lord's providence for him. But he had received assurances from others that bonds and imprisonment awaited him there. None of these things moved him, however, although he knew that the Ephesian Church would see his face no more.

Responsibility Upon All Elders.

Incidentally we note the Apostle's Message, which he particularly emphasized as the Gospel of Christ—"preaching the Kingdom of God." It is right that we should recognize that this is the same Gospel which we are preaching today. Otherwise we are not preaching aright. God's grace was manifested in the gift of His Son, who tasted death for every man. (Hebrews 2:9.) Ultimately that death will bring blessings to all mankind by the establishment of a world-wide Kingdom for the suppression of Sin and Death, for the uplifting of all. This is the Kingdom we pray for, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth."

"I have not shunned to declare unto you the whole counsel of God." What St. Paul preached to the Church at Ephesus is surely the same Message which, by Divine arrangement, has come down to us in his Epistles. We note that his Message contains not one word respecting eternal torment, which is no part of the Divine Plan. Surely from these Epistles we now perceive that he was very patient in reproving, instructing and encouraging the Lord's dear people.

"None of These Things Move Me."

The Apostle's thought in calling the Elders was to impress upon them the thought that, as teachers in the Church, they had a double responsibility—in respect to both themselves and the Church. He reminded them that the Lord had purchased this Flock with the precious blood of the Lamb of God, and that this value in God's sight should make them willing to lay down their lives for the brethren in any service which they could render. He prophetically declared that of their own selves—of the Flock, and especially amongst the Elders—men would arise who would be desirous of being leaders, and who would not hesitate to produce a schism, a division, to help along their ambition. For a time they would deceive the sheep by an outward profession, covering their wolfish nature.

St. Paul also reminded the Elders that his own course had been one of great care over them and over all the Churches. In Verse 35 he reveals the secret of his success as the Lord's servant. He constantly put into practice the Master's admonitions.

MR. HUGHES ANSWERS.

Those Who Clamored for His Views Are Hearing Them.

Those friends of Democracy who clamored so loudly for Mr. Hughes' opinions upon current issues while he still held the high office of justice of the supreme court, are now fully answered by the private citizen, who surrendered his judicial position to accede to the wishes of a majority of the people as expressed through their instructions to their delegates to the Republican national convention.

Mr. Hughes has not disappointed those who have reposed confidence in his character and judgment. In his speech of acceptance he has clearly set forth the vital issues upon which the Republican party proposes to conduct the campaign this fall. On the platform he is telling the nation wherein the present administration has been at fault and what is necessary to be done to restore the United States to the place of respect and honor to which it is entitled in the eyes of the world.

MR. HUGHES HAS EXPLODED THE "KEPT-US-OUT-OF-WAR" ARGUMENT.

Mr. Hughes' attack upon the "kept-us-out-of-war" argument has aroused a story of enthusiasm.

"Kept us out of war?" he demands. "Why, there were nineteen men—good American soldiers, shot down at Vera Cruz, and many Mexicans were killed by our men. That was war. Moreover, it was a very ignoble war. I have heard three explanations of the Vera Cruz move.

"First, it was explained that it was made in order to compel somebody to salute the flag—somebody who had insulted us. But the flag was not saluted and has not been to this day. Then it was said that the salute was not what we sought, but to prevent the landing of a boatload of ammunition intended for Huerta. The ammunition, landed, however, and it has been shown that it reached Huerta in due season without interference on our part.

"When that reason was shown to be untenable, a third one—and possibly the real one—finally was advanced. It was said that our seizure of Vera Cruz was a move to compel the retirement of Huerta. It seems possible that this is true, although we had promised the Mexicans that we would not interfere in their affairs and told them more than once that we wanted them to handle their own affairs.

"That is why the Mexicans could not understand us and that is why they show little faith in our promises."

WE WANT THE AMERICAN FLAG UNSULLIED.

"Now, my friends, we want not only American efficiency in business, in efficiency in the organization of business, in the protection of the factors of human industry and commerce, we want the American flag unsullied and the American name honored throughout the world."—From Mr. Hughes' speech at Chicago.

MANANA

Manana, which is Mexican for "watchful waiting," is the Democratic keynote in the campaign. The Wilson drive is to begin "sometime" after September 1; but no definite engagements have been made, it is announced, for him to commence making political speeches. He has tentative engagements to make some Western visits about the middle of September but nothing positive. Plans are being formulated for carrying on a campaign to capture the woman vote of the country, but who will make the speeches on this phase of the controversy has not been determined. It had been expected that Mr. Bryan would speak in the Maine campaign, but it is now believed he cannot do so, but will make some speeches later. And so it goes. Watchful waiting will prevail while, in the meantime, Mr. Hughes is carrying on a positive campaign and arousing the entire Western country.

WILSON'S POLICIES BLOWN UP.

Charles Evans Hughes did have explosives with him when his motor car was searched by a Canadian soldier, but they were under the candidate's hat. Mr. Hughes will set them off on his Western tour and some of Mr. Wilson's policies will be blown up.—New York Sun.

TAILORS GET BETTERMENTS.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 21.—Journeymen Tailors' union is improving the conditions of repair men employed by clothing houses in this city.

UNREST AT STETSON PLANT.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—Employes at the Stetson hat factory charge the management with violating an agreement which adjusted the recent strike. The company promised representatives of the federal department of labor that it would not discriminate against strikers, and Secretary of Labor Wilson has been notified of the company's disregard for this pledge. The strike started last March and was waged for several weeks by several hundred men and women who suspended work to improve working conditions.

OHIO UNIONISTS TO MEET.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 21.—Officers of the state federation of labor have issued a call for the thirty-third annual convention, to be held at Toledo, beginning October 9.

Ohio unionists have been resisting the attempts of private liability insurance companies to weaken the state compensation law that they may write insurance. As this question directly affects every wage earner in the state, Secretary-Treasurer Donnelly says it will be one of the principal deliberations of the convention.

EFFICIENCY NEEDED HERE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Business organizations have been so busy urging the federal government to establish the sweating plan of production, known as the Taylor system, that they have entirely overlooked their own affairs and the federal trade commission states that "there is a tendency among retail merchants to conduct their business without an adequate system for determining their costs."

The commission also states that it "has found that an amazing number of manufacturers, particularly the smaller ones, have no adequate system for determining their costs and price their goods arbitrarily. It is evident that there must be improvement in this direction before competition can be placed upon a sound economic basis."

The commission has mapped out a system whereby the American manufacturer can estimate such costs as building expense, labor, salaries, officers' salaries, commissions, advertising, insurance, taxes, depreciation, repairs, delivery expenses, discount on sales, reserve for bad debts and miscellaneous expense.

VIOLATE CHILD LABOR LAWS.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 21.—"Most appalling, indeed, is the utter disregard for the laws relating to child labor, compulsory education and the 54-hour law for women," asserts George H. Hamilton, chief inspector of workshops and factories, in his annual report. He says that in three months it was found necessary to institute 115 prosecutions for violations of these laws. Seventy-two per cent. of the fines in the cases prosecuted were suspended or remitted. The report referes rather slightingly to uplift and other voluntary societies which are "most annoying to the department."

Railway Employes Use Miners' Plan.

ciple of arbitration. It strengthens it, rather. It proposes that nothing be conceded except the eight-hour day, to which the whole economic movement of the time seems to point, and the immediate creation of an agency for determining all the arbitrable elements in this case in the light, not of predictions or forecasts, but of established and ascertained facts. This is the first stage of the direct road to the discovery of the best permanent basis for arbitration when other means than those now available are supplied."

PEONAGE ORDINANCE FAILS.

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 21.—Low wage and long hour employers are squealing over the failure of city authorities to enforce a law prohibiting, by heavy licenses, the operation of labor agents. Negroes are leaving the city and lumbermen and employers in the turpentine industry are demanding that the Tampa police stop the exodus. Some unionists suggest that if men are paid a living wage there will be no trouble to supply the labor demand.

CHANGES IN WELSH TINPLATE INDUSTRY

CARDIFF, Wales, Aug 20.—The tinplate industry is about to undergo a revolutionizing process owing to the introduction of a new method of tinning and preparing plates for tinning, according to an announcement made by the Mellingriffith Tinplate Works in South Wales. The process now said to be in successful operation dispenses with the necessity of white pickling, and the white annealed plates, after being separated are, without handling, taken up by machinery and picked, washed, turned, cleaned and piled. It is asserted that the new method increases the production of tinplates in the proportion of more than two to one as compared with the ordinary process.

PRINTERS HONOR PRESCOTT.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 21.—A bronze medalion of the late Wm. B. Prescott, one-time president of the International Typographical union, was part of the official badge of the I. T. U. convention, held in this city during the week.

In his report to the convention President Scott said that the past fiscal year exceeded all others in gross earnings of the membership, which increased $1,556,520 over the previous year. Under the caption "Paper Highwaymen Fatten on Industrial Misfortune," he calls attention to conditions of the paper market. He says that "the grip of the paper trust is choking the life out of some of the weaker publications," and recommends that the convention urge congress to do more than make the customary investigation.

AGAINST PICKETING.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 21.—The state federation of labor is in the thick of a fight to repeal the anti-picketing law, rushed through the state legislature and approved by the governor between March 4 and March 19, last year. While the law prohibits picketing it is an attack on free speech, free press and all other forms of publicity, which is defined in section 1:

"Whoever shall, for the purpose of carrying on, calling attention to, or advertising, directly or indirectly, any controversy, disagreement or dispute between any labor union or organization, or member or members thereof and any person engaged in any lawful business, or his employe, or for the purpose of hindering or preventing such person from conducting his business in any lawful way, or employing or retaining in his employ any person who may lawfully engage in such business."

The law specifically states that "any person who shall engage in picketing shall be guilty of misdemeanor."

Trade unionists are asking citizens to aid them in repealing this statute.

"THIRD DEGREE" EXPOSED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—"Third degree" police methods, which have been so vigorously denounced by the American Federation of Labor, have again been exposed by the confession, at Randolph, New York, of a junk peddler, who establishes the innocence of Charles F. Stielow, convicted of two murders in 1915 and saved from the electric chair four times. The case was carried to the governor of the state, who refused to intervene. Stielow was alleged to have confessed to the police who applied the "third degree" and on this testimony he was convicted, and Nelson Green was sentenced to life imprisonment because of his alleged part in the murder.

NEW YORK, Aug., 21.—The New York World makes this comment on "third degree" methods, in connection with the Stielow case:

"The coercive methods employed to induce suspected criminals to confess have been palliated by the aid they sometimes give in furthering the work of prosecuting officers. But they have no warrant in law, and in the light of their conspicuous abuse in the Stielow case they have no warrant in expediency.

"It is a curious anomaly that while society makes every provision for the reform and betterment of the convict it continues to tolerate this barbarous practice of making innocent men convicts in spite of themselves. The injustice to Stielow will have some condonation if it serves to prevent a like injustice to others."

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 21.—Bushelmen employed in the clothing stores in this city have organized a branch of Journeymen Tailors' union No. 71.

WHO WANTS A CHANCE TO BE A RICH MAN?

Employes of Johnetta Brick and Coal Co. Made Partners and Share in the Profits But Put Up No Cash for Stock.

By J. H. Vitchestain

JOHNETTA, Pa., August 26.—This thriving cosmopolitan town is all aglow with enthusiasm while the wheels of industry are singing the sweetest songs of prosperity and the people are happy On every face there is a smile, on every lip a song and the joy bells are ringing as they rang in 1900, during which time the people here were straining every effort to re-elect McKinley, in whom they had placed implicit confidence and to whom they looked, as many look today, to Charles E. Hughes as their only hope.

I recall vividly the thrift and frugal characteristics of the people here then, and I remember well the campaign orators whom I accompanied to this town when the Allegheny valley was to be aroused to the necessity of the election of the Republican candidate if the nation was to continue its prosperity.

Among the orators whose eloquence was lavished upon the people here and whose resonant appeals floated out on this invigorating atmosphere was that now belching smoke stack of the Monongahela Valley, Congressman A. J. Barchfeld. Here it was where that steel beam, the Long Doctor, ushered into existence that long to be remembered "Lone Star Quartette," which afterward traversed the continent making merry those who attended the political meetings with their famous campaign songs. In that party was that silver tongued orator, Hon. John F. Cox, who later became Speaker of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. It was here that Cox delivered that famous "Full Dinner Pail" oration, and those who heard him will never forget that historical meeting.

Armstrong county politicians are still talking about that famous meeting, and one whom I had long forgotten reminded me of the occasion during the recent Republican National Convention at Chicago, at which he was in attendance as a delegate from Armstrong county.

No wonder government engineers for the last fourteen years have been recommending the raising of the bridges over the Allegheny river. Looking about me I am inclined to believe the bridges may impede progress, because here is a most thrifty and energetic people. Whether this vigorous and active people is responsible for the recommendations which may burden Pittsburgh with a debt of more than $15,000,000 for bridge raising, I know not, but here there is abundance of force coupled with brilliant intellect that permits no obstacles to impede their majestic strides.

Just across the hills from this beautiful spot is Apollo, where Bob Lock reigns supreme, and where is located the Apollo Steel Company of which Bob Lock is the light, might and chief executive. Lock is well known to Pittsburghers, and you may go into the mills of Milwaukee, Illinois, Alabama or where you will, and Lock is known; so is Apollo, that ancient town, which, with Leechburg, turned out some of the best sheet rollers of the country, and there, indeed, is rolled the world's best sheets. Bob Lock is still making them.

Eight miles above is Kittanning, where once the country's best puddlers were made. The fame of Kittanning was once on the pinicle in the industrial world. Kittanning, it is said, is coming back into her own. Jones and Laughlins have leased one of the old steel plants in the valley and they are operating it. Kittanning, an overwhelming Republican city, is now enjoying one of those "golden eras" of Democracy. The stability of this era is likened to that under Andrew Jackson, he who made prominent the slogan, "To the victor belongs the spoils," and the one which the present administration at Washington has put into practice.

The Johnetta Brick and Coal Company recently purchased from the Union Trust Company, of Pittsburgh, the Johnetta plant, formerly operated by the United States Sewer Pipe Company, at Johnetta. The plant has been idle for several months. Like many other industries it suffered a relapse under Democratic times, but since contracts for war munitions have flooded the country Johnetta has again come into her own, and she is now operating under full steam with all throtles wide open. Fifty to sixty thousand bricks daily are being turned out, and there are enough orders in sight to operate for the next four years, and with the election of Hughes, which is hoped for, the capacity must be increased if Johnetta is to begin to supply the demand now made upon her.

The plant has been remodeled from top to bottom and rejuvinated as well as regenerated. The latest improved machinery, for a most modern up-to-the-minute plant, has been installed, and with it a new motor generator set has been introduced, electrifying the entire plant. There is here economy, efficincy and prosprity, and this adorable trinity of joy and happiness are working hand in hand and through it, as well as from it, the golden sunshine of exhilaration is playing in every home and all here are gay and prosperous. Within the next few days one hundred additional miners will be given employement and if miners are looking for opportunity and History from Dispatch Files.

What remarkable items of interest the Pittsburgh Dispatch is bringing to light through an examination of its files is shown in an item which appeared in the "Dispatch" Monday under the heading of "History from the Dispatch Files."

Here is the item. Monday, August 21, 1916:

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

At a meeting of the trades' assembly, Thomas A. Armstrong and Andrew Dalzell were elected to attend the Workingmen's National Convention.

Thomas A. Armstrong was the founder of the National Labor Tribune, and "Fifty Years Ago" Mr. Armstrong was assistant foreman of the old Pittsburgh Chronicle, which later consolidated with the Telegraph which today is the Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

It was in 1873 when the printers struck for an advance in wages, taking with them practically all the newspaper printers in the city. This resulted in the newspaper publishers forming an organization and later causing the arrest of 95 printers on a charge of conspiracy.

The information was sworn out before Alderman Strain of the Fifth Ward by Tom McConnell, manager of the Telegraph; F. M. Egan, manager of the Commercial, and A. W. Rook, proprietor of the Dispatch. In this interesting struggle there were twenty who were unable to furnish bail and were confined in the Allegheny County jail. Among this twenty martyrs was Thomas A. Armstrong, and in jail they languished until A. W. Rook, then better known as "Alex," proprietor of the Dispatch, and relative of the present president editor, C. A. Rook, came to the rescue.

"Whose getting us out of here?" asked Thomas A. Armstrong, as he stepped from the jail into the warden's office. "Mr. Rook," replied Alderman Strain. "If I had known that," said Armstrong, "I would have stayed in." "Well," answered the magistrate, "you can go back again if you want to." "No, I believe not, as I am out now I will stay out. In order to escape in any manner that 'moral lazerite,' the Allegheny County jail, we should accept bail, were it possible, from the impenitent thief who attoned for his crimes on the cross." All honor to Mr. Rook, the printers' friend, the widows' nearest neighbor, the orphan's only hope this side of Paradise.

Among those confined in the jail at that time was George R. Dabeny at present employed on the "Dispatch."

The Rooks then, as now, were the printers' friend. This friendship was demonstrated during the last printers' strike when the Dispatch was the only paper that signed the scale.

However, the strike of 1873 was lost to the printers, but from this defeat grew a magnificent organization which flourishes today and is recognized in every newspaper office. It was during this strike that the National Labor Tribune came into special prominence championing the cause of organized labor. Thomas A. Armstrong playing the leading roll and continuing as the recognized force of the Tribune and as the friend of labor until his death. His loyalty to the cause for which he fought won a place for him in the hearts of all classes of labor and his fame extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific. How profound was the sorrow and how deeply his loss was morned is clearly exemplified in the life size monument which the workingmen of this country erected to his memory in one of the principal parks on the North Side of Pittsburgh.

A photograph of the monument is herewith shown.

TO MEET AT COLORADO SPRINGS

BALTIMORE, Aug. 28.—Colorado Springs was chosen as the next convention city by the International Typographical union.

Proposals to increase the death and pension benefits were defeated, as was a resolution providing that one vice president should be elected from Canada.

A proposal to increase the salaries of the president and secretary-treasurer was approved and will be submitted to the referendum. A resolution to draw the color line was defeated by a large vote. The executive council was instructed to lend its aid to the movement for the erection of a suitable memorial to Ottmar Mergenthaler, inventor of the linotype machine, and whose home was in this city. Attempts to change the priority law and the six-day law failed. The executive council was instructed to inquire into the feasibility of erecting an office building for the union to be named in honor of the late William B. Prescott. The apprentice question was given much consideration and a report on this subject will be submitted to affiliates.

HOGS VERSUS CHILDREN.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 28.—United States Senator Bryan of this state opposed the child labor bill on the ground that it invades "state's rights," and Dixie, a weekly newspaper published in this city, says:

"State's rights is a bugaboo used only at times by near-statesmen when it serves their purpose.

"When hog cholera measures are considered they want the government as a whole to act as protector of the hog.

"But when a governmental question is proposed to protect the American child from the poisoned atmosphere of the unsanitary factories they cry 'Invading the rights of states.'

"Do they consider the hog superior and of more importance than the child?"

MINERS SECURE CONTRACT.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 28.—About 3,000 miners are benefited by the agreement signed by coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers' union in this district.

CRUSADE AGAINST FAKIRS WILL BE BIG EVENT

Fair Trade League from New York May Join With Local Committee in General Clean-up.

The Fair Trade League of New York is to be enlisted in the crusade now being carried on by the National Labor Tribune against the fake furniture dealers, and the campaign is to be broadened to take in others, who are making a business of cheating the public.

There is nothing more desperately cruel than the plundering of innocent shoppers. Not only are the shoppers injured but legitimate business houses are made to suffer as a result of the vicious practices of the few who have deliberately set themselves up to rob the people in open defiance of the police department.

The police department, however, has gone the limit and Captain Arch Mackrell will no longer permit the use of his department for the mere collecting of money. He has volunteered to aid the National Labor Tribune in prosecuting through the courts any furniture fakir or members of a gang operating fake jewelry stores.

The Fair Trade League is an organization of National reputation, and it has gone after large stores, such as Marshall Field, of Chicago, to such an extent that the great store once known the world over for its honesty, was compelled to go to the public with a full and complete explanation, which was mailed to the newspapers throughout the country.

With the Fair Trade League and the members of the Men's Bible Class, this city is promised a cleaning up, the equal of which has not been experienced in the history of the town, and a crusade against the business fakir will arouse the public more than anything that has taken place in many decades.

The committee of the Men's Bible Class of the Mt. Washington Baptist Church is already at work planning to reach every church goer through the Sunday School in which there are over 200,000 enrolled as well as others who are not included among church goers. Letters and telephone communications are to awaken the ministers and the women of the missionary societies. Members of the Women's Club are also to be brought into action, in order to caution the head of every household against cunning practices invented to deceive housewives and innocent shoppers.

There is a plan under advisement of buying advertising space in the daily papers and extending the campaign to the country towns through the country newspapers. This would be far reaching in its effect and will be the means of calling attention to furniture houses as well as other stores at which fair treatment may be assured. A pamphlet is to be compiled giving the names of legitimate businessmen and this pamphlet will be distributed free of charge. No money making scheme is connected with the work. It is to be entirely voluntary with a purpose in view of guarding the public against sharp practices, wherein articles of spurious value are delivered, when the money is paid, instead of the articles originally selected. Every legitimate furniture dealer stands for honest dealing, and the business house that sanctions its salesmen deliberately dragging shoppers from in front of other stores to see "bargains" which are deliberate frauds, completely rules himself out of the society of honest merchants, and his methods are to be suppressed.

There is no limit to the territory of one whose barkers are permitted to walk the streets and inveigle innocent prospective purchasers into an institution, the sole motives of which has been, to deliberately rob buyers under the pretense of giving something in return, merely to baffle the police department so that the transaction may have a shade of respectability.

Police Magistrate John Sweeney, now hearing cases at Central Station, declared the furniture fakir exceeded anything he has ever experienced. One of the fake houses has been permitted to get away with the plunder, only because the victims desire to avoid notoriety that might result through prosecutions. The ghouls know this and they prey upon the unsuspecting shopper without fear of being molested by the courts. Only since the Tribune began this exposure have the fakirs expressed a willingness to repent and reform. When the first issues with articles against fakirs appeared there was a laugh of derision, but since the Tribune is determined to continue the fight until this element is taken charge of by the police department, their effort at repentance is being made. Promises to amend any irregularities and illegitimate business transactions have been strongly pressed. But this is done with a knowledge that Captain Mackrell is closely observing the business methods and his squad is ready to swoop down upon the tricksters and deceivers at the first opportunity.

Fear has at last overtaken them and the professions of "honesty" are coming in abundance. It is the old story:

"When the Devil is sick, the Devil an angel would be;
When the Devil is well, the Devil and angel is he."

There is nothing going to stop the campaign now being planned, and the date is not far distant when businessmen will realize its importance as well as its force.

It is amazing how eagerly the people in different parts of the country are observing this campaign, and big results are expected. The Tribune proposes to continue the exposures until the people are thoroughly aroused against the despicable fakirs doing business under the pretense of legitimate merchants.

The Scapegoat and Its Antitype.

Beaumont, Texas, Aug. 23.

Being a subscriber to the Tribune I would convey to you my appreciation of its many good features and especially for the light which present truth gives us on the conditions of the world at the present time, and that they are but the fulfillment of prophesies spoken long ago. I am also enclosing a little booklet. The thoughts contained therein seem to me to be in such perfect harmony with the Scriptures on the subject, that I would be very much pleased to see the thoughts expressed in the booklet printed in the Tribune, that its many truth searchers might also have the privilege of reaching them.

With best wishes for the success of the Tribune in its mission.

With Christian greeting, yours truly,
T. P. COPPLES.

To all of us who are interested in the study of the Holy Scriptures and what they teach, the subject of the "Tabernacle in the Wilderness" with the services connected therewith, are of vital interest. And when we take note of the fact, that the greatest of the apostles, Paul, through the wonderful clearness of the Spiritual vision, given him by the Holy Spirit, was able to understand and make clear to us, that all the Tabernacle services, with all the sacrifices offered were but types or shadows of the "better sacrifices" to follow, and which we see are being offered during this Gospel age, it increases our interest in the subject.

We take note that the first service, after the building of the Tabernacle, and God had shown His acceptance of it, was the "Consecrating of the typical Priesthood" which was composed of Aaron and his four sons—Aaron being the head, and his sons the body of that Aaronic Priesthood. And we are told that God gave Christ "to be the head over all things of the church which is His body."—Eph. 1:22, 23, showing that Christ and the Church when complete will be the antitype of the Aaronic Priesthood established in the wilderness of Mount Siani.

In first Peter 2:9, in writing to the Church the apostle calls them a Royal Priesthood.

Again we take note that God through Moses set aside a certain day in the year to be observed as a day of atonement,—the tenth day of the seventh month. On this day there were two sin offerings made; one was the bullock, which we recognize as a type of Christ, the great sin offering; the other was the goat which we recognize as a type of the Church, His body.

But the Apostle makes it very plain in Heb. 10:4, that this was only a typical cleansing, when he says, "For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sin." We also note what the Apostle says in Heb. 13:11-13," for the bodies of those beasts whose blood is brought into the Sanctuary by the high priest for sins, are burned without the camp. Wherefore Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth therefore unto Him without the camp, bearing his reproach."

In the Scripture just quoted we notice how closely the Apostle follows the type in his instructions to the Church, the antitype.

We notice in Israel's atonement day that the High Priest did just the same with the Lord's goat as he did with the bullock. And when we note how exactly the type is carried out in the antitype it gives weight to the Apostle's statement that those Tabernacle services in the wilderness, and down through the Jewish age, were a "shadow of things to come."

We notice that on Israel's atonement day there was but one bullock brought for a sin offering, while there were two goats brought for a sin offering,—"and the High Priest shall present the two goats before the Lord at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the Lord, and the other lot for the scapegoat. And Aaron shall bring the goat upon which the Lord's lot fell, and offer him for a sin offering. But the goat on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat, shall be presented alive before the Lord, to make an atonement with Him, and to let him go for a scapegoat into the wilderness."

While it is quite easy with the light that Paul has given, for us to see the antitpyes of both the bullock and the Lord's goat, it may not be easy for us to understand the antitpye of the scapegoat.

As the goat on which the lot fell to be the Lord's goat represented the Church, the "Body of Christ," also the goat on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat must have its antitype.

Many Bible students believe that the scapegoat is a type of the Great Company class, standing before the throne, who, the Scriptures tell us, "Came up through great tribulation, and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," and that only the "Little Flock," the very elect, are represented by the Lord's goat.

That view of the subject does not appeal to us for several reasons.

First, the scapegoat does not represent a consecrated class, for its life was not taken.

Paul, in Heb. 13:11, shows very plainly that the scapegoat was not made a sin offering when he says that "the bodies of those beasts whose blood is brought into the Sanctuary by the High Priest for sin are burned without the camp," and the scapegoat was not so dealt with.

Again, when the two goats were brought to the door of the Tabernacle, only one of them was to be the Lord's goat; the other was to be the scapegoat.

And right here it may be well to note that none of those animals brought for sacrifice were brought into the court, to the door or vail leading into the first Holy, but were brought to the door or gate, leading into the court. We read in Lev. 8:3 that Moses is told to "gather all the congregation together unto the door of the Tabernacle of the Congregation." Now that court would not hold one quarter of the congregation of Israel, neither was the court for the congregation, but for the tribe of Levi. Therefore we see that the scapegoat was brought only to the door or gate leading into the court, and therefore cannot typify any class who are brought into a justified condition.

We read that "Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats, one for the Lord and the other lot for the scapegoat." We see that there were two lots cast, and for this purpose those two goats were brought on that day,—one was to be the Lord's goat, and the other was to be the scapegoat. Again we see that the lots cast were opposites, and so when the lot fell on one to be the Lord's goat, the lot fell on the other to be the devil's goat, which is a correct definition of the word "Azazel", translated scape-goat.

Now we will note what was done with those different animals on the Day of Atonement.

As we find it recorded in the sixteenth chapter of Leviticus,—after the lots are cast the High Priest proceeds to offer the bullock for a sin offering, and takes "a censer full of burning coals from off the altar before the Lord, and his hands full of incense, and brings them within the vail, and he shall put the incense upon the fire that the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not."

When he has done this, he shall take of the blood of the bullock and sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy seat and before the mercy seat seven times.

Then shall he kill the goat of the sin offering. And he is to do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon and before the mercy seat.

At verse sixteen the picture changes, for the sin offerings are completed, and the High Priest proceeds to make atonement, or a cleansing work. And in the eighteenth verse we are told that he takes of the blood of both the bullock and the goat with which to do this cleansing work.

We see that he makes atonement for the holy place, also for the Tabernacle of the congregation, also for himself and his house, and for all the congregation of Israel. He also goes out to the altar and makes atonement for it and cleanses it.

Now this cleansing work here noted, we believe represents a work to be done in the antitype, during Christ's millennial reign. And as all this cleansing work is finished in the type before anything is done with the scapegoat, we fail to see how the scapegoat could pre-figure the Great Company, the Great Company being a part of the Church which will be perfected and complete before the cleansing and uplift of the world begins.

We notice that after all the cleansing is done in the type, then the scapegoat is brought forward, and the High Priest confesses over him all the sins of the children of Israel, (representing all the world in the antitype) and lays them upon the head of the scapegoat and sends him away into the wilderness "and the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited.

Since we have said that the scapegoat is not a type of the Great Company, but that not only the Little Flock, but also the Great Company are represented in the Lord's goat, it follows that we should be able to point out from the Scriptures what is the antitype of the scapegoat. This we will endeavor to do. And we believe that we will be able to make it clear to any unbiased mind.

We now turn to the parable of the "Sheep and the Goats" recorded in Matt. 25:31-46, and we read "When the Son of Man shall come in His Glory and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory."

Since Christ has not so come, then this parable does not yet apply.

"And before Him shall be gathered all nations, and He shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats."

What we wish to notice is, that after the separation is complete, which no doubt is at the close of Christ's thousand-year reign, then the blessing upon those on the right hand is pronounced. Also the sentence is pronounced upon those on the left.

We see by the blessing given to those on the right that they are without sin and perfect in the Lord's sight. Just so the sentence pronounced upon those on the left tells us that they are yet sinners, and not acceptable in God's sight,—in fact all the sin in the world at the close of Christ's reign will then be with this class on the left. And here we believe is the true antitype of the scapegoat. And as all the sins of the congregation of Israel (which is a type of the world) were laid upon the head of the scapegoat, so all the sin in the world at the close of Christ's reign will be with this class on the left. And Satan is the head of this class, for we are told in Rev. 20:-7-9 that when Satan is loosed and offers his temptation, they follow him. And the parable tells us that this class "shall go away into everlasting punishment" (the second death) "but the righteous into life eternal."

God has always recognized the death state of those who die for Adam's sin as a land inhabited, but He does not so regard the second death. Therefore this class bearing all the sin of the world go into a land not inhabited, even as the scapegoat in the type bore all the sins of Israel into a land not inhabited. We are told that Aaron was to make an atonement with the scapegoat. Did he do so? He certainly did.

We understand that an atonement is anything that makes God and man at one, or makes God and man reconciled.

God and Israel were not at one or reconciled until the scapegoat bore their sins away into the wilderness, or a land not inhabited.

We therefore conclude that we have found from Scripture the true antitype of the scapegoat.

Appreciations

Norristown, Pa., Aug. 25.

At the time my subscription for your paper expired, an article was running that I did not think appropriate for distribution, so I have waited till the present to send in my renewal, by way of the Watch Tower office.

I like your paper for several reasons, the type in which you give us Pastor Russell's sermons, is so clear and attractive that after reading it one likes to pass it on to others, then your fearlessness in telling your readers some of the ways they are being imposed upon, is good to see. Of course there are hosts who delight in humbug, and the mysteries that must be accepted blindly, or the charm will be broken, whether in medicine, finance or anything else, others there are who like to know the truth so far as possible.

Wishing you success in the good work you are doing in this transition stage,

I remain yours truly,
M. CHRISTIANCY.

Walden, Mass., Aug. 24.

I see by the wraper on my paper that the time to renew comes sometime this month, so I enclose $2.00 I am enjoying the many good things and like to know about the labor news and Pastor Russell's sermon in such good print as makes it easy to rad, which is specially desirable for dderly people. I am glad to see the frauds exposed; have been victimized myself in past years. I like to read also "Pastor Russell's opinion in the Reformation" by N. E. Nelson. May you prosper in your good work.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. E. FARNSWORTH.

Denver, Col., Aug. 24.

I am renewing my subscription to the Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower office. It would be hard to be without the Tribune as I have enjoyed its weekly visits containing Pastor Russell's sermon and the Sunday School lessons for the ast five years. I especially appreciate the large type in which you have been setting the sermon.

Thanking you for continuing to send my paper, I remain,

Yours in the Master's service,
MRS. JOHN JACKSON.

Columbia, Mo., Aug. 24.

I regret to write to have you discontinue my subscription to your valuable paper, but circumstances forces me to do so. I have enjoyed it four years and will miss it as an old friend. I rejoice to know of the bold stand you have taken for truth and you have my prayers that the dear Lord will continue to give you wisdom and grace to serve Him.

Yours by His grace,
MRS. IDA BOWMAN.

Traverse City, Mich., Aug 22.

The Lord is blessing us very much, and our little class is progressing in the Truth, adding a few names to our number now and then.

I am letting people know about the Truth as much as I can by giving my copies of the Tribune to those I think will appreciate them. All my valued Watch Towers I have given away, also, except a few copies I wished to keep for myself.

What a blessing the Truth brings to all who receive it.

Your Sister in the Truth,

Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

mediately, which was effected by introducing his work to his contemporaries who both loved and hated him and knew his weaknesses, by the ridiculous thing of placing his friends in charge of his enemies whom they tortured in Inferno. They seized his work out of curiosity to see where he had placed them or their friends or enemies in the various departments of Inferno and Purgatory and they became amazed at his learning, but his inconsistencies and the prejudice of his readers prevented his masterly literary production from fettering the living generation as it did later when it had already paved the way for the reformation, by reviving an interest in forgotten literature of Greece and Rome. In this, Dante effected the reverse of his intentions by setting the living world to thinking as noted in our first essay. It reminds us of the invocation of David, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise Thee."

Thus the seeds of the Italian Renaissance were sown in the minds of men which was in the main caused by the revival of the Greek and Roman Letters in which Dante was a pioneer. His principle learning was from Plato, Epictetus and Cicero. This learning set the world to thinking; that was enough, they got the habit that broke the Dogmatism of Papacy which had petrified reason and chocked the fair feeling of the human heart; thus was the way prepared for the Reformers of the sixteenth century, who in turn prepared the way for the political reforms. The order of events seem to be; first, the thawing of the frozen heart of Dogmatism by the Love of Dante for Beatrice and his friendship, which was effected by its product, poetry; then came the opening of the Book of Nature and Divine Revelation —God's two witnesses being buried in the sack-cloth and ashes of Mediaevalism since the days of Hypatia when Dogmatism fettered humanity; this was followed by a new civic life effected by reform in politics.

The function of the poet as a factor in the reformation has been detrimental and we purpose here to prove that Satan, whose existence as a personality is now denied by many, has used them to pervert the Truth by which God has effected the reformation and changed the face of civilization. We hope to establish this fact by noting the culminating effect of their poetry upon mankind.

The features of Dante's Divine Comedy that would have had a bad effect upon society is in respect to his conception of Deity, which he unwittingly painted worse than Virgil's conception as revealed in Paganism, as also did Milton's production render God more fiendish than Dante's. The indication that these poets unwittingly serve Satan's designs is the fact that his original lie fostered upon Mother Eve, "Ye shall not surely die"—(which sophisticated Dante through Plato and restored his faith in Catholicism)—is the very fact that makes the conception of God more fiendish with each restatement of the popular religions in poetry. The place of punishment of heathen mythology, immortalized in the poetry of Virgil, Dante placed under a new management. Instead of the demons of mythology who kept the place in order, Dante placed the bad character of the Bible and some of the friends in charge, and the Platonic theory of man's indestructible soul, coupled with misconceptions of the nature of punishment of the incorrigible wicked, (which, according to the Bible, is eternal death instead of misery), made his Inferno an eternal body of suffering with Purgatory answering to Homer's "Odyssey" and Virgil's transmigration of souls eliminated. It was Luther who made the discovery that Purgatory, amongst other things, was not found in Scripture, so out it went in his theology. Luther's contemporaries and successors did not calculate on what to do with the inhabitants of Purgatory, so the regions of hell had to be enlarged to receive them, having no other logical place to put them—made matters all the worse. Had they continued his investigations they would have found, as did Luther, Tyndall and Russell, that the wages of sin is death (not life in misery); that the hope of future life lies in a resurrection of the soul (not its indestructability) instead of building ecclesiastical states to punish heretics, they would have had no logical place for hell; as it was Calvin came to their assistance and relieved them of the responsibility of making matters worse with the doctrine of Absolute Predestination. Dante made Virgil's Paganism (Transmigration, known today as Theosophy) worse by excluding all from Purgatory who were not baptized into the Catholic Church and Milton made the Protestant conception of God more diabolical than the Catholic by eliminating Purgatory and not substituting the future probation taught in Scripture.

THE PURCHASE OF CHURCH AND WORLD.

CHRIST'S SACRIFICIAL MERIT UTILIZED THUS FAR ONLY FOR THE CHURCH.

God's Orderly Arrangement—Progressive Steps in the Divine Plan—Philosophy of the Ransom—Church First Bought—Purchase-Price Not Yet Applied for the World—Why Jesus Prayed only for the Church—He Will Pray Later for the World—"Ask of Me, and I Will Give Thee the Heathen"—How the Church Glorify God in Their Bodies.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 27.—Pastor Russell spoke here today before the I. B. S. A. Convention. His discourse was very interesting and logical. He took for his text the words of the Apostle Paul, "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your bodies." (1 Corinthians 6:19, 20.) He said in part:

There is a very general and natural sentiment amongst men that as individuals we have the right to control ourselves, to have an independence of thought and of will; and this is reasonable and right as respects our relationship to our fellowman. Every person of character should preserve his independence of mind. Whoever lacks this independence of mind and of will is lacking in a fundamental element of character, and is weak and unstable. But there is One to whom we owe everything, even our existence. To Him we owe, therefore, our full allegiance. The Bible declares that God's creatures should fully recognize His dominion and control.

Looking back to the case of Father Adam, we see that God created him with a will, with the power of self-control, and gave him also a knowledge of his responsibility to his Creator. But we see that later he was misled by giving heed to another. First of all, Mother Eve was misled by giving heed to the Adversary, Lucifer, who had deflected from loyalty to his Master. Then she became the temptress to her husband. Thus the Divine Law was violated by the father of our race; and God would no longer recognize the one who was unwilling to render obedience to his Creator and to follow His guidance. As our Lord afterward said: "The Father seeketh such to worship Him as worship Him in spirit and in truth." When Adam ceased to worship God in spirit and in truth, God said to him in substance, "You wish to take your own course; go your way, and see where it will lead you."

This has been largely the course of the world ever since. The seeds of sin and disobedience sown by Adam have developed, and the entire race has been more and more alienated from their Creator as the centuries have rolled away. The Apostle Paul, in discussing this matter, says, "God gave them [mankind] over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not proper." (Romans 1:28.) Thus the Scriptures explain the present condition of the world. God has let go of mankind during these six thousand years.

THE PURCHASE OF SOME FROM DEATH.

But our text tells us of some who have been bought back from this condition of alienation from God, bought back from death. Father Adam had sold the whole race under sin, as the Apostle explains, under the dominion of Satan. (Romans 7:14.) He sold us out in the gratification of his own desires. He involved not only himself but his entire posterity, if, then, the race was sold under sin and Satan, to whom would the purchase-price be paid, when mankind is bought back? Would it be paid to the Adversary? We answer, No; the Adversary never had any right to the human race. They belonged to their Creator. It was His Justice which was violated and which demanded the price of man's redemption. The race as a whole are not yet purchased. The price for their deliverance has not been applied, even though the Purchase-price has been furnished in the death of Christ. Mankind are still a race of slaves. The great Adversary has taken advantage of their ignorance and superstition due to the fall and has brought them into bondage to errors, weaknesses and faults.

It is God's purpose, however, that this slavery shall be only a temporary thing. The time has seemed long to man, but in God's sight these six thousand years are as six days. God has a great Work Week of six thousand-year Days. The seventh Day of this great Week is the Sabbath, also a thousand years in duration. In this Sabbath Day, it is the Divine purpose to lift the curse resting upon mankind. In this Sabbath Day the world shall rest from their own labors and unavailing efforts to effect their own salvation. They shall rest in Christ's finished work on their behalf. This will be the great Judgment Day, the thousand years of Messiah's glorious Reign for the blessing of all of Adam's race.

But what about those who are already bought, as our text declares? These who are first bought are the Church of Christ. The price for the salvation of the Church is the same price that is necessary for the sins of all mankind. That price is the death of the Lord Jesus Christ. The Apostle John declares, "He [Jesus] is the propitiation for our [the Church's] sins, and not for our only, but also for the sins of the whole world." (1 John 2:2.) The word propitiation means satisfaction. Divine Justice is satisfied to release the sinners as soon as the Purchase-price is made available.

HOW ONE MAN PURCHASES A RACE.

The penalty upon Adam because of his sin was death; and as by heredity all his posterity have been born blemished and imperfect, they have shared his penalty. God could have placed our first parents under a different penalty. He could have imposed the penalty of one year's banishment from the Garden of Eden. But He wished to give a lesson that would be important not only to the whole world of mankind, but also to the angel of Heaven. There is never to be any more sin than God is permitting in this world now. When it is over, there will be no more sin thenceforth in the entire Universe. Hence God placed upon man the extreme penalty of His Law. Adam could never rid himself of that penalty unless he were redeemed. It would mean his eternal destruction, as well as that of his race, which fell in him. But God has provided redemption. Jesus came to earth a perfect man, with an unborn race in His loins. This human life He gave as an exact equivalent for Adam and the race yet unborn in his loins at the time of his sin.

But because of an important feature of His great Plan, God purposed that a certain part of Adam's race should be purchased in advance of the remainder. Our text does not speak of the world's purchase, but only that of the Church; for only the purchase of the Church is yet accomplished. This is the Father's arrangement. We are told by the inspired Apostle that when Jesus ascended up on High, "He appeared in the presence of God for us."—the Church.—Hebrews 9:24.

It was Jehovah's purpose to have a prepared company to be associated with His Son in His great work for the restoration of the world. This class is called the Bride of Christ, the members of His Body. As they were sinners, under the same death penalty as the remainder of the world, it was necessary that the merit of Christ's sacrificial death be first utilized for them. Insteal of being justified actually, as will the world during the Age to come, these have perfect righteousness imputed to them instantaneously, when they accept Christ's sacrificial work on their behalf and consecrate themselves wholly to God. Thus they are enabled to become joint-sacrificers with their Lord and Head that they may be sharers in His future Reign.

WHEN CHRIST WILL PRAY FOR THE WORLD.

Jesus has not yet appeared before the Mercy Seat in Heaven for the world. The Bible declares of the world's present condition, "The whole world lieth in the Evil One." (1 John 5:19, R. V.) If they had been purchased, they would not be lying in the Wicked One. In our Lord's last prayer with His diciples before His crucifixion He said, "I pray not for the world but for them which Thou hast given Me," (John 17:9.) The very next day after He offered this prayer He died for all the world—"He tasted death for every man." (Hebrews 2:9.) But He knew that the merit of His death would first affect those whom the Father would give Him out of the world. Hence He prayed in harmony with the Father's arrangement. To have prayed differently would have been to pray out of order.

When the Church is glorified with her Lord, then will come the time for Christ to pray for the world. The Bible so declares. The Psalmist David (Psalm 2:7-9), looking forward to that time, quotes the Father as saying to the Lord Jesus, "Ask of Me, and I will give Thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; Thou shalt dash them in pieces as a potter's vessel." The Father will turn over all the nations of the earth to the Lord Jesus, as soon as the Church shall have been fully delivered, and the merit of Christ, which had been accounted to them, shall, by their sacrificial death, be freed for application for all the world.

Then the Church, seated with Christ in His Throne (Revelation 3:21), will with Him form the Kingdom. Jesus shall reign "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." In due time—and that time is near—all the kingdoms and governments of the earth are to be brought down to the dust, and the peoples made ready for the rule of the Heavenly Government for which God's people have so long been praying: "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done, on earth as it is done in Heaven."

"YE ARE NOT YOUR OWN."

Coming back to our text: We who have been purchased in advance by our Lord Jesus realize that we do not belong to ourselves. We are bought with a price and we are not our own. What does this mean to us? It is like this: Suppose that we had been drowning, or had been about to be burned to death, and suppose some one had rushed up and rescued us at the imminent risk of his own life. We would feel that we could not do enough for the one who had saved us. So the Apostle here seems to be expressing the same thought. The One who bought us not only risked His own life, but sacrificed it on our behalf, that we might be rescued from eternal death. How much more, then, should we gratefully appreciate His work of love for us! He left the glory which He had with the Father that by the grace of God He might taste death for every man; and the merit of His death has now been made available for us who have become His disciples. How our hearts should go out to Him in thankfulness! We say to ourselves, "What can I do to show my appreciation for what my Savior has done for me?"

When we look out over the everlasting future and think of the blessings of eternity, we realize that the way for us to attain these great blessings was opened to us through Jesus' death. So we gladly bring our little offering and give ourselves wholly to Him who died for us. We recognize that we are very small and imperfect; and that He is so great, so mighty—wonderful in perfection and glory. We cannot do what we would because of our weakness and blemishes, but we can show Him our loyalty. And we pray: "Lord, grant to us the opportunity to prove to Thee how much we love Thee, how glad we are to be given a small part in the carrying forward of God's great Plan."

We feel that we have not half enough to give. We are such bundles of imperfections that we really feel ashamed to offer ourselves to the Lord. But we have been bidden to come in the name and merit of Jesus. We can imagine the Father saying to us, "I know that you are very imperfect, but I only desire to see your attitude of heart and mind, your earnest endeavor to do My will."

When I was in India a number of years ago some natives came to the little hut where I was lodged and asked for me. The Brother who spoke their language came in and told me. Then he said, "Will you go out and see these people?" So I went out to the door and found a father, a mother, and their three children. They could not speak a word of English, but they had brought me some humble gifts. One had a little piece of fruit, another had an egg, and another something else. I did not like to take these things from them; for I knew that many of these people did not have enough to eat. But they had brought the best they had. Therefore I felt that I must not refuse their loving offerings lest I offend or grieve them; so I received the gifts.

I have often thought since then of how this illustrated our gifts to the Lord. Our dear Heavenly Father does not need our little egg or bit of prickly fruit, any more than I needed what these poor people brought, but He encourages us to come to Him with our gifts. He is entirely able to get along without us; we cannot enrich Him; but for our good He is willing to receive our small offerings, and it is a great privilege that we are invited to thus come. Most gladly and thankfully we accept His gracious invitation to give Him our little all. He is preparing us for our great exaltation with Christ. All whom He chooses must be saintly in character. None but saints will be in that glorified company who will compose the Bride of the Lamb. We must each demonstrate our entire faithfulness unto death.

FAITHFUL OVER A FEW THINGS.

We read in the Bible the parable of the Nobleman who went into a far country, to receive a Kingdom and to come again. (Luke 19:12-27.) Jesus is that Nobleman. The far country is Heaven. After His resurrection from the dead He ascended to Heaven to be invested with royal authority to be Ruler of the earth. In the parable, the Nobleman, when leading His servants, called them to Himself and gave them money, to every one according to his ability, instructing them that they should invest these talents for Him, and should render their account upon His return. So the Master gives to each of His followers opportunities of service commensurate with our abilities for service. As our abilities differ, He gives to some greater opportunities than to others. He makes us the stewards of these His goods, and expects us to use them diligently, and wisely to His glory.

The parable represents that upon the Nobleman's return, He reckoned with His servants. To each of those who had faithfully used what was given him, He said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.'" He did not say, "Thou hast done great things," but, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things." He knew that they could not do very much, but they had shown their loyalty, their faithfulness; and that is what the Lord desires to see. He expects us only to do with our might what our hands find to do for Him.

WISDOM AND CAREFULLNESS NECESSARY.

If we have an opportunity to present the Message of salvation to a hungry soul, we are to be very careful not to tell him more than he is able to grasp, lest we do him harm rather than good. We are to remember the Master's words to His disciples before they had been begotten of the Holy Spirit. He said, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." (John 16:12.) So with those who are feeling after the Truth. They cannot bear all the Truth at once, just as babes cannot assimilate strong meat. What would be nourishment for an adult would choke an infant. Let us be wise as serpents and harmless as doves, showing forth the praises of Him Who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light.

Christians are obligated by their vows to the Lord to consider carefully what they wear, where they go, what they do, what they eat and drink, and even what they think. The world, noting this care, are likely to feel that the Christian's life is a life of slavery. But they do not understand the matter at all. We delight to do God's will. It gives us great pleasure to know what the Lord would have us wear, and how He would have us conduct ourselves. We love to be thus under our loving Father's supervision and to have His smile of approval.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

EMERSON ON PLATO.

Hubbard has propounded the question; "Just why men hark back to prove their beliefs by quoting from the past, to supply a 'key to the Scriptures,' would be interesting to enquire." This question was put with the idea of Mrs. Eddy quoting from Scripture to support her "Christian Science." (It may be well to remark here, that Hubbard's statement to the effect that Christian Science is purely an American product, not of Asiatic origin, is not in keeping with the facts, for this "error of the mortal mind" is based, like all the products of the past, on the Platonic theory of man's supposed indestructible soul.) Peole hark back and quote from the past for the same reason that Hubbard has linked his philosophy with the idols of history in his "Little Journies"; his stories of the private life and personals of the great men introduces his literature to the people and they get his "Hot Stuff" in the bargain. When we cannot get others to agree with us we clinch our thoughts by quoting from the recognized idols of history and thus foister them upon our contemporaries who reverence them. This principle has not been adopted by Pastor Russell in his literature with respect to the Reformers of this story, for he bridges the whole span of history by quoting exclusively from the writers of the Bible as the authority for Christian faith and practice. To supply this deficiency, of clinching Millennial Dawn, by the recognized dead leaders on this side of the Dark Ages, has been, partly, the object of this entire series of essays. This is why we produce the thoughts and deeds of the recognized authorities of the past and justify those of the present. Consistently we continue to present further material relating to the doctrines produced by the "Miller Movement" and Advent Movement resulting. The following paragraphs from the very much beloved and read Ralph Waldo Emerson, the great American Seer, concerning Plato, the philosopher, whom Statan had sophisticated his monumental lie in the garden of Eden; they will serve to show how thoroughly the intellectual world, as well as the theological, has been satured with Satan's precepts and proves the Scriptural statement that "the whole world lieth in the wicked one" in thought as well as in deed.

"Among books, Plato only is entitled to Omar's fanatical compliment to the Koran, when he said, 'Burn the libraries; for, their value is in this book.' These sentences contain the culture of nations; these are the corner-stone of schools; these are the fountainhead of literature. A discipline it is in logic, arithmetic, taste, symmetry, poetry, language, rhetoric, ontology, morals, or practical wisdom. There was never such a range of speculation. Out of Plato comes all things that are still written and debated among men of thought. Great havoc makes he among our originalities. We have reached the mountain from which all these drift bowlders were detached. The Bible of the learned for twenty-two hundred years, every brisk young man, who says in succession fine things to each reluctant generation—Boethius, Rabelais, Erasmus, Bruno, Loche, Rousseau, Alfieri, Coleridge—is some reader of Plato, translating into the vernacular, wittily, his good things. Even the men of grander proportion suffer some deduction from the misfortune (shall I say?) of coming after this exhausting generalizer. St. Augustine, Copernicus, Newton, Behmen, Swedenborg, Goethe, are likewise his debtors, and must say after him. For it is fair to credit the broadest generalizer with all the particulars deducible from his thesis."

"Plato is philosophy, and philosophy, Plato—at once the glory and the shame of mankind, since neither Saxon nor Roman have availed to add an idea to his categories. No wife, no children had he, and the thinkers of all civilized nations are his posterity, and are tinged with his mind. How many great men Nature is incessantly sending up out of night, to be his men—Platonists! The Alexandrians, a constellation of genius; the Elizabethans, not less; Sir Thomas More, Henry More, John Hales, John Smith, Lord Bacon, Jermy Taylor, Ralph Cudworth, Sydenham, Thomas Taylor, Marcilius Vicinus, and Mirandola. Calvinism is in his Phaedo; (Evangelical) Christianity is in it. Mahometanism draws all its philosophy, in its hand-book of morals, the Akhlaky-Jalaly, from him. Mysticism finds in Plato all its texts. This citizen of a town in Greece is no villager or patriot. An Englishman reads and says 'how English!', a German, 'how Teutonic!', an Italian, 'how Roman and how Greek!' As they say that Helen of Argos, had that universal beauty that everybody felt related to her, so Plato sems, to a reader in New England, an American genius. His broad humanity transcends all sectional lines."

Next we will review briefly other agencies employed by Satan in foistering his cornerstone of the philosophy upon humanity, the use of the great poets, and also note his change of precept by substituting Darwinism for Platonism in modern speculation. "We are not ignorant of his devices."

VIRGIL, DANTE AND MILTON HAVE UNWITTINGLY BEEN SATAN'S EMISSARIES.

Causes were set in motion before and after the Reformation that would have fettered the minds and hardened the hearts of men in the same events that led to the liberty we now enjoy, had it not been for other events that paved the way for Modern Rationalism. Dante's Comadea was an advancement with respect to the Greek learning embraced but a retrogration when he included the Divine Right of Kings and Priests. Divine right was familiar property and for this reason Dante's combination of Platonism, Paganism and Nicene Dogmatism did not have a bad effect upon his contemporaries. Instead it revived an interest in Greek and Roman Letters im

ST. PAUL'S SORROWS AND JOYS

II Corinthians 11:21-33.—Sept. 3.

St. Paul the Hero—His Loyalty, Faithfulness, Endurance—He Suffered For Christ's Sake—And For the Brethren's Sake In That He Delighted to Carry the Message of God's Grace—Why the Enumeration of His Sufferings—Surely a Chosen Vessel.

"My grace is sufficient for thee; for My power is made perfect in weakness."—2 Cor. 12:9.

WHAT a wonderful man was St. Paul! Doubtless the secret of his brilliancy lay in the fact that he so fully gave himself up to God that the Lord could use him as an Apostle, as a mouthpiece, as a servant, to a greater extent than He ever used any other man, perhaps. In this we are not implying that St. Paul was greater than his Master; but his Master had only three and one-half years of service, while St. Paul had a long ministry. Besides, it was impossible for the Master to go into the details of the Divine Plan; for even the Apostles were natural men, who did not receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit until Pentecost. Hence we read that Jesus' teachings were chiefly in parables and dark sayings.—Matthew 13:10-17; John 16:12, 13.

There were no such limitations upon the Apostles. Their epistles were addressed to God's saints in various quarters, to whom they wrote freely upon every feature of the Divine Plan of salvation. Some of their writings were along lines suitable for "babes in Christ," and others were "strong meat"—the deeper things of the Divine Plan. But they wrote only to the spirit-begotten, not to the worldly.—Hebrews 5:12, 13; 1 Peter 2:1-3.

St. Paul's Sufferings For Christ.

It is not strange that the Adversary was able to stir up some little sectarianism even in the primitive Church. (1 Corinthians 1:11-13.) But all such partisan sentiment the Apostle rebuked, reminding that Christ alone had died for them, and that they should take none other name than that of the Master. This same spirit manifested itself otherwise, too. The Apostles needed to grow in grace and knowledge, as well as did the remainder of the Household of Faith; and although they had special blessings of the Lord, they did not all have the same length of vision at the same time.

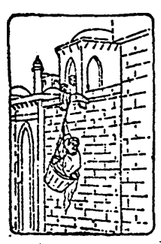
St. Paul Weary and Watching.

St. Paul, the most learned one of The Twelve—taking the place of Judas—had naturally the best opportunity for breadth of thought. True, as Saul of Tarsus, he showed himself to be very narrow and bigoted in his warfare against Christ and His followers. But after his eyes of understanding had been opened and he became a spirit-begotten New Creature, St. Paul manifested a wonderful insight into the things Divine. He had visions and revelations more than had all the other Apostles together. All this was in harmony with what the Lord had said respecting him. (Acts 9:15, 16.) St. Paul had education and a wonderful breadth of mind. All of God's spirit-begotten children are surely amazed at the logic, the wisdom and the power of the Apostle's writings. We know of nothing else that will compare with these.

Pushed to the front as the Lord's mouthpiece to the Gentiles, St. Paul's mind grasped more quickly than did those of the other Apostles the things pertaining to the New Dispensation; and he saw that the Gentiles were to be fellow-heirs with the Jews in the Kingdom privileges. Naturally, some thought that he was going too far; and the argument was raised that he was not to be ranked as an Apostle, etc. He had labored hard with the Corinthian Church; and to have them fail to progress because they thought him an incompetent teacher seemed to him to be a pity. Hence in our lesson he is doing what he styles "foolish boasting." He did not approve of boasting; and yet, for the sake of his hearers, he would inform them along certain lines.

The Secret of His Success.

But the Apostle did not boast about himself—about his talents, his oratory, etc. Rather he would tell them what God's providence had permitted him to suffer for the Truth's sake — scourging, whipping with rods, imprisonment, perils of the deep, perils from false brethren, perils from the heathen. These things he had endured joyfully, gladly, for to him they were marks of Divine love and favor, and bore witness to his love for the Lord and His righteousness, as well as to his willingness to suffer for the Lord's sake.



Escape from Damascus.

Thus seen, this lesson is a very valuable portion of God's Word. It gives us information which we find in no other quarter. It crisply sets before us a picture of a soldier of the Cross and what he endured. The secret of his endurance of so great privations is presented in our Golden Text. The Lord's grace was sufficient for him.

FARMERS SIZE UP HUGHES AS "PRETTY GOOD FELLOW"

Fargo, N. D.—Charles E. Hughes campaigned for the first time among the sturdy farmers of the eastern part of North Dakota and left behind him the reputation of being a "pretty good fellow."

He was forced to undergo a critical scrutiny before the verdict was given.

Mr. Hughes preached the doctrines of government efficiency, Americanism, tariff as protection to the farmers and preparedness, and in each instance won applause, despite the fact that the farmers are not the strongest advocates of the last named issue.

They cheered for preparedness the loudest when Mr. Hughes told them that it meant not militarism, but ability to uphold national honor.

As they cheered for Mr. Hughes, one broad-shouldered old farmer said "it's because there's something about him that makes you believe he's telling the truth."

DENIES ASSAILING MR. HUGHES.

Percy Mackaye Writes He Never Saw "Authors' Letter" With His Name Appended.

Percy Mackaye, playwright, whose name appeared as one of the signers of the so-called "authors' letter," published in the newspapers last week, knew nothing about the matter until after publication, according to a statement given out yesterday at Republican national headquarters. The letter attacked Charles E. Hughes' criticism of President Wilson as "nonconstructive" and propounded ten questions for Mr. Hughes to answer. In a letter to Mr. Hughes Mr. Mackaye said:—

"My attention has just been called to an open letter addressed to you, printed in the New York Herald of August 2, signed by a number of professional writers, among whom my name is included. I beg to send you this word, to say that I did not sign the letter and never saw or heard of the letter until it was shown to me in print."

It was stated at Republican headquarters that neither Mr. Hughes nor any of his staff had seen the letter except as it appeared in the newspapers.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS FROM HUGHES' SPEECHES.

"What is the President's policy—does anyone know? Has the Executive ever had a policy for more than six months on the Mexican question?"

"If I am elected President I will see to it that American rights in Mexico are respected."

"There is no man who could successfully present to an American community the platform that an American citizen's rights stop at the coast line."

"We will get through with this old strife between capital and labor. We are not laborers and capitalists in this country. We are fellow-citizens."

"All that the workingmen want is a square deal."

"We want the United States efficiently managed. I want to see men in office who believe in prosperity."

"The Republican Party stands for a prosperity produced by sound American policies."

"We have removed from office men of experience and substituted others to satisfy partisan obligations. This must stop."

THAT FULL DINNER PAIL.

Relying foolishly upon the full dinner pail to accomplish for them what it has so often accomplished for the Republican party, the Democrats proceed to pile extravagance upon extravagance and to make flabby claims of being at peace, even when we are at war, says the Detroit Journal.

For the dinner pail has been filled with munition money, which presently must be supplanted by the true coinage of protected American industry after the war.

And while the dinner pail is full, observe with what inflated foods. This administration promised the worker a lower cost of living. But, as a matter of fact, to the worker Democratic prosperity is a false prosperity. It is a mirage.

Every man with a dinner pail knows that, unless his wages have been increased 20 per cent. under Democratic munition prosperity, he is poorer than he was four years ago. For Wilson rents are from 20 to 40 per cent. higher; the Wilson meat, the Wilson sugar and the Wilson wool are 40 per cent. higher, and the Wilson steel and tin and household goods are from 20 to 40 per cent. higher.

The Wilson bread has advanced faster than the Wilson wage, and the Wilson taxes have risen higher than the Wilson prosperity.

Democracy may have enriched the munition manufacturer, but has it enriched the worker, whose cost of living has increased faster than his earnings?

If the Administration can re-elect itself on the ground that the worker is obliged to move out of his home into an inferior one, or has to double up in tenements and to take in boarders to make up for his loss of economic advantage under the present increased cost of living, then there is no reason why the Administration should not be as extravagant in its taxes as it choosed.

CARPENTERS MAKE GAINS.

BEAVER, Pa., Aug. 26.—Carpenters' union has secured contracts from practically every employer in this city and vicinity.

APPLAUDS CHILD LABOR ACT.

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 28.—The Register expresses this thought on the federal child labor act, which is supported by every thinking southern citizen, despite contrary views of a few mill owners and their representatives:

"The evil sought to be abolished is of sufficient extent and magnitude to call for federal control. The states have various laws, some have adequate laws; some have virtually none; and there is nothing uniform or certain in the enforcement. The millmen, by their opposition to the introduction and passage of salutary legislation by the states, and their failure to adopt voluntarily a sanitary and humane employment system, have invited congressional supervision. This appears to be one instance where the people would cordially approve of centralization of power, the states having failed notoriously to give to the little children the protection to which they are entitled."

A NERVY ANTI-UNIONIST.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 28.—Ernest A. Prange, an installment jeweler in this city, has sued the Trades and Labor Council and the Building Trades Council, together with their officials, and the Observer, official paper, for $50,000 damages. Prange employed non-union building craftsmen and the unionists asked all members and sympathizers not to patronize him.

In his bill of complaint Prange says he has a business of $50,000 a year, and that $30,000—60 per cent—of this amount comes from trade unionists.

He wants his cake and he wants to eat it at the same time, for he asks the court to restrain the union from announcing that he employed non-union labor, because "the action of said defendants has caused him to suffer great losses and that in all probability will cause him to suffer great losses in the future, if said defendants are successful in carrying out their design, and will cause him to lose profits of $50,000 and upwards."

ARKANSAS MINERS STRIKE.

BENTON, Ark., Aug. 2.—Farmers of Saline county are supporting the 1,000 strikers at Bauxite who have suspended work to enforce living conditions. Wages have averaged 20 cents an hour for a 10-hour day. These rates are reduced by a system that virtually amounts to fines. The men struck when the company began weeding out objectors.

Most of the men dig the dirt out of pits where there is no circulation of air and where they are exposed to the heat of a burning sun part of the time or to the inclement weather at other times. An injunction has been issued against them from "interfering with the operation of the plant." The company has a monopoly of this business. It owns all the houses of the strikers and has ordered them to vacate.

Bauxite ore is largely used in the preparation of aluminum and for the lining of furnaces which are exposed to intense heat.

ALERT IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 28.—Wage increases are being negotiated by Carriage Drivers and Chauffeurs' union. These workers ask shorter hours and better conditions.

Wage increases is a feature of a two-year agreement signed by Stationary Engineers' union and the Cincinnati Butchers and Packers' association.

A committee has been appointed by the Central Labor Union to protest to the chief of police against the treatment accorded striking riggers and wreckers.

Teamsters' union is not content with recent wage increases and is extending its organization.

The Stove Mounters' union has reduced the workday to nine hours and secured substantial wage increases.

A "SURPRISED" EMPLOYER.

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Aug. 28.—In response to a request for information regarding the strike at the Belmont Casket Manufacturing company, by the president of the Shadyside Board of Trade, Secretary-Treasurer Albin blamed "paid mercenaries" for all the trouble. The employes asked that their union be recognized, but this seems so astounding that Mr. Albin writes:

"The demand was so unreasonable and it embodied such destructive possibilities that the company refused to consider it. We resent the implication that the company cannot be trusted to deal honestly and fairly with its men."

The company employs 12 different kinds of craftsmen, and while railroad shops, employing a larger number of crafts, can negotiate a federated wage scale, this is impossible in the case of Mr. Albin, who paints this alarming picture:

"Anyone can see that an arbitrary adjustment of wages would be impossible, and would result in internal discord, constant friction between our employes, which would become a permanent characteristic of the factory, and would finally mean bankruptcy for the employes and the company and throw this business to our competitors."

The strikers are asking for a union shop, union recognition, nine-hour day, time and one-half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays, a minimum increase of 2½ cents an hour for male workers and a minimum of $1 a day for girls.

MACHINISTS WANT EIGHT HOURS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 28.—About 2,500 machinists employed by the Winchester Repeating Arms company are on strike for an eight hour day. The company employes about 13,000 workers. It threatents to close down its factory, but the strikers ask what will become of the juicy war orders.

As usual in these cases, the "labor agitator" is blamed for putting shorter workday notions into the heads of employes. Fifty-one local manufacturers have signed a statement in which they notify the world "that under the present conditions we will not make any general change in our schedule of working hours, nor grant any demands that are being promoted by labor agitators."

LABOR ACHIEVEMENTS AND ITS ISSUES

The Progress Made in 1915-16 Greater Than in Any Similar Period in the World's History.

BY SAMUEL GOMPERS.

Labor Day 1916 brings to the workers of America the right to cheer and confidence in the trade union movement. There have been tests and crises that have proved its fundamental principles; there have been opportunities that have tested its practical efficiency. Through them all the trade union movement has made sure progress and gained in confident vision for the future.

Every national and international, every local union affiliated to the American Federation of Labor has made definite progress in securing for its members greater advantages in those things which are fundamental of betterment in all relations of life. In some organizations the success has been phenomenal.

Taking the labor movement as a whole there has been greater progress in securing the eight-hour day or the shorter workday than in any other similar period of time. The meaning of these victories can be interpreted only in the light of full understanding of the meaning of the eight-hour day. The shorter workday is something more than an economic demand. It is a demand for opportunity for rest, recuperation, and development; things which make life more than mechanical drudgery.

The workers whose whole periods are short are essentially different from those who are so worn by toil that they have neither energy nor mind for other things in life. They become more energetic, more resourceful workers with keener mentality and greater producing power. It inevitably follows that the short hour workers are the best paid workers. With every reduction in hours there is always a corresponding increase in wages. Wherever demands for the shorter workday and higher wages have been presented and urged by organized workers during the past year, they have met with success. These economic gains have a potent relation to the social side of life.

Shortening the period of work lengthens the period for development and for all of the other activities that belong to the normal individual. Increases in wages give the workers the means for taking advantage of the increased opportunities of the shorter workday. The workers of short hours and better wages become very different citizens from those who are so exhausted by the daily grind that they have neither the time nor the energy for thought nor aspiration. These gains mean better homes, better food, better clothing; time and opportunity for the cultivation of the best and the highest that is possible in the life of man.

Economic achievements are the basis upon which the workers can secure social and political progress. The power which secures these achievements is the power that will secure justice for them in every other relation. Shorter hours and higher wages give the opportunity and the means to live better, more purposeful lives.

Power through economic organization means political power. There must be an economic basis in order to give political activity reason for existence and a program. By organizing its economic power to secure political protection and by adhering strictly to a non-partisan political program, the American Federation of Labor has won glorious legislative victories.

The object of legislation which organized labor has sought to obtain is always to establish larger and better opportunities for life and freedom. Organized labor does not seek through legislation to do things for the workers that they can do for themselves. It only seeks to establish for them opportunities. This principle applies to workers in private industry. In the case of workers in governmental employment where the government is the employer and conditions of employment can be fixed only by legislation, then the organized labor movement seeks to do something more than merely establish opportunity. It must secure legislation regulating conditions of employment.

The record of the legisl ve achievements of the labor movement since 1906 when the non-partisan political party was inaugurated, is one of splendid victories. The two most important a e the Seamen's Act and the labor sections of the Clayton Antitrust law. The greatest thing in both of these acts is the advancement of human freedom.

The problem of human freedom was not ended by the work of Lincoln. There still remained a class bound to involuntary servitude, the seamen. The Seamen's Act brings freedom to these workers. It makes American soil sacred to freedom, a country upon which a bondman may not step without losing his legal fetters. Freed and given an opportunity to protect themselves, the seamen are pressing their demands for higher wages and better conditions. Section 6 of the Clayton Antitrust Act contains the most advanced concept of freedom. "The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

According to old time philosophy, political economy, and legal thought, labor power was a commodity and article of commerce in no way different from coal, potatoes, and iron. Under this concept the most recent attempts have been made to hold workers in oppression and under the domination of employers, but the power to produce commodities is something different from the commodities

Big British Trade Union Congress Coming.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, England, August 25.—The annual meeting of the British Trade Union Congress, to be held in Birmingham from September 4 to Septmber 9 next, under the presidency of H. Gosling (Barge and Lighter Men's Society), promises to be unusually important. The war to a large extent will colour discussion on a variety of labor questions, but as all the amendments to resolutions have not yet been received the agenda is necessarily incomplete. The resolutions are classed under a dozen odd headings, the most important from a public point of view being "questions arising out of the war." Under this heading a large number of resolutions will be moved relating to such subjects as restoration of trade union rights, re-establishment of pre-war conditions, national organization of industry, provision of employment on demobilization, development of trades vital to national welfare, industrial adjustments after the war, conscription of wealth, and peace negotiations. Other subjects to be discussed include the increased cost of living, nationalization of railways, Government control of wood and coal trades, pensions for widows and orphans, workers' housing accommodation, payment for statutory holidays, and an amendment of the Old-Age Pensions Act.

The arrangements are being made by a committee of trade unionists representing Birmingham and district. The conference will open at noon on September 4, when it is expected that between six and seven hundred delegates will be present. Speeches of welcome will be delivered by Lord Mayor and others. In view of the war an elaborate scheme of entertainment is thought inadvisable, and the only functions arranged by the committee are a reception by the Lord Mayor on Tuesday evening, and a garden party on Wednesday afternoon at the Botanical Gardens, to which all the local labor leaders and a number of public representatives have been invited to meet the delegates. Outside bodies have also arranged several meetings. On Saturday morning, September 2, a conference convened by the Workmen's National Housing Council will be held in the Priory Rooms, and a visit will be paid in the afternoon to the model village of Bournville. The annual meeting of the Trade Union Labor Official Temperance Fellowship will hold its annual meeting the same evening, and it is expected that A. Henderson, M. P., will preside. On Thursday the Women's Trade Union League will hold a conference in the Grand Hotel, and the British Workers' National League have arranged a demonstration for the same day.

Robert Smillie presided at the annual conference of the National Union of Scottish Mine Workers in Edinburg, Scotland, on August 10th. Over eighty delegates attended, representing 94,000 organized workers. Smillie declared that it was entirely a fallacy that coal went up because the miners got an increase of wages. As a matter of fact, it was entirely the other way round. It was only when coal was put up in price by the owners that the miners asked for an increase, and the increase had invariably been in operation weeks, if not months, before the miners could get a rise. He condemned the action of the Board of Trade in granting the South Wales owners permission to increase the cost of coal for home consumption by 60 cents a ton. It was a most inequitable arrangement to give the owners that power before receiving the miners' deputation. Mr. Smille referred to the magnificent work done by the Government in organizing the nation for war, and declared that it would be equally necessary that the nation should be well organized for industry and peace purposes after the war.

One of the most important decisions arrived at by the annual conference was the recommendation to the members to vote for working six days a week on the mines during the present crisis. It was stated that the hill or surface workers at the Scottish mines had little more than half the wages of the under-ground miners, and a resolution was carried asking the union to try to enforce for such workers the full percentage of general increases awarded under the Conciliation Board since its inauguration. This would mean nearly 48 cents a day increase, but it would largely come out of the excess profits being made by the companies. The conference unanimously condemned the system of contracting for ordinary coal getting in mines and asked the Executive to try to have it abolished.

The conference unanimously sought amendments to the Workmen's Com-

PITTSBURGH A BIG CITY WITH A BIG MAYOR

Mayor Armstrong and His Cabinet of Able Men Well Qualified to Exalt a City that Promotes Progress

By HUGH MCCOWN

Pittsburgh the matchless, Pittsburgh the world's greatest iron center and Pittsburgh, whose slogan is "Pittsburgh Promotes Progress," is beyond question the most remarkable city in the world. Her commercial and financial era lies at the confluence of the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers, yet while her territorial expansion is great she seems to have nestled in a small strip in these valleys. That she is preeminently the greatest industrial center in the world statistics will prove. From these magnificent hills and along the railroads lining these craft burdened streams come the world's natural resources and from hill and mine to industry goes an unfinished as well as finished product which eventually is scattered throughout the world.

Here is thrift, here is that indomitable and indefatigable energy that make cities great and transforms peaceful valleys and fair fields to thriving, bustling and jostling centers of commerce, where wealth runs in rivulets and the hum of mill and factory wheel is the song of prosperity and plenty.

Would you have some conception of how captains of industry are made? Would you look upon the geniuses who are products of these great manufacturing plants whose skill is demanded in every industrial community throughout the country? Make an inspection of the Monongahela, Allegheny and the Ohio valleys along whose banks are lined the world's greatest manufacturing plants and mines, and conviction is unhesitatingly certain that Pittsburgh is the greatest industrial center in the world.

Great people are charmed themselves by great things. Hence Pittsburgh's greatness.

Great industries are naturally the products of thrift and great buildings are indictive of a progressive people. This remarkable city is the center of a million population and the manufacturing, commercial and financial enterprises spell an almost incalcuable volumn of trade.

The tonnage here is far in excess of the combined tonnage of a half dozen of the leading metropolitan centers of the world and to have builded one of these marvelous enterprises or to be employed in them seems to require some special qualities that eventually develops into genius which is responsible for the laudation of Pittsburgh's skill the world over.

To be one of Pittsburgh's successful citizens requires courage and an unyielding determination to go to the end. To be her chief executive in an honor to be appreciated and but few reach such exalted heights. Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong is a man of exceptional qualities and he is well fitted for the office of Mayor. Pittsburgh's Mayor is no mathamaticial genius nor a prodigy of marvelous intellectual endowment but he is practical and he has had such special training that well qualifies him for any vacancy in any of the city's departments.

Time and again has Mayor Armstrong undergone the most severe tests. In handling a threatened critical strike situation President Woodrow Wilson may well add Armstrong to his staff. With Mayor Armstrong at the helm prompt and satisfactory adjustment of labor matters, where intricate problems are involved, or the question of details at issue, satisfactory adjustment of the gravest is assured.

During the great street car strike, which occurred last spring in Pittsburgh, when for a day or two the commercial business was practically paralized, Mayor Armstrong took complete control, and soon had every line operating and business completely restrode.

Mayor Armstrong has honestly won his fame and has climbed the ladder of great achievments through dint of perseverence and not by accident. Every battle into which he has led his forces was won by him and none will charge the Mayor with being a victim of circumstance. His first election to councils from the old 29th ward and his long to be remembered controversy over the favorite son presidential choice with the then famous political boss, Mr. Flinn, brought him into prominence. Never has he sacrificed a single man to win honor for himself. He personally enters the arena to do combat and never acts through agents when matters of vital importance are at issue There are none with whom he would not cross swords and while he may not be as familiar with the classics as President Woodrow Wilson he has language that is equally as forcible, and a vocabulary from which he can construct the meaning which he desires to convey. Those who frequent the Mayor's office are convinced he is specific and direct enough and that there is no ambiguity to confuse. He knows nothing about Greek, less about Latin but he understands all the minute details about compiling a city budget in which the average tax payer is more interested than he is in ancient and forgotten lore.

The Mayor spent many years in councils and knows the requirements of the city. During the last two decades he has faced some of the greatest questions in which the people of Pittsburgh have been interested. For nearly twenty years he played some important part

Questions and Answers

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. A. they may do so, and they will be answered strictly according to those teachings which claim to be in harmony with the Bible. Address questions to the Question Department of the National Labor Tribune.

Question—In Psalms 45:16 we read, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth." Who is meant?

Answer—The patriarchs and prophets who were in genealogical line of our Lord, through his mother, Mary, were called "fathers," progenitors of Messiah. But all will be changed when the church, the body of Christ, is completed, and the marriage to the Head, Jesus, takes place.

Then the Messah will be the Everlasting Father of all mankind in the regeneration.

Then those who have been the fathers will be the children of Christ, in the regeneration. The church selected during this gospel age will be sons of God, because begotten of Him to a new nature, and are spoken of as brethren of Christ, but all of the human race outside the church will be children of the second Adam and the second Eve, the Christ—head and body.

A question and an answer—Why does the I. B. S. A. in order to prove that immortality is not an inherent quality, but contingent, confine themselves to quotations from the Old Testament—and ignore the New?

The I. B. S. A. does not ignore the New Testament by any means, but claims that all of the statements in the Old Testament, referring to man's nature, refer to him as the natural or animal man, the human being; while those in the New Testament, especially the epistles, are addressed to the saints, new creatures, spirit-begotten ones.

In the Old Testament we read: "The soul that sinneth it shall die;" "The dead know not anything;" "Man dies and that very day his thoughts perish," and many other similar statements, all relating to the natural man, "of the earth earthly."

When God created Adam we are told He made him of the dust of the ground, but we do not suppose that He took up a piece of mud and formed it into the shape of a man, like we used to make mud pies, but that He formed his body out of the elements contained in the ground, as we know our bodies contain those elements, and we have to be continually supplying them with those same elements, in the way of food, which comes from the ground, in order to keep them alive.

When the man was thus formed he was nothing more than a dead body. But the record says, "God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." So it took both the body and the breath of life to constitute the living soul, the conscious being.

When Adam died the breath of life went out of him and the soul, which was the result of the combination of the body and the breath of life, was dead, out of existence.

The body was still in existence and dissolved again into the elements from which it was formed—"Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return,"—and the spirit, breath of life, returned to God who gave it; back into the atmosphere from whence it came.

Take for illustration the two elements which compose water, oxygen and hydrogen. They may lie side by side for all time and still be the two elements, but when brought together they form water.

Now if we were to separate them again where would the water be? Just where the soul of man is when the body and the breath of life are separated, dead, gone out of existence.

When Jesus gave Himself a ransom for all, to redeem Adam and the race in him, and to restore their souls, he was the perfect man just like Adam was before he sinned. Born of a woman, but getting his life from the Father,—just as Adam was born of the earth, and got his life from God—that he might be a corresponding price.

By keeping the law which no imperfect man could do, he earned for himself life rights, or the right to live forever on the human plane, a privilege which Adam forfeited by his disobedience.

But instead of keeping those life rights for himself, he gave them in sacrifice, for Adam and his race, and in return was given a begetting of the spirit to a new nature, the divine nature when he offered up himself and was baptised by John in Jordan.

Henceforth He was a dual being and while he was developing the new creature, He was consuming the old in sacrifice, soul and body. "He poured out his soul unto death;" "My flesh I give for the life of the world."

Now the question arises, if He gave Himself a ransom price for Adam and his race, to release them from the sentence of death, why did He not begin at once to open up the prison houses (the graves) and set the prisoners free? Because there was in His plans a further work to do, the sacrificing of His body, the church.

In the type, when the High Priest sacrificed the bullock, which represented Jesus, he did not come out and bless the people, who were waiting out in the camp, but he first took the Lord's goat, which represented the church, and did with it just as he had done with the bullock. Then Moses and Aaron came out and blessed the people.

Just so when Jesus offered up Himself, the blessing of the people was withheld until the antypical goat, the church, was sacrificed. And so all of the faithful followers of Jesus, during this gospel age, are the goat class.

Being justified by faith, they are recorded as having a body fit for offering and when they present themselves in sacrifice in an acceptable manner, they are also begotten of the spirit to a new nature, as Jesus was, and are also dual beings.

That is the mystery which the Apostle tells us was hidden from ages to generations, but is now made manifest to the saints. "Christ in you, the hope of glory." And just there is where the majority of Christian people make a mistake, in supposing the epistles, which were addressed to this class were addressed to all mankind and they conclude that all mankind are dual beings.

The matter was clearly understood by the early church, but with most of all the precious truths of the Bible was lost sight of and buried out of sight during the dark ages, when Christianity became mixed with paganism and heathen philosophy. So we see that immortality is conditional, depending upon faithfulness unto death.

Christ brought life and immortality to light, through the gospel, that is, He brought opportunity for life for Adam and his race, on the human plane, which is all that man ever lost; and He also gave the opportunity to those who would be willing to sacrifice earthly right and privileges to attain to the divine immortal nature.

A misunderstanding in regard to what immortality is has caused confusion in many minds. It being generally understood that all spirit-beings are immortal. The scriptures say, God only hath immortality. He gave that quality to His Son as a reward for his obedience unto death, and He proposes to give the same quality to those of His followers who are obedient to the requirements.

Everlasting or eternal life is not necessarily immortal. Immortality being inherent, self existent, indestructible. Jesus did not have inherent life in His prehuman existence else He could not have left it. Satan, nor any of the angels, are imortal, for we are told that Satan is to be destroyed and he was one of the highest of the angels, the "Son of the Morning."

In the wake of this unscriptural doctrine of natural immortality has followed the long train of hobgoblins hatched during the dark ages, including the blasphemous doctrine of the eternal torment of the wicked, which can only be proven by putting a literal interpretation on our Lord's dark sayings and parables, and the symbols of Revelations and ignoring such plain statements, "All the wicked will God destroy;" "They shall be punished with everlasting destruction," and many others.

When the great antypical High Priest, Jesus the head, and the church His body, comes out to bless the people, then will come to pass all of those restitution promises which were the theme of all the Holy Prophets since the world began, Acts 3, 19-23. When "the wilderness and the solitary places shall be glad and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." When "the weak hands shall be strengthened, and the feeble knees confirmed." "The blind eyes shall be opened, and the deaf ears unstopped." "The lame man shall leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing." "And a highway shall be there and it shall be called the way of holiness," "and the wayfaring man, though a fool, shall not err therein."

When "a man's flesh shall be fresher than a young child's, and he shall return to the days of his youth."

"Then the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads and sorrow and sighing shall flee away," "and there shall be no more death."

South Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 26.

We all enjoy your paper so much, especially the articles on Present Truth and the sermons, although I am 87 years old. I am glad I have lived long enough to see God's word vindicated, and at last to understand His Word.

DR. JOHN WILSON.

Dryden, Me., Aug. 23.

The letters are such a help to any one alone as I am. Through the kindness of a sister in the class, I have been receiving your paper for one year and I loaned it to others so they might have the benefit of reading its message.

I have been in the Truth four years; was a Spiritualist when the Lord called me out, praise His name!

I send love to all the frends through the Tribune.

Your Sister, by His Grace,
MRS. ELLA SIMONS.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 22.

Please permit me to give a little testimony which may be helpful to many others, as it has been to my wife and me. Like many of the dear saints of the Lord, we are deaf and cannot hear the prayers and testimonies at the Wednesday evening meeting, though we love to be with the brethren and enjoy the fellowship of kindred minds.

A dear sister, who is always trying to be helpful to others, takes brief notes; she names the brother or sister, and the points they make, then gives us the notes. In this way, we receive a great blessing, so you see we have no excuse for remaining away from prayer and testimony meetings.

Yours in His grace,
BRO. AND SISTER GANGOUNG.

Vandalia, Ill., Aug. 23.

To Isolated Brethren: Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus, our Lord. Christian greetings of much love to you all.

What peace you have comes through the knowledge of God; the beauties of His glorious character have been revealed, the Divine Plan has been opened to your mental vision, and the unspeakable gift of His Holy Son, and what it means to you, and the entire posterity of Adam, has filled your cup to over-flowing, with the joy that remaineth.

Yet for all this, there is one passage of Scripture that pictures your longing desire, and that is expressed by David thus: "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth, for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God."—(Psalm 84:-2.)

Having been isolated once myself, I know what it means to long for fellowship, and I now know how much it means to enjoy such fellowship, so the Lord help me to say a few words that I hope will be helpful and encouraging to you. It is a fact that requires no pressure to bring home to the mind of the "new creature," this longing for the courts of the Lord, which in the broadest sense means our "glorification," when all will be brought together in that grand tabernacle of God. (Heb. 12: 23.) Yet in another sense, we long for the courts of the Lord this side of the veil. We long for surroundings that are in harmony with our new minds, we long to associate with those who are journeying the same path that we are traveling, whose destination is the same as ours, and whose joys and experience are of the same kind. From such we expect, and do get, words of comfort and encouragement, and how precious they are to our weary souls. Not weary in the sense that we are tired of the pathway, but weary in the sense that the world does not understand us, and thus causes us to long to be home, and to be known even as we are known. (1st John 3:2.)

As regards our hearts and flesh crying out for the living God, our hearts and flesh do not cry for the living God, in the manner they once did, for we have now truly found the living God, and how different we have found Him to be, from our former opinion before the "Truth" opened our eyes. Now we can earnestly say—great and marveious are thy ways. Our hearts and flesh now cry out for the living God, in that we desire to come into His presence, and see and know Him as He is, instead of as we do now, through faith and hope.

Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." (Prov. 4: 23.) Let us see to it, Brethren, that our hearts are right, and all will be well, at His own pleasure the isolation will cease. Let us pray, one for another, and rejoice in the hope, firm to the end.

Your Brother by His grace,
B. F. KELLY.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

Thou sing'st with so much gravity and ease,
And above human flight dost soar aloft
With plumes, so strong, so equal, and so soft,
The bird nam'd from that paradise you sing,
So never flags, but always keep on wing."

It will be impossible to estimate to what extent the great poets mold the intellectual destiny of men through the schools and its students who spread their thoughts by mingling with the populace. Emerson, a close observer and student of civil history, says that the poet ranks above all other professions in molding human destiny. We present a few sentences taken here and there from an essay compiled into a paragraph:

"The poet is representative. He stands among partial men for the complete man, and apprises us not of his wealth, but of the commonwealth. The poet is the man without impediment, who sees and handles that which others dream of, traverses the whole scale of experiences, and is representative of man, in virtue of being the largest power to receive and to impart. The sign and credentials of the poet are, that he announces that which no man foretold. He is the true and only doctor; he knows and tells; he is the only teller of news. He is a beholder of ideas, and an utterer of the necessary and casual. The experience of each new age requires a new confession, and the world seems always waiting for its poet. All that we call sacred history atests that the birth of a poet is the principle event in chronology. Man, never so often deceived, still watches for the arrival of a brother who can hold him steady to a truth, until he has made it his own. With what joy I begin to read a poem, which I confide is as an inspiration!"

These remarks of our Concord Seer sound rather extravagant in his claims for the poet. For instance the statement, "The sign and credentials of the poet are, that he announces that which no man foretold," virtually makes him a prophet. The fact seems to be that what the poet writes up becomes the common property of coming generations through being read and in this he is not, strictly speaking, a prophet, but a matter of sequence. So thoroughly did Satan foister these combinations of truth and error of Virgil, Dante and Milton upon the Christian world that primitive Christianity has been entirely lost sight of. Note the following expression from Arch-deacon Farrar, in line with Pastor Russell contention, concerning Modern Christianity: "Our orthodox faith seems to trace a genesis to the genius of Dante, with St. Paul and Jesus as secondary or contributing influence." Satan's method of bewitching people with grammar is a vivid contrast to those of God who uses common people to express His purposes. Those that contribute to progress in religious spheres are not usually gifted with genius of expression. Certain it is that St. Paul ranks as one of the foremost logicians of history, but his bodily presence was weak—his letters only were mighty, not because of his grammar but his logic. But this same apostle emphasized this very fact; in order that "no flesh should glory in His sight"; "not many noble, not many mighty, but God hath chosen the weak and foolish things of this world to confound the things that are mighty," in line with this David remarks; "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings will He perfect His praise." Nor is the truth of Christianity ossified into a final and permanent expression as in the creeds or poetry of Dante and Milton. It is progressive with its fundamentals as the continued basis of its development. "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shines brighter and brighter unto the perfect day."

Within the last two decades Satan's whole regime of foistering error upon the unsuspecting by the use of the great poets has been changed. Since the advent of the Drummond-Swing-Briggs-Eliot type of speculators have permeated the church, the Bible is now openly placed on a par with the writings of other great men—that is, these higher critics have repudiated the plenary inspiration of the Bible. Satan's last move to entrap the intellectual world by precept now differs in that he has substituted Darwinism as the touch-stone of speculation, instead of the Platonic theory of immortality. The Theological seminaries are now nothing but a seething mass of human speculation and tradition, and the nominal church is now going through the same experience it went through during the day of Hypatia, when the universal conquest of the Roman's caused the fusing of ideas by the intermingling of the races. The rapid transit of our day, the printing press, the marked influence of the oratory of Beecher, like the rhetoric of Hypatia, has paved the way of the modern St. Augustine in the person of Dr. Eliot, who has given voice and sanctity to Modern Rationalism in the Church by his famous address to the Harvard Summer School of Divinity. The present product of Modern Theological Seminaries is of the Higher Critic type, i. e. Destructive criticism—not the Constructive criticism of the I. B. S. A. propaganda—and to find a believer in the fall of man and necessity for the Atoning Blood of Christ amongst the preseut day product is very rare indeed.

Since Protestantism has drifted into destructive righer criticism, the late Pope, noting that the outcome of this teaching to be disastrous to society, has ordered an examinatin of all text books in Catholic seminaries and recommended the Bible to the Catholic laity. The Catholic priesthood and the Protestant higher critics have exchanged places. Says Archbishop Quigley, "We owe to the Reformation the fact that the Bible and its teachings have no longer any hold on the Protestant mind of our day, for higher criticism has consigned it to the scrap heap." The Reformation was started by the faith branch of Protestant theology, and the higher critic school traces to the opening of the Book of Nature via Eliot, Drummond and Darwin. These are in the majority and are the most influential and the predominating element in the faculties; the failure to note this discrimination has led to the mistake of attributing the casting away of the Bible which started the Reformation, to the Reformation.

Emerson has also noted the fact, in line with the Biblical thought that the present regime of society is Satanic, in his statement, "Society is in league against all of its members." The perversions of common sense and human emotion under Satan's supervision is aptly described by the poet Kipling as "the law of the jungle," and is certainly in accord with the characterer attributed to him in the Bible. Yet the belief in a personal Satan has been pigeon-holed as one of the relics of antique items of superstition by the "cultured" of our day; and logical sequence of this is to follow with the denial of a personal God. Since the only popular education of an academic nature is along the lines of father of modern speculation, Darwin, which philosophy seems to be bent on making it appear that "there is no logical necessity for a God" other than the blind brute forces of nature operating along a set of laws without a law-maker. And there is an element of justice in God permitting Satan to prevent the scholastics from coming into a full knowledge Himself, or His creation, for pride and all its concomitants is their dominating emotions. To the boastful scientists of this so-called "Brain Age" as to the profane and vulgar, Jehovaha will not be known: "Verily Thou art a God that hidest Thyself, Oh God of Israel." Darwinism, with all its byproducts, Atheism, Pantheism, Agnosticism, Higher (?) Criticism, etc., are illusions that will not stand the lime-light of reason in connection with nature, intuition nor Scripture. It is the product of pride, just as was the papal chair the product of envy of the early "Christian Fathers" who coveted the honors being chief bishops of the church, the Pope, after the days of Constantine. These are Satan's delusions to entrap those that are liberating themselves from his snares of the Dark Ages and are caught by these delusions in proportion as they are governed by perverted emotion and principle, and prove themselves unworthy of a full knowledge of the truth of either science, human nature or revelation! "They receive not the truth in the love of it; for this cause God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lie."

The fruits of the atheism and agnosticism now permeating the mass of humanity is now apparent to many statesmen and has prepared the way for the dissolution of the present order of society, typified in the French revolution, the legitimate fruits of the literature of Voltaire and Rousseau. Had the truth contained in Protestantism not been crushed in St. Bartholemew massacre, the French revolution would not have been; and had Calvin, the forerunner of Protestantism in France, had the convictions of Huss and stood his ground in France and sealed the truth with his own blood, as did Huss in Bohemia, instead of fleeing to Switzerland and establishing an ecclesiastical state, the Reformation would not have been crushed in France by St. Bartholemew massacre, but by war as in Bohemia; Bohemia revolted against the teachings of Papacy through the death of Huss and brought on the crusades of Papacy. The rejection of the light culminating the Reformation, Millennial Dawn, by the Evangelical Alliance, and substituting the undeveloped Pre-Millennialism born in the "Miller Movement," has modified the pending "Battle of Armageddon" in the United States by having revolution culminate in anarchy. Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

LOVE VS. FEAR AS CONSTRAINING POWER.

THE CHAIN WITH WHICH SATAN BINDS MILLIONS TO KEEP THEM FROM GOD.

Whole World in Bondage to Fear—All Nations More or Less Dominated by Evil Spirits—Gods and Demigods of Mythology—Bible Teaching on This Subject—Love, Not Fear, The Drawing Power—Bible Alone Presents a God of Love—Bible Long Misunderstood Through Satan's Scheming—Now Being Seen in All its Beauty.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 3.—Pastor Russell spoke here today in his usual impressive manner. His text was from 2 Timothy 1:7—"God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." The Pastor spoke in part as follows:

As far as we are able to discern, the whole world is under the spirit of fear. It seems to be the great power that the Adversary has used these many centuries to delude mankind and to keep them away from God. This is very manifest amongst the heathen nations. The Bible declares most positively that the fallen angels always have been the real gods of the heathen, whose hideous idols are only the representation of their deities. Undoubtedly the gods and demigods of mythology were the fallen angels and their progeny, referred to in Genesis 6:1-4. The world cannot realize this fact; for they have not the guidance of the Word of God. Many professed Christians are also being deluded, because of their neglect of the teachings and warnings of the Bible. Consequently many have departed from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons, "by reason of which the Truth is evil-spoken of."—Leviticus 17:7; Deutoronomy 32:17; Psalm 106:34-38; 1 Corinthians 10:20-22; etc.

It is through the spirit of fear that the great Adversary has been able to deceive the race with false doctrines during these many centuries. Those who have been set free by the true Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ can now see how formerly they were enslaved, and can also understand how others become slaves. (John 8:31, 32.) This spirit of fear, together with the worldly ambitions of the leaders of religious organizations, brought on the Dark Ages. Fear was used as a lash to drive people into the churches in an effort to convert the world. Blasphemous doctrines which grossly misrepresented our loving Creator were foisted upon the people to frighten them into subserviency.

But fear never has amounted to anything in bringing people to the Lord. The most that it could do would be to cause its victims to make an outward profession which belied their heart sentiments. It is the LOVE of God, the love of Christ, that constrains us. (2 Corinthians 5:14, 15.) There was a time when we had this same fear; but instead of driving us to God, it had a tendency to drive us away from Him. History proves unmistakably that the blasphemous doctrine of endless torture has utterly failed to bring men to God. The most hardened criminals are very generally those who have been taught this doctrine. The great mass of the careless, the indifferent, the morally lax, are those who from childhood have been thus indoctrinated. It is not God's design to draw the world to Himself by any such methods.

THE BLINDING EFFECTS OF ERROR.

The Truth is beautiful. It has a drawing and sanctifying power that nothing else can have. If the world were not under the blinding influence of "the god of this world"—Satan—all would be captivated by the Truth; for it is the only reasonable proposition on the face of the earth. If those who hold false doctrines are not ashamed of their errors, it is because they do not know enough to be ashamed. All should be ashamed of every doctrine except the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Of this Gospel the great Apostle Paul declared that he was not ashamed. The Gospel of the LOVE of God as manifested in Christ was the Apostle's continual glory.—Romans 1:16; Galatians 6:14.

But the god of this world has blinded the minds of "the children of disobedience" lest the light of the knowledge of the glory and the goodness of God should shine into their hearts. Satan does not wish this light of God's goodness to shine in upon humanity. Consequently he has endeavored to cause people to think of their Creator as the greatest Demon imaginable. One can scarcely even imagine a being as monstrous and cruel as the creeds of the Dark Ages represent our God to be. No human being, however depraved, would be so devilish as to do what has been attributed to God. A being who would torture throughout eternity billions of his creatures would be a devil of the blackest dye. And when we consider that these creatures were born imperfect and blemished by the Adamic fall, and blinded by superstition and ignorance inherited from their forefathers, the matter would be still worse. How could we imagine such things of our Heavenly Father!

HEATHEN DRIVEN AWAY FROM GOD.

It is no wonder that such teachings have caused the majority to prefer not to think about God, but to seek pleasure, to immerse themselves in business, in society, in almost anything rather than to think of their Creator. This has been a most successful device of Satan to hinder people from any true worship of God, from any real love for Him. Naturally man would have a strong drawing toward his Maker; for in every human being there is something that would cause him to long after God. The faculty of reverence lies at the top of the head. Reverence is the highest faculty of the mind. Whoever lacks fellowship with God is living in the lower parts of his brain.

Even the heathen naturally would wish to find God. (Acts 17:22-28. But when we send missionaries to them with such terrible misrepresentations of the Divine character, the heathen are repelled. They do not wish to have such a God as the creeds of Christendom represent. Consequently the missionaries have accomplished comparatively little in leading the heathen to the religion of Christ. If the misssionaries had had the real Gospel Message, the heathen would have desired it.

Some time ago we were in India, where we were somewhat disappointed with the attendance at the meeting we held in a city there. The next morning two intelligent natives came to us as we were on our way to the railway station. Calling us by name, they expressed regret that we could not remain longer in their city. Amongst other remarks they said, "Had we known last night that you were present here, we would have gone to the meeting. We care nothing for what the missionaries say. Our gods tell us that we should not harm even the tiniest insect. Then to think that the Christian God has damned our forefathers to suffer through all eternity! We cannot trust such a God as He. But we are told that your message is altogether different from that of the missionaries."

We had to apologize to these men, and to tell them that they were quite right, but that they had been misinformed respecting the true character of the God of the Bible. We assured them that we would be glad to remain longer and tell them about the true God, but that our appointments made it necessary that we go on at once. We do not know whether they heard at any other point or not; and so we leave the matter.

Practically the only natives of India who pay any attention to the missionaries are what are known as "rice Christians." They were poor heathen a short time ago, and had very little to eat. Rice was promised them on condition that they would attend the meetings conducted by the missionaries. Naturally they attended whichever mission would promise them the most rice. Poor creatures! It was not the message that drew them, but the material benefits promised.

"PERFECT LOVE CASTETH OUT FEAR."

Notwithstanding the fact that we are living in such an intelligent Age, fear is a potent factor throughout the whole world. All the educated people of today are abandoning the Bible. Still the great mass of mankind, doubting that there is a Hell of eternal torture, and yet afraid that there might be, turn occasionally to the Bible to try to get some little insurance against such a place of torment. They are actuated by fear. Why is this? It is because of false teaching, misrepresentation of the real Message of the Bible, because of the binding influence of the great Adversary.—2 Cor. 4:4.

This condition was clearly foretold in the Bible. It has been permitted by the Lord for a wise purpose. The work of this Gospel Age has not been the conversion of the world, but merely the taking out from the world a very special class, "a people for his name." (Acts 15:13-18.) The present adverse conditions in the world are most favorable for the training, the testing and the proving of this class. In connection with their Lord and Head, Christ Jesus, they are to be used of the Father in blessing the whole world during the incoming Age—in scattering the ignorance, the darkness and the superstition, in enlightening the minds of mankind, in instructing them concerning the Love of God, concerning His provision for their salvation and uplift through the Atonement work of their Redeemer. Then the world will be delivered from the slavish fear in which they have long been bound.

The love of God in the heart casts out this fear. This we know experimentally. Having the love of God in our hearts, we find that it has cast out fear, that our knowledge of God"s great Plan for the salvation of both the Church and the world has banished the fear which has torment. (1 John 4:18.) To us, God is no longer a great Devil, who seeks for some pretext to justify Himself in torturing His creatures throughout eternity. On the contrary, He is a loving Father, who seeks the highest good of all His creatures, and has provided great blessing for all who will accept them upon His gracious terms, when these terms are made known to them, and assistance granted according to their need.

THE GOOD TIME COMING TO ALL MANKIND.

The Scriptures promise that the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall yet fill the whole earth, and that Christ shall be a Light to lighten the Gentiles—the heathen. (Habakkuk 2:14; Isaiah 11:9; 42:6; Luke 2:25-32.) That Light will reveal, not devilishness, but the glory of God, His goodness, His grace. Oh, that will be a happy time! And it is not far distant. Soon men will bow before "the Great White Throne." It will not take them long to learn in the incoming New Age, when all the blind eyes shall be opened, and all the deaf ears unstopped.

During this night-time of six thousand years, during which "darkness has covered the earth and gross darkness the people," it has required faith and courage to walk with the Lord. But presently, when the light shall be spread abroad, all shall know Him, from the least unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord. (Jeremiah 31:34.) We are just finding out what it really means to know our God. This knowledge has wrought a great change in the lives of those who have come to this condition.

It is blessed to know God, to have an intimate acquaintance, a fellowship of spirit, with our Creator. Our Lord Jesus said that to know God is life eternal. (John 17:3.) There are few as yet who know Him. We who are beginning to know Him have this knowledge as an evidence that we are in the way to eternal life. But not until we become His children can we thus know Him. Every child should know his father better day by day. Therefore from the time when we are begotten of the Holy Spirit of God, our Heavenly Father is willing that we should become thoroughly acquainted with Him, with His character. This is what it means to have the love of God shed abroad in our hearts.—Romans 5:1-5.

WORSHIPING IN SPIRIT AND IN TRUTH.

No one can truly worship God until he is set free from the bondage of fear. The more we are freed from this slavish fear, the more are we enabled to come into the light of God. The spirit of slavish fear represents Satan; for it is his spirit. Therefore until we get free from it we cannot properly worship God. When we thought of Him as a God who sent 999 out of every 1,000 into eternal torment, we could not understant how He could be a God of Love. Only those who would have no brains could fail to be troubled about such a question. But now we know that "God hath not given us the spirit of fear." It came from the Adversary.

God is not seeking slaves who will fall down to worship Him lest they be thrown into eternal torment. He desires the worship of those who worship him in spirit and in truth. (John 4:24.) He tells us that slavish fear of Him is taught by the precepts of men. (Isaiah 29:13.) It does not come from God. The spirit which He gives His children is a spirit of courage. "The righteous are as bold as a lion." One with God is a majority. One shall chase a thousand; and two shall put ten thousand to flight if God be with them. (Proverbs 28:1; Deutoronomy 32:30.) This is not self-confidence. It is the confidence born of the exceeding great and precious promises of the Word of God; and we dare trust these promises.

We love our Father and our Saviour, and in this Divine strength will we go on, fearing nothing. God has given us this spirit; and it will increase in proportion as we endeavor to be loyal to the Lord God and seek to walk in the footsteps of our Master. "Be of good courage," children of the Heavenly King; "and He shall strengthen your heart." "Be not afraid!"

"THE SPIRIT OF A SOUND MIND."

People are often astonished at the courage manifested by the true children of God. With all their meekness, they develop a wonderful amount of courage. They have found a Friend, oh, such a Friend, who loved them ere they knew Him. They find Him a very present help in every time of trouble. The courage which He gives them is not courage to do mean or unkind things, but courage to do right, to speak a word in season, to assist those who need a helping hand, courage to proclaim the Truth of God kindly and lovingly, whatever the opposition brought to bear against them. All the meek need to have this courage. Meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness, love—all these are qualities which the consecrated child of God must possess; and with them all he must also have courage.

The Truth of God gives its possessor the spirit of a sound mind, no matter how unsound his mind may have been by nature. The Spirit of God gives one a better balance, better judgment, better powers of reasoning. It does not make one perfect in the flesh; for God does not purpose to make His consecrated children perfect in this life. Those whom He is now training for membership in the Kingdom of His Son are to be made perfect in heart, developed in character, but not perfect in the flesh. Were they made perfect in the flesh, they could not be so well tested and proved, nor could they so well sympathize with the world in the next Age, who have all these human weaknesses and whom these sons of God are to judge.

The spirit of a sound mind gives the Lord's children courage to fight against the weaknesses of the flesh, against the world and against the Devil. It keeps them from wasting their consecrated time upon foolish, unprofitable things. It leads them to redeem the time for the things that are worthy. Having given their time, their money, their all, to the Lord, they seek to spend and to be spent in His service and to His glory. Meantime He is watching to see how they are carrying out their vow of consecration. Therefore they are daily striving earnestly to increase their talents and to improve their time, that they may use all to His glory who has called them out of darkness into His marvelous light. These experiences are working out in them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, preparing them to be associated with Him in giving blessings to the world. So they are going on from grace to grace, from glory to glory.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The following is the standing of the fund to date:

Essay VI.

Satan's evident purpose seemed to be that by immortalizing these combinations of truth and error in the realms of literature, would not only always exist but also foister the error upon the minds of men through the sublime language in which they were clothed. This is exactly what did occur with Virgil's "Aeneid." Virgil was no believer in the mythology he clothed in poetry and must have had a presentiment that his "Aeneid" would serve just such a purpose as it did, for he made an earnest request to have it destroyed before he died, but this provision of his will was ignored by Augustus the Roman Emperor. So, during the third century, he was regarded as the "Christ of the Gentiles" owing to a mystical interpretation of a section of "Aeneid." This book, together with other literature, supplanted the writings of the Apostles written in common language, and Virgil's writings, coupled with Satan's delusion that the Kingdom of God was to be set up before Christ's second advent instead of after—expecting the right thing at the wrong time—led to the Papal Robe and chair.

Catholic writers usually make the claim that St. Peter was the first Pope and interpret Christ's statement to Peter, "Upon this rock I will build my church," in support of their claim. In Millennial Dawn Vol. 2, Page 294 onward, is a historic account of the first Pope, Leo the Bishop of Rome, the tactics employed to hypnotize the vandals and others and gave this ambitious bishop pre-eminence above the many who aspired for the honored position of being Christ's representative on earth, ruling in His stead as the Kingdom of God. Dante, the highest authority in the Catholic Church, admits that Leo was the first Pope and also the disgraceful means employed which established the bishop in power, in the following remark: "He from this journey, in thy song renown, learn'd things, that to his victory gave rise and to papal robe." Dante, like some of our modern "philosophers" who, by their sophism, transform evil into good, being sophisticated with the Satanic maxium "the ends will justify the means," countenances the disgraceful means of establishing the Pope into power and calls it providence. We quote the paragraph containing these thoughts from the first canto of "Commedia" paraphrased by interpretating in parathensis, in which Dante in a dialogue to Virgil says:

"Thou hast told of Silvius Sire (Aeneas), yet clothed in corruptible flesh among the immortal tribes had entrance, and was there sensibly present. Yet if heaven's great Lord, almighty foe to ill, such favor show'd in contemplation of the high effect, both what and who from him should issue forth, it seems in reason's judgment well deserved; saith he of Rome and of Rome's empire wide, in heaven's empyreal height was chosen sire; both which (Aeneas and the Julian family) if truth be spoken, were ordain'd for the holy place, where sits who to great Peter's sacred chair succeeds. He (Leo, the Bishop of Rome, the first Pope) from his (Aeneas) journey, in thy song renown's (Virgil's "Aeneid"), learn'd things, that to his victory gave rise and to papal robe. (After the Julian family had fled from Troy and were recognized by the Roman people, the Latin and Sabin tribes, as the Royal family, is where Dante dates the beginning of the "Kingdom of God" (?) set up on earth, which changed, as admitted by Dante, from Rome Pagan to Rome Papal.")

This was indeed a master stroke of Satanic ingenuity in using Virgil to dazzle the early "Christian Fathers" with the gentle music of his verse, who in turn dazzled the Pagans with their gorgeous dress parade in Rome, which was copied from Virgil's description of the pagan deities. These plural Gods were later given Christian names and led to the doctrine of the Trinity. Satan still used the same tactics later with Dante, for Dante's poetry saved Catholicism from oblivion in the Italian Renaissance; and since the Reformation, he saved Protestantism by Milton and also uses the same methods in modern times. Hubbard is foistering the ridiculous nonsense of Pantheism upon his readers with the mighty power of his rhetoric and witticism.

Just as Virgil's works were the established classics of his lifetime, and soon after his death had become, as they still remain, the school books of Western Europe, and in the third century his poems ranked as sacred books and were regularly used for divination by Christians as by pagans formerly, so the works of Dante and Milton are used by Catholic and Protestant seminaries as classics for teaching the art of expression. While not going to the extreme of claiming plenary inspiration for Dante and Milton, they in effect do the same by keeping the Bible in the background. In using the classics to derive the art of expression the students absorb the learning as well. The creeds of the various sects serves the laymen as crystalized and permanent articles of faith, but these are regarded as poetry by the clergy and spiritualized into harmony with the works of the masters.

Milton and Dante's literature, instead of inspiring the students to do and become, has the reverse effect; it destroys initiative, the vast learning of the men hypnotizes them in conformity. Even the great Dante was almost smothered by his prototype, Virgil's eloquent verse: "Why should I there presume." Milton was inspired by Dante to be sure, but this is the exception and not the rule. His task of working Protestantism into poetry, since Luther discovered that Dante's purgatory was not in the Bible and since it was discovered that Dante's ptolemaic system of astronomy was proven fictitious by Bruno, Galiaeo and Copernicus, was from a desire to have a restatement in poetry of what he considered to be a final expression of the Truth. His work has a decidedly bad effect upon those that read it, admitting exceptions which prove the rule. The following verse from Marvel concerning the blind poet Milton, may be considered typical:

"I am convinced, and none will dare
Within thy labors to pretend a share,
Thou hast not missed one thought that could be fit,
And all that was improper dost omit;
So that no room is here for writers left,
But to detect their ignorance or theft.
The majesty which through thy work doth reign,
Draws the devout, detering the profane.
And things divine thou treat'st of in such state
As them preserves, and thee, inviolate.
At once delight and horror on us seize;

ARREST OF ST. PAUL.

Acts 21:27-40.—Sept. 19.

Returning From the Apostle's Third Missionary Tour — The Missionaries Cordially Received by the Church at Jerusalem—Concession to Prejudice Unsuccessful—St. Paul In Danger From Mob Violence—The Roman Garrison From Fortress Antonia Called Out — Christ's Ambassador Made Prisoner—Suffering For Christ.

"Thou shalt be a witness for Him unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard." Acts 22:15.

WHEN St. Paul and his companions arrived at Jerusalem, he was returning from his third missionary tour amongst the Gentiles. On his way to Jerusalem the Lord had permitted forewarnings to reach him, informing him that he might expect trouble—bonds and imprisonment—in the Holy City. Undeterred, however, this noble ambassador for Christ arrived there, bringing with him money collections from the Churches of Asia Minor and Greece for the Church at Jerusalem, which apparently was in a measure of financial distress.

Their reception on their arrival was of a private character, and they had further manifestations of the same loving brotherhood noted in our study for August 27. On the following day, which probably was Pentecost (Acts 20:16), the Church was called together to receive the Apostle and his companions in a more formal manner. St. James the Less was apparently the recognized leader in the Jerusalem Church. St. Paul recounted his experiences during his third missionary tour and the Lord's blessing upon his ministrations of the Truth, notwithstanding the tribulations permitted. Probably he turned over the collections from the Gentile brethren at the same time.

Nazarites in the Temple.

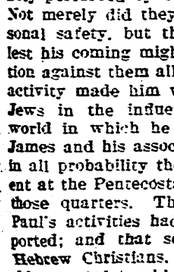
The brief record indicates that the brethren at Jerusalem were considerably perturbed by St. Paul's presence. Not merely did they fear for his personal safety, but they were alarmed lest his coming might stir up persecution against them all; for the Apostle's activity made him well known to the Jews in the influential part of the world in which he had labored. St. James and his associates realized that in all probability there might be present at the Pentecostal feast Jews from those quarters. They knew that St. Paul's activities had already been reported; and that some, even of the Hebrew Christians, were troubled at his reported teachings that the Law was dead and that no one was obligated to pay any further attention to it.

Therefore the brethren urged St. Paul to contradict these partial misconceptions by entering the Temple and associating with some brethren who had taken the Nazarite Vow. (Numbers 6:1-21.) They did not suggest that he take this vow, but that he be present with these brethren, in recognition of what they did; and that he bear their expenses, which included the shaving of their heads, the burning of the hair, and the cost of sacrificing for them four animals each.

St. Paul's Conduct Misunderstood.

While St. James and the leaders of the Church evidently understood St. Paul's position, yet apparently they did not grasp so clearly as did he the fact that "the middle wall of partition" between Jew and Gentile was completely broken down, and that the Law was merely a pedagogue, designed to lead to the School of Christ. St. Paul taught that the Law could save neither Jew nor Gentile; that only faith in Christ could bring the soul into relationship to God; and that while certain blessings still remained for the Jews, yet during this Gospel Age God is selecting a Spiritual Seed of Abraham from both Jews and Gentiles; and that any attempt to keep the Law with a view to meriting eternal life would surely fail.—Romans 3:20-31; Ephesians 3:1-7; Gal. 3:8, 16, 29.

Nothing in this, however, really interfered with St. Paul's doing just what the Elders at Jerusalem urged him to do for the men under the Nazarite Vow. Nevertheless, in our judgment a more courageous course might have been pursued. Apparently the very method taken to ward off public opposition merely aroused it. When the seven days were nearly expired, the Apostle was recognized by Jews from Asia. Having seen him with Trophimus, a Greek from Ephesus, they jumped to the conclusion that the latter was one of the four men whose head was shaved. From the Jewish standpoint this would have been a grievous offense; for only Jews were permitted to come within the Temple precincts.



St. Paul Arrested.

At the cry that the Temple was being profaned, a mob speedily gathered and dragged the Apostle out of the edifice. While they were beating him, seeking to kill him, the chief captain of the Roman garrison of the Castle of Antonia, close by the Temple, hurried to the scene with a company of soldiers. The Apostle was taken to the castle. But the mob made a mad rush to get him from the soldiers or to kill him outright.

STRIKERS ENJOINED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4.—Temporary injunctions have been issued by Superior Court Judge Hunt against a score of striking culinary workers, who are asking for an eight-hour law.

PITTSBURGH TO CELEBRATE CENTENNIAL

Exercises to Commemorate 100 Years a City, Oct. 1-7

PAGEANTS TO SHOW HISTORY

Great Parade on October 6 Is Expected to Be Greatest Demonstration In City's History—Pageants at Forbes Field Will Be Presented by 1,500 Performers and Chorus of 1,000 Voices.

Pittsburgh will, during the entire week October 1st-7th, have a great celebration of the Centennial of its incorporation as a city. The celebrationn will be under the auspices of The Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania but the city and county authorities, business organizations and citizens generally are taking an active part in the arrangements.

It was in 1816 that Pittsburgh ceased to be a borough and became a city and the celebration is intended to commemorate the achievements of the community within the past hundred years, portray its present condition and forecast its future.

Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong is honorary chairman of the general committee and William H. Stevenson, president of The Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, is active chairman, with Burd S. Patterson as secretary. The committee has headquarters at 602 Keenan Building, Pittsburgh.

The program for the event is as follows:

Sunday, Oct. 1st—Religious Day: Special congregational, union and neighborhood services.

Monday, Oct. 2nd—Educational Day: Presentation of school local history prizes.

Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Oct. 3rd, 4th, 5th—Pageant Days: Historical pageant in the evenings at Forbes Field by 1,500 performers and chorus of 1,000.

Friday, Oct. 6th—Civic, Greater Pittsburgh, G. A. R., Preparedness, Patriotic and Waterways Day: Great civic and military parade. Presentation of medals to pupils for essays on Lincoln by Sons of Veterans.

Saturday, Oct. 7th—Athletic Day: Football game at Forbes Field, Pitt vs. Westminster, and other sports.

All Week—Special Pittsburgh exhibits and music at Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society. Window exhibits of Pittsburgh-made goods by merchants. Exhibit of Pittsburgh historical pictures at Carnegie Art Galleries. Exhibit of Pittsburgh historical relics at Carnegie Museum. Exhibit of Pittsburgh books and musical compositions at Allegheny Carnegie Library.

Distinguished present and former residents of Pittsburgh will speak during the celebration. The members of the Pennsylvania State Editorial association will visit Pittsburgh during the week.

The great parade on Friday, Oct. 6th, promises to be the greatest in the history of the city, exceeding the notable one of the Sesqui-Centennial celebration of 1908.

Robert Garland, president of the Chamber of Commerce, is president of the parade committee and Colonel J. M. Schoonmaker, vice president of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad and a distinguished veteran of the Civil war, is to be chief marshal.

The magnificent historical pageant to be given at Forbes Field on the evenings of Oct. 3rd, 4th and 5th will be a most unique and interesting affair.

One thousand five hundred persons will participate in the pageant which will represent scenes in the history of Pittsburgh. There will also be a musical chorus of 1,000 persons. The pageant will be under the direction of Professor George M. P. Baird of the University of Pittsburgh, who has also written the scenario.

DEMAND EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

DAYTON, O., Sept. 4.—Machinists employed in local factories have suspended work to enforce an eight-hour day.

Practically every machine shop in the city is tied up. The strikers were refused a hall to hold their first meeting and 5,000 machinists and sympathizers listened to stirring addresses while standing on the flat lands along the river bottom.

OPPOSE APPOINTED JUDGES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4.—As a part of its campaign for the non-union shop the chamber of commerce is circulating petitions to amend the city charter so police judges shall be appointed by the mayor instead of elected. The Labor Council opposes this move and declares that the municipal judicial machinery should be permitted to remain in direct control of the people.

EXPRESS DRIVERS UNITE.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 4.—International Secretary Hughes of the Brotherhood of Teamsters has installed a new union of nearly 200 furniture, piano and express drivers.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 4.—Van Drivers and Helpers' union asks employers to establish a weekly wage and abolish the present contract and speeding up system.

PRESIDENT OHIO POLICE FREE SPEECH OPPONENT

CEDAR POINT, O., Sept. 4.—Charles E. Carter, chief of police, Columbus, Ohio, has been elected president of the Ohio Police association at its annual convention. The new president has been in the limelight for the past several months because of his attempt to check free speech and run union organizers out of Columbus.

As president of the state police, Chief Carter would probably accept the influence of organized labor in the campaign for a state pension for police, which was indorsed by the convention. Other legislation favored is that police chiefs hold their jobs for life, that they may be "protected from the political highbinders of the cities," as one delegate put it.

In view of Chief Carter's attempt to gag free speech it will be interesting to note how hard organized labor smashes at this plan to give a life tenure to one who arrests union officials and holds them in his office until after union meetings adjourn.

FAVORS STATE INSURANCE.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 4.—Compensation insurance, controlled entirely by the state, was favored by President Fenton in his annual report to the state federation of labor convention. Oklahoma unionists urged state insurance at the last legislature and presented a bill along these lines, but the senate rejected the section.

"And during the past year," said President Fenton, "the insurance companies have reaped a golden harvest as a result of their work at the regular session, and employers are paying higher premiums than would have been necessary under an insurance law."

The unionist recommended that convicts be used on state roads instead of allowing them to come in competition with free labor.

UNIONISM IS UNSELFISH.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 4.—State federation of labor officials are asking affiliated unions to contribute to a fund that will permit the employment of competent lawyers to draft a workmen's compensation act.

The incident again illustrates the unselfishness of trade unionism. In this agitation the unorganized are voiceless. Neither do they contribute money to make possible a law that will protect both them and their dependents.

Eventually Missouri will pass a compensation law that will apply to all workers.

And as usual, when this law becomes effective society will overlook the fighting force that made the enactment possible, while courts will issue injunctions against unions and employers will plead for the non-union shop to protect the independence (?) of their "free" workmen.

TO GREET ENGLISH UNIONISTS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—President Mahon of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, and President Woll of the International Photo Engravers' union, sailed for England last Saturday, as fraternal delegates from the American Federation of Labor to the British Trades Union Congress, which will convene in Birmingham, this month.

Messrs. Mahon and Woll were elected to attend the 1914 convention of the British Trades Union Congress, but the meeting was postponed on account of the war. In 1915 circumstances again prevented the attendance of the American delegates, who were re-elected at the San Francisco convention of the A. F. of L. to serve as fraternal delegates this year and extend greetings which have been continuous since 1894 when John Burns and David Holmes represented the English workers at the Denver convention. The first American delegates to England were Samuel Gompers and P. J. McGuire, deceased.

SECURE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Sept. 4.—The International Motor company has established the eight hour day. Several weeks ago machinists at this plant struck for shorter hours and demanded that the company put in force the same workday prevailing at its plant in Plainfield, N. J. The strike was called off with this understanding.

CARMEN FORM UNION.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 4.—Carmen employed by the C., C., C. & St. L. railway have organized and affiliated to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America. About 100 employes signed the charter roll.

SAYS PERIL IS NOT EXTERNAL.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 4.—"Preparedness which begins and ends with increasing our military and naval strength is nothing but militarism. True preparedness involves economic, social and industrial changes,' said Benjamin Marsh, executive secretary of the committee on real preparedness.

"We do not oppose adequate national defense; we are not pacifists. But we refuse to be stampeded into what we believe to be militarism by men who want big armaments because they can make money out of them. The real danger comes from within—from forces which oppose social justice, which defend and promote monopolies that operate against public welfare. Low wages, child labor, land monopoly and unjust taxation are America's enemies. It is these things that we must fight against."

SPECIAL POLICE CONDEMNED.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 4.—At the convention of the state federation of labor the militia laws and state police statutes were condemned and it was resolved to take measures "to prevent the establishment of any such system of Russian cossacks, Irish constabulary, Mexican rurales and blackhorse cavalry."

President Holland was re-elected and Jamestown was selected as the next convention city.

UNION MAN DEFEATED IN UNJUST DEMANDS MADE

Employer C. C. Wire of Electrical Company Refuses to Violate Union Rules When Employes Makes Unjust Demands.

In the suit of Harry Nickum, an electrical worker against C. C. Wire, President of the Electric Sign Service Company before Alderman Samuel Abernathy, to recover an extra 50 cents per day for work which was contrary to the rules of the union, the decision was rendered in favor of Mr. Wire.

Wire contended that he had no right to pay the extra 50 cents per hour and that he was not contending for the 50 cents but for principle. The money involved was not material but he stood upon the By-Laws and Working Rules of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers under which Local Union No. 5 of Pittsburgh was operating.

Wire held the men were not doing as much work as they should and that they were laying down on the work in order to compel him to place on a job a certain number of men that would force him to name one as a foreman and thereby secure an advance of 50c per day for the foreman.

The job only required six men and the working rules specifically read "All job foremen if in charge of eight or more men, shall receive 50c per day additional to the scale."

Nickum declared the job required some one to assume the responsibility but a competent man from the east had been sent to supervise the work and direct how it should be erected while the Electric Sign Service company, whose offices are near the corner of Fourth Avenue and Cherry Way, looked after such matters as the eastern concern required in the erection of the Fatima Sign on Grant Street, where the work was being done.

Regardless of the Working Rules Nickum demanded an increase of 50c an hour, but Wire stood upon principle and refused. Wire was not to be threatened nor to be forced through threat to stop the job.

However, Nickum demanded his money on the grounds that he had acted as foreman and upon refusal of Wire to grant the 50c extra per day suit was entered before Alderman Abernathy. When the case came to a hearing Wire appeared with Attorney A. M. Lee, and there was every indication of a battle. Attorney Lee during the hearing left nothing undone to show the Alderman the injustice of the demand and emphatically declared that the case was not one in which the money involved was the consideration but a moral principle was at issue in the contention. His client sought justice and if he could not secure it before the Alderman the higher court would be appealed to.

At the opening of the hearing Nickum said the case was for $3.25 which the Electric Sign Company owed him for labor, for work done on erecting the Fatima sign. He said Wire appointed him as foreman to take charge of the work; that he had worked as foreman for six and one half days and one hour. He said he was working on the job with the regular force erecting the sign, and there were six on the job, they decided we ought to have a foreman to look after the work. Mr. Wire told me he had decided to make me foreman of the erection of the sign, and I told him if he did he would have to pay me 50c per day more, as I would not take the responsibility of looking after the sign erection unless he paid me 50c per day more, which would be $5.50 per day. He told me "alright. I'll pay it to you..' Then he came up on the job the following morning and said "the rules of the organization do not call for 50c per day more," and I said "I don't care what the rules call for if you're not going to pay me the extra 50c a day I'll quit." He said "That's alright, Nickum, don't quit, I'll fix it up." Mr. Parkinson here was working on the job with me, and he said "If you're not going to pay him that 50c extra we are going to quit work. If he is going to take charge of the work he is entitled to it." When I drew my pay Saturday he refused to pay me the extra 50c a day, claiming that the rules of the organization did not call for it.—I don't care what the rules call for—we have a right to say our own price on a job.

Attorney Lee asked:—Then he owes you $3.25? Yes sir.

What conversation did you have with Mr. Wire before the job started. and before you were made foreman, relative to your being made foreman?

Absolutely nothing. Did you say anything to him at that time about the job needing a foreman? No sir. Are you acquainted with the by laws of the organization? Yes sir. Do not the rules of your organization say that no foreman is required unless there are eight men on the job Yes sir. Do you have the by laws here. I don't think I have.

Mr. Wire:—I have them right here.

Attorney Lee:—Allow me to read you section No. 12.

Nickum:—I am acquainted with that section.

Attorney Lee:—Alright, I will read it for the benefit of the squire. Section No. 12, is as follows: "All job foremen shall be members in good standing, and shall have in charge eight or more men, and shall receive 50c per day more than the scale."

Attorney Lee:—Is that not section No. 12 of article No. 8 of the by laws and working rules of the electrical workers union?

FURNITURE FAKIRS CLEAN UP IN RUGS

Shoppers Should Provide Themselves With a List of Responsible Furniture Houses.

Not in the history of the furniture business in this city has conditions been so thoroughly stirred up as at present and the rumpus is all about the refusal of certain dealers to change the old, deceitful methods of doing business and instead of practicing deception, transact business on legitimate business principles.

Complaints have reached the Police Department by those who have been defrauded and shoppers declare that instead of the articles selected by them being delivered,, other articles of inferior and cheaper quality have been delivered. If bed mattresses have been purchased, sometimes cheaper and torn matresses have been delivered; when pieces of furniture are delivered, the drawers do not close properly and shoppers say, the furniture is not at all what they selected, nor are the articles in any way equal to those in the display rooms.

The practicing of these frauds are not new or are they of recent date—the practice has long prevailed, and Captain Arch Mackrell i saware of the nature of the frauds. Police Magistrate John J. Sweeney while Alderman, declares he grew tired of the cases brought to him and has been troubled much during his official career.

A great harvest was reaped on what was declared to be a Persian rug or Oriental rug. This rug estimated by salesmen was valued at about $5.00. The rug was highly colored in imitation of a Persian or Oriental rug. There was an extra commission paid on the sale of this rug by the furniture house, and the salesmen pushed the sale in the most inscrupulous manner. Any salesman selling one of these rugs received a special commission of $1.00 over $15.00 and for each $2.50 over $15.00 he received 50 cents extra.

For instance if a customer bought one of these fraud rugs and paid $15.00 for it the salesman got $1.00 in addition to his wages. If the purchaser paid $17.50 said salesman received $1.50. It is said that some salesmen actually received as high as $35.00 for one of these rugs. Should any salesman pluck his customer for $35.00 this netted the salesman 5.00 on each rug. It is said the color lasted about a month when the color began to fade. The colors were not fast and purchasers soon returned to complain. When they demanded their money they were ordered out of the store or rugs were exchanged after an additional charge was made. Thus the fraud went on.

These complaints should not effect the responsible furniture houses but shoppers must be guarded against frauds. The National Labor Tribune has already been threatened with prosecution and an attorney has been consulted as to what action can be taken. It is alleged the Tribune is in a conspiracy with other furniture houses; yet other furniture houses have been the sufferers and the frauds have been practiced to such an extent that legitimate furniture houses have suffered intensely. The Tribune has absolutely no interest in any particular furniture house but it has great interest in seeing that no frauds are perpetrated upon the shopping public. The interest of the Tribune is in warning the unsuspecting and innocent to avoid being made victims, and prevent the honest toiler and those who work hard for a livelihood from being plundered.

Captain Mackrell is in possession of complaints and also wants the shoppers warned. There is no desire upon the part of the Tribune to reflect the slightest discredit upon any furniture house doing a legitimate business. The Tribune is broad enough to appreciate the fact that furniture may be damaged in transportation or by delivery but when deliberate fraud is practiced; when furniture is sold with premeditated purpose of swindling the shopper and that these complaints have become numerous enough to annoy the police department it is time the public be warned.

The shopping public should avoid falling into the hands of the shark and the barker who picks up shoppers along the street and allures them to some distant store under the pretense of selling articles "at wholesale" prices.

Another scheme to be guarded against is the "Railroad Bargains." Schemes are worked off in the furniture line under the pretense that the railroads have large quantities of unclaimed furniture and no one wants it. The railroad furniture shark then comes along and of course hypnotizes the railroad officials and drags away train loads of "Unclaimed" furniture. Marvelous bargains to the thrifty housewife, for half price or still less are offered and the thrifty housewife swallows the bait, hook, line and sinker only to find that she has been robbed.

IMMIGRATION FIGURES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The bureau of immigration, federal department of labor, reports that 30,967 immigrants were admitted during July of this year, against 28,097 during the corresponding month of 1915, and 72,015 during July, 1914. In the latter period Roumania furnished 246 immigrants, and in July, 1916, this number dropped to 10. Immigrants from Italy during July, 1914, totaled 7,503, and in July, 1916, 2,943. During the 1914 period 325 came from Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro, but war conditions reduced this number to 53 during July, 1915.

Of the total number admitted during July, 1916, 3,633 were classified as laborers and 1,609 as farm laborers.

New York received 7,326 of these immigrants. Michigan came next with 2,464, followed by Massachusetts, 2,460; Pennsylvania, 1,230 and California, 1,089.

Of the southern state, Kentucky receiver 1; Mississippi, 4; Georgia, 6; Arkansas, 7; South Carolina, 8 and Tennessee, 11.

Labor Questions Before Union Convention

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Sept. 1. — Within the ranks of British labor attention is now being concentrated on problems that will arise after the war, and the forthcoming discussion of questions affecting the future policy of industrial workers, at the Trades Union Congress, which will be opened at Birmingham on September 4, is being awaited with great interest.

For some time past the Parliamentary Committee of the congress has been devoting attention to improving the organization of industry, in view of future needs, and on this, as well as on the question of the restoration of trade union rights they will submit important proposals. In regard to the latter subject their resolution states:

That as by conversations between the Minister of Munitions (the Right Hon. Lloyd George, M. P.) and representatives of organized labor it was agreed that in all cases where trade union rules and customs were relaxed they should be restored after the war, this congress empowers the Parliamentary Committee to call for the status quo ante when peace is declared.

That as the Munitions Act was passed subject to this solemn declaration, this congress, therefore, expects the government to insist upon employers, individually and collectively, to keep faith with organized labor; and, further, should there be any betrayal of this trust, the Parliamentary Committee shall call a special congress and invite those Ministers of State to be present who urged the workers, in a time of national peril, to forgo rights and privileges which had taken many years of unity and sacrifice to secure.

Referring to the subject of the national organization of industry, the Parliamentary Committee state that "the war has proved beyond all doubt the national weakness and danger of our pre-war industrial system, and the need for immediate reform," and that "our vital industries should no longer be left in the hands of capitalists, whose first object is profits, and workers, whose first object is wages." Such industries should be regulated by the State in the national interests. It is proposed that a Minister of Labor and Industry shall be appointed, whose functions shall be to control and organize as follows:

The wage earners, being the largest and most important, asset of the nation, should have the first care of the nation, therefore all workshops and factories shall conform to a national standard of sanitation, calculated to ensure, as far as posible, the safety and health of the workers employed.

The provision of adequate sanitary housing accommodation, where such is not already obtainable at reasonable rates. Such houses, where possible, should be self-contained with gardens.

National control and direction of use of all land. Security of tenure for tenants. Land and rent courts. Compensation for improvements. The State to have first claim on the use of all British ships, at rates which will yield a fixed national standard of profit. Nationally owned and controlled storehouses, with reserves of grain, frozen meat, dried fish, and all kinds of necessary storable food.

Complete national ownership and production of all war material and ships for war, including the auxiliary ships necessary for national emergencies. National ownership and control for all railways, waterways, and mines.

A resolution dealing with industrial adjustments after the war will be submitted by the London Society of Compositors, who propose that for the purpose of removing causes of friction likely to lead to industrial disturbance, the Parliamentary Committee shall approach the government and the Employers' Parliamentary Association with the object of discussing terms that will secure this end for three years, such terms to include the acceptance of the following proposals:

Memebrship of a trade union to be compulsory upon all workers. Compulsory forty-eight hour working week in every occupation. Compulsory minimum wage of $7.50 for all adult workers. No reduction of present wages or increase in working hours. Complete recognition by employers of trade unions and all agreements entered into between the unions and employers' associations. State unemployment pay for men and women out of work. Settlement by the unions of the conditions of women's labor after the war.

BABCOCK BLUES READY FOR MARCHING ORDERS

Pittsburgh Workmen Flooded With Letters from Gompers Against Candidate Charles E. Hughes.

Complaint is general that the Republican National Committee is exceptionally tardy in preparing for the approaching general election and that the task of lining up the voters is going to be rather collossal while the Democrats have been flooding the Pittsburgh district with letters from Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor who is constantly rolling boulders in the path of Presidential Candidate Charles E. Hughes.

Uniform of Babcock Blues

The Republicans hope for a revolution of feeling against Democracy between now and the opening of the campaign but by the reports coming into the Tribune office many old line stalwart Republicans must first be more thoroughly convinced of the necessity of a change of administration. The amazing feature is that many who have been in the ranks of machine politics for upwards of 40 years are lagging and their convictions are not so stout for the Grand Old Party at present as they were. There is an impression too, that the swing of Candidate Hughes across the nation has not had the effect it was intended to have. Hence the necessity of prompt and most vigorous action. In Pittsburgh Congressman William Coleman, Chairman of Allegheny County Republican Committee, has just began work, and within a week there will be some noticeable effect. The only organization that has exhibited any activity is the Babcock Blues and this Republican March-Club gives splendid evidence of becoming the most interesting, enthusiastic body of Republicans for stirring up real, genuine Republican sentiment of which the western end of the state can boast.

Hon. William E. Crow, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, is delighted over the activity of the Babcock Blues and is confident the marching club will have a tremendous effect upon the voters. Such a club is absolutely essential if old time Republican enthusiasm is to be created and that it is needed only a visit to the mills, shops and mines is necessary. E. V. Babcock has generously consented to the use of his name and the long lumberman while seeking no honor for himself is particularly anxious that the Republican standard bearers shall win. Not that he will profit but that the prosperity of the whole nation depends upon Republican success and Republican High Protective policies rather than Democratic free trade and Democratic "revision downward."

Mr. Babcock is a successful businessman having accumulated a vast amount of wealth through favorable conditions made possible under policies that have resulted in trade expansion. These policies were advocated during the administration of the Republican party and these measures have made prosperous a people enabling all to share in the abundance. Men who started at the bottom of the ladder slowly crept up and during an avalanche of trade every one is given an opportunity. Under such conditions when thrift is everywhere visible and prosperity and happiness are extended to every fireside men rise to places of prominence and are anxious to reflect the results of their achievements.

In speaking of the Babcock Blues at the first meeting of the smoker Mr. Babcock said:

"I realize it is a great honor to have this Marching Club bear my name and be known as the "Babcock Blues." Not merely because of the name but because I feel that in this campaign these old-fashioned Marching Clubs are going to come back to their own and fill a large and important place in the activities leading up towards election. I feel confident this particular marching club will do valiant service for Hughes & Fairbanks and the Republican ticket all along the line and a good Republican like I am must naturally feel elated to have his name connected with such an effort. So I wish you good luck and godspeed.

Everybody is busy these days and unless something of the spectacular is furnished such as this marching club the people are very apt to neglect their political duties and the campaign will lag and the Republican ticket suffer. So it will serve a useful purpose in stirring up the electorate to a sense of political duties and without such an effort it is hard to tell what we would have to face on election day. What we want is to arouse the people to think; to weigh carefully the woeful results of Democratic misrule and compare it with the substantial progress made when the Republicans were in power. This Marching Club ought certainly to be a potent factor in making the people THINK and we are sure that if they do, Hughes and Fairbanks will be elected in November with a handsome majority."

That success is assured this organization there is no doubt and the work before it is tremendous. No time is being lost and by the latter part of September the Babcock Blues will be in full swing and under marching orders. Already invitations are being received from outside cities and very soon there will be real wide awake, enthusiasm flinging itself about the city streets and the streets of other cities.

I love to feast, with you all, on the bounties that are being spread before us, and I gladly read the testimonies of the dear Lord's faithful ones. Our Pastor's sermons are, in my estimation, just grand, and the testimony department in the Tribune is one of the paper's good features. My love encircles all the Lord's dear consecrated, faithful people, and I am glad we have the "Tribune" through which we can communicate with one another, especially with those who are alone.

Yours, for righteousness,
E. W. DEAN.

Above all, I give thanks to our Lord for His salvation to all.

With Christian love,
WILLIAM PAGE FOSSETT.

GEO. H. NELSON.

Laurentian View, Canada, Sept. 7.

I regret to ask you to please discontinue the Tribune as at present I am not able to renew my subscription. If I am able to subscribe to any Truth newspaper in the future yours shall be the one for I admire the stand you take for truth and righteousness and especially the part you are taking in proclaiming the good tidings of great joy. Your work will surely not go unrewarded. Wishing you the Lord's blessing.

Yours truly,
W. HAYMAN.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 7.

I see by the label on my last Tribune that my subscription expired August 2, 1916, and I wish to thank you for continuing the paper as I do not care to miss a copy on account of Pastor Russell's sermons which appear in such fine type; also the article by N. E. Nelson. Therefore I have renewed through the Watch Tower office. Thanking you for past favors and hoping you will continue the sermons, etc., I remain, very truly yours, T. H. FORRESTER.

Brantford, Canada, Sept. 6.

I am very much pleased with your paper and it gives me joy to notice the stand you are taking for honor, principle, justice, righteousness and equity. I am glad to see a man raised up to stand for right and against evil with boldness to the opposition and the publishing of Pastor Russell's sermons, bringing out the spiritual phase and other things. It is a clean paper. Please send two papers, No. 39, August 31, 1916, for which I enclose a nickle—10c.

WM. GOODFELLOW.

Globe, Oregon, Sept. 7.

I am glad to be one of your appreciative readers, for one fearless paper who stands for right and truth as the Tribune shows himself to be, and hoping it will stay until the Master will say, "Well done, it is enough."

Yours in His love,
PAUL MOREL.

La Rue, Texas, Sept. 6.

I feel grateful to you for continuing my paper, the dear old Tribune, as I feel I can't afford to miss a single copy of same. Noticing that my subscription is now long past due I am sending you the renewal direct, instead of through the Watch Tower office as formerly.

All my family seem eager tor the first perusal of each week's issue and personally I am glad to see the courage you display in exposing frauds and faikers, as well as your stand for publishing the Pastor Russell features, as well as the fairness of and unbiassed position you hold with reference to both capital and labor.

Yours very truly,
HOWARD REGGESTER.

Silver Spring, Md., Sept. 7.

I enclose amount of subscription price for renewal for one year.

While other features of the National Labor Tribune are attractive to me, my chief interest centers in Pastor Russell's sermons and other present Truth writings. I highly prize Brother N. E. Nelson's articles and am preserving them for reference. I wish that we might have assurance that these valuable essays would be put in book form at a price in reach of people of small means. In that case those of us who feel that we must hoard the papers for the sake of the essays could pass them on for the benefit of others. In any event I desire that Brother Nelson discuss more fully Mr. Wesley's views on future probation giving also the place of their record and how the record was suppressed.

With best wishes,
F. W. WATKINS.

Honaker, Va., Sept. 8.

I hasten to renew my subscription to National Labor Tribune. I have now been a subscriber six years. Hope to continue a subscriber as long as you print our dear Pastor's sermons and other Truth matter. I wish to thank you for not dropping my name, and continuing to send me the paper long past due. May the Lord's blessings rest on your labors in this the harvest work.

Yours in the Master's service,
MRS. M. C. CLARK.

Waukesha, Wis., Sept. 8.

I see that my subscription is about to expire, so hasten to renew. My reason for taking the Tribune is because of its religious features, the other good things are also appreciated.

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM LOWRY.

THE MUSIC OF HEAVEVN.

Oh! the Kingdom of Heaven is far beyond
The region of azure blue;
Beyond the gold of the setting sun, and
Twilight of violet hue:
Beyond the darkness of purple night
With silvery stars pierced through:
Beyond things seen—the finite—the known,
Is the Kingdom of Heaven—the great white throne.

The saints are there, with Christ the head,
Of the called and chosen few,
The set apart—the immortal ones,
Who kept fast hold of the true
And only name—the name that saves
Those whom "the truth" imbue:
They came by the cross on Calvary's height;
"The elect," God seats at His right.

Their robes are of white, all 'broidered in gold,
In token of victory won:
Conquerors and more of Satan and self,
And the world in the race they have run,
Toward the mark for the prize—the high call of God
In Jesus the Christ—His Son,
Who suffered reproach, that His blood might save
All who will from death and the grave.

New music they sing—the music of heaven,
Of God, who with wonderous grace
Chose the Redeemer, and Bride of Christ,
To sit in thehol y place,
To judge mankind with righteous rule,
To the height of a perfect race;
To raise the dead, both great and small,
From the curse which came by the fall.

The Millennial day—the Milleannial day
Has dawned, for the hope of man,
Who must stand or fall by His right or wrong,
And not by the Eden ban,
Which cut him down in sin and death—
His age has been but a span—
Three-score and ten of toil—of tears,
A dark existence—the yester years.

"The Judgment day"—the day to win
Everlasting life, on the earthly plane,
The reward of perfect self achieved,
After the carnal self be slain,
Slain forever, God willed "The Christ"
Should uplift man's domain;
That death and hell and sin and tears,
Be destroyed "That day"—one thousand years.

THE SIN OF INGRATITUDE.

Of all crimes ingratitude appears to be one of the most inexcusable, and has so been esteemed amongst all people and at all times. Lycurgus, the great law-giver and statesman of Greece, wrote, "I make no law, perhaps, punishing ingratitude; I leave that for the gods to punish." Amongst the Athenians, if a slave, being freed, was afterward convicted of ingratitude toward his liberator, he was sent back again into slavery. Someone has written, "Gratitude is the fairest blossom which springs from the soul; and the heart of man knoweth none more fragrant." Shakespeare wrote: "This is the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Caesar saw him stabbed,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitor's arms,
Quite vanquished him; then burst his mighty heart."

Gratitude not only is a fragrant flower, but is indigenous to the soul of every true and noble heart. Accepting this standard, we are bound to conclude that comparatively few of the human family are noble in this respect. Even amongst the Lord's people the grateful seem to be comparatively few in numebr. This agrees well with the Apostle's statement that amongst the called are "not many noble"—chiefly the mean things of the world. (I Cor. 1:26-29.) But this describes what we were when we were called. Who shall say that amongst those who have accepted the divine call and been made partakers of the divine favors granted to all the sons of God, begotten of the Spirit—who shall say that these will remain ungrateful? Who shall say that the grace of God would not have a transforming influence on their hearts, so that however ungrateful they might be by nature, they would be so changed by grace that gratitude would be one of the chief elements of their disposition?—Watch Tower.

ST. PAUL A PRISONER IN THE CASTLE

Acts 22:17-29.—Sept. 17.

Preaching the Gospel of Christ—The Mob Again Enraged—Colonel Lysias In Perplexity Orders the Roman Soldiers to Beat St. Paul—Thereupon the Apostle Declares His Citizenship. Lessons From His Experiences.

"He is my Refuge and my Fortress; my God, in whom I trust."—Psalm 91:2.

We might have supposed that the beating which St. Paul received from the mob, together with the rough treatment which he had undergone in getting to the castle door, would have cowed the Apostle. But on the contrary, he calmly asked the commandant to grant him the privilege of speaking to the people. Doubtless he intimated that they had misunderstood what he was doing, and that a few words from him might pacify them.

The Roman officer was astonished; for the Apostle spoke Greek fluently. He had thought that St. Paul was "that Egyptian," mentioned by Josephus, who had a short time before gathered a large body of discontented Jews, to whom he had represented himself as Messiah and who, as his followers, had given the Roman authorities considerable trouble. St. Paul answered that he was a jew of an honorable city, and again asked the privilege of speaking to the people. His request was granted.

St. Paul's Defense.

Then St. Paul stood on the stairs and motioned silence, in order to address the mob. Doubtless he considered his thrilling experiences well compensated for by the privilege of telling a large concourse of his countrymen about Jesus. Promptly he preached Christ—that Jesus of Nazareth was the promised Messiah, that His sacrificial death constituted the Redemption Sacrifice for Adam's forfeited life and, incidentally, for all of Adam's children, who died under his death sentence. Surely also he declared that Messiah was calling a spiritual class to be His associates in His Millennial Kingdom, and that shortly Israel and all the nations would experience the blessings of that Kingdom. Then he proceeded to tell about his missionary tours. He declared that many of the Gentiles were gladly receiving this Message and giving their hearts to the Lord in full consecration.

St. Paul's Defense.

But so strong was the Jewish prejudice that the mere mention of the fact that this great blessing was going upon equal terms to the Gentiles rekindled the flame of hatred and violence; and their shouts and jeers rent the air. Perplexed at the situation, the Roman commandant concluded that where there was so much opposition there must be some cause for it. Thereupon he gave orders that the Apostle be whipped until he confessed what he had done to create such a tumult.

At once the command began to be carried out by the soldiers, who proceeded to tie St. Paul to the whipping-post. But the Apostle brought the proceedings to a quick termination by inquiring of a centurion who stood by, "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman and uncondemned?" When the centurion heard the question, he reported it to the colonel, who came and questioned the Apostle. He took St. Paul's word for it that he was a Roman citizen; for to have made an untruthful claim to citizenship would have meant death, as soon as the matter had been investigated. The Apostle was held a prisoner for trial.

Lessons From St. Paul's Experience.

St. Paul was suffering as a Christian—because of loyalty to the Lord and His Word. He was not suffering because of following the admonitions of the brethren in going into the Temple; for very evidently the hatred in the hearts of their enemies would sooner or later have manifested itself, and they would have sought the Apstle's life, as on previous occasions. In this incident we see merely that the attempt to create a favorable impression toward the Apostle Paul and his work amongst the Gentiles probably brought the matter of his arrest more quickly to the front than any other course would have done.

"Is it Lawful?"

The Apostle was not ashamed of his sufferings; for he realized that they were endured for Christ's sake. One should feel deeply pained at a public arrest and imprisonment as a violator of the law. But when these things are experienced because of faithfulness to the Lord, following in His footsteps, such may well rejoice in the ignominy, rejoice in what otherwise would be shameful and detestable. Let them glorify God on this behalf, rejoicing that they are accounted worthy to suffer for the name of Christ, and remembering that thus also was it with our Lord Jesus Himself. He was placed under arrest; He was bound; He was scourged; He was publicly insulted; He was even crucified as a blasphemer against God. Let every instance of religious bigotry and fanatical violence speak to our hearts a lesson in the opposite direction.

HE KEPT US OUT OF WHAT WAR?

Disingenuous to Boast That It's Through Any Act of Wilson We Are Out of the European Contest.

RATHER SHOULD BE BLAMED FOR MEXICAN BELLIGERENCY

During the Present Administration We Have Seized a Mexican Port and Sent Our Entire Army and Militia to Fight Mexicans While Armed Mexican Forces Have Invaded American Soil and Fought Battles Against Our People.

Sometimes you hear men, sensible men, too, say, "I'm going to vote for Wilson this year because he kept us out of war."

Ask such men a short question. Ask them, "Out of what war?"

Did Mr. Wilson keep us out of the European War? No. He has himself in a formal address to congress spoken of the European war as "a war with which we have nothing to do, a war whose causes do not touch us." How could Mr. Wilson keep us out of a war with which we have nothing to do and whose causes do not touch us?

Did he keep the rest of the western hemisphere out of the European war? No independent nation on this side of the world is involved in it; the only people in it are the colonies of European powers and they had no voice in their fate, for they were automatically at war when their mother governments went to war. Who kept Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, out of the European war? Did Mr. Wilson?

Did Mr. Wilson keep us out of war with Mexico? No. In his term more Americans have been killed by Mexicans and more American property has been destroyed by Mexicans than by Spaniards during the whole Spanish war. In his term we have seized a Mexican port and have sent our entire regular army and militia to fight Mexicans. In his term Mexican armed forces have invaded American soil and fought battles against our people within our boundaries.

President Taft went through two Mexican revolutions during his term, the revolution against Diaz and the revolution against Madero. American lives were safe in Mexico during that time. No Mexican cities were seized by Americans and no armed Mexicans invaded the United States while Mr. Taft was in the White House. Yet Mr. Taft never thought of asking the American people to vote for him because he kept us out of war with Mexico. He put an embargo on arms so that American weapons would not be sent across the boundary, and he refused to interfere in Mexican affairs. When he left office Mexicans liked Americans and Americans were safe in Mexico. Since he left office Mexicans hate Americans and Americans dare not remain in Mexico. Did Mr. Wilson keep us out of war with Mexico? Not if words mean anything.

Mr. Wilson did not keep us out of the European war and he did not keep us out of war with Mexico.

Out of what war, then?—Detroit Free Press.

HUGHES' LABOR RECORD.

When Mr. Gompers, remembering only that he is a Democrat and forgetting that he is a leader of organized labor, ventured to assert that Mr. Hughes is unfriendly to labor because he concurred in the unanimous decision in the Danbury hatters' case, he ventured on very thin ice. The Chicago Tribune promptly reminds him that an honest judge must apply the law as he thinks it is, not as he thinks it ought to be; and asks him to tell those who look to him for political advice something about the record of Mr. Hughes as Governor. Read what the Legislative Labor News, the official organ of the New York Federation of Labor, said editorially when Mr. Hughes left the Governor's chair at Albany for his place on the supreme court. Here it is:

"Now that Gov. Hughes has retired from politics and ascended to a place on the highest judicial tribunal in the world, the fact can be acknowledged without hurting anybody's political corns that he was the greatest friend of labor laws that ever occupied the Governor's chair at Albany. During his two terms he has signed fifty-six labor laws, including among them the best labor laws ever enacted in this or any state.

"He also urged the enactment of labor laws in his messages to the Legislature, even going so far as to place the demand for a labor law in one of his messages to an extra session of the Legislature.

"Only 162 labor laws have been enacted in this state since its erection in 1777—in 133 years. One-third of these, exceeding in quality all of the others, have been enacted and signed during Gov. Hughes' term of three yedrs and nine months."

Let organized labor take to heart what the Chicago Tribune says on this point: "Mr. Hughes is no demagogue and no visionary. He is a man of courage and conscience, and if labor cannot confide its cause to his rock-bottom Americanism there is something wrong with its cause."—Boston Herald.

Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

UNSAFE LEADERSHIP.

"Don't take that man for a leader!"

The speaker was Representative Hobson, the occasion a banquet in Washington.

"Don't take that man for a leader," he repeated, "or you will be as badly off as Mrs. Exe.

"Mrs. Exe stood on o crowded corner when the traffic was at its height, staring at the thick, tangled come-and-go of motorcars and drays and cabs, and not daring to venture in among the dangers of that moving mass.

"'May I cross the street with you, madam?'

"She turned, and saw an elderly stranger with lifted hat and gallant smile.

"'O, thank you,' said Mrs. Exe, and the stranger grasped her arm with a firm grip, and together they plunged boldly into the wild crush of vehicles.

"In and out, right and left, up and down, they zigzagged at imminent peril of life and limb. Pedestrains on the sidewalk stopped and looked at them. Drivers and chauffeurs shouted and swore at them. It was plain to all that they were in unusual danger.

"The escort of Mrs. Exe, still wearing his gallant smile, still grasping her arm, finally seemed to make no effort to avoid the oncoming vehicles. He darted erratically and yet calmly this way and that.

"At last, by a miracle, the other side was reached. Mrs. Exe then jerked her arm away from her escort's grasp, and with a look of scorn she said:

"'It's no thanks to you that we weren't both killed. Why, the way you positively courted danger one would think you were blind.'

"'Madam, I am blind,' he replied. 'That's why I asked if I could cross with you.'"

PORTO RICANS STRIKE.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 4.—Cigarmakers employed by the Porto Rican American Tobacco company are on strike for higher wages and because the company violated an agreement signed June 9, 1914. This concern, known as "the trust," has reduced wages and attempted to force an agreement on employes which would deny them the right to strike. The workers are also asked to contribute 50 cents a week to a so-called trade union conducted along the lines of Rockefeller's "union" in Colorado, and whose treasurer is the manager of the cigar company.

About 6,000 cigarwakers, tobacco strippers and other employes are affected by the strike.

BARBERS INCREASE WAGES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—About 6,000 barbers in the southern section ot this city, known as "down town," have won a two days' strike and increased wages $1 a week. Officers of the Journeymen Barbers' International union are assisting in an organizing campaign that will include other sections of New York.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 4.—Journeymen Barbers' union has prepared a new wage scale which provides for a minimum of $14 a week and 60 per cent. of receipts over $22. The work day is to be limited to 12 consecutive hours, including time off for meals.

That we have reasonably succeeded in our endeavors and purpose of these essays, we state that they were met with the general approval of those who are in a position to know, when the nucleus of the present series was published in 1913. As a typical expression of the commendations received, we present the remark of a east and admirer of Pastor Russell and member of the propaganda, who, commenting on the present series now published in installments, in a letter to the writer, said: "You are fearlessly, and, to some people, fatally frank, in expressing what you so unerringly discern." Perhaps we have been indiscreet in some of our statements respecting the deficiencies of the subject of our sketch and this may be true with some that follow in the next essay, and would not serve for advertising purposes, but in justification we present the words of Elmond Gosse:

"The first theoretical object of the biographer should be indiscretion, not discretion. I will concede almost everything practical to delicacy. But this must be granted me; that the aim of all portraiture ought to be the emphasizing of what the man differ from, not like, other men. Let the biographer be tactful, but do not let him be cowardly; let him cultivate delicacy, but avoid its ridiculous parady, prudery."

STRIKEBREAKERS STRIKE.

MARINETTE, Wis., Sept. 4.—The Central West Coal company believes in "freedom" to such an extent that it held back wages it promised imported "free and independent" workmen. The company has a strike of strikebreakers on its hands as a result. Former employes demand a nine-hour day, improved working conditions and a living wage.

STRIKE FOR EIGHT HOURS.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 4.—After organizing a union and affiliating to the A. F. of L., employes of the Dairymen's Manufacturing company suspended work to enforce wage increases and an eight-hour day.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Sept. 4.—Journeymen Barbers' union is enforcing its new $14 weekly minimum wage. Every shop in the city but two has accepted these rates.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

CHARACTER LIKENESS TO HEAVENLY FATHER

LIKENESS TO GOD ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL TO SALVATION.

God Not the Father of the Sinful World—The Father of Consecrated Believers Only—None Others Are His Sons—Adam Originally in God's Likeness, a Son—How Fallen Mankind Drifted Further From God—His Great Purpose for Their Recovery—Church First Saved—Christ and His Bride to Restore the World of Mankind—Only the Incorrigible to Be Destroyed.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 10.—Pastor Russell gave an excellent discourse today to the I. B. S. A. Convention which is in session here. He spoke from the text: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect." (Matthew 5:48.) He said in part:

Every child should be like his father; that is to say, if mankind were normal, and every child well born, such would be the natural course of things. The love between the father and the mother of a child would then tend to produce that very desirable result. The father would be so noble that he would be the mother's ideal, and the child would be in the father's likeness. Hence when our Lord speaks of His followers as being like their Father, He implies that we have been begotten of the Holy Spirit, have become children of the Highest One, our Heavenly Father, and are developing His character-likeness.

We are not to understand that the Lord Jesus was addressing everybody, in the words of our text. No; we are to make a wide distinction between Jesus' disciples and the world. We remember that Jesus said to some, "Ye are of your father the Devil; for his works ye do." (John 8:44.) And when we get the right focus on the matter, we see that, as the Apostle tells us, "The whole world lieth in the Evil One." (I John 5:19, R. V.) We see that Adam in the beginning was a son of God, as the Bible declares.—Luke 3:38.

God created man in his own image, as we read. The first man, Adam, was God-like—in the sense that his mind and his heart were predisposed to righteousness. Man was not made physically in God's likeness; for God is not a man. Man was made in the mental and moral likeness of his Maker. Thus it was that God placed man on trial, with the provision that he might maintain this perfect life by obedience; that then God would direct him as His child; and that Adam's children would all be God's children, because born in their father's likeness who was created in the Heavenly Father's likeness. And thus it would continue all down through the ages. Instead of being more or less weak and fallen, all human beings would then have been glorious sons of God.

RAPID DEGENERATION AFTER THE FALL.

The Bible tells us that although God permitted man to go into sin and then cut him off from sonship, nevertheless He had sympathy for His creatures and did not design to let them go without making a provision for their recovery. But first He would deal with them as a race, and permit them to have a large experience with sin, sorrow, death, and all the penalties of wrong-doing, of neglecting the Heavenly Father, of losing His likeness. That large experience they have had during the past six thousand years.—Romans 1:18-32.

Thus man's sin has brought on the whole trouble. This mental and moral perversity impressed itself upon their children yet unborn. They were generated imperfect in mind and body, with a decided bent toward sin. Then subsequent training and environment of sin had their part in accentuating the already existing conditions. So we see, as St. Paul points out, that the whole world lost God's image to a very large degree. They are not at all what we would expect if they were children of God.

But the Bible tells us that notwithstanding the world's present depravity Jehovah has a glorious Plan for their recovery. Everything that He will do for mankind is to be done indirectly, through Christ Jesus. To this end Jesus died, became the world's Redeemer. As the Bible declares, He is to be the Purchaser of all the world, paying the death penalty of Father Adam. He buys back all mankind by giving His own life for their ransom. It was to give this Ransom-price that He left His glorious prehuman station and became man. Now He is highly exalted to the Father's right hand of power. Shortly He is to be further glorified by the Father and given control of the whole earth and all of the human race, that He may carry out God's great Purpose as God framed it from the beginning. Our Lord Jesus is now the express image of the Father's person, fully desirous of carrying out all that the Father has purposed.

RANSOM AS FAR-REACHING AS THE FALL.

Jehovah's Plan is broad, taking in the whole world of mankind since Adam's creation. All are provided for in the great Purchase-Price furnished by the death of "The Man Christ Jesus," that all may return to God's favor if they will. This provision will in due time be brought to the attention of every human being. Very few in the present life have had their attention really drawn to this matter. Some have heard a church bell ring or have heard some hymns sung, or have perhaps read somewhat in the Bible with their minds holden. As a rule these things have very little effect upon men.

The Bible speaks of people having ears and yet not being able to hear. The whole world is deaf and blind as respects God's great Plan for a future Restitution, to be accomplished by the Heavenly Father through Jesus Christ during the Millennial Reign—the time that God has arranged for giving the world its opportunity of coming back into harmony with Him. St. Paul speaks particularly of this matter. He says, "For the earnest expectation of the creation waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creation was made subject to frailty, not willingly, but by reason of Him Who hath subjected the same in hope, because the creation itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travelleth in pain together until now."—Romans 8:19-22. R. V.

Man was made subject to frailty away back in Adam's day, when he fell from his position as a son of God. Mankind were born frail in the moral texture of their character, frail in every way. Our Common Version reads, "subject to vanity," but the Revised Version translation, "frailty," seems clearer, though both conditions prevail. Mankind were thus subjected, not willingly; that is to say, it was not their will that they should be born weak in mind, in body, in morals, but it was "by reason of Him Who hath subjected the same in hope." In other words, God permitted man's fall and its results, knowing that it would be overruled in His Purpose for the everlasting good of all who would be rightly exercised by their bitter experience with sin and death, and all their accompanying miseries. There is a large hope for man in respect to this matter.

This hope is in Christ. Mankind, now under the bondage of corruption, are to be delivered, says the Apostle. They are now slaves to sin and to Satan, the Usurper. But their shackles are to be broken, and whosoever will may then go free. They are not delivered yet. Only a few—the Church—have a measure of deliverance now; and these will, we believe, soon be fully delivered. God is saving the Church first. But the world is still in corruption, going down lower every day. But God declares that the world shall be delivered. He has provided the great thousand-year Day of Christ for the deliverance of humanity from the bondage of corruption.

ATTAINING THE LIBERTY OF SONS OF GOD.

The creation is to be delivered "into the glorious liberty of sons of God." The whole human family may become sons of God, sons on the human plane. They will not be sons of God, however, until they become perfect, as was Father Adam before his fall. God will not recognize any imperfect being as His son. The purpose of the incoming Millennial Age, now at the door, is to bring whosoever will back to the original perfection as it existed in Eden, plus all the valuable experiences of the past six thousand years. Men will not be sons of God until the close of the Messianic Reign of a thousand years. During that period they will be gradually rising up, up, to a full resurrection—a full raising up from death. All who give heed to the Lord Jesus and the teachings of the glorified Church will gradually get rid of all sins, all mental, moral and physical weaknesses and disabilities, and will become eventually perfect.

At the close of His Reign, Christ will deliver the entire world over to the Father, all who refused to come under the terms of the New Covenant in Christ having been destroyed in the Second Death. Then mankind will be tested as Adam was tested in the beginning. Now men for the most part sin through ignorance and weakness. But then there will be no excuse; for all will be perfect, fully enlightened and able to do perfectly. Satan will be "loosed for a little season," and permitted to try again to lead mankind astray. The Scriptures inform us that all who then yield to sin and disobey God shall be destroyed by "fire from heaven." Satan will also then be destroyed finally. Then God will have a clean Universe. All sinners, human and spiritual, will have been cut off in death.

What a glorious prospect lies before the whole world! No more will mankind be bound by sin, weakness and ignorance. They will have fully learned what the Bible says all should learn—"the exceeding sinfulness of sin." They will profit eternally by the great lessons which they will have learned in their experience with sin and its terrible effects, all of which experience our first parents lacked. How much these lessons will mean to thousands of millions! There will be no danger that they will take such a step as Adam and Eve took in their simplicity. Mankind will then know just what is good and what is evil. They will be fully able to discriminate between right and wrong.

WE MUST LOVE RIGHTEOUSNESS AND HATE INIQUITY.

Everything that God has decreed and directed is right and makes for the good and the happiness of His creatures; and everything contrary to the will of God is wrong and produces evil somewhere to somebody. When the whole world shall have learned well this lesson, it will be something worth knowing. The liberty then granted to these sons of God will not be freedom from obligation to do right. No one ever will be free from God or from responsibility to God. Everybody will always be under obligation to do right. God places Himself under this obligation. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" says the Word, (Genesis 18:25.) He certainly will. In the case of our Lord Jesus, one of the severest tests which the Father placed upon Him was the test of loyalty to the principles of righteousness. "Because Thou hast loved righteousness, and hast hated iniquity, therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows," was God's commendation to Him.—Psalm 45:7; Hebrews 1:9.

The Bible gives a beautiful picture of Jesus' exaltation for faithfulness. The whole world must yet come to the heart attitude of the perfect man, Christ Jesus. Those who refuse to do so will be cut off. Men must learn to love and appreciate everything that is right. They must love justice, mercy, and every other good quality of character. They must learn to hate injustice and impurity. They must root out all anger, malice, envy, strife. They must love and develop to perfection gentleness, kindness, meekness, humility, patience, self-control, love. They must have God's own character-likeness.

GOD'S PURPOSE FOR THE CHURCH.

This same principle holds good with the Church of Christ, but operates differently; for it is a different part of God's Plan that relates to the Church. We do not need to wait until the Millennium to become sons of God. As the Apostle says, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." (I John 3:2.) By an arrangement peculiarly for this Gospel Age we are made sons of God in advance of the world and on a different plane—a spiritual plane. The Church is an altogether new creation. They give up their earthly life to become associates with Jesus their Lord in His Heavenly inheritance. As He sacrificed Himself for the world, so do these, through the imputation of His sacrificial merit. They share His sufferings in order to share His glory. Not only during the Millennial Reign, but throughout eternal ages, they are to share His honor and glory, as "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife" and Joint-heir.

It is to the Church of Christ that our text is addressed. These alone being sons of God at this time, these alone have God as their Father. He is not the Father of the world of sinners. The Church have been chosen from the sinner world, and have been brought nigh by the blood of Christ. They have been washed, cleansed, and covered with His robe of righteousness. They have died as human beings, and have been begotten of the Holy Spirit as Spirit beings. They are to be "born of the Spirit" in the First Resurrection, if faithful unto death. They are members of Christ's mystical Body. At their begetting as New Creatures in Christ they are only embryo spirit beings. They have merely the new mind, which must grow and develop into the character-likeness of their Father in Heaven, even as their Master had this character-likeness.

They are to grow in love and in all the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit. But they cannot grow without spiritual food and exercise, even as a human child needs food, exercise and instruction in order to grow strong mentally and physically. The basis of our strength of character is our will; and as we seek to exercise our will in harmony with the expressed will of the Lord for us we grow up into Christ our Head in all things. We are instructed by the Master to be perfect even as our Father is perfect. We are to become thus perfect in character, in will. We are to be like Him in our minds.

It is the New Creature that is to be like God that is to be perfect, not the flesh. The flesh will never be like God except in the sense that we as New Creatures compel our fleshly body to serve us, to render service to the Lord as our instrument. We shall never succeed in making our body perfect, for God does not purpose to give us restitution, as He will the world a little later. Our human body is merely our servant while we wait for "our house which is from Heaven," our glorious spiritual body.

We are to have the mind of Christ. His mind was to do wholly the Father's will. Have you the mind of Christ to the degree that you are willing that the doing of God's will shall cost you something? This is a very important point. The Lord will not ask you to attain this too soon; He will lead you step by step. But He will doubtless bring you to the place where it will cost you a good deal before you become a member of the Body of Christ in glory. You must prove that your heart is right and fully loyal to God. "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." But we are to bring our bodies as fully into conformity to the perfect Law of the Lord as we are able by His grace.

When we become copies of God's dear Son, we are fulfilling our Lord's injunction to become perfect even as our Father in Heaven is perfect. We become copies of Christ in character. God loves us when we are babes in Christ. But He does not wish us to remain babes. We are expected to grow, even as a natural babe is expected to grow and develop. If we fail to grow properly, we cannot remain pleasing to our Father in Heaven. We must come to the place where we shall love righteousness and hate iniquity, whatever its form. Otherwise we shall not be granted an entrance into the Kingdom.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

Essay VI.

THE CROSS VS. DARWINIANNA.

The great controversy between Christ and Satan of the past six thousand years, the battle-grounds of which has been in the minds of men, is reaching its culmination in Truth and Error being concentrated in the two modern productions; the (if the Millennial Dawn faculty will pardon the terms) constructive higher criticism, the product of humility and principle, as against destructive higher criticism, the product of pride and policy; or in other words, the raticnal theology of Millennial Dawn, radiating around "The Cross," as against modern rationalism focused by Darwinism, but really running amuck. Millennial Dawn rearranges the truth of rationalism, not only admitting the good contained in the other, but intensifying it by placing it in its proper relation to the whole Divine program.

Would it be expecting too much to endeavor to find all the truth of modern rationalism fully defined and placed in their proper relation in Millennial Dawn?—would it be equally absurd to expect this of the modern religious productions such as Pre-Millennialism, Universalism, Unitarianism, Christian Science, Roycroftism, etc.? In the face of this apparently preposterous expectation, we do claim the equivalent for the latter and partly for the former. The material is there and complete systems of philosophy can be deducted from this intuitive seer, Pastor Russell. They are there intermingled like wheels within wheels revolving around the four great attributes of God, wisdom, justice, love and power, and, like the planetary system, they all revolve around the great-hub of their common center, THE CROSS. These are fixed and permanent systems of thought that all move progressively with the developments of time and circumstance. As to which of the various departments, reason, science or the Bible shall contribute most to relegating the modern antagonist of the Cross, Darwinism, to oblivion, time alone will tell. But here is a proposition that none will now dispute, in the words of an eminent thinker: "The summary want of the age is the last philosophy into which shall have been sifted all other philosophy which shall at once be catholic and eclectic, which shall be the joint growth and fruit of reason, and faith, and which shall shed forth through every walk of research the blended light of discovery and revelation."

Millennial Dawn fills this expressed want to the people addressed, the intelligent, common people and some others; it is to them what Dr. Eliot's five-foot shelve of books or "Harvard classics" is to the pedagogic epicurians of culture and the scholastics. That this theological statement of the remarkable developments of the last century in connection with human affairs, giving a sensible account for the present and past evils of the world, as well as the good to which the present generation has fallen heir, suggesting such a glorious outcome for the darkness that now hovers over the earth ("The gospel of the kingdom"), should be the unconscious results of the humble farmer William Miller who preached the very reverse, that the earth was to be burned to a cinder, seems strange indeed. But this is a circumstance which teaches that we learn by autithesis, for without William Miller the splendid genius of our Pittsburgh merchant would not have been turned from commerce into new channels and we would have had no Pastor Russell. But this is the circumstance and not the fact—the Plan of the Ages is the direct product of the Advent Movement. The origin of this remarkable system of theology is the philosophic recognition of the disastrous effects of the Roman Catholic doctrine of the mass upon the necessity of the atoning blood of Christ as reconciliation from sin. This idea, first dawned upon the minds of the American reformers, tossed to and fro in the minds of those comprising the Advent Movement, and finally lodged in the mind of young Russell and produced Tabernacle Shadows, which gave a "reasonable account" for the Scripture used to support the doctrine of the Mass, and the circumstance of this production being brought forth under pressure of Darwinism, made it an antidote for higher criticism infidelity. Tabernacle Shadows was the nucleus of Pastor Russell's masterpiece, The At-One-Ment Between God and Man, elucidated in the light of the Divine Plan of the Ages, gives us the modern champion of "The Cross" as against the "New Religion" of Dr. Eliot born of Darwinianna.

We are conscious of the fact that these assertions are made by an admirer of the man and his teachings, and that love will blind one to the faults of a friend as also will hatred the virtues of an enemy. But let it here be stated that none but those who can enter into sympathy with the cause and understand the theology could be properly qualified to get the proper estimates of the situation and must have some general knowledge of the fundamentals of the systems of thought to which it stands antagonized. The writer is a personal friend of the subject of this sketch, but does not live close enough to come under the personal magnetism that renders an exclusive friendship blinding. Reverence and an appreciation of the Truth he teaches are the fundamental elements of a friendship that will not blind one to the defects of the propaganda and its promotor. Lest we should be understood as attributing this remarkable system of theology to the genius of its human channel, in our next essay we not some of the fruits of the business proclivities of the former Pittsburgh merchant, in which we point out some of his limitations, which indicate that the author of this sublime theology eminates from the Author of the Bible by which it is proven.

BIG POLITICAL FIGHT ON IN EARNEST

Republicans to Have Stiff Opposition From Democrats and Battle to Be to a Finish.

Hon. William H. Coleman, Chairman of the Allegheny County Republican Committee, has settled down to business and is now making plans for one of the most energetic campaigns ever entered into in this county. Although the Congressman has passed through many strenuous battles he realizes he has on hand one that promises extraordinary developments.

Chairman Coleman must meet some stubborn opposition from the Democrats, who are more than confident that they have better than a fighting chance, and further, the local Democratic party, now under the leadership of Joseph F. Guffey, is better equipped to do battle than ever before. The local Democrats are not going to permit the Republicans to discredit what the Democrats call the eight-hour victory and the old Bandanna bunch are going back into the archives to show the "Side-Stepping Republicans" how, in the days gone by, they "honswoggled" the followers of the "Grand Old Party." Never were the local Democrats more jubilant over the outlook for victory and with Vanc McCormick as National Chairman of the Democratic Party never were the Pennsylvania Democrats better fitted for a real genuine revival, which promises a revalation in the number of converts.

The Democrats contend that the strong feeling for President Wilson has already manifested itself in rush orders from Pittsburgh which compelled the National Republican Committee to hurl the big centimeter guns into the campaign here by the latter part of September in order to prevent a stampede to Wilson. The Democratic local committee is ready to meet Chairman Coleman with hotter material than he can hurl against them and before the fight is on much further the latest improved artillery will be in full use. The illusterous and well known William Brennan, with his old guard, is to be the Board of Strategy, and Mr. Brennan has a few new ones he is preparing to drop over in the camp of the enemy.

The "Old Line" refuse to stop at first trenches, it is to be a clean shelling and the aeroplane, bi-plane and hydroplane troops promise to make politics mighty rough for the "Do-Nothings" which means the Republicans, whom the Democrats claim were in office for 20 years or more and passed no legislation favorable to those who toil for a livelihood.

Chairman Coleman has been in Congress during the present session and is familiar with the legislation that caused President Wilson to throw his influence to the Railway men who insisted upon the passage of the eight-hour law. This issue is to be one of the principal arguments for the present of the campaign orator and there will be some explaining. The orators, however, are now being handed the campaign literature and with William B. Kirker at the head of the Bureau of Speakers, the oratorical campaign promises to be one of the old time live ones with the "Whoop 'em up boys" enthusiasm. For two decades Kirker has kept record of the live ones in the oratorical game and when Kirker bills " 'em" he takes particular care to load 'em up with plenty of dinamite, nitro and material for a pyrotechnical display. The kind that sends the great throngs wild.

The real enthusiasm extracter, and the one that promises to bring them along, is the "Babcock Blues." The Marching club with the kick and the punch. This club is to take the breath of the Democrats every time it will be on display and the gossip is that when Joe Guffey gets a vision of this organization his pretended enthusiasm will collapse.

The Republicans declare that Guffey has Brennan and the list of first liners just published, sitting around a Victrola listening to sweet music and an ancient Chautauqua by William Jennings Bryan, the latter a man who once, twice or more times ran for President of the United States and who is still running but where no one knows. But since this is real Democracy what's the difference, says the Republican critics. Mr. Guffey is enjoying it and Brennan is always happy when rolling off one of those old heavy ones of his. Mr. Brennan, they say, could never forgo the pleasure of the phenomenal opportunity, now offorded, to get out and say something for the grand old party. Brennan, the Republicans say, is busy putting an allied polish on one of his new shells to be handed out. Brennan is also going back into the barrel after one of his ripe ones; one of those which he handed out to the masses shortly after the war. One of those old time Irish Blaine and Logan clubs speeches. No man happier than Brennan and no man can handle the labor aggregation better than Brennan. They'll listen to Billy and with Joe at the helm and Billy in the battle big things are expected. The fight is to be an old time one with all the fireworks, and the roasting; the tarriff and—mum's the word about 16 to 1. All orators for Democracy are to be bound and gagged on any silver issue, even William Jennings B. has nailed the head on the barrel containing that speech. The fight, however, is on in earnest and Chairman Coleman will need all the backing he can secure.

The public will not treat Joseph F. Guffey as a mark when they begin to feel some of the force that he will throw into the campaign. He is a substantial business man and he knows big business. He is a splendid organizer and he is familiar with the detail essential

MRS. ENOCH RAUH.

Mrs. Rauh Revises Memorial.

Long and patiently has the artisan looked forward to the promised memorial of which so much was said many months ago but which suddenly disappeared, but why, no one seemed to know. The information now comes that Mrs. Enoch Rauh, the real champion of the gigantic undertaking, has been ill. The Tribune readers, however, will be glad to hear that the matter has not been entirely dropped or unkindly shelved but that there was a reason for this intense silence.

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, who a year ago urged a memorial to labor to cost $1,000,000, has made public a letter she has sent to industrial leaders, labor organizations and individuals interested in the project at that time, explaining that her illness caused the failure of the memorial committee to undertake its work.

Mrs. Rauh says: "As these bodies of Pittsburgh citizens just one year ago lent their sympathy and enthusiasm to the proposed project of erecting in our city a memorial to labor and industry, it is only fit and proper that I explain the failure of decision of the Building Labor Squad Under Military.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Details of the latest scheme of the Ministry of Munitions for expediting the output of shells and guns—the enrollment throu the Labor Exchange of what is styled a Mobile Building Labor Squad—were officially published on August 25th. The idea is to speed up the completion of munition factories which are now in course of construction. There is a great shortage of men of the navvy and laboring classes, and in the enrollment of this new squad careful instructions are to be given that no man who is at present engaged in what may be described as work of national importance shall be taken. This consideration applies particularly to agriculture. The Ministry will not take from their present employment agricultural or dockyard laborers, or men of that type. It is recognized, however, that there are many men still employed on work of non-essential character on or about estates who are not agricultural laborers, and on unnecessary building repairs. The Munitions Ministry have already taken steps to stop building operations of over $2,500 in value.

It is proposed that the men to be enrolled in this new squad shall sign on for six months or the duration of the war, and they must agree to work wherever they are directed by the Munitions Ministry. In this way it is hoped to secure large gangs of men to assist in rapidly completing urgent Government work. Free accommodation is to be provided for the squad, or as an alternative, they will be given an allowance of 25 cents a day. Every man enrolled will be furnished with a certificate showing the service he has rendered to the country. The Ministry hope to secure the patriotic assistance of employers, and that they will wherever possible release some of their regular men. Traveling fares will be paid to those who enroll and are accepted from their homes to the work to which they are sent.

The men will receive the Trade Union rate of pay current on the job to which they are drafted. If the men who enroll in this squad are in employment at the time of the enrollment they will be guaranteed three months' work if they prove satisfactory. They will be just ordinary workmen under a private employer, except that they will be subject to the directions of the Munitions Ministry. The Munitions Ministry attach great importance to this scheme, and they are hopeful of enrolling thousands of men.

The highest importance is attached by the trade unions affected to the resolution drafted by the Parliamentary Committee for discussion at the forthcoming Trades Congress to be held at Birmingham as to the full restoration of trade union rights after the war. The resolution declares "that as the Munitions Act was passed subject to this solemn declaration the Congress therefore expects the Government to insist upon employers, individually and collectively, keeping faith with organized labor, and further should there be any betrayal of this trust, the Parliamentary Committee shall call a special congress and invite those Ministers of State to be present who urged the workers in a time of national peril to forgo rights and privileges which had taken many years of unity and sacrifice to secure."

There is a good deal of misgiving in the trade unions as to the complete restoration of trade union rights after the war. The dilution of skilled labor by unskilled male and female labor has gone much further than was thought would be required when the concession was made to meet a national crisis in industry, and it has been extended to industries which the trade unions contend should be free from dilution. Thus the fear is not so much for controlled workshops, where the dilution has taken place under direct State guarantees, or to those workshops where agreements have been made and signed by the employers and representatives of the workpeople, but to the hundreds, indeed thousands, of other workshops and trades which have adopted the same principle of dilution without similar safeguards as to restoration of trade union rules after the war.

W. J. Davis, the secretary of the National Brassworkers' Society and vice president of the Congress, in an interview on this subject, said Lloyd George, when he became Minister of Munitions, realized that he wanted every help he could get from the trade unions if the military requirements for munitions of war were to be met. "Lloyd George put the whole position as to munitions frankly and clearly before the leaders of the trade unions. Those leaders were placed in a position of great difficulty and of serious responsibility. It is the usual practice to take the opinion of the workers by ballot on all matters affecting trade union regulations. But at that moment the crisis was so acute and the need for immediate action so clamant that the leaders of the trade unions concerned accepted the full responsibility of foregoing the most important regulations of their unions. They accepted the principle of dilution of skilled labor by unskilled as a patriotic service to their country in its hour of need; and further, because they believed it would mean the saving of the lives of many thousands of their sons and brothers and fellow-workers in the fighting line. That sacrifice was made on the good faith of a definite declaration by Lloyd George that wherever we surrendered a principle, such as the removal of our trade union restrictions and customs, they should be restored intact after the war.

"In many industries agreements have been made between organized workmen and organized employers which give evidence of a desire to respect the promise given by Ministers to the trade unions. But on the other hand many manufacturers, knowing that their workmen could not leave their employ although their works were not controlled establishments,

THE FURNITURE FAKIRS GET ANOTHER VICTIM

An Out of Town Lady Pulled In by Pittsburgh Furniture Barkers.

MIDLAND, PA., Sept. 11.—This thriving community now boasts of a victim of the fake furniture dealers who thrive in the city that Promotes Progress.

The wife of one of our prosperous citizens went to Pittsburgh with the intention of refurnishing the home and making life more pleasant and domestic affairs still more alluring. When she left here she had visions of many surprises for husband in particular and the village folk in general. She arrived in the Smoky City all sunshine and smiles and while in search of a prominent and fair-dealing furniture house, she fell victim of one of those hideous barkers who thrust their presence upon the shopper and with honeyed words and smooth speech inquire, "Madam, are you looking for bargains, great bargains, real large bargains in furniture?" "Yes, I'm looking for Mr. ———. Its a reliable store." "I'll show you where it is. Come with me." She followed, but instead of finding the furniture store for which she was looking, she was lead into a fake store. Instead of the reliable house, she was a victim of the furniture shark. Little did she think that she was to be defrauded. She bought articles amounting in all to $150 and then and there made a deposit of $40 as the first payment. With all the cunning that could be lavished upon her, the furniture crook laid it on. When the thrifty housewife reached home she waited for her articles. Finally, two weeks later, they came, but, lo and behold, it was the old game, the bedstead was missing.

Instead of the bedstead there was a cheap dresser and in addition, the remaining articles showed much abuse, indicating they were second-hand articles, probably taken from some home after much use.

The shopper, much disappointed, refused to remove the articles from the freight station, and went to the furniture house, demanding redress. She asked for the return of her $40, rejecting the articles, but her demands met with insult and humiliation. It was now that she learned she had been deceived and lied to as the house from which she had purchased the articles was not the one the smooth barker had told her it was. The store was one of the fake houses and she now learned she was a victim of the schemer.

This case will undoubtedly find its way into the courts, as the shopper is determined to seek the aid of the National Labor Tribune's Legal Department.

It is only recently the shopping public is being awakened to the frauds that have been practiced upon them, and the buying public is getting wise to the fakirs in the line of furniture as well as patent medicines.

This shopper was deliberately deceived in the house from which she purchased articles. She was all the time under the impression she was in one of the responsible furniture houses and having asked if that house was the responsible one for which she was looking, she was told it was.

In returning to make her complaint, she appeared at the legitimate furniture house and it was then she learned she had been defrauded; that the house from which she bought her articles was regarded as a fake institution and had practiced ssuch trickery upon others.

Questions and Answers

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. A. they may do so, and they will be answered strictly according to those teachings which claim to be in harmony with the Bible. Address questions to the Question Department of the National Labor Tribune.

What is the difference between the religion of Jesus Christ, as taught by Pastor Russell, and that taught by Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, etc. P. J. McLAUGHLIN,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Answer—The difference is that Pastor Russell's teachings harmonizes all of those different views, by taking the truths which each one contains, and putting them together; by placing each where it belongs; and leaving out the errors which they all contain. It may be asked, "How can any one do that?" We reply by going over the heads of all of them, clear back to the simple teachings of the Lord and the Apostles.

At that time there were no sectarian organizations called Baptists, Methodists, etc., but was simply the church here, and the church there; "the church of the first borns and the Church of God, being the only names ever applied to it; and the individual members were first called Christians at Antioch.

At that time there was but one church—that is but one teaching—but as was foretold there same a great falling away from the faith, and after a few hundred years a great apostate system was developed, which lost sight of, and completely buried out of sight, most all of the truths which were taught by the early church—this condition continued for centuries, until in the Lord's due time a reformation movement took place.

First one reformer and then another, looking into the Scriptures, (which had been hidden all of these centuries), were led to see that the teachings and practices of the so-called church, were not in harmony with what they read there.

Each one on looking saw some truth, long lost sight of, and he would think that was the thing on which the church should be founded, to the exclusion of all other truths.

For instance, John Calvin, finding that it was written, "No man cometh unto me, except the Father draw him" concluded that the doctrine of election was taught.

The Wesley's and others read: "Whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely," and concluded that God's grace was free to all. Many others did likewise, and each proceeded to build a church on his one particular text; each in his way doing a work of reformation. But it was God's purpose that in due time all of those different views should be harmonized, and so we are told to "Strive earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints;" also to "rightly divide the word of truth," and that is what Pastor Russell's teachings do.

Take for instance the two views, Election and Free Grace, both plainly taught in the Scriptures, yet irriconcilable if applied to the same time. So by careful study we find them belonging to different dispensations, or ages. The doctrine of Election belonging to the Jewish and Gospel ages, which, when completed, will bring the blessings of free grace to all the world, during the age to come. And so with all other truths, when properly placed, produce perfect harmony.

Like a harp of ten strings, if we play upon all of them we hear beautiful music, but if we continue to strum on one string we do not have much music.

Those harpers who are described by the Revelator, as harping with their harps, Rev. 14.2, were said to have sung, as it were, a new song. It was not really a new song but seemed to be new, because it was so different from the song which was being sung, and which was so full of discords. And so the truth as it is known and taught today, is spoken of as a new religion, when it is in reality only the old religion, brought to light again.

What is the song, which seemed to be a new song? We are told in Rev. 15-3 that it was the song of "Moses and the Lamb," saying "just and true are thy ways, thou King of Saints." So different from the song which had been so long sung, and which represented the King of Saints as being very unjust, and very untrue. So unjust and so untrue that He would create man and tell him if he would be obedient he should live, but if he were disobedient he would "surely die.," and then plunge the man and ninety-nine out of every hundred of his posterity into an eternity of torture, thus picturing Him, instead of a God of love, as being more terrible than the prince of demons.

Will you please answer the following question: Did Judas Iscariot go into the Second Death? Please answer fully, proving everything by the Word of God. J. R. H.
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Answer—There is no direct statement in the Bible that Judas went into the Second Death, but there are several that would seem to be very strong proof that he did.

In John 17-12 he is called "the son of perdition." In Hebrews 10-29 the Apostle speaks of those who commit the sin unto death as those who draw back into perdition, and the definition of the word perdition as given by Webster is utter destruction.

Again it is said of him in Matthew 26-24, that it would have been better for him if he had never been born. If there had been any hope that he could even have had a chance for life, even by suffering and enduring any amount of shame and contempt in the next age, it could not be said to have been better for him not to have been born.

Some have suggested that he had to do what he did that the "Scriptures might be fulfilled," and therefore could not help himself. But we do not agree with this thought. True it was all fulfilled as it had been prophesied, but he was not made a bad man for that purpose, but was simply permitted to do the work that a bad man like himself would want to do.

It is true that none were begotten of the Spirit until after Penticost, but he had been closely associated with our Lord during his ministry, and had received enough of the holy spirit to enable him to believe that Jesus was the Messiah, and yet he deliberately planned to betray him to his enemies for gain.

He was selfish and mercenary; we read that he was a "thief and that he carried the bag," John 12-6. When we read that he was remorseful and went and hanged himself, it naturally makes us feel sorry for him, but it is stated that he was remorseful when he found that he was "condemned."

Some one has remarked that some people's idea of sin is not in committing a bad act, but in getting found out, and probably that was the way with Judas.

"ON THE SEA."

A few months before his death, Captain Hare wrote and left with a friend the following singularly touching, and, indeed, prophetic poem on the sea in which his own fate, and that of his crew, are shadowed forth in a remarkable manner. It is evidently founded on the text, "There is sorrow on the sea," 49 Jeremian 23:—

I stood on the shore of the beautiful sea,
As the billows were roaming wild and free;
Onward they came with unfailing force,
Then backward turned in their restless course;
Ever and ever sounded their roar,
Foaming and dashing against the shore;
Ever and ever they rose and fell
With heaving and sighing and mighty swell;
And deep seemed calling aloud to deep,
Lest the murmuring waves should drop to sleep.
In summer and winter, by night and by day,
Thro' cloud and sunshine holding their way;
Oh! when shall the ocean's troubled
Calmly and quietly sink into rest?
Oh! when shall the waves' wild murmuring cease,
And the mighty waters be hushed to peace?
It cannot be quiet—it cannot rest—
There must be heaving on ocean's breast;
The tide must ebb, and the tide must flow,
Whilst the changing seasons come and go.
Still from the depths of that hidden store
There are treasures tossed up along the shore;
Tossed by the billows—then seized again—
Carried away by the rushing main.
Oh, strangely glorious and beautiful sea!
Sounding for ever mysteriously
Why are thy billows still rolling on,
With their wild and sad and musical tone?
Why is there never repose for thee?
Why slumberest thou not, oh! mighty sea?

Then the ocean's voice I seemed to hear,
Mournfully, solemnly—sounding near,
Like a wail sent up from the caves below,
Fraught with dark mem'ries of human woe,
Telling of loved ones buried there,
Of the dying shriek and the dying prayer;
Telling of hearts still watching in vain
For those who shall never come again;
Of the widow's groan and the orphan's cry,
And the mother's speechless agony.
Oh, no, the ocean can never rest
With such secrets hidden within its breast.
There is sorrow written upon the sea
And dark and stormy its waves must be;
It cannot be quiet, it cannot sleep,
That dark, relentless, and stormy deep,
But a day will come, a blessed day,
When earthly sorrow shall pass away,
When the hour of anguish shall turn to peace,
And even the roar of the waves shall cease.
Then out from its deepest and darkest bed
Old ocean shall render up her dead,
And, freed from the weight of human woes,
Shall quietly sink in her last repose.
No sorrow shall ever be written then
On the depths of the sea or the hearts of men,
But heaven and earth renewed shall shine,
Still clothed in glory and light divine.
Then where shall the billows of ocean be?
Gone! for in heaven shall be no more sea!"
'Tis a bright and beautiful thing of earth
That cannot share in the soul's "new birth,"
'Tis a life of murmur and tossing of spray,
And at resting-time it must pass away.

But oh! thou glorious and beautiful sea,
There is health and joy and blessing in thee;
Solemnly, sweetly, I hear thy voice,
Bidding me weep and yet rejoice—
Weep for the loved ones buried beneath,
Rejoice in Him who has conquered death;
Weep for the sorrowing and tempest-tossed;
Rejoice in Him who has saved the lost;
Weep for the sin, the sorrow, and strife,
And rejoice in the hope of eternal life.

We wish to assure you of our appreciation of the high ideals of your newspaper. While we are especially interested in the Truth and Pastor Russell's sermons, we also appreciate the noble "clean up" campaign you are conducting. We would be glad to see every fake exposed, and believe this will be done more and more as we approach the impending change of dispensation and enter into the Millenium. May God strengthen your arm as you strike the telling blow.

I am writing today to enclose check for renewal of my subscription, and to add a mite to your "Help Others Fund." I continue to enjoy your paper. Not with pleasure and profit already, the new feature—Questions and Answers." How beautifully the Truth shines, and so clear, in your answer to questions as to the I. B. S. A. teaching on immortality. The Truth is mighty and will prevail. Already we see all over the world its beams scattering the mists of darkness and superstition, especially on the subject of death, what is it, and where do the dead go. We who know the Truth now in advance of the world, can rejoice that e'relong all the world will be enlightened as we are, and I think this will be the first thing they will learn, that the dead are dead. Do you think it will take long to prove to a man when he is resurrected that he has been dead? That he hadn't reutrned from heaven or hell? Let us use our great privilege of sending out the beams of light and truth and we needn't send away to China, Japan or any heathen country, and next door neighbor is in darkness and confusion.

I hote that my subscription to your paper has expired, and note with pleasure that you are still publishing the sermons of Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn, N. Y. I enjoy the many good features of your paper, from the standpoint of labor and especially the religious feature. We would thank you to continue our name on your mailing list for another year. Wishing you the best of success in journalism, I beg to remain,

Very truly yours,
A. C. KRUEGER.

ILLOGIC.

Evidently your Texan contributor started his anti-typical Scape-goat argument from a wrong premises, similar to Plato of old when seeking to prove human immortality. Alas! Why do we not accept the simple treatise of Pastor Russell, who applies "a land land not inhabited" to the wilderness condition of the Great Company separated from the world by compulsion and there receiving it's scorn and buffets. The fact that the scape-goat has the people's sins placed upon it's head, is sufficient proof that this class share in the reconciliation or the world, but not in the sin-offering. Their experience applies all through the Gospel Age, but their climax is fixed after the Church is withdrawn. It is folly to whittle the words and inspired statements to fit a theory. Don't you think you better refer your readers to "Tabernacle Shadows" as the correct application? With best wishes as always for harmonization and true union,

Yours in the service,
JOSEPH GREIG.

THE LILIES OF THE VALLEY.

'Twas the glow of the early morning,
E'er her brilliant orb had risen;
The glint of Heaven's gold and crimson
No lingering cloud had riven.
I looked, and longed, and longed—e'er the sunlight
Should scatter the stars of night,
Beyond the spur of the mountain
To climb, to the bright day-light.

But a whispered voice said: 'Wait Child!
'Tis fair on yon mountain's height;
Yet down in the silent valley,
Where the sun lends a softer light,
Full many a flower has opened:
Nourished beneath the shade
Of the leaves that shelter the waxen buds
Which the sun would wither and fade.

And so in the quiet valley
I'll wait till He bids me climb;
I know, in the final culling
For the Coronet Divine,
Those flowers that were grown 'mid shadow,
Will, too, be plucked with care,
And the Lilies of the Valley
In His Coronet will share.

If the situation's puzzlin'.
And the prospects awful grim

GREATER SUFFERINGS, GREATER REWARDS

2 Corinthians 4:16-18.—Sept. 24.

Faint Not In Tribulation—The Natural Man Perishes, the New Creature Grows—What Are Light Afflictions? What Is Their Duration?—What Is Their Object?—How Shall We Attain This Object?

"The things which are not seen are eternal."—Verse 18.

WHAT great Christian courage St. Paul's words and deeds manifest! He who endured so many hardships, a very thrashing-machine experience, nevertheless writes: "We faint not; for though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day." Ah, that was the secret of the matter—the renewing of the inward man, the New Creature! The tribulations of the outward man would have been terrible indeed had there been no inward man to take a different view of matters and to learn valuable lessons and experiences from the outward man's tribulations. The inward man had God's assurance that if God were for him, the opposition of all others would be as nothing; for God would overrule all his experiences for his highest welfare. He had the Lord's assurance also that the glories of the future would be proportionate to the trials of the present time faithfully endured.

Here we have the secret of the Apostle's great zeal for God, for the Church, for the Truth! He endured as seeing Him who is invisible to natural eyes; (Hebrews 11:27.) He lived a double life, in the sense that to man he was Saul of Tarsus, but in reality he was Paul, the servant of God, the New Creature in Christ Jesus. The world knew him not; but he knew himself, knew his God; and he was energized by the Power Divine and by the Message of God's Word, which spoke to him peace and relationship to God through Christ, and informed him of the glory, honor and immortality awaiting all the loyal and faithful ones at the end of the way.

"In Prisons Oft."

Fellowship In Christ's Sufferings.

This secret of the Apostle's experience is an open one to all of God's spirit-begotten children who faithfully continue to walk in Jesus' footsteps and to be taught of Him through the Word. We do not have so large a manifestation of Divine favor as had Jesus, the Head of the Church, and the Apostles, the foremost members of the Church. But still we have in a general way the same favors of God, the same promises of God, the same inspiring hopes which they had. Let us not forget the Apostle's endurance when we read his words: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

The Apostle's argument was that if the sufferings of Christ, in the Divine arrangement, are to measure the coming glories of Christ, then he desired to be a participator with the Lord in the present sufferings, that he might also be a participator with Him in the coming glories. Instead, therefore, of saying to himself or to others, "I am doing more than my share of the Gospel work; and some of you should help me, and give me a rest." St. Paul took the other view. He declared himself willing and anxious to fill up as much as possible that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ. He counted it all joy to have tribulation, knowing that tribulation would work out the fruits of the Holy Spirit in his character, and thus prepare him for the Kingdom.—Colossians 1:24; Romans 5:3-5; 2 Timothy 2:11, 12.

Many find it easy to start in the Christian way when everything is favorable. Some run briskly for a while, and then grow weary in well-doing. But the Apostle seemed never to weary. He was always on the alert, in season and out of season, so far as his own convenience was concerned. He was ready to preach the Gospel anywhere, everywhere, to all who had the hearing ear. The secret of his perseverance is given us in Verse 18: "We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen."

A Victor's Record.

These words mean that St. Paul had spiritual eyesight. He indeed saw earthly attractions, but they lost their drawing power upon him because of his perception of the things unseen. With the eye of faith he saw the Heavenly Father, the glorified Lord Jesus, the Heavenly hosts, the coming Kingdom of glory, honor and immortality.

By faith he saw the great Millennial Kingdom spreading out before him, and heard the Divine invitation to become an heir in that Kingdom, joined in heirship with the Master and Redeemer. He had accepted this invitation. He had enlisted under the banner of the Master; and he realized that everything else in the world was of practically no value in comparison with these eternal things which God had promised. His confidence was in the Word of God.

Story of Bulgarian Long Life

Pittsburgher at 60 Has Health and Youth.

A BULGARIAN SECRET

His Advice to Old and Young Being Adopted in America.

In June, 1914, H. H. Von Schlick, of 10 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a well-known figure on the streets of Pittsburgh. He carried a hand-satchel and as he entered offices in this busy industrial center, people wondered at the elasticity of his step, the brightness of his eyes and the unusual color in his cheeks. Undoubtedly he was a man of 60 yet his energy and his healthy appearance would suggest that he was about 45.

In those days Von Schlick's mission was tedious. He was trying to tell the individuals he encountered that if they would follow his plans that they would live long and that while they were living they would enjoy healthy life. He found interested auditors among his many friends in the business world. They knew him. They saw the transformation that occurred in his physical condition. They thought that if Von Schlick had discovered a health secret it was worth a trial on their part. So they listened.

From his satchel Von Schlick pulled out a box. He caressed it tenderly. This was his secret He was offering it to these friends for their own good. It was Von Schlick's Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea.

Mr. Von Schlick had knowledge of the secret and process for, making Marvel Bulgarian Style Blood Tea for 15 years. It came to him when he was sick, when his blood was weak, and he had rheumatism and stomach trouble. That was before he ever gave serious thought to his health. One day his friend, Boris Marokeff, an old Bulgarian, came to him and said:

"Mr. Von Schlick, why are you ill? If you follow my advice you will be on your feet tomorrow, and you will never get in that condition again." This Bulgarian was 96 years old and a fine representative of his long lived countrymen. He gave to Von Schlick 14 ingredients, including leaves, bark, flowers, roots, herbs, seed, plants and berries. He showed Von Schlick how to mix it and he gave him a cup of steaming hot tea.

Von Schlick's recovery began from that moment. Next day he felt like a different man. He was exhilerated. He made another cupful and he soon commenced to take on strength. Soon he was at work again gay and chipper and he was the marvel of his friends.

He secured from Marokeff the secret for making the tea, and he felt it was his mission to assist others. He made strong and robust his sickly son. His wife improved in health. In his neighborhood he gave it to many and they all came back for more. Soon his friends insisted that he give them the tea in quantity. Von Schlick found that his time was occupied making the tea and when he was asked by his friends to prepare it for sale, he finally did so.

Only merit and results could have accomplished what Bulgarian Style Blood Tea has in the past 26 months. There are today over 300,000 users. They praise this remedy in letter and they recommend it verbally.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

him? One of the leaders of these hungry wolves in sheeps clothing expressed the magnitude of Russell's publicity thus:

"His writings are said to have a greater newspaper circulation every week than those of any other living man, and a greater doubtless than the combined circulation of the writings of all the priests and preachers in North America; greater even than the work of Arthur Brisbane, Norman Hapgood, George Horace Lorimer, Dr. Frank Crane, Frederick Haskin, and a dozen others of the best known editors and syndicate writers put together."

The tactics employed by the far-seeing and designing enemies of Russell finally set the Hon. J. F. Rutherford of the New York City Bar, into action. Mr. Rutherford is a personal friend of the pastor and his legal adviser, and tolerated the abuse heaped upon his friend until he could stand it no longer. Grieved by the persistent manufacture of insidious stories of a slanderous nature published by some of the press, he set about to defend the pastor by a complete and truthful statement of the facts employed by the clerics in a pamphlet entitled, "A Great Battle in the Ecclesiastical Heavens." In a vigorous and interesting manner he describes the great hubbub that is raging in the clerical circles all to silence the voice of ONE MAN. He rehearses all the facts connected with Pastor Russell's private and business life of which the clergy have but a smattering knowledge, and if any man should know the truth, it would be Rutherford, for he has been his legal advisor.

In an issue of The Bible Students' Monthly, devoted to the defence of Pastor Russell's character, and contains many quotations from Mr. Rutherford's pamphlet, is an account of the last move by these men, who have apparently abandoned all previous methods as fatal. We present three paragraphs here which will reveal their ingenuity and subtle methods of persecution.

PREACHERS INTIMIDATING THE PRESS.

"The preachers found that nearly two thousand newspapers were publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, sermonettes and orderly treaties on the Sunday School lessons. In various cities the preachers went to the Editors and publishers—sometimes singly sometimes in groups of three to five, and sometimes through a representative who spoke for the entire Ministerial Association of the city. They demanded that the publication of these sermons, ets., be discontinued. The editors were surprised. They said they saw nothing in them wrong, vicious, and asked for particulars. They got no particulars as to anything wrong, but they received the intimation that the preachers exercised a great influence and would use it as a boycott against the papers publishing the sermons of Pastor Russell. Many editors and publishers, not knowing how little real influence the preachers have, even with their own congregations, which are small, were fearful of losing their business. Occasionally some dropped out of the publishing of the sermons—later, perhaps, to resume their publication upon request received from their readers.

"Finding that this plan did not succeed well, the next step taken was announced by the publicity man of the Church Federation, Mr. Wm. T. Ellis, religious editor of the North American. That step was asserted to be that all ministers and churches hereafter would co-operate with the newspapers; that they would not ask for anything to be published free, but would pay at advertising rates. The object of this resolution, which was published by the newspapers all over the country, was not that they wished to publish some of their teachings and pay for them at advertising rates, but they thought that this would lead the newspapers to stop publishing Pastor Russell's sermons unless they were paid for at advertising rates, and that his teachings would be excluded from hundreds of papers. Few of the preachers would desire to prepare copy for the newspapers every week; for they well know that they have nothing on religious lines that the public would care for. And they well know that if they dip into scientific problems they are overmatched by the magazine writers, and discredited."

"The newspapers of the smaller cities continued to publish Pastor Russell's sermons, paying for them at the usual rates of the American Press Association, twenty-five cents per column for stereoplates. The metropolitan papers would not publish any man's sermons regularly, not wishing to discriminate. Especially none would feature a sermon if it appeared in other papers of the same city. In view of these things, the Bible Students set apart a large sum of money to pay for Pastor Russell's sermons in the principal journals of the largest cities. But as they began to appear the preachers got busy with their slanders and threats, being grieved that Pastor Russell should thus teach the people, even as were the Pharisees of old grieved by the teaching of the Apostles. (Acts 4:1-3.) They threatened some papers with boycott and induced them to give up publishing the sermons as advertising matter at advertising rates, although they made no objection to advertisements of liquors, tobacco, palmistry, fortune-telling etc. Several large papers, thus intimidated, yielded to the pressure and refused these sermons at advertising rates. What would their readers think of that? What has become of the freedom of speech and freedom of religion in this our boasted day and favored land? What would not these ministers do if the Dark Ages were to come upon us again?"

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

DIVINE PURPOSES REASONABLE, HARMONIOUS.

REASON A GOD-GIVEN FACULTY TO BE USED WITHIN THE LINES OF GOD'S REVELATION.

Reason in the Past Largely Relegated to the Background—Too Much Swallowed Without Mastication—False Creeds Made Men Fear to Reason—As New Age Draws Near, God's People Gradually Progressing Into His Marvelous Light—God's Revelation Worthy of all Acceptation—We Must Have a "Thus Saith the Lord" for Every Item of Faith.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 17.—Pastor Russell gave a masterly sermon today before the I. B. S. A. Convention assembled here this week. His text was from Isaiah 1:18; "Come now, and let us reason together, said Jehovah: Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow: though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." He spoke as follows:

In the past, nearly everything that has ever been offered us in the way of religion has been something which must be taken without the exercise of reason. This has been especially true of the creedal teachings given us in the name of the Lord. Thy must be swallowed without reasoning or not at all; for they are too unreasonable to be received by any logical mind. In this connection I think of an incident which well illustrates my point. On one occasion a gentleman who had been given the Bible some study related to me a conversation which he had recently had with his pastor, a Presbyterian minister. The gentleman had said to his pastor, "I cannot quite accept some of the statements of the Confession of Faith; for I cannot understand them." The minister replied, "You have taken the matter in a wrong light altogether. When you take the Confession of Faith, you must do so just as you would take a Brandreth pill. If you stop to chew it, you will never be able to swallow it!"

The Lord, on the contrary, says to us: "Come, let us REASON together." God appeals to man's reason; and every feature of the Divine Plan, when understood, is thoroughly logical and worthy of our great Creator. It is only reasonable to expect that God, who gave us a revelation of His Plan which would appeal to our reason. Man was created in the image of God; and even though our race is now in a fallen condition, the Lord still appeals to man's reason, as our text shows.

The word of God is in every way logical and beautiful; and our joy has been in proportion as we have heeded His Message and responded to it. When He invites His people to reason with Him, He means that we are to search His revealed Word, the Bible, to find the true explanation for man's present condition, to discover the Lord's Plan relating to mankind, to exercise our minds in regard to God's declarations. What would be the use of having brains if we merely absorb a teaching, without having any mental understanding of the subject? To study with a view to finding what reason God gives us along lines of vital importance—this constitutes true Bible study.

MAN'S REASON HANDICAPPED BY ERROR

While the lower animals are endowed to a very limited degree with the faculty of reason, yet of all the animal creation man alone is able to reason upon a high plane. He alone possesses moral faculties and ability to reason with his Creator through that Creator's revealed Word. In the present fallen condition of the race, some can reason better than others. Phrenologists can determine by the size and the shape of a man's head what are his natural mental endowments. They can give a very good description of a man's natural disposition—what he would be likely to do and what not to do.

But no phren ologist can determine the character of a Christian as such—as a New Creature in Christ; for a Christian of considerable development has so far overcome many of his natural weaknesses that he is much nobler in character than the shape of his head would seem to indicate. He now has a new will, a new mind—the mind of Christ. But the particular point that we wish to emphasize is that the faculty for reasoning belongs to man, and that even in his fallen condition he delights to exercise this faculty. When we inquire for a reason why things are so, we are merely in line with God's will concerning us.

Along doctrinal lines, however, our reasoning is sadly handicapped by error; for the whole world is in a large measure of darkness respecting the Divine character and purposes. For the past few hundred years, the Lord's people have been gradually emerging from the darkness of the Dark Ages. There were twelve hundred years during which the Bible was not studied at all. Then came the Reformation, after which the Bible came back into the hands of God's people, and they began to study it again. But their poor heads were more or less confused with the errors of the creeds formulated during those twelve centuries when the Bible was set aside; and it would not be expected that they would be able then to see every point of doctrine clearly and to reason satisfactorily.

So we see that our forefathers, honest and sincere as many of them were, had great difficulties with which to contend in connection with the errors which were firmly entrenched in their minds. When a foundation of error has been laid in the mind, it will give trouble until all the error has been removed. Many of their errors we have inherited. We were born with our reasoning faculties more or less twisted; and these twists have been accentuated by our teachings at home, in the Sunday School, and in the pulpit. We have imbibed them in our reading. When we wished to reason, we were told, "You must not reason along doctrinal lines; for you will become an infidel if you do!"

REASON DIVINELY GUIDED A BLESSING

Many of us did become infidels respecting the teachings held out to us, however. This has proved to be a great blessing, in that it has led us to study the Word of God for ourselves, and to learn what is the real character of our Creator—that He is not a monstrous Devil, but a God of Love, a God of Reason; that He has a Plan of Salvation worthy of all acceptation. We can now meet together and reason as God's people in harmony with His inspired Revelation—the Bible. Our own poor, imperfect reasoning, perverted by the false teachings of centuries, would be a very unreliable guide and would surely lead us astray if we were unaided from Above, as our text suggests. But reasoning according to the instructions of Scripture clarifies our minds, and leads us out of the bewildering darkness of error into the light of God as it shines from the face of our Redeemer and Lord, Jesus Christ.

As Bible Students we are learning that there is a beauty and a harmony in the Bible that is not to be found elsewhere, when the Word of God is rightly divided. (2 Timothy 3:15-17; 2:15.) As long as we reason within the lines of Divine Revelation we are on safe ground. What do any of us know regarding the origin and the destiny of man save as we are instructed by the Lord? Nothing whatever! No matter how much any man may boast of his knowledge and his wisdom, he knows nothing about these important subjects pertaining to our everlasting future except as information is given from Heaven. As the inspired Apostle Paul declares, the Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished. We have no other source of knowledge respecting our Creator and His purpose. We must have a "Thus saith the Lord" for ever item of our faith.

PROVISION FOR MAN'S DELIVERANCE

Nearly all the theology of the Bible stands related to sin—how sin came into the world, what are its effects, how God views it, how we should view it, how man is to get rid of it, what means God will adopt to lift mankind out of their present degradation to sin and to restore the race to perfection and everlasting life. This is the sum total of the theology of the Bible.

God's Word declares that our great Creator made man, not in the image of an ape, but in the Divine image, and crowned him with honor and glory, setting man over the beasts of the earth, the fishes of the sea and the birds of the air. Man was to be an earthly king, only "a little lower than the angels." (Genesis 1:26-28, 31; Psalms 8:4-8.) This great man, this perfect man, Adam, was our father, a human son of God. (Luke 3:38.) The Heavenly Father has not said this about any one since Adam's disobedience and fall into sin, except in the case of our Lord Jesus Christ, who came to earth a man, transferred from His glorious prehuman condition to man's estate, in order that He might give His human nature a Ransom-sacrifice for Adam and all who fell in him.

Adam was put on trial in Eden with the understanding that if he remained obedient to his Creator he could live forever; but that if he was disobedient, he would die. He disobeyed; and the death penalty was pronounced upon him—"Dying, thou shalt die." (Genesis 2:17, margin.) Immediately he began to die—not instant death, but a gradual dying process. It was nine hundred years before he was dead—not more alive than ever. "The wages of sin is death." "The soul that sinneth it shall die."—Romans 6:23; Ezekiel 18:4,20.

To understand the Scriptures, we must drop the foolishness handed down to us from the Dark Ages. "Come, let us reason together." In line with this reasoning, we find that the whole world are sinners. Adam's unborn posterity shared in his fall and in his condemnation. Some have gone down into the tomb more rapidly than have others, and on a lower plane. Some have tried their best to fight against sin. But all are sinners; all are dying because of the original sin in Eden. (Psalm 51:5; Genesis 3:20.) None can keep God's law; for all are imperfect.—Romans 3:20.

As all the race were condemned to death while still in the loins of their father Adam, so the Lord Jesus, by becoming a man, perfect and undefiled by sin, with an unborn race in his loins, could give Himself an exact corresponding price for Adam and all his posterity. This is the meaning of the word Ransom as applied to Jesus' sacrifice for the prchase of the race. The Greek word is antilutron—a price in offset, an equivalent price, a corresponding price.—1 Timothy 2:5,6.

MEANING OF CHRIST'S DEATH

Although our Lord was in the Heavenly Father's likeness on the Heavenly plane, He could not give a corresponding price for man while He was still a spirit being; for God's Law demanded a man's life for a man's life. (Deuternomy 19:21.) It was necessary, therefore, that He become a perfect man, as Adam was before he fell. As such our Lord died for "the sin of the world"—the original sin, the sin of Father Adam, on account of which Adam was sentenced to death. Thus we see that Jesus must bear Adam's penality, whatever that was. Did our Lord suffer eternal torture for man? No; He suffered death. He gave up forever in death His human nature, and was raised from death by the Father a glorious Divine being, as a reward for His faithfulness. His human nature He never took back; for it was the price of man's redemption.

It is very evident, then, that the penalty for sin pronounced by God upon Adam and his race was not eternal torment, but death. Had not our Lord Jesus Christ died for the world, mankind would not have a future life. But because our Lord has died, "the Just for the unjust," death is referred to in the Bible as a "sleep." Man will awaken from his death sleep. He will live again in the resurrection. —1 Corinthians 15:21-23.

God's standard is perfection; and no one who comes short of it can attain life everlasting. The entire race of Adam is dying on account of their father Adam's sin. The great majority of them have died in infancy. Moreover, the Bible distinctly declares that no flesh can be justified in God's sight through keeping His Law; for fallen man cannot keep God's perfect Law inviolate. Only through Divine compassion and mercy can any human being become justified in the sight of God, through the death of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The Ransom-price which our Lord gave for Adam and his race is "to be testified in due time." (1 Timothy 2:5,6.) To some the due time comes in this life. To the great majority it will come in the next life, during the Messianic Reign of a thousand years—the world's great Judgment Day.

THE TWO SALVATIONS

But although God has provided a great Savior for the fallen race of Adam, and although the death of our Lord Jesus is sufficient for the sins of the whole world, the world has not yet received the benefits of that death. The reason for the delay is given in the Bible. There are two phases of salvation; one salvation for the Church, to spirit nature; and another for the world in general, to perfect human nature. The Bible says that Jesus Christ "brought life AND immortality to light through the Gospel." (2 Timothy 1:10. The Apostle Paul mentions the "so great salvation, which first began to be spoken by the Lord." (Hebrews 2:3.) This salvation for the Church was a secret from before the foundation of the world.

The other phase, "the common salvation," is for whosoever will of mankind. During the Millennial Age this salvation will be made known to every person in the world. The knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the earth. (Habakkuk 2:14; Psalm 72:19.) Everybody will know that Christ has died for the sin of the world, and that all may then have a share in the blessing of Restitution secured by the death of Christ. All will then have the opportunity to receive again that which was lost. (Luke 19:10.) At the Second Coming of Christ, in "the Times of Restitution of all things," mankind will be given an opportunity to rise out of ignorance and sin back to the image of God.—Jude 3; Acts 3:19-23.

The "strong meat" of the Word of God needs careful mastication. (Hebrews 5:12-14.) The husks on which we were fed in Babylon could not be masticated. There was no real food there. The true Christian is to progress from the milk of the Word to the strong meat thereof. He is to grow in grace and in knowledge. At first we were only "babes in Christ," babes in the knowledge of things spiritual. (1 Corinthians 3:1-3.) But in order to grow strong in the Lord, we must have the strong meat and digest it.

SPIRIT BEGETTING AND SPIRIT BIRTH

After Adam fell, Jesus was the first human son of God. "He came unto His own (the Jews), and His own received Him not." They crucified Him. "But as many as received Him (first of the Jews and then of the Gentiles), to them gave He power to become the sons of God." (John 1:11,12. As spirit-begotten New Creatures, these are sons of God; and they will have their birth in the First Resurrection, when they shall be made like their Lord and Head.—1 John 3-2.

As a spirit-begotten son of God, our Lord Jesus offered Himself in sacrifice to God at Jordan. For three and one-half years thereafter He was laying down in death that sacrifice, which was consummated on the cross. The third day thereafter He was born to the Spirit, in His resurrection. So the sacrfice which we make when we consecrate ourselves fully to God through Christ is finished at our actual death. Meantime, we must keep our bodies in a presentable condition—"faithful unto death." As our Lord has said, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." (Revelation 2:10.) For this the Church is waiting. We are not to receive merely the ordinary human life which is coming to the world in the Times of Restitution. The opportunity to get the crown of life will never again be offered; for it is limited to a special number—the Elect. When all of this elect number shall have been found and prepared for their future work, then the purpose of the Gospel Age will have been accomplishd, and the uplift of the world of mankind will begin.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS

Essay VII.

RUSSELL'S LIMITATIONS OVERRULED BY PROVIDENCE.

The more you contemplate the achievements of the subject of our sketch the higher he rises in your esteem. He is colossal. His character is so massive, his achievements so great and his ideals so towering that others can scarcely get high enough to take his measure. "He that is spiritual judgeth all .. yet he himself is judged of no man." Still it is equally true that Russell is made of common clay; great men are not so great after all. An overruling Providence so endowed the plain and humble Luther that he was placed where he affected the world, turned it's course into new channels, and left his impress upon the ages that follow. Humble individuals have wrought themselves into the very life if the race and built themselves memorials in the characteristics of epochs. This was true with St. Paul, Columbus and others; all of common clay. The thing that made them great was that God used them by His Providential leadings—like the great Wesley, who, on seeing a drunkard reeling in the streets, remarked: "But for the grace of God, there goes John Wesley." Or in the words of St. Paul, to whom goes the credit of launching Christianity upon Europe and who was the father of all theologians and reformers that followed, "We are also are men of like passion with you, and preach unto you, that ye should turn from your vanities unto the living God."

If truth be spoken we will have to to say that the Russell propaganda has outgrown the man that started it, and once managed all its affairs; he is now only a cog in the wheel of this remarkable religious movement. This applies to the theology as well. He knows this fact better than any one on the outside, and he tried to hide himself behind the truth he teaches all through the past until he neared his sixties. Russell has since made a sudden change of front. He now comes out pointing to his laurels and posing as a great teacher. What does it all mean? Has flattery turned his head? Has he lost his bearings, or has he suddenly come into possession of himself—to a realization of his latent powers? Perhaps this last statement is true, but not the whole truth. His mission to the church is near an end, and another feature of his mission has just dawned upon him; a feature that he did not anticipate until the time arrived. He must preach this Gospel of the Messianic Kingdom to the world as well as to the church. To the church he hid himself, but to the world he must place himself at the front—he must personify this Gospel. Why? Because the world accepts a man at the estimation he places upon himself. But not so the church. It accepted the truth he had and him as the incidental.

RUSSELL'S PRESS PUBLICITY.

To this end he must get the Gospel into the press. He had failed repeatedly on account of his principles being too high; he refused to sell his sermons—he could not tolerate such a commercial proposition with the Gospel. He could not convince newspaperdom that anything of value can be gratis. Others, headed by G. C. Driscoll of Ohio, acquainted with the game, volunteered to take charge of his sermons and get them into the press. Hence the "American Press Association, Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau. Dante apparently saw in his dreams, so graphically depicted in his Commedia, the Smoky City of Pittsburgh, the workshop of the world, with its endless array of sweat-shops and rolling mills along the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio rivers spanned by bridges without the ferryman Charon on the Archeon. This city, like the capitol of the state, Harrisburg, is stained with corrupt politicians and graft, its principal product being steel (or steal) and millionaires created at the cost of human suffering and toil. Russell, our former Pittsburgher, following the counsel of his colleague, shook from his feet the dust of the Smoky City. Early in the year 1909, he removed, bag and baggage to the honorable city of Brooklyn, the city of churches, and linked his propaganda with the fame of the venerable Beecher by taking his old stand, Brooklyn Tabernacle, and his old homestead on Columbia Heights. Here we have the order reversed respecting Jesus who was sent to Nazareth from the honorable city Bethlehem, to which the bright stars guided the wise men of the East at His birth. As with Jesus of whom it was said: "Can anything good come out of Nazareth?", we have, "Can anything good come out of Pittsburgh?" To convince newspaperdom of this fact, Russell had to vacate and prove the fact of Dante's fancy: "For well I know suspended in that Limbo many a soul of mighty worth."

The modus operandi of the newspaper syndicate are not his personal preference:—there being no principle involved in the means, they are tolerated in the interests of the object of getting the furry ear of the public. Prior to this action he consented to debate (also against his personal preferences) with Dr. Eaton and Elder White, which proved to be an opening wedge into some of the daily and weekly papers. This set the dogmatic clerics into action and they began a series of slanderous attacks upon him through the press that would have blocked his new move. This necessitated an occasional law suit against these bold defamers to intimidate others of the same inclination, thus holding them at bay. Then suddenly as if by magic, he burst into the press generally, much to the bewilderment of both the church and the world, and much to the consternation of other more respectable gentlemen of the cloth, who, perceiving that his debates with their colleagues only served to advertise his doctrines, thought to quell this man by silence. Since all of the efforts of the clergy acting independently have failed, they have now concentrated their efforts by organizing and endeavoring to muzzle the press, and thus stop the publication of his sermons in the newspapers. Russell is still in the lead with a pack of wolves at his heels; when will they overtake

ORDERS OUT TO KNIFE CANDIDATE HUGHES

Vares After Penrose--Have Sold Out to Democratic Chairman McCormick for Next Governor and Big Contracts.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Sept. 22.—The multi-millionaire contractors, the Vare Brothers, without malice toward the presidential candidate, Charles E. Hughes, have issued order to knife the Republican standard bearer and thus administer a terriffic blow to United States Senator Boise Penrose.

Senator Penrose has been invited to consult with the Republican National Committee at the national headquarters in New York and this, it is intimated by those close to the contractors, is responsible for the most recent move against Hughes, but this pretended underbreath explanation is regarded as frail and meaningless when compared to the real purpose of the Vares and the faction which they influence.

It is alleged there is a deal between the Vares and Vance C. McCormick, the Harrisburg newspaper publisher, now acting as National Chairman of the Democratic National Committee with headquarters in New York.

The election of Hughes would be regarded by the Vares, and their followers, as a great victory for Senator Penrose, and since the Senator has been invited to consult with members of the National Committee, this is looked upon as placing the Pennsylvania Boss desperately near the ear of the President, and there is fear that he may do much buzzing with the result that patronage coming into Pennsylvania, through the President, will be distributed according to the advice, suggestions, recommendations and instruction of the Senior Senator.

The patronage going to Senator Penrose would materially strengthen him and give him absolute control of every Government office throughout the entire state. These appointments would mean the placing of a powerful weapon in the hands of one whom the Vares declare a desperate man, to be wielded at the earliest opportunity in eliminating every Vare follower.

There is still another angle that in the event of Hughes winning under a reduced majority Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, who is saying some good things about Hughes, would be able to get to the President with the lamentable fact that a reduced majority was the outcome of a revultion of feeling against Senator Penrose. Thus the patronage may then be turned over to the Chief Executive of the state, who would be able to spread the glad tidings that the Vares were not only in control of the state machine but that the government appointees had also been turned over to them. This would have its influence in keeping in line the timid who would take no chances.

But the Big Contractors are not anxious to win; they do not want to win lest the understanding between the Vares and National Democratic Chairman McCormick should fail and the Vares expect to profit through this more abundantly than through the success of Hughes.

Thus an ineffectual itinerary has been arranged for Governor Brumbaugh and he is to occasionally visit isolated villages when business is not "pressing." There is to be no pyrotechnics nor display of enthusiasm by which interest might be aroused. Such antics may be mistaken for Hughes sentiment and this may develop to such proportions as to wreck the hopes of the Vares and interfere with the conspiracy between the multi-millionaire contractors, Governor Brumbaugh and the National Democratic Chairman McCormick.

The Governor will do nothing between now and election to draw the fire of the Democrats nor to arouse their anger unless State Chairman William E. Crow should request the National Republican Committee to compel the Governor to play in the open and follow him up. To become active may interfere with the plans and arrangements between the Vares and Chairman McCormick, and this, too, includes a far more important and much more extensive bargain than the success of Hughes could ever bring.

The Vare-McCormick deal involves the selection of a candidate for governor immediately following the National election in November and in the event of the defeat of Hughes, Chairman McCormick will consent to the selection of a candidate for governor by the Vares, providing the Vares submit the name of a man who will stand the acid test of Democracy. The name of Hon. Henry W. Temple, Congressman from the 31st Congressional district has already been submitted and as Congressman Temple has been a Progressive and leaned to Democracy in the National House of Representatives, Congressman Temple is very acceptable to the Democrats as well as the Progressives. Further, the issue in the next Gubernatorial contest is to be a wet and dry fight and Congressman Temple fits into that breech most charmingly. Congressman Temple is a United Presbyterian Minister, not too radical on the liquor traffic and since this is the dispensation of the College Professor and the military genius, Temple also fittingly fits into this most inviting chasm.

Preacher Temple was once a Chaplin of one of the military organizations which was recently sent to the border, but Chaplain

CANDIDATE HUGHES IN PITTSBURGH.

The Babcock Blues will be given their first opportunity to shine on Wednesday evening when Candidate Charles E. Hughes will make his first appearance in Pittsburgh. Preceding the speechmaking at Exposition Hall, there will be a magnificent street parade.

The Babcock Blues will have their new uniforms and this club will be one of the great features of the campaign. Much untiring work has been done by President Joseph Hilldorfer to get the club into shape and Vice President C. W. Robinson is to be congratulated for the manner in which he has worked to perfect the organization. The public will be given its first chance to see the club in action and Pittsburgh is to be given one of its old time Republican rallies. Other Republican clubs will be in the parade and the Americus Club, known throughout the country, will be in line with the Young Men's Republican Tariff Club. Pittsburgh citizens are to be given a big time and for the first time there will be real Republican enthusiasm.

WORKING WOMEN BUSY FOR WOODROW WILSON.

CHICAGO, ILL., Sept. 21.—There is much enthusiasm in the camp of Democracy over the women of the country it is claimed are so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of progress manifested in the recognition of the women that clubs of the fair sex all over the country are organizing and endorsing the Wilson administration.

The latest feminine endorsement is that of the women of Chicago who have grouped themselves together for effective work. These women are to cast their first ballot in this Presidential year and they have already selected their idol. They have formed what is to be known as the Working Women's Independent Woodrow Wilson League, and they intend to sweep the women in factory districts and the shop girls into the ranks of Democracy. They seem fully convinced that if they are to have any hope of the future lies with President Wilson and not with the Republican Standard Bearers.

Here is their statement:

We, the undersigned working women, pledge our support to re-elect President Woodrow Wilson.

We pledge him our support. Because of his splendid record during the past four years in a most critical period in the history of our nation.

Because he has stood with the common people as against the big business interests of the country.

Because he has placed human values aboye property vaiues, and stands for human freedom.

Because of his record of labor legislation which was denied us during other administrations; particularly the enactment of the Child Labor Law and the Clayton Anti-Trust Act.

Because of his courageous stand for the eight-hour day in the recent railroad controversy.

Because we believe that by his action in this case he has advanced the cause of the shorter work-day to such an extent that we look to an early enactment of eight-hour legislation for women in the various states and by Congress.

For these reasons we feel justified in calling upon the workingwomen, regardless of party, to join in our campaign to work for the re-election of President Wilson.

SILK WEAVERS STRIKE.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Sept. 18.—Several hundred employes of the Eagle Silk company are on strike to enforce living conditions. It is stated that wages are 300 per cent lower than in similar factories in other localities and that weavers have been forced to work a week of 78 hours for $10. Child labor and other labor laws are violated by the company. The United Textile Workers' union is asisting these strikers.

British Labor Congress Meets

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Over 650 delegates, representing upwards of 2,850,000 trade unionists, were present at the opening of the Trades Union Congress in the Birmingham Town Hall September 4th. Striking speeches were made by the Lord Mayor in welcoming them to the city and by the chairman, Harry Gosling, in opening the Congress. The rest of the session was devoted mainly to routine business.

Arthur Henderson, labor adviser to the Government, and Roberts, his Under-Secretary, were on the platform with their old colleagues. Truly, as Gosling said, the old order is changing, and even the Congress itself has altered, not so much in its personal though some of the ardent young men who used to make themeslves heard are gone, as in its spirit. One seemed to detect in the first day's proceedings a new note of earnestness and responsibility springing from a consciousness of the immense power for victory of defeat which was in the hands of labor.

Gosling dwelt with pardonable pride on what he termed the "super importance" of labor and on the sacrifices which labor had made for the national defence. "Labor," he said, "has been the personification of real patriotism." The most striking passage in the address dealt with the problems of demobilization and the readjustment of industry. Unless preparations were made in advance to prevent unemployment after the war, said Gosling, a grave industrial peril would arise. Labor, he plainly declared, would not submit quietly to any attack on its standard of life. The Government must prevent unemployment by organizing extensive public works. "But," he added, "we hope for something better than a mere avoidance of unemployment and strikes. We are tired of war in the industrial fields.

Would it not be possible for the employers, on the conclusion of peace, to agree to put their businesses on a proper footing by admitting the workmen to some participation not in profits, but in control in those matters which concern us directly?" It was a bold suggestion, earnestly made. Taken in conjunction with a plea for a approachment between capital and labor made by the Lord Mayor, one of the largest employers in Birmingham, it set before the Congress a new and a better purpose than some of the del-

A VICTIM OF A FURNITURE FAKIR

How an Innocent Purchaser Was Trimmed and is Still Waiting On Some Articles.

Complaints against the furniture fakirs are still arriving at the office of the Tribune, and the latest comes from a nearby town in the Ohio Valley. This letter tells of the reception the purchaser received when he appeared at the furniture store to inquire about the articles he had purchased, and which had not been shipped. The experience is no exception to the general rule and the treatment is thoroughly in accord with what the Tribune has been telling its readers.

This shopper purchased $120 worth of furniture and he was given the usual promises. He returned to his home to wait for the articles but, contrary to promise, they did not come. He returned to Pittsburgh to see what the trouble was and he was informed that the articles had been shipped. When he entered the store the "salesmen" crowded around and attempted to confuse him. This is the old game practiced upon every customer who returns to demand either the furniture or the money when the frauds have been discovered.

The letter reads as follows

Rochester, Pa., Sept. 18, 1916

National Labor Tribune,

Mr. J. H. Vitchestain, Editor.

Dear Sir:—I have just discovered that there is one paper in Pittsburgh that will fight for justice for the workingman. I am a railroader and am a member of the B. of R. T. I had trouble with ..... Furniture Company on the 8th of January when I purchased $120 worth of furniture and they promised to have it sent to my home and have two men put it together and place it where I wanted it. Well, after waiting two days for it I went up and asked them about it and they told me it was at the station. If you ry to talk to one of them the rest, about six in all, will crowd around you and try to get you balled up in what you are talking about and you might as well try to talk to a stone wall.

A 42-piece set of dishes was to be sent with the furniture. They never came, so when I went to inquire they told me I would get them when I paid my bill. The cashier said I could certainly get the dishes then if I paid, and I paid $10.20. I asked for the dishes and he pointed out another one of the clerks and told me to go and see him.

This clerk told me he had none in and he would have a set sent to me from the factory and I would get them the latter part of the week, but I am still waiting for them. And this is not all, the chairs I bought, one had a broken rung, and the varnish all pealed off before I had them three weeks. The rest of the furniture was all scratched up and the stove was not the stove I ordered at all. I will invite any one either you or the ..... Furniture Company to send any one to confirm my story.

Wishing you the best of luck and God speed you in your good work, I remain,

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM G. O'LEARY.
368 Brown street, Rochester, Pa.

Mr. O'Leary can have the services of an attorney representing the National Labor Tribune's Legal Department, without any cost to him should he desire to take advantage of the offer, and if there is any justice in his claim the courts are the proper place to determine this.

The facts are presented in Mr. O'Leary's letter and the Tribune presents them to the buying public in order that the shoppers may be guarded in entering the stores of the fakirs. The Tribune refuses to accept advertising from the fakirs and their exclusion from the columns of the Tribune is an assurance that none of the subscribers of this paper will be plundered or made victims of nefarious frauds so long as the Tribune can prevent them.

Suit was entered against one of the furniture concerns several weeks ago and the matter was settled by the furniture house taking back the furniture and refunding the amount of money paid, at the same time the purchaser was paid the time he lost from his employment while trying to have delivered the article he bought instead of the articles that were sent to his home.

The outrage is that these fakirs can continue their frauds as long as they have and carry on their game of plunder. The Tribune has thoroughly aroused the public and letters are coming in commending the work and inquiring who the fraudulent firms are and who are the legitimate ones.

It is the intention of the Tribune to protect the public through its Legal Department without cost to any one who desires to consult an attorney. This is free and in the event of suits being entered no charge is to be made. This is assuring ample protection to the shopping public against fraud and deception. The purpose is to break up the business of the fakir and bring the criminals to justice. The Tribune has been lenient in the extreme, but the time is approaching when instead of entering civil suits attorneys will go into the criminal courts.

The dish incident is only one of the schemes by which innocent buyers are plundered. When the money is once paid it's good bye promises.

Questions and Answers

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. A. they may do so, and they will be answered strictly according to those teachings which claim to be in harmony with the Bible. Address questions to the Question Department of the National Labor Tribune.

Does Pastor Russell teach that after death a bad man is punished, and a good man rewarded, that is, if the good are rewarded by an entrance and eternal residence in heaven, what becomes of the bad man who refuses to accept the Lord Jesus Christ?

I. P. Hanna, Pittsburgh.

Answer—Pastor Russell teaches, in harmony with the Scriptures, that when men die they go neither to heaven nor to punishment, but that "they all go down into the pit," "into the land of forgetfulness." Ps. 88, 4:12. "A man dies, and that very day his thoughts perish." "His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not, they are brought low and he perceiveth it not of them." "The dead know not anything."

He teaches also in harmony with the Scriptures, that the only hope of a future life is in a resurrection from the dead, and that a hope in a resurrection of the dead is based on the fact that Christ died and was raised from the dead, and became the first fruits of them that slept.

"If Christ be not risen, then is your hope vain, and they also who are asleep in Christ are perished."

If people could only get it into their heads that when a man dies he is dead, and not alive in any sense of the word, the matter would appear very simple. Death is the opposite of life, and life is simply animation of the body, and is the same in all animal life. "The man and the hearts all have the same breath, as one dies so dies the other, so that man has no preeminence over the beast." Eccl. 3. 19.

Of course man has a higher organism than a beast, and has had provision made for his recovery from death, which the beast has not, but the thought is, that when a man dies he is just as dead as is the beast when he dies.

The Lord is carrying out his plans for man's recovery from sin and death, notwithstanding the fact that men themselves have been trying various schemes to put the vast majority of the race into eternal torment, and to save a few, including themselves, to eternal bliss.

For centuries God has been making arrangements to set up a Kingdom on earth for the ruling and blessing of the people. "All the families of the earth." Away back in the days of Abraham He made a covenant with that faithful Patriarch, telling him that in his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed. And since that time the work of selecting the seed has been in progress.

The blessings here referred to are not to come to the seed, but to the world through the seed. The blessings coming to the seed are of a different character, and of a much higher order, namely, glory, honor, and immortality, joint-heirship with Christ in the Kingdom.

Take for instance an earthly government such as our republic. We elect a president in November, and he does not come into his office until the next March. But he occupies the time during the interval in getting his cabinet arranged and everything in shape to begin his administration.

Now he does not send out word to all the people, that if they do not come and get into his cabinet or one of the houses of representatives that he will make a fire and burn them all up. But on the contrary, when all of those arrangements are made it is supposed to be for the purpose of bringing blessings to the people, whether it does or not.

So it is with the Lord's Kingdom—the King was elected 1900 years ago, and since that time He has been getting things ready for the establishing of His Kingdom. One of His houses of representatives was selected before His own election, namely the "house of servants," selected during the Jewish Age. Children of the bond woman—the law—represented by Hagar. Princes they are to be in all the earth—earthly representatives of the Kingdom.

The other, the "House of Sons," are being selected during this Gospel Age, children of the free woman, represented by Sara, called to a heavenly inheritance, heirs of all things as Isaac was, for the son of the bond woman, the "house of servants," shall not inherit with the free woman, the "house of sons."

God told Adam and Eve to be faithful, and multiply, and fill the earth. And while he is making ready to establish His Kingdom He is allowing enough people to be born into the world to comfortably fill it; as full as He wants it. And it won't make a particle of difference whether they are on top of the ground or under it, for He intends to bless them all alike. All are dead to Him in the sense that all are under a death sentense, "For we judge that if one died for all, then all were dead." And they are all alive to Him because provision has been made for their recovery from death.

"He is not the God of the dead, but of the living, for to Him all live."

Now we come to the place where man will be on trial for life, after the Lord's Kingdom is established. "Then all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man, and shall come forth."

Then all mankind will be given the choice of being obedient to the rules of the Kingdom and "learning righteousness," and going up on the "Highway of holiness" to eternal life, back to the perfection that was lost in Eden, or of being disobedient and being being cut off in the "Second Death" "everlasting punishment," eternal death and eternal torment. "It shall come to pass in that day, that any soul that will not hear that Prophet—the Christ—shall be cut off from among the people." Acts 3:23.

I ran across an article which stated that the revisers, who purposely rendered Ex. 12:40, to describe Israel as being in Egypt 430 years and by so doing fell into two astonishing errors. First, that Moses must have been born when his mother was 253 years old. Second, that his birth must have taken place when his father had been dead 80 years.

I understand about the affliction and sojourning, that it did not all take place in Egypt but am anxious as to where they get Bible reference to prove their astonishing errors.

I hope some one will explain, it may be interesting to others, as well as myself.

MRS. J. F. STADLER,
Elk City, Kansas.

Answer—This is a very peculiar question and is hard to tell just what is meant by it.

If the children of Israel did sojourn in Egypt four hundred and thirty years it would surely prove some "astonishing errors" and would show inharmony between the statement of Moses and that of Paul.

But we see that the sojourning began when Abraham went into Canaan as a sojourner a stranger in a strange land. All of this the question says she understands and it is not clear just what else she wants explained. If she will make the matter a little more plain and send us the article to which she refers, or tell us where to find it, we can probably explain further.

I herein enclose an express money order for the renewal of my subscription which I see is expired and my mite for the "Help Others" fund. I am pleased with the firm stand the paper takes to continue to publish Pastor Russell's sermons and for the stand it takes on all subjects it considers right. Coalmont, Pa., Sept. 23.

We are writing to renew our subscription to National Labor Tribune, as I see we have received our last copy paid for and we don't want to miss one copy on account of its many good features it always contains. We are chiefly interested in its religious features, our dear Pastor Russell's sermons and appreciations of the friends of Truth and also Bro. Nelson's essays. Your paper is splendid as a whole. It has become quite a welcome visitor in our home. We are also sending a mite to the Help Others fund for we feel sorry for the dear ones who are not able to pay. We thank our dear Heavenly Father for your zeal in the cause of Truth, Right and Justice.

With best wishes,
J. R. BRODE & WIFE.

Piney Ark, Sept. 22.

I take great pleasure in giving thanks to the publishers of the National Labor Tribune and to some dear friend who paid for the Tribune for another year after I wrote and told them I could not pay for it any longer. I spend much of my time reading it, friends, as I want to scatter Truth in this county. I am alone in this city trying to spread the Truth, and I am weak, and I cannot tell all, for I am a woman with a family to do for and can't spare the time, and cannot preach, and if I could they would say "Why she is crazy, who ever heard the like? We know better as we have been taught by smart people that there is eternal torment." I wish, dear friends, that it was possible for some one that could teach them the Truth would come here as there are lots of work indeed, but I am so poor in this world's goods that I cannot pay the way of any one.

You may wonder how I came to be down here. I came here from Mississippi, and was getting the Tribune down there. I have six of Pastor Russell's books. I loan them first to one then to another, but they read them and say, "Well, I don't agree with him, we can't see why he knows so much." So I hand them my paper, but they still go on in their foolish way. There are all kinds of denominations here and the preachers lead them on to believe that there is a devil instead of a God of Love. I have some good friends here going on in the dark, and if it is possible please send some one and teach them the Truth before it is too late.

Again thanking the one who paid for the paper for me, and asking God's blessing on all, and hoping all will be lead to the light in due time, I am,

Your sister in Christ,
M. E. YARRIS.

Duquesne, Pa., Sept. 22.

Allow me to encroach upon you for space enough to reply to your correspondent of your issue of September 14th. Mr. F. W. Watkins, of Silver Springs, Md., and others who have expressed their desire through your columns and by mail to have the essays "Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation," in a more substantial form.

In reply would say that the object was to have them done into book form after they had been run serially in the Tribune, provided that when published in installments, sufficient demand would be created for them, and as to whether they would eventually appear in book form depends upon the friends and admirers of Pastor Russell, who by moral and material support and by seeing to it that someone competent to handle such an undertaking would be secured to serve in this capacity. The writer does not feel this his privilege and does not feel he has the executive ability, as well as, does not have time at his disposal to handle the business in connection with securing the publisher and the sale, mailing, etc. of the books. He knows also that unless the matter is entrusted to capable hands it will not be successful.

The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society would be better equipped, and would be able to supply the book at a lower price than any other concern, but since the essays are intended as a tribute of respect to Pastor Russell as well as supply a review of the life and teachings of God's standard bearers of the past, for this reason the book would serve the purpose better by having some other concern or individual to handle them.

The author feels that he has done his share in compiling the material in this tribute and feels that his privilege ends with the articles being published in the Tribune and has copyrighted them not with a view of preventing further publication, but of controlling the publication of them later by others who, perhaps, maybe inclined to charge more for them than would be considered a reasonable price. To this end the author would be satisfied to delegate this to one or more or all of the following: C. J. Woodworth, Maplewood, N. J.; J. T. Rutherford, New York; A. H. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; J. A. Bohnet, Pittsburgh, Pa., and L. W. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

As to whether any of these would lend assistance in getting them into the hands of some publisher would depend on whether or not they have read the essays and how they have been impressed by them. The writer feels that L. W. Jones could handle this matter even should he not be familiar with all of the contents, as he has done with the convention reports.

The last (8th) essay, is not yet completed in M. S., and a few additions are contemplated to cover points raised by Mr. Watkins and others through correspondence. But, perhaps it is not too early for some to take the matter up with the above named and before they are completely published in the Tribune, the M. S. could be in shape for them.

I take this opportunity of requesting those concerned to let me have the benefit of any criticism they may be pleased to offer—no bouquets please—but honest criticism that will help to make the story a truthful reflection of the subject of the sketch.

Yours in Him,
N. E. NELSON.

A NORWEGIAN LEGEND.

There is a good lesson in this quaint little Norwegian legend of "the Gertrude Bird."

A woman was one day kneading bread in her trough, under the eaves of her house, when our Lord passed by, leaning on St. Peter. She did not know it was the Saviour and His Apostle, for they looked like two poor men traveling past her door. "Give us of your dough, for the love of God," said the Lord Christ; "we have come far across the field and have fasted long."

Gertrude pinched off a small piece for them; but on rolling it in her trough to get it into shape, it grew and grew and filled the trough completely. She looked at it in wonder. "No," said she, "that is more than you want." She pinched out a smaller piece, and rolled it out as before; but the smaller piece filled up the trough just as the other had done; so she put that aside, too, and pinched a smaller bit still. But the miracle was just as apparent, the smaller bit filled up the trough the same as ever. Gertrude's heart was hardened still more; she put that aside also. "I can not give you any today," said she; for the greed of her heart was to divide all her dough into little bits and roll it into loaves. "Go on your journey, and the Lord prosper you!" Then the Lord Christ was angry, and her eyes were opened, and she fell down on her knees to hear Him say, I gave you plenty, but that hardened your heart, so that plenty was not a blessing to you. I will try you now with the blessing of poverty; you shall henceforth seek your food, day by day, and always between the wood and the bark."—Selected.

A PLOT THAT FAILED

Acts 23:14-24.—Oct. 1.

The Wrath of Man Overruled—St. Paul Before the Sanhedrin—The High Priest Rebuked—St. Paul as a General—The Sanhedrin Divided In Opinion—Dissension Amongst Its Members—The Apostle Taken Back to the Castle—Encouraged by a Vision—The Conspiracy Against Him. St. Paul Sent to Caesarea For Safekeeping.

"They shall fight against thee; but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee, saith Jehovah, to deliver thee."—Jer. 1:19.

ON the morning after the riot and St. Paul's rescue by the Roman soldiers, Lysias in perplexity called together the Jewish Sanhedrin, in order that they might pass upon the Apostle's case, for by this time the commandant recognized that the point of dispute was a religious one, and that his duty was merely to preserve the peace. Thus St. Paul was afforded another opportunity to witness the Gospel to the Jews—to their most influential Court of Seventy. His trying experiences were furnishing him with superior opportunities as a herald of the Gospel.

As the Apostle realized the opportunity granted him of addressing the leaders of his nation, he sought to make use of it. Hence the earnestness of his countenance. "Looking steadfastly" at his audience, he began by reminding them of his faithfulness as a Jew. He had ever been a model citizen, never lawless. He addressed the Sanhedrin as "Brethren," thus putting himself on an equality with them, respecting both religious zeal and general learning. Indeed, it is generally supposed that at the time of the stoning of St. Stephen, Saul of Tarsus—afterwards St. Paul—was a member of the Sanhedrin.

St. Paul Before the Council.

His address was soon interrupted by the high priest, who commanded those standing near the Apostle to smite him on the mouth—a special mark of indignity and a protest against the words uttered. It is not unfair to assume that the high priest felt his own course in life especially condemned by St. Paul's words; for, as the Master declared, "the darkness hateth the light." Suddenly checked in his speech, the Apostle shouted, "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall!" The prophecy came true. Within two years the high priest was deposed. Within six years he met a horrible death, his own son being associated with his assassins, who drew him from his hiding place in a sewer and slew him.

The term "whited wall" was applied to ordinary graves, which were covered with a stone bearing the inscription. These were frequently whitewashed, so as to be easily discernible, lest any traveler should tread upon them and be defiled. (Numbers 19:11-16.) The glistening white stone was beautiful; but beneath it was corruption. The strength of the symbol as representing hypocrisy is manifest.

Some of the bystanders asked the Apostle, "Revilest thou God's high priest?" St. Paul rejoined, "I wist not, brethren," that he was the high priest; for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people." (Exodus 22:28.) The Apostle never fully recovered his eyesight after having been struck blind on the way to Damascus. (Acts 9:8, 9; 2 Corinthians 12:7-10.) It is possible, therefore, that he did not discern the high priest, or else did not know that the indignity was suggested by Ananias.

A Conspiracy Exposed and Foiled.

St. Paul perceived that the prejudice against him was such that no speech of his could affect his hearers; for they were dominated by the high priest, whose lack of justice had found so early a manifestation. Like an able general, therefore, he made a flank movement and captured the sympathies of fully one half of his auditors, at the same time demonstrating that the doctrine which he preached was the logical outcome of the faith of the Pharisees. This he did by shouting that he was being persecuted because of his belief in the resurrection.

The effect of his shout was instantaneous. The Pharisees took his part as one who in some respects believed as they did, although they could not endorse all of his teachings. As between the infidel Sadducees and an out-of-the-way Pharisee, they promptly espoused the cause of the latter. A tumult ensued, some seeking to take the Apostle's life, and others endeavoring to protect him. Again Caesar's soldiers intervened, and took St. Paul back to the castle.

"What Hast Thou to Tell Me?"

Meanwhile, Colonel Lysias was evidently learning that his calm, self-possessed prisoner was no common man. This change of attitude toward St. Paul was manifested in his kindly treatment of the Apostle's nephew, who had brought word to his uncle that a band of forty men were plotting to kill him. When the commandant heard the lad's story, he dismissed the boy, telling him to keep the matter quiet. That night he sent the Apostle to the Roman governor at Caesarea, where St. Paul would have fresh opportunity for representing his Master.

KEEP FALSE LABOR RECORDS.

the situation plausible in that it disposes of the flattering and preposterous supposition of atributing it exclusively to human enguenuity. In fact to account for this publicity work along human lines is easier than to account for the remarkable transforming power that the Millennial Dawn theology has upon its votaries sm eradicating sinful habits and its elevating effects upon life in general. This general and condensed answer as a solution to the problem will suffice here while we note some other features of the propaganda.

A BUSINESS INSTITUTION.

The nucleus of the Russell propaganda consists of the organization, Watch Tower and Track Society, chartered 1884, "For the Promotion of Christian Knowledge." The present officers are: C. T. Russell, president; A. I. Ritchie, vice-president; W. E. Van Amburgh, treasurer. This society has especially endorsed the six series of "Studies in the Scriptures" (Millennial Dawn). (1) The Plan of the Ages; (2) The Time is at Hand; (3) Thy Kingdom Come; (4) The Battle of Armageddón; (5) The Atonement Between God and Man; (6) The New Creation; these total 2,608 pages and are published in twelve different languages. A bi-monthly, The Watch Tower and The Bible Students' Monthly. To this list is added Dr. James Strong's Exhaustive Concordance, Dr. Robert Young's Analytical Concordance, Prof. Benj. Wilson's Emphatic Dighott, Rabbi Isaac Leeser's Translation of the Old Testament; and numerous other valuable translations of the Old and New Testaments. The Cambridge Edition of the Authorized Version of the Bible (King James), to which is appended the valuable help, Berean Bible Teachers' Manual, (by C. J. Woodworth and G. W. Siebert, compilers) consisting of (1) a Commentary of the Bible from Genesis to Revelations, gleaned from the publications of the society; (2) an alphabetic epitome of the doctrines of the Bible with references, and (3) other features. Also numerous pamphlets and tracts. These are disseminated through the various branches of the society at New York, London, Germany, Sweden, Australia, etc.

The purpose of this business institution (Pennsylvania charter, Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society; New York charter, People's Pulpit Association; London charter, International Bible Students Association), is to serve the Church of God ("whose names are written in heaven") wherever the members are to be found, in the various sects, with the truths of the entire Reformation assembled in a rational form, together with dispensational truth to protect from the wave of infidelity that is flooding Christendom through the pulpit, press and schools. This is being done effectually through the rank and file of Associated Bible Students, with a system and rapidity that is marvelous, under the supervision of a man gifted with the proclivities of the modern business man.

IN THE GARDEN OF THE LORD.

Lash night I dreamed the Master came to me and gently said,
"Beloved, lay thy cross aside, and come with me awhile,
For I would have thee rest within the garden of the Lord."
And then He took my trembling hand and led me through the gloom
Until we came to where a massive gateway barred our path,—
The gates were closed, but opened at the Master's sweet command.
We entered, and the shadows fled before His radiant smile,
Oh, vision rapturous, can words be found to tell how fair!
Ten thousand roses beckoned with
Love's crimson hue, and round
About our feet the violets nestled in their purple grief;
While velvet pansies, clothed in royalty, together grew,
With lovely, clinging, pink and white sweet peas, and close beside,
The lilies of the valley bent in sweet humility—
And everywhere, the tender grass, a carpet soft and cool.

And often as we passed, the Master's hand with loving touch
Did rest upon some drooping flower, and lo! at once it seemed Refreshed. At last we came to where a stately lily stood,
Its snowy crown uplifted like a chime
of silvery bells,
Whose swaying filled the garden with a fragrance sweet and rare.
We closer drew, and then I saw, alas!
how here and there
A petal fair was torn and brown, as though by some rude wind
Or scorching heat. I wondered greatly at the sight, then turned,
The question on my lips—when suddenly there rose a storm
So fierce that every flower in the garden bent its head;
And then a shower of flaming arrows, hurled by shadown forms
Outside the garden's ivy-covered walls, rained down upon
The lilies, while I clung in terror to my Heavenly Guide.
A moment only did the storm prevail, and then I heard
The Master's "Peace, be still!" The tempest ceased, and there was calm,
The wondrous light grew dim, the garden vanished—and I woke.

The Master had not spoken thus, and yet I seemed to know
The fair dream-garden was a picture of His "little ones," (He neither sleeps nor slumbers in His watch-care over these),
And then the thought—if in this garden I might choose my place,
Would I be like the rose? At! no, lest in my passionate zeal
To show by works my heart of love,
I should forget the thorns,
Dear Lord, and wound Thy loving hand! Ah! then, perhaps I would
The lily be, and sound Thy blessed
Truth o'er land and sea
In clear-toned eloquence. Ah! no, I might not bear the storms
That beat upon the one whose head
Thou hast uplifted far Above his fellows—and a shining mark for Satan's darts!
And thus I thought on each and all that garden's lovely ones,
Then cried, "My blessed Lord, if I might choose, Oh, let me be The tender grass, that I may rest and soothe Thy weariness,—
A lowly place, safe-sheltered from the wind and fiery dart,—
What rapture this,—to lay down life itself beneath Thy feet!"

THE BASIS OF LOVING FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship love is not a miracle but results from certain combinations. The one we love need not of necessity be just like ourselves, but rather would appeal to us more as a counterpart possessing qualities which we admire, but do not so strongly possess. Darkness, however, never loved the light; the light never loves darkness. Hence for friendship-love on a noble plane both friends must have high ideals, noble aspirations, even though they may have these in different measure. Each should see in the other something to esteem and look up to; although in the case of the Almighty this cannot be true, his love for us must be chiefly along the lines of sympathy for us and appreciation of our endeavors to attain to his character standards. We may be sure, too, that in Jonathan's case reverence for the Lord had much to do with astopping any feeling of rivalry and with encouraging his admiration for his rival. Who will not admit that such an appreciation of the Divine will and providences would be a help to all friendship, a hinderance to all spirit of rivalry and in general a most valuable uplift in every Christian character. How much it means to us in the way of contentment to know that our Heavenly Father is at the helm as respects all the affairs of His people! How much rest it permits in our own hearts! How much meekness, gentleness, kindness and love it prompts toward others, both to realize that they as well as ourselves are subjects of Divine care, and have a heart so fully submitted to the Lord as to desire that his will shall be done irrespective of our own temporal interests or those of others.

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

Sent by parcel post anywhere in the United States. Send cash, stamps or money order. Address, H. H. Von Schlick, 50 Marvel Building, Third and Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

RISING OF THE SUN OF RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Jesus Now the Light of the World Only In Prospect—Sun of Righteousness Not Yet Rises—Jesus' Followers Merely Little Candles Shining in the Darkness—The World Has Striven to Quench this Light—Ignorance and Blindness the Cause—Kingdom of Satan Now Ruling—But We Are in the Early Dawn—Sun of Righteousness About to Rise.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 24.—Pastor Russell delivered a characteristic address before the I. B. S. A. Convention here today. He took for his text John 8:12—"I am the Light of the world; he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." He said in part:

At the time that our Lord used these words, He was the Man Christ Jesus, and had not yet become the Light of the world save in prospect. He was then the Light of the world in the same sense that He was the Savior of the world. The ultimate result of His coming into the world would be that the world would be enlightened and saved. To this end He had become a man. To this end He died. At His first advent our Lord came into the world to accomplish a work that would result in the world's salvation and uplift from sin and death at His Second Advent. The interim has been devoted to the selection and the preparation of a class which God has ordained to be associated with His Son in the great work for mankind to be inaugurated at the opening of the next Age.

Our Lord not only said, "I am the Light of the world," but declared to His followers "Ye are the light of the world." He pointed out the way in which they were to be lights at the present time, saying, "Men do not light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house" (Matthew 5:14-16.) So our Lord put His light on a candlestick; and it is still giving light to all in the House, but not to the world. Likewise Christ's disciples are to let their light shine to all within the Household of Faith—not to the world at large. They are not to expect, however, that their light will dispel the darkness now.

The sin, the jealousies, the misunderstandings and the pride of the Jewish rulers led them to secure the crucifixion of our Lord Jesus; and thus His light was temporarily extinguished. So it has been His disciples all down the Gospel Age. We are not to expect that our light will now dispel the darkness; but rather, as has been the case throughout this Age, that the darkness will ever seek to quench the light.—John 3:19-21.

WHY THE WORLD IS IN DARKNESS.

The Bible tells us about two great Kingdoms; Satan's Kingdom of Darkness and Christ's Kingdom of Light. As the Scriptures declare, "Darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people." (Isaiah 60:2.) This is because Satan's Kingdom is in power. Satan is "the prince of this Age." (John 14:30.) It is not that God made Satan to be the prince; but rather, as St. Paul explains, Satan is the god, or ruler, of this world because he is now ruling in the hearts of the children of disobedience. (2 Corinthians 4:4; Ephesians 2:2.) Today the children of disobedience are so numerous that fully nine-tenths of the human race are under the domination of the Prince of Darkness. Many who render him service do not realize what they are doing. But "his servants ye are to whom ye render service." If people knew that they are serving Satan, things would soon be different. But they are deceived.

We are only now beginning to get out of the darkened, drunken condition in which the Bible declares that the world has been for centuries. (Revelation 17:1-6.) The majority of mankind are still in a large measure of darkness. All of us have had more or less experience with this stupid condition of spiritual drunkenness. We are very thankful to God that we are getting awakened and sobered up, even though the majority of mankind are still serving Satan. (1 John 5:19. R. V.) This may seem a hard thing to say but it is true.

God refuses to accept any service except that which is rendered by His sons. Consequently whoever would render acceptable service must first become a child of God by entering into a Covenant of Sacrifice with Him. (Psalms 50:5.) This we do by presenting our bodies a living sacrifice, becoming acceptable to the Father through the imputed merit of Jesus, receiving the begetting of the Holy Spirit, and thus becoming children of God, joint-heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ to all that God has promised. (Romans 2:1, 2; 8:17.) Unless this is true of us, we are not serving God.

As we give careful heed to the Word of God and see what are the terms of service, we realize that there are very few who are serving God, who are following in the foot-steps of Jesus. But we rejoice that the light is beginning to break through the darkness, and that the glorious character of our God is beginning to be understood as never before by those who are humble and teachable.

DARKNESS BEGINNING TO DISAPPEAR.

According to the words of our Lord Jesus, the Sun of Righteousness was to rise at the close of the Gospel Age and the beginning of the Millennial Age. Both the teachings of the Scriptures and the signs of the times indicate that we are now living in the day when the Sun of Righteousness is about to rise, to scatter all the mists of darkness that envelope the earth. The Bible gives us a beautiful picture of what will take place when this Sun shall have risen over all the world. All other lights will be obscured by its brilliancy. All the dark places of the world will be opened up. Every hidden thing will be manifested. The light of the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the sea.—Isaiah 11:9; Habakkuk 2:14.

Then there will be ocean-deep knowledge of God. That will be the time when the true Light will lighten every man that has come into the world. It has not come during this Age because the Church must first be selected; first, the faithful ones from amongst the Jews, and then the remainder from amongst the Gentiles. Only a "remnant" from Isreal after the flesh, and only a "remnant" from Israel after the Spirit, will be of this true Church of Christ. (Isaiah 10:20-22; Romans 9:23-29; 11:5; Matthew 7:21-23.) It was the Divine purpose that, after the Gospel of Christ had first been presented to the Jews, God's professed people, it should then go to the Gentiles, to take out of them "a people for His name."—Acts 15:13-18.

TARES SOWN AMONGST THE WHEAT.

In the Divine Plan, the Gospel Age has been set aside for the gathering out of the faithful "Israelites indeed" from both Jews and Gentiles, to constitute the Church of Christ which is to reign with Him in His Kingdom. Our Lord Jesus tells us that when this number shall have been completed and glorified with Him, then the Kingdom will come and the Sun of Righteousness will rise to shine over all the earth. This Sun cannot rise before that time; for the Church is, with her Lord, to constitute this Sun.

In the parable of the Wheat and the Tares (Matthew 13:36-43) is pictured the work of the Gospel Age. Our Lord Jesus and the Apostles sowed the good seed of the Kingdom. They proclaimed that the Kingdom of God was yet to be set up on the earth. After the Apostles "fell asleep" in death, Satan came and over-sowed the field with tare-seed. The tare-seed represented the false message, not the true Message of the Kingdom. The Kingdom seed brought forth the true children of God; but the tare-seed brought forth children of error—"tares."

During this Gospel Age the wheat and the tares have been growing side by side in the nominal church organization. Our Lord forewarned His followers that no attempt should be made to separate these two classes until the close of the Age—the Harvest time—when He would return and supervise the separating work in person, though unseen, as He is now a glorious spirit being. During this Harvest time the "wheat" would be gathered into the "garner," while the "tares" would be figuratively burned; that is, destroyed as tares. The garner into which the wheat were to be gathered represents their change in the First Resurrection. "THEN shall the righteous shine forth as THE SUN in the Kingdom of their Father." THEN will be the time when our Lord Jesus Christ will, in the fullest sense of the word, become the Light of the world. —Malachi 4:2; Matthew 13:43.

We are now in the closing days of the Gospel Age. The Harvest is nearly finished. The last members of the Bride, the Body, of Christ are now in the flesh; and their course, we believe, is nearly run. This whole Christ—Head and Body, Bridegroom and Bride—will constitute the Sun of Righteousness, the Light of the world. When this Sun shall have risen, THEN the world will see. NOW they cannot see. As the Apostle Paul says, "The god of this world (Satan) hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." This is the reason why many cannot understand the Message of Truth when it is presented to them.

But when the Sun of Righteousness arises, then all mankind will see. All the blind eyes shall be opened; all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together." (Isaiah 40:5.) What a beautiful picture the Bible places before our minds! Truly earth's coming glory will compensate for the darkness, ignorance and superstition which for many centuries have prevailed throughout the world.

THE "CHILDREN OF LIGHT."

In the words of our text, the Master declared, "He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." His followers were to be enlightened while the world was still in darkness. The humble, teachable ones into whose minds the light of Truth shone carried in turn the light to others who were meek, who had the "ear to hear." The Truth of the Gospel, the Message of the Kingdom, gave zeal and courage to all who received it into good and honest hearts.

We read about the courage of St. Peter and St. John. After they had been illuminated by the begetting of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, they went forth to proclaim Jesus of Nazareth as the Son of God, the Messiah, who was to bless the whole world. Although they were imprisoned for preaching in Jesus' name, they continued to do so after the Lord delivered them from prison. When again called before the authorities and threatened, they answered, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye; for we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."—Acts 4:19,20.

The words of these faithful servants of God confounded their enemies; for although even the people noted that they were ignorant and unlearned men, still the wisdom with which the disciples spoke could not be resisted nor gainsaid. Truly the power of God was manifested in His humble, faithful children. They knew what they believed and why they believed it. Therefore the people "took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus and had learned of Him." Thus it has ever been. The Lord's promise has been abundantly fulfilled to His people—that they should not walk in darkness, but should have the light of life.

In the Truth of God's Word there is a transforming power which affects the entire life. In proportion as it is received, it gives its possessor the spirit of a sound mind. It makes him more efficient in business. It makes better husbands and fathers, better wives and mothers, better sons and daughters, better neighbors and friends. Even the worldly recognize the fact that the Lord's people have nobler ideals, better judgment, a broader outlook and kindlier sympathies than have others.

NO MORE "ENCIRCLING GLOOM" TO THESE.

It is not sufficient that one give his heart to the Lord, and then receive the illumination of the Holy Spirit which comes at that time. The good begining must be carried on daily, if we are to walk in the light and be transformed in character. Our Lord Jesus is to be our great Teacher; and we must go to Him continually, receiving the lessons and the blessings that come through the daily study of His Word.

When we thought, as once we did, that nearly everybody was bound for eternal torment and that probably we might go there too, it is no wonder that we did not love the Bible. But when we come to know the Lord, all that darkness begins to vanish, and the love of God begins to be shed abroad in our hearts. It is a wonderful thing to know that we may be made sharers in the great Divine Plan, that we may be made joint-heirs with Christ Jesus in His glory; to know that "if we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him," and that "if we die with Him, we shall live with Him"—as spirit beings having the Divine nature, as the Lord has promised. 2 Timothy 2:11, 12; 2 Peter 1:4.

Cardinal Newman's beautiful hymn well expresses the doubt and uncertainty which have prevailed for centuries:

"Lead kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom;
Lead Thou me on;
The night is dark, and I am far from Home;
Lead Thou me on!"

This hymn seems to touch a popular chord; for all have realized this "encircling gloom." All have realized that we need a "kindly light" to lead us. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the kindly Light that is leading His people. Through the Word of God He has been guiding His people during the dark time which has preceded the rising of the Sun of Righteousness. (2 Peter 1:19-21.) But that Word has been neglected. The creeds and the "traditions of men" have been substituted for the Scriptures. There has been an "encircling gloom," a darkness that could be felt. The Cardinal realized that the night was dark, and that we were far from Home. He felt bewildered. He had been a Protestant; and in his search for light he had become a Catholic. Not knowing just what to believe, he said, "Lead Thou me on!"

GRAVE MISTAKE OF CHURCH LEADERS.

In the attempt to separate wheat from tares, contrary to the Master's instructions, various denominations have been formed, each of which has claimed to be the Church of Christ. Each denomination has tried to console itself with the thought that its gloom was no greater than that of the others. But all of them have been in the "encircling gloom," and all have felt it. Instead of following our Lord Jesus Christ, they have followed Luther, Calvin, Knox, Wesley and other men. We do not read that the Apostle John or the Apostle Peter or the Apostle Paul started a Church which was called after his own name. On the contrary, they denounced the spirit of division as wrong.—1 Corinthians 1:10-13; 3:1-7; Ephesians 4:1-6.

Seeing, however, that we have gotten ourselves into this difficulty, the only thing for us to do is to extricate ourselves from these entanglements by obedience to the Lord. We need not fight the denominations. Let them take care of themselves. But let each true disciple of Jesus see that he follows his Master, and that he lets his light shine. Be "as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves." The people are more or less confused in mind. They contend for their creeds; and yet, if asked, they acknowledge that they do not believe their creeds. No intelligent person today could believe the monstrous teachings of the creeds.

Let us be true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Light of the world, and will soon begin to enlighten the whole race of mankind. Soon the Church will be glorified with Him, and with Him will constitute the great Sun of Righteousness which is to rise and fill the earth with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God. Let this thought, dear brethren, inspire our hearts to faithfulness. Let us follow closely in the Master's steps; and shortly we shall receive a glorious share in the great blessings which He has promised to His faithful followers.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS

Essay VII.

RUSSELL'S PRESS PUBLICITY COMPARED WITH THAT OF TALMAGE.

But hold! In our statement respecting the accomplishments of the newspaper syndicate is not the exact truth. We have shifted the honor of this remarkable feat of opening the newspapers of the world from the man to the syndicate. Russell has been branded "the greatest schemer that ever stepped on God's footstool" and has been accused of controlling the whole mass of parliamentary machinery. There is a measure of truth in these accusations, but it is not the whole truth. This is only viewing the matter at one angle and is the one seen from the outside; our gentlemen of the cloth see this and are thrown off the scent; it has made them furious! The clergymen cannot understand how the editors could be otherwise influenced to publish these sermons; it is not because they approve of the theology, for they seldom as much as refer to, much less comment on, the matter that constitutes his sermons in their editorial columns. Dr. T. DeWitte Talmage succeeded in getting his sermons into over 2,000 papers, but this can be accounted for by attributing it to the splendid grammar and ease and fluidity of expression that created a demand for his sermons by the people and caused him to become their idol.

But even this cannot be claimed for Talmage's successor in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, for from a literary point of view Russell takes no laurels. The witchery of words is not here—he dazzles no one with his rhetoric. Were it otherwise, his mission would have been frustrated. The truths he taught are the drawing power. His theology is clothed in a language that can be understood by the people he is destined to serve; yet it is well written. He is not addicted to inventing new words, as in the case of many writers, to represent the delicate shades and tints of the subjects that he deals with, but clothes his lofty themes with a common English colored with borrowed expressions from Scripture, with an occasional Greek and Hebrew word untranslated. For this reason he is often misunderstood by some of his colleagues, and has learned from experience the truthfulness of Emerson's remark: "It is a fault of our rhetoric that we cannot strongly state one fact without seeming to belie some other."

It is true that Pastor Russell, as with Dr. Talmage, is growing daily in popular acclaim, because of the truth he teaches from the Bible being more palatable than the old hash dished out from the pulpits; but this does not account for the sudden universal appearance of his sermons in the public press. Talmage grew in favor and increased in number of papers accepting his sermons until the 'Brooklyn Eagle" descended upon him as its prey and wrecked him; but the reverse applies to Russell. This same old vulture that scratched him with its claws, pecked at him with its bill, sucked the life blood of Talmage like a vampire, is now the tool of the unscrupulous clearics governed by jealousy, ignorance and hatred, and with dim eye is trying to folow its new prey and make a carcass of Russell who is still forging ahead undaunted. Half blinded, the woozy blood-shot eyes of this bird of prey, are strained to locate its intended victim as it soars nearer and nearer with its frantic screams. When Russell turned on this vulturious bird and trimmed its claws by his libel suit, the jury that rendered its verdict in favor of this disreptable Eagle, reminds us of the statement of our former president, Abraham Lincoln, "Even God Himself does not know what an American jury will do." Russell's estimate of the average man is too high, for he was surprised when he lost this case, as well as his defense of his wife's charges in the divorce trial, and he has learned that the jury system is an ideal one only when the members of the jury are sufficiently intelligent to see through the sophistries of our modern lawyers. In passing, we present a definition of a jury by Hubbard, which may be regarded as correct, viewed from a certain angle: he scores the jury, but the real cause of the density of the jury lies with unscrupulous lawyers who play on them: "The stupidity of one brain multiplied by twelve. A collection of sedentary owls. The humble apology of Civilization to Savagery." (E. g., 'Whatever exists can be touched, but a jury is an exception to this universal law—it must be reached.')

To account for the success of Russell's publicity, merely from what may be seen on the surface, would be to involve absurdities that would be unaccountable. The only sensible solution to this, and other remarkable achievements of his propaganda, is that offered by himself—that the whole movement is under Divine Providence; that he is only an instrument in the hands of God. This view makes

HUGHES' BIG HIT IN THE MILLS AND BIG SHOPS

Sheet and Tin Mill Men Know the Candidate's Father, and His Cousins Work in the Coal Mines of Pennsylvania.

Republican State Chairman William E. Crow, after looking upon the smiling countenance of Charles Evans Hughes, and observing the tremendous reception accorded the next President of the United States, returned home to Uniontown, leaving behind the prediction that the Presidential contest so far as Pennsylvania is concerned, is only a question of majority, and the majority in this state, Chairman Crow declares, will be nothing less than 300,000 for the Republican Standard Bearers, Hughes aand Fairbanks.

Following the monster mass meeting, at which Candidate Hughes, while here, discussed the issues of the campaign and set forth the Republican Party's policies, a conference was held with the Republican party leaders from all over the state, and Chairman Crow and Senator Boies Penrose furnished each county leader, as well as the candidates, with an outline of the plans of the campaign, the munitions to be used in carrying the fight not only into the camp of the enemy, but to the home of the citizen voter who must not only be induced to register, but who must be urged to exercise his right of suffrage.

Every leader is enthusiastic with the reception accorded Candidate Hughes in the Pittsburgh district and from the moment that smiling face, smothered with whiskers, was shoved through the car door into the grime and swart of the world's greatest industrial center, the ovation was one grand, continual overwhelming success. On through the Monongahela Valley, just ahead of the candidate and the reception committee, it swept and its sincerity, spontaneousness as well as its boisterousness, seemed to grip every man in mill, factory, shop and those from the mines, with a conviction and a true realization that here was a man with a feeling as well as a message; that he not only wanted to clasp the hand of the laborer and the artisan, but he wanted to feel as they felt, see as they saw, look upon the conditions of the American workman as they looked upon them, and to get from their lips an expression.

County Chairman William H. Coleman pulled off a master piece in planning the short itinerary, but it was the most profitable undoubtedly in the candidate's tour of the Nation.

It may not be amiss to say that Mr. Hughes is the son of a Baptist minister, whose early ministerial life began in Tredegar, a picturesque, thrifty, industrial community in Wales, and there the father of the candidate had for his parishioners many skilled workmen and master minds, who later became the basis of America's great industrial supremacy.

Go into the mills of Pittsburgh, Yonugstown, the Illinois Steel Company, or those of Sharon, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Wheeling and Birmingham, Alabama, and there you will hear the story of the candidate's father, "who preached in the Baptist church on the left hand side of the road to the town square." Our own Jim Davis sheet mill roller, and now one of America's greatest organizers; he who has built up the great Moose organization, and Jim will tell you the story of Candiadte Hughes and more about his father. Talk with John Williams, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, too, and John will relate some interesting details. When the candidate was Governor of New York it is said he once stopped at Youngstown, Ohio, and there took special pride in meeting face to face many of those who well knew his father, the old Welsh minister of Tredegar. Mr. Hughes has not the cold blooded characteristics so commonly attributed to him, but those who know him intimately know him as a wise, conservative, affectionate, as well as a most humble and considerate companion and acquaintance.

The people well may regard him with personal interest for his intimacy with the mines as well as the mills and factories. And how close he is to the workingman is better described by a piece of personal information brought to the office of the Tribune by the wife of a Montana coal miner, whose home is rather isolated and twelve miles from the main railroad. This miner's wife recently came to Pittsburgh to visit her son who came east a few years ago, located in Pittsburgh and established himself in a very successful business. She had not been in the city long before she began to locate some relatives whom she had not seen in two decades. In the course of her conversation the political situation became a matter of discourse and thus she revealed the candidate: "Do you know who Hughes is?" she asked. There was a pause for a moment and the answer came in the negative with the query: "Who is he?" "He's a cousin of Benny Hughes, the miner in Scranton." You know Benny Hughes the fire boss and Benny Hughes, the Big Boss, they were cousins and Hughes, the candidate, is a cousin of these two. The Hughes, outside of the father, were nearly all miners."

Thus the sheet mill man, and the tin mill worker, with the puddlers and the rail mill man and the miner, may well place confidence in a candidate who is more intimate with those who toil in mill, factory, mine and shop than he cares to confess, and yet there may be method in the madness of this reluctancy, lest he may be understood to use his intimacy for personal profit to lift himself into preference rather than stand upon the issues of the party.

Thus those in the days gone by "who came to scoff and remained to pray," are hading to the present generation the reminiscence of the Welsh Baptist preacher and the present generation

Close of a Great Congress of Labor.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The 48th annual Trades Union Congress, which came to an end on September 9, has revealed to those who have watched it closely a new spirit of labor. The old spirit of independence and the old readiness to cross swords with capital in defence of the rights of the workers or for the advancement of their aspirations remain. But behind all the speeches and resolutions one could detect a desire to prevent a renewal of the strikes and lockouts of the old industrial regime and to establish co-operation, or at least a peaceful understanding, between those who employ and those who are employed. This, the new spirit of repugnance towards industrial strife and readiness to negotiate a treaty of peace with capital, was expressed by Harry Gosling on the opening day of the congress, and permeated the greater part of its deliberations. Gosling's offer of the olive branch, and the equally earnest plea for peace made by the Lord Mayor of Birmingham as an employer, created a deep impression on all who heard them.

That these tentative overtures will not be the end of the matter is assured by a specific decision of the Congress which has escaped the attention it deserves owing to the multiplicity of the resolutions discussed at each session. On Wednesday the Congress unanimously adopted a resolution proposed by the London Society of Compositors which instructed the Parliamentary Committee to approach the Employers' Parliamentary Association and the Government to discuss terms for securing industrial peace for three years after the war. Certain proposals, among them 48-hour working week and $4.50 minimum wage were set out in the resolution for acceptance as part of the terms of peace, but it was explained by the sponsor of the resolution that these were really put forward to serve as a basis of negotiation and not as irreducible demands. The following preface to the resolution is worthy of note:—

In view of the importance of maintaining the trade and commerce of the country in the period immediately following the declaration of peace, when industrial adjustments of all kinds will require to be made. This Congress is of the opinion that every effort should be put forth to preserve industrial peace, and thereby assist to secure the material prosperity of the nation after the war.

This declaration and the instruction which followed it indicate, not a solution, but the road to a solution of some of the immense problems with which labor, capital and indeed, the whole nation will be face to face after the war. What will be the exact nature of those problems the Congress did not know. At one moment it heard Gosling predict that millions of soldiers and munition workers would be looking for employment; at another moment it heard Thorne predict that the reconstruction of the countries destroyed by the war would give employment to them all. The Congress fell back upon its old faiths and upon its admitted right to the complete restoration of trade union rules and customs. That, at least, is a legitimate reading of the resolutions of the Congress not only on the future of industry but on compulsory military service. They are not final but stop-gas decisions, and the men who at this Congress shed a long-cherished principle by demanding the restriction or prevention of imports of the products of under-paid foreign labor after the war may be willing to discard other policies when they are convinced that the sacrifice is in their own interests.

Sir George Askwith, chairman of the committee on production, heard in the Central Station Hotel, Glasgow, the application by a dozen trade unions for an advance of wages to the extent generally of 4 cents per hour to their members employed in the Clyde district.

The men interested are the blacksmiths, the boilermakers, the patternmakers, the brass founders, the brass-finishers, the scientific instrument makers, the coppersmiths, and the tinsmiths, with, in addition, the members of four unskilled societies—the Workers' Union, the Gasworkers, the National Amalgamated and the Steel Smelters. The societies had a joint application before the employers, but they have individual applications before the Committee on Production, on whose behalf Sir George Askwith will hear their claims.

CHAIRMAN GUFFEY CLAIMS PENNSYLVANIA

Democrats Say They Can Carry the State for Wilson--Big Event at Shadow Lawn.

The Democratic County Committee was not to be outdone by the Republicans, and the labor rally in Carnegie Hall, Northside, Pittsburgh, last night, was one of the most important ever held in this section and the enthusiasm was the equal of any meeting held by the Republicans. The principle speaker, William B. Wilson, is Secretary of Labor in the Cabinet of Woodrow Wilson, and Secretary Wilson was Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers during the time John Mitchell was president.

No man is better known to the miners of the Pittsburgh district than Secretary Wilson, and his influence extends throughout the entire state. During the time he was acting as Secretary of the United Mine Workers he was elected to Congress and after serving in Congress he was fortunate enough to receive the appointment of Secretary of Labor, an office in which he has been of valuable assistance to labor in general and to the miners in particular. The position that President Wilson has taken in labor matters has been largely due to the influence of Secretary Wilson and the workingmen throughout the central Pennsylvania coal fields as well as in the anthracite regions will throw their support to Wilson.

No man in the country is better prepared to discuss the labor question than Secretary Wilson, and Friday night he flayed the Republicans on every issue, holding up to American labor the wonderful progress made and the phenomenal advancement achieved during the administration of President Wilson.

At the conclusion of his address Secretary Wilson began a campaign tour that will take him to the Pacific Coast and back before election. On Monday night he will appear in Wheeling, one of the best organized towns in the country, and the Democrats have already put West Virginia in their column.

The Democrats are confident of re-electing President Wilson. They assert that reports from all states of the Union indicate that President Wilson will receive a good majority of the electoral vote. Also they believe they have a chance to carry Pennsylvania. They have canvassed the State and say that there is a strong sentiment for the president in every county. This has been verified by reports received by Republicans. The latter have begun an aggressive campaign throughout the State with a view of breaking down the Wilson sentiment.

Acting Democratic State Chairman Joseph F. Guffey of this city, has made a tour of the State and feels confident that Wilson will receive enough votes to place this State in the Democratic column. Also Mr. Guffey is confident that the Democratic Congressional representation from this State will be increased this fall.

In discussing the situation, Chairman Guffey said: "The sentiment for President Wilson in Pennsylvania is growing stronger every day and we feel confident that the State will return a majority for him. I believe the workingmen of Pennsylvania fully appreciate what the President has done for them in the way of legislation and that they will give him their support.

"The workingmen know what President Wilson has done for them. They know not what Mr. Hughes will do. But if they search Mr. Hughes' record they will find that he has always been against labor. Mr. Hughes has denounced the eight-hour law. He says it is unconstitutional and also that it is not an eight-hour law but a measure to increase the wages of the workingmen. Has not the Republican party for years declared that they are in favor of increasing the wages of the workingmen? If they are why do they oppose this measure?

"If Mr. Hughes is elected, in view of his statements, what can the workingmen expect? He has declared his opposition to every measure passed by the Wilson administration in favor of labor. Then, if he is elected, he must accept it as an indorsement of his declarations against labor. In the natural course of events, he will then proceed to undo everything President Wilson has done for labor. Are the workingmen of this country ready to have this done? Do they believe President Wilson has not been their friend? This is the question which confronts the workingmen today. If they vote for Wilson they vote to continue an administration that has demonstrated its friendship for them. If they vote for Mr. Hughes, they vote for a man who has declared his opposition to everything Wilson has done. Are the workingmen ready to say that President Wilson has been wrong and that Nominee Hughes is right?

"If the workingmen fail to support President Wilson what can they expect in the future? Their votes for Mr. Hughes will be a repudiation of everything Wilson has done for them. Therefore if they vote against Wilson they will say to the country that they do not wish legislation in their behalf. Mr. Hughes would be entitled to accept this as the verdict and act accordingly. The workingmen have gained a good advantage under the administration of Woodrow Wilson. Are they going to repudate a man who has been their real friend? I do not believe they will."

The Democratic meetings held each day at noon in their headquarters, 427 Fifth avenue, have been attended by large and enthusiastic crowds. Some of the most prominent Democrats of Allegheny and other counties have addressed these meetings. They

For what sins does the scape goat suffer?

Answer—In Leviticus 16, we have an account of the atonement day sacrifices, first the sacrifice of the bullock which was for the sins of the High Priest and his house, the Levites, then the sacrifice of the Lord's goat which was for the sins of all the people.

After that we read that Aaron took the Scape Goat and laid his hands upon its head and confessed upon it all iniquities of the children of Israel, and sent it away. We understand the Lord's goat and the scape goat, both tethered at the door of the Tabernacle, represented two classes, who, during the Gospel Age make full consecration, following the example of Christ, who is represented by the bullock.

Both classes were begotten of the spirit, and both received the spotless robe of Christ's righteousness to cover the imperfections of their flesh. The Lord's goat-class not only kept their robes clean and white, "unspotted from the world," but in addition they decorated them with "fine needlework" by developing the fruits and graces of the spirit, and were counted worthy to sit with the Lord in his throne, and to wear crowns upon their heads.

The other class failed to keep their robes unspotted, but by a compromising course they got them soiled, and we read that they came up through great tribulation and washed their robes, and made them clean in the blood of the Lamb. These stand before the throne with palms in their hands. Rev. 7, 4-17. The little flock, we believe to be represented by the Lord's goat, and the great multitude, by the scape goat.

The seeming inconsistency of first making atonement in the Most Holy by the sacrifice of the bullock, and the Lord's goat, for the High Priest and his house, and for all the people, and then laying the iniquities of all the people upon the head of the scape goat is easily explained. The sacrifice of the bullock and the Lord's goat, cancelled only original sin—the sin of the world. The fact that mankind were sinners, regardless of their own wishes "born in sin, and shapen in iniquity," and were helpless to extricate themselves. It was for this general sin, and this only, that the Christ, head and body, pays the penalty.

But there are other sins "iniquities of the people," in which some share more than others, and some not at all. They are wilfull wrong doings, violations of justice and love, beyond the degree of inherited weaknesses. These are the sins that will be confessed on the head of the scape goat class, and for which they will suffer.

At our Lord's first advent, those of the Jewish nation, who had enjoyed such great privileges, and who were still found unworthy of the high calling, were required to suffer for all the righteous blood that had been shed from Abel down to that time. Luke 11. 50-51. So that when the Gospel Age was ushered in, there was nothing standing against justice.

Similarly respecting this age, the Scriptures tell us there will be righteous blood to be atoned for. For instance, the "Souls under the altar are represented as crying out," "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost Thou not avenge our blood on all them that dwell on the earth?" The answer implies that their blood, the wrong and injustice done them and others, will all be atoned for in the end of this age. Rev. 6. 9-11. Why then does the Great Company class have to suffer for those sins? Because it is a wise provision made by our loving Lord, to save them from the Second Death, and at the same time to make atonement for the shedding of righteous blood.

God never inflicts punishment except for corrective measures, and they are said to have been turned over to Satan, for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

This could not represent a class or a work done during the Millennial Age, for the reason that all the work of atonement was done before the blessings of the people began, and those of the restitution class do not wear robes to get soiled. And if those who go into the Second Death are the scape goat class, and bear the iniqities of the people, it would be making them die for the sins of others, and the Scriptures tell us that in that day a man (who dies) dies for his own sin, and not because some one else had eaten a sour grape of sin.

That both the goats represented a spirit begotten class is proven by the fact that they were both presented at the door of the Tabernacle—not the court—for only those in the court condition—brethren—can offer an acceptable sacrifice. Romans 12.-1. The Court is sometimes miscalled the Tabernacle of the Congregation, as it was outside the Court that the children of Israel waited on the day of Atonement clothed in sackcloth, waiting for the High Priests' blessing, which made atonement for their sins for a year. Just as now "the whole creation groaneth in pairs, waiting for the manifestation of the Sons of God."

Waiting for the blessing of the great antypical High Priest, head and body.

THE BLESSING OF LAUGHTER.

"Among the countless blessings that mankind is privileged to enjoy, not the least is the blessing of laughter," writes William Thomas McElroy, in the American Messenger. We do not mean the loud, boisterous laughter of dissipation and evil, nor the careless, thoughtless laughter of vanity, but the whole-souled, hearty laughter of thorough enjoyment and a heart thrilled with love for God and man.

A happy story is told, in this connection, of two men who were among the best known and most influential men and ministers of their age—Theodore L. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Charles H. Spurgeon, of London, Eng. It is related that on one occasion, after a period of unusually hard work, they went out into the country together for a holiday. As they roamed the highways and meadows with all the enjoyment that the true lover of nature can find under such conditions, Dr. Cuyler told one of his experiences, at which the famous London preacher laughed heartily. A moment later he turned to Dr. Cuyler. "Theodore," he said, "let us kneel down and thank God for laughter," "And there," says the writer who relates the incident, "on the green carpet of the grass, under the trees, two of the world's greatest men knelt and thanked the dear Lord for the bright and joyous gift of laughter."

It is not a small gift, this gift of laughter. It is a true proverb that "he who laughs oftenest lives longest." Where true, heartfelt laughter is, there can be no evil, no worry and no wicked thoughts. For in themselves such things destroy the very qualities that tend to light-heartedness. It is impossible to laugh happily with a troubled conscience. And the laughter of the evil-minded is as harsh and as unpleasant as are their scowls and imprecations.

Laughter helps in many ways to make the old world better. It makes us more loving, more charitable towards others, more sincere in our efforts to help those who are in need, more useful to those who come in contact with us, more ambitious to prove ourselves of value to the world; more helpful, kind, more healthy and consequently more efficient, and more thoughtful of the Giver of all good and loving gifts.

DON'T WORRY.

Why not? There are a great many "why nots." For one thing, it doesn't pay, and we all want to make paying investments of the capital God has given us. Can you recall an instance where worry and fret served a good purpose? We can't. It certainly didn't when we were ill and longing to be up and doing. Did your doctor prescribe a dose of worry to be taken once in two hours, with an application of fret every night and morning?

Worry didn't help us when we got lost in the jungle of our mistakes, did it? We didn't get out of the tangle till we came to ourselves and dropped worriment.

Just watch that man lose the train he was so anxious to catch. How you envy him the smile with which he hides his disappointment. Isn't that smile a paying investment? He loses his train, but he doesn't lose himself; and is not "himself" a great deal better than a train of cars?

Somebody missed an opportunity once upon a time. What did he do? Why, he fumed and fretted and worried over it long enough to miss a dozen others. What would we have done? If we had been as wise as some great men who have succeeded in this world, we should have drawn one breath of regret and said, "Sorry to have missed it; but here goes for the next one that comes along, and we'll meet it on the way this time."

That's the sort of spirit to attract opportunities; while worry and fret often scare them away.

They say we shall live longer if we don't worry. One can hardly speak from experience on that point, but it's worth trying for, don't you think? One thing sure, we shall live more if not longer! There is more real living for us in one sunny, wholesome, cheery day, than in a month of cloudy, worriment and stormy fretfulness.

A CORRECTION.

In our "Questions and Answers" column last week in the first question, "Does the bad go to eternal torment and the good to future bliss," in the last paragraph a typographical error occurred. The last paragraph should read as follows:

Then all mankind will be given the choice of being obedient to the rules of the Kingdom and "learning righteousness," and going up on the "Highway of holiness" to eternal life, back to the perfection that was lost in Eden, or of being disobedient and being cut off in the "Second Death" "everlasting punishment," eternal death NOT eternal torment. "It shall come to pass in that day, that any soul that will not hear that Prophet—the Christ—shall be cut off from among the people." Acts 3:23.

IS THIS LIFE ALL?

Is this life all
With its failures, it's fears
It's sorrows, it's tears,
It's longings, it's dreamings,
It's doings, all vain?
Old age is upon us
Our soul cries in pain
Is this life all?

Is this life all?
With its favors, its calm
Self-mastery the psalm
Willed in spirit, in word,
Willed in action, all gain?
New life is within us,
With Christ we shall reign,
Is this life all?

THE ROSE.

Within my hand I gently hold the Garden's Queen a rose,—
The softly-sighing summer wind about it faintly blows,
And wafts its wondrous fragrance out upon the evening air.
And as I gaze upon the rose, so perfect and so fair,
In memory's halls there wakes, the while, a legend, quaint and old,
How once upon a time, one day, a sage picked up, we're told,
A lump of common clay, so redolent with perfume rare,
He marveled, and the question wondering asked, "Whence dost thou bear
Such fragrance, O, thou lump of clay?"
In tones of deep repose
There came the sweet reply, "I have been dwelling with the rose."

The while the legend stirs my soul, within my hand still lie
The petals of the rose, and from my heart of hearts I cry,
"Thou lovely Rose of Sharon, may I ever dwell with Thee,
So closely that the fragrance of Thy love shall cling to me!
Oh, fill me with the spirit of Thy sweet humility.
Then all shall see and know, dear
Lord, that I have learned of Thee;
And let mine earthly pilgrimage, until its blessed close,
Each day and hour bear witness, I've been dwelling with the Rose!"

Appreciations

Glasgow, Scotland, Sept. 16.

I notice from the cover that your paper is up on the 30th of this month, and I regret I cannot renew it, which please note. I still wish your paper with Pastor Russell's sermons every success.

Yours faithfully,
ALFRED JOHNSTON.

Detroit, Mich, Sept. 29.

Since the great war friends have not been as free to send orders for literature abroad as formerly. Bro. Morton Edgar has asked me to write the Labor Tribune to tell their readers that so far mail matter has always passed safely between England (or Scotland) and America, in spite of the great war? So many of the American friends think their orders, or the booklets, will go astray or be sunk at sea. There is no restriction in the mail matter between Scotland and America. He has special permission from the censors to despatch printed matter so the friends need not fear that the booklets will not reach them.

Yours very truly,
R. F. ROCKHOFF.

North Warren, Pa., Sept. 29.

I see by the label on my Tribune that my subscription expired March 25 and I thank you for not dropping my name, and sending me the paper long past due. I renew through the Watch Tower office and I hope you will continue to publish the good tidings of great joy.

Yours truly,
JOHN ANDEREGG.

HIGH FOOD PRICES.

Since the war, food prices are much higher,
Even matches to light our fire,
We can't buy meat for the frying pan,
And, alas! We have no fruit to can.
For sugar has gone away, way up,
We don't have much for our coffee cup.

We also miss our favorite dish,
For eggs are high, as well as fish.
And we have very little bread, that's so;
And soon to the poor house we may go;
'Tis either that or the "happy land,"
For we have no cash to meet the demand.

And oh! I say it with a sigh!
Taxes too, are extremely high.
Some have the laws of "God" forsaken
And by the sheriff, our homes may be taken.
And oh, dear children, do not cry,
When he comes to sell them by and by.

With prices of everything soaring
higher,
With starvation the poor will soon expire;
And none be left but the rich and proud,
But please don't tell it to the crowd;
If we could go to "Belgium," there,
Uncle Sam would for us care.

Oh! Write it down in your copy book,
That I never wished to be a cook.
And you might write it on your slate,
Sometimes repentance comes too late.
And now I will finish my sorrowful tale,
And offer my cooking utensils for sale.

"SHE HATH DONE WHAT SHE COULD."

The Feast was spread at Simon's house, and as they sat at meat,
A woman came and silent stood within the open door—
Close pressed against her throbbing heart an alabaster box
Of purest spikenard, costly, rare, she held, with modest fear,
She dreaded to attract the curious gaze of those within,
And yet her well-beloved Friend was there, her Master, Lord.
With wondrous intuition she divined that this might be
Her last, her only opportunity to show her love;
She thought of all that He had done for her, the holy hours
She spent enraptured at His feet, unmindful of all else,
If only she might hear those words of Truth, those words of Life.
She thought of that dark hour when
Lazarus lay within the tomb
And how He turned her night to day, her weeping into joy.
Her fair face flushed, with deepening gratitude her pure eyes shone;
With swift, light step she crossed the crowded room. She bravely met (lions Those questioning eyes) for Love will find its way through paths where Fear to tread); with trembling hands she broke the seal and poured
The precious contents of the box upon her Savior's feet,
And all the house was filled with fragrance wonderful and sweet.
She could not speak, her heart's devotion was too deep, her tears Fell softly, while she took her chiefest ornament, her long
And silken hair and wiped His sacred feet—when suddenly
A rude voice broke the golden silence with, "What waste! this might Have sold for much, to feed the poor!"
She lower bent her head—
To her it seemed so mean a gift for love so great to make!
Again a voice re-echoed through the room, her blessed Lord's,
(He half arose and gently laid His hand upon her hair)—
And how it thrilled her fainting heart to hear Him sweetly say,
"Rebuke her not, for she hath wrought a good work, what she could;
Aforehand, to anoint Me for my burying, she hath come,
And this her deed of love throughout the ages shall be told!"

How oft since first I read the story of this saint of old,
My own poor heart hath burned with fervent, longing, deep desire,
That I might thus have ministered unto my Lord and King—
"The chiefest of ten thousand, altogether lovely One."
And now, to learn—oh! precious thought, 'tis not too late, I still May pour Love's priceless ointment on "the members" of His Feet!
Dear Lord, I pray, oh! help me break with sacrificial hand
The seal of Self, and pour the pent-up odors of my heart
Upon Thy "Feet!" Oh! let me spend my days and nights in toil,
That I, perchance, may save from needless wandering, and help
To keep them in the narrow way that leads to light and life.
Oh! let me lay within their trembling hands a rose of love,
A lily's pure and holy inspiration on their breast!
Dear Master, let me kneel with them in dark Gethsemane;
Oh! held me boldly stand and meekly bear the scoffs and jeers
Of cruel, mocking tongues! Oh! may
I count no cost, e'en life Itself, too great to serve, to bless, to comfort Thy dear "Feet,"
And when the last drop of my heart's devotion hath been shed,
Oh, may I hear Thy sweet voice say,
"She hath done what she could."

WHY WE HATE REFORMERS.

Lots of us wonder why we hate reformers. It is because they are unesthetic. So said a noted Western educator, as reported recently by the daily press.

Allowance must be made for the words being spoken to an art society. Some reformers hinder the cause they are advocating by crudities and extravagances and failure to obtain a symmetrical outlook on life. The reformer is apt to be unsypathetic with what he considers the belated mind.

After granting these things the words of the professor are seriously open to question. The history of the most prominent reform movements of our country disproves the statement. The protest against human slavery had no more cordially hated advocate than Wendell Philips. Yet he was easily among the most cultured speakers and writers of his day. Intense bitterness has marked the opposition to Anthony Comstock because of his crusade against obscene literature. But he was a kindly, genial, gracious gentleman. There was nothing boorish about him. Who among our prohibition advocates has borne more political hatred than ex-Gov. Frank Hanly? Yet he is the polished orator. The movement for social justice includes many highly cultivated minds, accompanied by the most pleasing personal address. Samuel Gompers is an example. Yet he and others associated with him have been the objects of fierce attack and vilest misrepresentation. The evidence does not prove the reformer unesthetic.

Why then do we hate him? The reasons are not esthetic, but ethical. He disturbs our smugness. He jars our respectable conservation. He proces upon us a sense of our part of the responsibility which society owes for the existence of wrong. He awakens us from moral slumber.

So we proveed to hate him. We may finally accept his message, but it is seldom that we accept the man who brought it.

[There was a sword for John the Baptist, a cross for Christ, a fire for Savonarola, a prison for W. T. Stead, and the cruel tongue of slander and misrepresentation for C. T. Russell.]

Vainly we hate the reformer because we love ease, because we love darkness rather than light. Anyhow, we know it in our heart of hearts, whether you tell us or not.

Too long have we erected monuments to the ancient prophets and slain their sons.

ST. PAUL BEFORE FELIX

Acts 24:10-21.—Oct. 8.

St. Paul at Caesarea, the Roman Capital of Judea—His Trial Before the Roman Governor — The Charges Brought Against the Apostle — His Defense—The Doctrine of the Resurrection the Theme of His Preaching. The Roman Governor Interested In the Apostle's Teachings—St. Paul a Prisoner For Two Years.

"Herein I also exercise myself to have a conscience void of offense toward God and man always."—Verse 16.

FELIX, the Roman governor of Judea, received St. Paul as a prisoner. The Apostle's enemies, the high priest and other Jewish rulers, hastened down from Jerusalem to Caesarea, thirsting for his blood. They brought with them a Roman lawyer, named Tertullus, whose knowledge of Roman usage and whose skilful pleading would, they hoped, enable them to prove that St. Paul was a dangerous character—a sort of anarchist. Felix was the judge. There were no jurors. Tertullus made his charges and confirmed them by witnesses from Jerusalem.

Shrewdly the Roman lawyer complimented Felix along the lines of his efficiency in preserving the peace, in putting down every form of insurrection and in maintaining order. This completely paved the way for the request that the governor should rid the land of an obnoxious trouble-maker—the Apostle. Witnesses were produced who testified respecting the tumult in the Temple and that in the Sanhedrin. The Apostle was charged with being a ringleader of a sect called Nazarenes; and the claim was made that he had caused trouble the whole world over. Tertullus charged that the prisoner was guilty of sacrilege—that he had defiled the Temple; and the inference was deducible that the Apostle had caused rioting within the holy sanctuary. Witnesses were produced to prove that these charges were true.

St. Paul Before Felix.

Felix motioned to the Apostle that he was at liberty to answer the charges. Then St. Paul opened his defense. He had come to Jerusalem, not to raise an insurrection, but to worship God after the Jewish custom; and no witness had testified that he was found in the Temple disputing or gathering a crowd. The charge was untrue. He did not do these things in the synagogues or anywhere else; and his enemies could not prove the things whereof they accused him. St. Paul's answer was logical and complete. Still the governor could not understand why there should be a commotion. Hence it was necessary for the Apostle to explain that the Jews had an antipathy against him merely because of his different religious belief, not because of any wrongdoing on his part.

The Doctrine of the Resurrection.

St. Paul avowed that he had not changed his Jewish belief—that he still held to the teachings of the Law and the Prophets, to the fundamental Jewish doctrine of a resurrection of the dead; that he still had faith in the Promise that through the resurrection God's blessing should ultimately come to Israel, and through Israel to all mankind. (Genesis 12:3.) Furthermore, he disciplined himself to keep his conscience pure, free from violation of Divine and human laws.

The Apostle proceeded to explain that he had brought alms to his nation, the offerings of Gentiles who had heard from him the Message of God's grace. Certain Jews from Asia Minor had found him purified in the Temple, but without cry or tumult. These Jews should have been brought forward as witnesses; or else those making charges against him should have specified that wrong-doing they had found in him. Only one charge could they make—that he had cried out, "Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called into question!" Surely the governor could not think that in this there was anything akin to rioting.

St. Paul's testimony shows that he laid special stress upon the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust. Alas, that in our day this doctrine has been measurably lost sight of! Few Christians ever think of the resurrection. Few have ever heard a sermon upon this subject. This is because a great error has come in amongst Christian people respecting the condition of the dead. Our Catholic friends tell us that nearly all mankind go to Purgatory, where for centuries they will undergo terrible sufferings, to purge them from sin and prepare them for Heaven. Many Protestant friends tell us that they have not even this hope; that the great mass of mankind go to a Hell of eternal torture, from which there will be no escape.

St. Paul in Prison.

We shall not quarrel with either party. Both views are too horrible to be reasonable, just or loving. We prefer to go back to the words of Jesus and the Apostles, and to note that according to their teachings the dead are really dead, and that their only hope is, as the Apostle declares, a resurrection hope—a resurrection of the soul.—1 Corinthians 15:38.

Blessed are the eyes which see the reformers who are in their midst.—(Northwestern Christian Advocate).

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

Monthly, which will reflect somewhat the magnitude of the accomplishments of these people whose efforts have placed Russell first in American literature: "In American literature Mr. Russell stands first. In the literature of the world, the order would probably be as follows: (1) Bible, (2) The Chinese Almanac, (3) "Studies in the Scriptures," (4) "Don Quizote," (5) "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and (6) Hubbard's "Message to Garcia."

The generals of "Orthodoxy," noting the stupendous volume of work being accomplished, and judging from their experience in endeavoring to enlist the indispensable services of the rank and file, have come to the conclusion that the I. B. S. A. must have an enormous force in the field that handles the literature after the Association produces it. This has led to the battle cry of a prominent Bishop: "To arms! the woods is full of them!" But this must be regarded as a prophecy, not a fact when uttered. Since then the famous Photo-Drama of Creation has invaded the territory claimed by the clergy by "Divine Right", it has divided the generals of "Orthodoxy" as well as the rank and file for and against its presentations.

Europe is being swept by a whirlwind of patriotism and militarism which will render its monarchs powerless, and lead to earthquakes of revolution and volcanic fires of anarchy, even the secular editors are associating this crisis in Europe with Theodore Roosevelt's slogan of the last presidential campaign, the "Battle of Armageddon," and many of the clergy, parrot like, taking their cue from public opinion, are now attempting to dish out "Russellism" with the usual methods of a man with a petrified heart. They announce that Armageddon is in process of fulfillment, just as if they were the first to note the prophecies; and in the next breath denounce the man who had stolen a march on them, depriving them of this honor.

The drones of the old bee-hive that did their work of stinging others, are now busy reviving the Pre-Millennialism of Moody, Seiss, Ottman, Keith, Urquhart, and others and the same thoughts are heralded extensively by "Billy" Sunday in his sermon on the Second Coming of Christ. They catalogue with these works the tracts of Cook, Ross, Maldeman, Ellis and Morehead, which contains the poison that inoculates the minds of the readers against Russell's Studies in the Scriptures, which contains their Pre-Millennialism in a rational form. "We are not ignorant of his devices."

But the methods of placing their dope before the public are faulty, slow and conventional. The same method was tried by Russell in his early days; he had his book placed on the shelf of the Fleming H. Revell Publishing concern in Chicago, along with the same Pre-Millennialism now being revived again; they did not remain long after some of the petty writers of the other books found it out. The book shelves of religious publishers are like the cemeteries, a place for the dead, when only the tomb-stone inscriptions on the outside of the book is read. Russell tried other methods and failed until the remarkable Colporteur Department was developed, or forced upon him by Providence which proved so effectual. Since then the Photo-Drama of Creation has outclassed the Colporteur Department for a speedy, if not as effectual, method of reaching the people, reminding them of the message contained in the series of Millennial Dawn—the Messianic Kingdom about to be established on earth, which will bring order and peace and good will to all men.

WEEKLY ADDRESS
of
PASTOR RUSSELL
of the
LONDON TABERNACLE
and of
NEW YORK CITY
— TEMPLE —

THE CALL OF THE NEW NATION.

THIS NATION TO BE A NEW CREATION OF SPIRIT BEINGS LIKE THEIR LORD.

God's Great Plan Purposed From the Beginning—Its Gradual But Sure Outworking—Natural Seed of Abraham First Dealt With—Call of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham—Their Preparation, Covering 1900 Years—How This Class was Predestinated—Their Completion and Final Deliverance Now About Due—Their Future Work for the Race of Adam.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 1.—Pastor Russell occupied his pulpit in the New York City Temple, West 63rd street, near Broadway, this evening. His discourse was based upon Revelation 2:26, 27—"He that overcometh and keepeth My works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers, even as I received of My Father." He said:

The Bible tells us that from before the foundation of the world our Heavenly Father purposed in Himself the great Plan of Salvation which He has since been carrying out. He will make no changes in that Plan; for He knew the end from the beginning. (Isaiah 46:9, 10; 55:8-11.) Such a wise, gracious Almighty God is ours! Although He had this plan from before the foundation of the world, the Scriptures show that He did not make it known, except very vaguely, until the time of Abraham. This, you remember, St. Paul points out to us, saying that God first made declaration of His Purpose, first preached the Gospel, to Abraham. (Galations 3:8; Genesis 12:3.) To faithful, loyal, obedient Abraham, God said, "It is My Purpose to bless all mankind, and that great blessing shall come through your posterity."

Then God seemed to ignore His own promise; for century after century passed without anything apparently being done. In the meantime, Abraham's natural seed through Isaac had gone into bondage in Egypt. Four hundred years after the Abrahamic Covenant had been made, the Israelites were still in bondage, with that Covenant still standing. Then God sent a message through Moses to this effect: "Are you ready to have fulfilled to you the Promise which I made to your ancestor Abraham?" You can imagine how the Israelites felt. They quickly indicated that they were ready. Then God purposed that Moses should lead them out of Egypt and onward into the land of Canaan, where they supposed that they would become so mighty that they could conquer the whole world and rule mankind in righteousness.

When God had brought Israel as far as Mount Sinai, He indicated to them that before they could, as Abraham's seed, bless the world, they must demonstrate their fitness. Then He gave them His Law in a great Covenant, and told them that if they would keep that Law Covenant, they would have both the right and the opportunity to become the blessers of the remainder of mankind. You remember that God gave Isreal the Ten Commandments at Mount Sinai, through Moses; and that Isreal said, "All these things will we do."—Exodus 19:1-9; 24:1-8.

NATURAL ISRAEL'S FAILURE

The Israelites appreciated God's great offer; they wished to be the blessers of all mankind. It must necessarily be a great people who could conquer and bless the whole world. They could see no other way to bless humanity except by first conquering the world. although they were only a little nation amongst others older and stronger than themselves.

But Israel could not keep the Law of God. No fallen man can do so; for it is the measure of a perfect man's ability. None but a perfect man could love the Lord his God with all his mind, heart, soul and strength; and his neighbor as himself. (Matthew 22:35-40; Luke 10:25-28.) The Israelites did not realize how imperfect they were. But as the years passed by, they gradually learned that they were not able to bless the world.

You remember that God gave them an annual Atonement Day. On that day He said, so to speak, "I will wipe off the slate again; and you may try on a clean slate for the coming year." Year after year they tried in this way. But those annual sacrifices of bulls and goats which were arranged for them could never take away sin. They merely represented in a typical manner that Israel was given another opportunity for life through keeping the Law. (Hebrews 10:1-4.) Finally the Israelites became very much discouraged; for they saw that they were accomplishing nothing along this line. They did not have everlasting life any more than had other people or than they themselves had before they entered into the Law Covenant. They were in no condition to bless the world.

GOD'S PROMISE OF A NEW COVENANT

Then God sent Israel word through His Prophet, saying, "The day is coming when I will make a New Covenant with the House of Israel and the House of Judah. . . I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin-no-more." (Jeremiah 31:31-34.) Under that New Covenant God will take away the stony heart out of their flesh and will give them a heart of flesh. (Ezekiel 11:14 21; 37:26-28.) This wonderful promise has not yet been fulfilled to the Jews; but soon it will be. In the light of St. Paul's testimony we see that God has an arrangement for an antitypical Moses and for the offerings of "better sacrifices" than those of bulls and goats, by reason of which He will effectually take away sins forever.—Hebrews 9:11-23.

The point we have in mind is not the difference between the Law Covenant and the New Covenant, between the Covenant made with the Jews in the remote past and that to be made with them in the near future, but the fact that God has made certain promises to that nation, and that while they had hoped to have those promises fulfilled in them, yet they have failed to get what they had hoped for. They had hoped to be a nation of overcomers, a victorious nation that God would bless and exalt in order that they might bring all the world into subjection to Jehovah and might impress upon all nations the Law given at Mount Sinai. They had hoped to be judges, rulers, to accomplish the work which God has purposed for the world. This they failed to do.

HOW GOD'S PURPOSE WILL BE OUTWORKED

We have a God who knows what He is about. His Plan was completed from the beginning; and it has met with no reverses at any time. When there was any seeming failure, it was something that God had foreknown and had foretold through the Prophets. He was not surprised that Israel failed to become the blessers of the world.

Then in due time God sent His Son into the world. This feature of the great Plan of the Ages was already purposed by the Father from before the foundation of the world—that His Son, the Logos, should come to earth, become a man, and die as a Ransom for the sins of all mankind. Our Lord came as the natural seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Judah, born under the Law Covenant, and obligated to keep all the terms of that Law. (Hebrews 2:16, 17; Galatians 4:4, 5. But unless He could keep the Law, even He could not become the promised Seed of Blessing, to bless all the families of the earth.

Our Lord Jesus Christ was found wholly obedient to the Divine Law, and fulfilled the requirements of the Law Covenant to the uttermost. Thus He gained all of the rights which that Covenant held out. The Law Covenant promises earthly life, earthly blessings and earthly dominion—that which Adam had lost. But the Man Jesus could not give these blessings to mankind. He might, indeed, have set up a kingdom, established upon wise principles. He might have been recognized as a great teacher and reformer. The whole world might have bowed down to Him, acknowledging their willingness to serve Him as their King. He might have taught them how to speak and act better, how to do all things more wisely. But all this would not have brought them the blessing of everlasting life which God designed that man should attain.

Jesus would have had everlasting life on the human plane for himself as a result of His keeping the Law Covenant. (Leviticus 18:5; Galatians 3:11, 12.) But He could not have given everlasting life to even one individual. He might have awakened some out of death by the use of His power, but He could not have kept them awake; for He had not this right, because the Divine sentence against Adam and his posterity was, "Dying, thou shalt die." (Genesis 2:17, margin.) Hence it was necessary that Jesus first attain relationship to God as the Spiritual Seed of Abraham before He could be the One to save and bless the world.

"A RANSOM FOR ALL"

To accomplish this great work, our Lord gave His life as the Ransom-price for Father Adam, in whom all the world were condemned to death. Inasmuch as all mankind died in Adam, the sacrifice of the one perfect Man, Christ Jesus, was sufficient to accomplish the redemption of the whole human race, which was in Adam's loins when he sinned. What beautiful harmony Bible students find in all of God's arrangements!—1 Timothy 2:5, 6; 1 Corinthians 15:21, 22; John 1:14.

The word Ransom, as used in the Bible when speaking of our Lord's sacrificial death for man, signifies a CORRESPONDING PRICE. It was the perfect man Adam who sinned; and it was the perfect Man Jesus who gave His life as Adam's Redemption-price. It was not enough, however, that Jesus lay down His human life. He must receive a spirit life; for if in His resurrection He took back the earthly life which He had laid down, He would need it for Himself, and consequently would have no life to appropriate for Adam and his race. Had our Lord merely died and been resurrected to human life again, His death would have been of no avail.

Here we see the beauty of God's Plan of Salvation. In permitting Jesus' life to be taken away unjustly, God had arranged to give our Lord a new life, on a new plane of being, as a New Creature. Then, having received life as a Divine being as a reward for His faithfulness, our Lord, as a New Creature, would still have to His credit the earthly nature, the human life which He had not forfeited by sinning. Thus He had a right to two lives. He needed the spirit life for Himself; and the human life He had to give for Adam and his race. He neded the two; for nothing less would accomplish the Divine Purpose.

GOD'S WONDERFUL NEW CREATION

God's Plan having carried out thus far, the next step was that our Lord Jesus should start a new nation; for when Jehovah spoke to Abraham, He had intimated that the Seed of Blessing would be a nation, not merely an individual. (Genesis 22:17—"the stars".) The natural seed of Abraham as a nation had high hopes. When the suggestion was made to the Jews of our Lord's day that they might not be fit to be God's special people, they were amazed; for they supposed that since they were Abraham's seed, and since God's Word cannot be broken, He must take them. (Matthew 3:9; John 8:39.) But God would not have them unless they were in the right heart condition. He would fulfill His Promise, but not through Israel as a nation.

We might not have understood the matter had it not been that God's providence revealed it through the Apostles. St. Peter, writing to the Church, says, "Ye are a Royal Priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people [a people for a purpose], that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into His marvelous light." (1 Peter 2:9.) This is God's arrangement, then. For nearly 1900 years He has been selecting the members of this nation individually—not taking a whole nation, as He did with the Jews. It is to be a new creation as well as a new nation—"created in Christ Jesus unto good works."—Ephesians 2:10; 2 Corinthians 5:17.

The one Church of Christ is to be the New Creation, according to the teachings of Scripture. We do not know who the members are; but St. Paul declares, "the Lord knoweth them that are His." (2 Timothy 2:19.) It was this class to which God referred away back in Abraham's day, when He declared that the Seed of Abraham should bless all the families of the earth. Whoever is in Christ is of that seed.—Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

For many centuries God gave the nation of Israel an opportunity to try to accomplish the desired end through their Law Covenant. But they failed. Therefore there would be no use in attempting to bless the world under that Covenant. Only one kept the Law Covenant and He therefore has all the rights accruing from the keeping of it. That One is now choosing a select nation; to be His joint-heir in all of His possessions and honors—as His Bride. It is God's proposition. No matter how poor a maiden may be, if a rich king accepts her as his wife, she becomes his joint-heir. This is exactly the picture which God gives us of Jesus and the Church.—Revelation 21:9, 10; Ephesians 5:25-32.

Those Jews who were living in Jesus' day could become united to Him as members of The Christ—heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ Jesus. The Gentiles, who were never in covenant relationship with God, and who therefore had no rights as Jews, have been invited to become fellow-heirs with the faithful Jews, to share with them all that they will receive through Christ. (Ephesians 3:1-7.) Thank God that the door was opened to the Gentiles also! So for nearly 1900 years our Lord has been selecting this Bride class to inherit with Himself the Promise made to Abraham.—Isaiah 55:1-3.

CHURCH OF CHRIST UNDER GOD'S LAW.

God is still of the same mind as to the beginning. No one will be fit to bless others unless he himself is in harmony with Jehovah through His Law. But the Church is not under the Law Covenant. According to the flesh we could not keep the Divine Law, but we can keep it according to the spirit. Covered with the merit of Christ's sacrificial death, we can keep the just requirements of the Law of God. The righteousness of the Law is fulfilled in us, "who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Romans 8:4. God tells us that He has reckoned us dead to ourselves, to our fallen human nature; and that He will judge us according to the spirit, the intention. If our hearts ar eloyal, and if our endeavors are the best that we can put forward, He will cover our defects with the sacrificial merit of Christ.

God keeps us clean by continually applying to us the virtue of Jesus' blood as we ask for it. (1 John 1:7-10.) Having willingly given ourselves over entirely to God, and using all our strength in seeking to live according to His will, we have been accepted through Christ Jesus as members of this wonderful new nation which, when developed in the School of Christ, will be fully qualified for bringing in the great blessings long ago promised to all the kindreds of the earth—both the living and the dead.

The Spiritual Seed of Abraham are to be overcomers, conquerers. Their future work is the uplifting of mankind from degradation and sin, and the bringing of them back to God. The necessary preparation for this work is in themselves. They are not expected to perfect the flesh; but they are to bring their minds so thoroughly into subjection to the will of God that they will do the best that they can do. They are to OVERCOME, if they would win the great prize of their High Calling in Christ Jesus.

Many and varied are their besetments from the world, the flesh and the Adversary. All about them is the spirit of the world, which is altogether different from the Spirit of the Lord. The worldly spirit is sometimes more noble and sometimes less noble than at other times; but it is always a selfish spirit. It is also an ambitious spirit, desirous of having the good things of this life, the approval of the world, and everything of a worldly kind. Then the flesh has certain tendencies which have come down to us through 6000 years of sin and selfishness—tendencies toward pride, show, vanity, etc. Then there are many contrivances of the Devil with which to contend. Many of these have come through the teachings of the various religious systems of this world. All these things must be overcome, if we would be granted to sit with our Lord in His Throne.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

Essay VII.

The enormous amount of work accomplished by such a comparatively small force and small amount of capital, has excited the wonder and admiration of those that are doing all in their power to quell it. Wm. T. Ellis, who has given the Society sufficient investigation to discover thin, writes as follows, as field editor of The Continent. He is a man familiar with this line of work, and should know whereof he speaks:

"Let me hasten to say that I know of no organization for the publication and spread of religious literature—and I do not accept the American Tract Society, American Bible Society or any denominational publishing house that has ever had such success in getting its output into the hands of the people. During the year 1911 more than half a million volumes of Studies in the Scriptures were circulated bringing the total circulation of the books up to more than 4,000,000 copies. It may be mentioned that the publications are in twelve languages. During the year 221,789 letters were despatched from the Brooklyn headquarters and 128,712 received. Six hundred colporteurs were responsible for much of the extension of literature. The Colporteur work is self-sustaining. "The I. B. S. A. Bible Study Class Extension" reported 3.049 meetings held during the year, with an attendance of 97,898."

In line with Mr. Ellis' admission we present the report of the American Tract Society compared with that of The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, published in the Bible Student Monthly, edited by C. W. Hek, a journal devoted to the interests of Laymen's Home Missionary Movement:

"The following item of news is going the rounds of the public press. We confess surprise that so wealthy an organization and one which receives so many large legacies should not furnish a more interesting report:—

'An interesting meetiug of the American Tract Society, which was organized in 1825, was held in the Congregational Church in Greenwich, Conn., the home of the president, William Phillips Hall, last week. A review was given of the work of the society, now in better condition than for some years past, although its accomplishments have always been notable. The eighty-fifth annual report, made by the Rev. Dr. Judson Swift, general secretary, has just been issued in neat pamphlet form. The balance sheet for the year shows assets of $2,403,515; liabilities, $1,552,422.47; excess of assets over liabilities, $851,092.53. Three life directors and fourteen life members were constituted during the year covered in the report. The cash appropriations made for the year in Europe, Africa and Asia were $5,300. The totals of these appropriations in the society's history have been $774,012.43.'

"The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society is probably the most active organization ever known in the world along the lines of Tract distribution and home and foreign missionary work. It apparently has no capital, but merely uses as received monies voluntarily donated to its work. While other societies are continually soliciting assistance, both in public and from church pulpits and through private solicitations, this Society avers that it never solicits money either publicly or privately. Donations to its treasury must come voluntarily or not al all. Its officers receive no salary. Its numerous missionaries receive no salaries—merely their expenses are paid, and these on a very moderate scale. Their printing is done in great quantities and at the lowest prices. Nothing is ever bought on credit. Only in proportion as the Lord supplies the means is the work pushed forward."

"This Society's annual report, briefly summarized, is as follows:

"It has about seventy missionaries, home and foreign. They traveled over 500,000 miles last year. They visited more than 3,500 cities. They held more than 11,000 meetings. This Society expended in the proclamation of the Gospel in foreign countries $20,935.24. It expended in the United States and Canada $139,743.80. It put into circulation more than 600,000 copies of "Studies in the Scriptures,"—this amounted in the English language to more than 350,000,000 of tract pages and in the foreign languages it circulated in this country more than 6,000,000 of tract pages. These almost inconceivable totals bewilder the average mind. Besides all this is the considerable work which the Society did in India, South Africa, Australia and Europe."

"Congratulate the Society on its immense work and the accomplishment of it so economically. One is quite reminded of the feeding of the multitudes with the five barley loaves and two small fishes."

We will not give details of a later report of the Society's work for the reason that the figures would not reflect the work to any but those who are accustomed to this particular line. Russell's first book "The Plan of the Ages," has nearly reached the five million mark, and this may be stated in the language of an editorial comment which appeared in the Overland

STRIKE LEADERS PAY $4,000 FOR AUTO HIRE

Fitzgerald Uses Six Cylinder Limousines and Pay Fabulous Prices When Machines Can Be Bought for About $300.

Nearly $4,000 for automobile hire has been spent by organizers for the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes since July 22 last, when the first traction strike was called in Westchester County, according to an estimate furnished to the New York Times.

Most of this money was paid to the Packard Automobile Renting Agency on Forty-first street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues. By special arrangement with this company based on the heavy volume of business contributed by the organizers, representatives of the union obtained a special rate of about $2.70 an hour, which is $1.30 less than asked by that concern from occasional users of automobiles.

So frequently have William B. Fitzgerald, general organizer for Railway Dispute About to Be Settled.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, October 1.—Now that the annual British Trades Union convention is over and a good many important subjects connected, or not connected with the war and labor have been threshed out and well-supported decisions arrived at, the labor atmosphere in this country is very much clearer. It is still pretty obvious that whilst our leading trade unionists do not distrust the Government on the question of the restoration of trade union rights after the war they are afraid that certain big financial interests may prove too strong for certain weak-kneed politicians. Therefore the rights of the workers are being kept to the front the whole time although nothing is to be allowed to interfere with the carrying on of the war. The big labor question of the week is in connection with the railway pay dispute. The negotiations between the railway managers and representatives of the National Union of Railwaymen and the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen with reference to the men's application for an advance of $2.50 a week in wages were resumed in London on September 19th.

Before the two sides met at the Midland Grand Hotel a special general delegate meeting of the National Union was held at Unity House to discuss the situation, and after the negotiations had been re-opened a deputation of the railway managers saw Mr. Runciman at the Board of Trade. The position was that the railway companies had made an offer that each man should receive 75 cents a week additional war bonus (that is extra wages as compared with the rate prevailing before the war opened), the first payment to be made in respect of the week ending September 16; they had further offered to submit to arbitration by any tribunal appointed by the Government the question whether anything more than 75 cents should be given, agreeing, should the tribunal decide in the men's favor, that the award should apply as from the same date.

The men, it is understood, are standing firm for their full demand of $2.50. If this were conceded it would mean that the full war bonus received by the railway workers would be $3.75 a week, a figure much higher than has hitherto been established as a basis where workers are paid time rates. The bonus now offered to the railwaymen (including the $1.25 granted in two sums earlier during the war period) is $2.00 a week, a sum which may be increased by arbitration if the men agree to that course. The delegates to the special general meeting of the National Union of Railwaymen will remain in session while the negotiations with the railway companies are in progress. This will enable the union leaders to keep in touch with the rank and file of the movement and to communicate to them any fresh development arising out of the conference with the managers. Presumably the general meeting will give the decisive vote as to whether a settlement on terms other than the concession of $2.50 shall be sanctioned.

Whatever attitude the National Union may finally take up, it would appear from the resolutions passed by branches of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen that the engine drivers, in view of the national importance of their work, do not favor the use of the strike weapon to enforce the application for more money. This does not mean, of course, that they do not hold the opinion that railway workers as a body are inadequately paid.

A highly important scheme affecting 400,000 skilled workers and the future trade union development of the engineering and shipbuilding trades is now being confirmed by a ballot of the members concerned. For some years it has been felt that there existed a lack of cohesion between the trade unions connected with the engineering and shipbuilding industry, and this led the Council of the Ironfounders' Society to associate with the Executive Council of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers in the promotion of a scheme having for its object closer unity and co-operation for offensive and defensive industrial objects. The sub-com-

COMPENSATION LAW APPLIES TO CHILD.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—Judge McMichael has ruled that the state workmen's compensation law must be interpreted broadly and that compensation must be paid to children whose fathers are killed in industrial accidents.

The case centered about a 4-months-old babe whose father was killed six days before it was born. A workmen's compensation referee awarded benefits to the mother and to the child until it reaches the age of 16. Appeal was taken to the compensation board, which sustained the referee. The matter was then taken to the courts.

It was argued that when there is a widow or widower entitled to compensation, no award can be made to the children. In dismissing this argument, Judge McMichael said:

"An act of assembly of the character of the one inquestion should be interpreted broadly and in harmony with the aim of the act providing support for those dependent upon a deceased employe.

"Since dependents bound by the compensation feature of the law lose all their remedies at common law, a literal construction in their favor is required. In the case at bar the child takes nothing during the running of 300 weeks if its mother lives that long and does not marry. Can it be said that it was intended that the child thus should be excluded from the benefits of the act?

"We think the provision for the mother negatives that inquiry, because the payment made to her was based on the fact of the existence of the child. The child's right to compensation cannot be said in this way to be obliterated. It becomes merged with that of the mother, and rightly so, because she is usually the person to whom ultimately compensation due a child would naturally go."

It is stated that the decision will affect over 1,000 children and that over $2,000,000 is involved.

MANY FOREIGN TONGUES USED TO BREAK STRIKE.

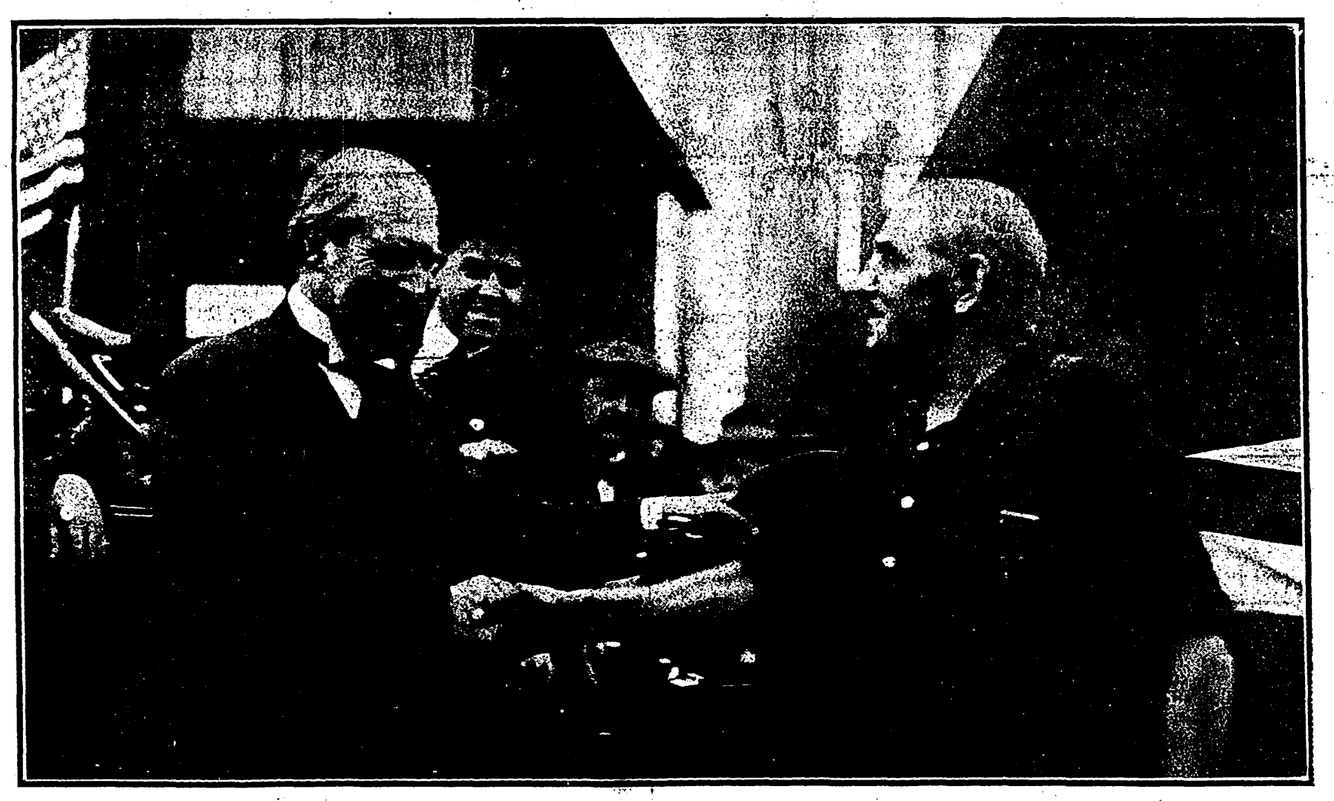
ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—Striking packing house workers charge the struck companies with having perfected a "silent system" in their plants. The scheme consists of making up the gangs of the different departments of many nationalities, so that one group does not understand the language of another.

The foremen of these gangs, generally rough-necks and slave drivers of the old school, do not hesitate to knock down the Pole or the Greek because he knows that the rest of the gang, the Russ, the Servian, the Hungarian, the negro, the Bohemian and other nationalities are suspicious and jealous of the victim of the foreman's brutality and that he will get no sympathy from them.

The strike started when 33 unorganized employes of the Cox & Gordon company asked that wages be raised from 20 to 22½ cents an hour. They worked from 60 to 66 hours a week. The request was refused and the workers joined the Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's union. The company then appealed to the Meat Packers' association and the following firms are now involved because their employes declined to act as strike-breakers:

St. Louis Dressed Beef company, St. Louis Independent Packing company, Krey Packing company, Beiz Provision company, Sartorius Provision company, Heil Packing company and the Cox & Gordon company.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE HUGHES SHAKING THE HORNY HAND OF CHRISTOPHER HORROCKS, ONE OF LABOR'S REPRESENTATIVE WORKINGMEN.



No greater tribute could have been paid to any man of this nation than that paid by the workingmen in the Turtle Creek Valley to Presidential Candidate Charles E. Hughes on his visit to Pittsburgh and the real, genuine climax came when the great toiling masses, headed by the Sage of the Westinghouse men, in behalf of the men, in the mills, shops and factories, welcomed the great Republican Standard bearer. It was Christopher Horrocks who for 47 years has been in the employ of the Westinghouse interests who made the famous speech and no one could have more fittingly represented labor and those who toil in these great industrial plants than Chris Horrocks. This is what the Sage of the Valley said:

Fellows:—The shops of the great Westinghouse interests have been visited by thousands of people, including men from the nobility of Europe as well as the plain, yet influential citizen of America, but I do not believe we ever had a visitor who so strongly appealed to us workingmen as the man who is with us today. It should always be a pleasure to any body of men to greet one who has risen from obscurity to the exalted position attained by our distinguished visitor today. However, his life has been no sinecure, but rather a most strenuous one.

As a young lawyer he began life with a determination to add dignity to his profession, and to practice law only along the lines of justice and equity, the basis on which all good laws are founded. Following this course, he soon won the confidence of his fellow citizens, and the admiration of the most learned jurists. His private and public life as well will bear the closest scrutiny.

Serving as Governor of New York he carried with him into that office those commendable traits of character on which his life work was builded. You will remember that it was he who broke up one of the most notorious and gigantic swindling games that ever found a lodging place in the great State of New York. So recklessly did he swing the axe of justice right and left, fearing neither financial nor social influences, that many were victims of his stern justice. This fearless act won for him the admiration of all law abiding citizens throughout the country, and opened up the way for a more exalted position, viz: Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. This is the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a citizen excepting, of course, that of Chief Executive, or President, of the United States.

It was while serving as a Justice of the Supreme Court that his knowledge of the law, national and international, coupled with his executive ability, marked him as a man who should become the standard bearer of the Republican Party and the logical candidate for President of the United States.

Fellows, you will remember how we were the victims of the present administration's tariff reform. It should rightly have been called tariff transform, for it certainly transformed this shop where you and I earn our bread and butter from a busy beehive into an almost idle workshop, and, in consequence, for nearly two years, working from two and one-half to four days a week, many home comforts were sacrificed by all of us.

It has been said that experience is the best teacher. Then let us profit by our past experience and rally round the standard bearer and the logical candidate of the Republican party; let us give him our individed support, and repose in him that confidence which his past record as a public officer and his sterling character so fully deserve, believing that under his administration as President of the United Staes, we, as a people, will soon realize an inflow of the home comforts which the present administration has deprived us of. Then let us have home protection and protection for homeindustries.

I now take pleasure in introducing to you the standard bearer and logical candidate of the Republican Party for President of the United States, Mr. Charles E. Hughes, who will address you.

LABOR SOBERING UP; STOPS! LOOKS!! LISTENS!!!

Not to Be Dragged Into the Ranks of Democracy by the Wilson Eight Hour Bait.

Special for the National Labor Tribune.

By DAVID S. BARRY.

Organized wage earners are beginning to take sober second thought on some recent labor legislation, which is being made an issue in the present political campaign. The clear-cut declaration of Charles Evans Hughes, that he favors the principle of an eight-hour workday, to protect wage workers from over-fatigue, and that the Adamson law does not limit the hours of labor, is causing workingmen to look more closely into the question.

That the Adamson law was enacted hastily without due consideration, so that it might furnish political capital for President Wilson, is now becoming more apparent. Thinking workingmen are opposed to making wages a political issue. Indeed, they believe it will be a sorry day for the workers of the United States, should the adjustment of wages in private industry, be placed in the hands of politicians, aspiring for public office.

Workingmen differ on the advisability of limiting the hours of labor by legislative enactment. The American Federation of Labor has taken a very decided stand against such legislation, although there are some in its ranks who favor that method of reducing the hours of labor. But nowhere has any responsible labor leader in this country advocated legislation fixing wages in private enterprises, except a minimum wage for women and minors, who cannot successfully be organized to protect themselves.

That the so-called eight-hour law for railroad employes engaged in train operation, does not limit the hours of labor, is admitted by its sponsor, President Wilson. In recommending the legislation he said that eight hours should be the basis for determining a day's wages, even if it was impracticable to limit the hours of work to eight a day. In other words he admitted that the law he recommended was only a method through which the wages of certain railroad employes would be increased about 20 per cent.

No worker will find fault with increasing the wages of any class of employes. The average worker feels that he is underpaid at best and will welcome an increase. But he feels chary about recognizing the authority of Congress to fix his wages for him. There is no telling where such legislation might stop. The worker might be given an increase during a campaign, as in the present instance, for political expediency, and have his wages reduced after the campaign was over. If Congress has authority to increase wages, it has authority to reduce them and do the workingmen want to be made pawns on the political checkerboard?

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, frequently has warned the workers of the country against this danger. It suits Mr. Gompers to show his partisanship at this time for the Democratic party, but he knows that President Wilson has done the thing which he (Gompers always has warned against in his writings and his speeches. Of course the right of Mr. Gompers to turn political somersaults is not questioned, but it is difficult to see how he can reconcile his well known attitude on this subject with the action taken by the President.

At the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Philadelphia in 1914 the folloiwng resolution was adopted as expressive of the sentiment of the organized labor movement on this subject:

> "The American Federation of Labor, as in the past, again declares that the question of the regulation of wages and the hours of labor should be undertaken through trade union activity, and not to be made the subjects of laws through legislative enactment, excepting insofar as such regulations affect or govern the employment of women and minors, health and morals; and employment by federal, state or municipal government."

When the subject was again brought up in the 1915 convention of the American Federation of Labor at San Francisco, the committee on resolutions substituted the declaration of the Philadelphia convention for the original legislative eight-hour resolution, and the substitute was again adopted.

In offering the substitute the resolutions committee at San Francisco said:

> "Your committee is of the opinion that one of labor's first great victories was the winning of industrial freedom through the repeal of those laws through which the workers' terms of employment had been largely determined by legislative and judicial authorities and the establishment of the workers' privilege to organize on the industrial field and, through their collective strength, enforce their right to have a determining voice in the terms of their employment."

As has been noted the report of the committee was adopted by the convention, so we have the official declaration of the American Federation of Labor, that one of labor's greatest victories was in securing the repeal of just such legislataion as the Adamson law.

But Mr. Gompers has raised his voice in opposition to legislation of this character at places other than conventions of the Ameri-

Questions and Answers

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. A. they may do so, and they will be answered strictly according to those teachings which claim to be in harmony with the Bible. Address questions to the Question Department of the National Labor Tribune.

Question—The I. B. S. A. teaches that the old patriarchs whose faith was counted unto them for righteousness, will in the resurrection be raised perfect human beings, and set up as princes in all the earth during the Millenium. As these were merely reckoned righteous when they died, and there is no change in the grave, how can they be raised perfect, as it is stated in Heb. 11-40 that—they without the saints should not be made perfect?

We would like the above question answered as we understand that the Saints will assist the old patriarchs up to perfection, and then appoint them princes at the end of the Millenium, as a reward for their faith.

W. J. RANKIN, North Bay.

We understand the old patriarchs will be brought up as perfect human beings in the resurrection—that is, they will have perfect bodies, and perfect characters as far as intentions are concerned, but they will lack experience, and will need to be tested.

The testimony concerning them is that "they pleased God", and for that reason they were considered worthy of a "better resurrection." We read that "they all died in the faith, not having received the promises" and without us—the Saints—or aside from us, they should not be made perfect. The thought being that they could not receive their reward except through the glorified Church, Head and Body, through which all life must come.

They will be "Princes in all the earth during the Millenial reign. A prince is a ruler and they will be the earthly rulers, under the "Great King." "The law shall go forth from Zion"—the spiritual phase of the Kingdom, the Church, Head and Body—"and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem"—from the seat of the earthly phase of the Kingdom, through the Princes.

They were not on trial for life, for the "Way of life" had not been opened up in their time, consequently they will have to come under the Mediatorial reign to prove their worthiness, or unworthiness for eternal life.

They will not be made Princes at the end of the age, for at that time there will not be any need for Princes—riers—every man will then be a king in his own right in fulfillment of the command given to Adam—"Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth and subdue it, and have dominion over it"—a dominion which Adam lost, but which is to be restored to his posterity.

Question—What would a family in the Truth do in sickness or death, with no preacher to send for to sympathize with them?

MRS. A. J. ROONEY, Pgh., Pa.

Answer—A family in the Truth would have a great advantage in such cases as the "Trtuh people" are all preachers.

In a case of sickness they would be able to render any kind of assistance which might be needed and also to sympathize.

In case of death, if it were the death of a Saint, they could rejoice with them that the loved one had fought the good fight, and had kept the faith and would receive the crown "in that day." And at the same time sympathize with them in their loss.

If it were the death of a worldly person they could point them to the resurrection, and say with the Apostle, "We do not sorrow as do those who have no hope."

If it were a child they could repeat the beautiful funeral sermon which the Lord preached to Rachel, when she lost all of her children, and "would not be comforted because they were not." Saying "Refrain they voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears, for thy labor shall be rewarded, and they shall come again from the land of the enemy."

The land of the enemy is the land of death.

As I see on the address slip of "The Tribune" that the time is up the 13th of this month for it to be renewed but I'm sorry to tell you that I am not able to have it renewed on account of being an invalid and not being able to work.

The "Labor Tribune" is a great friend of mine especially on account of Pastor Russell's sermon and religious teachings. I am very thankful to the person who ever he may be, that paid for the last six months subscription and I am also very thankful before hand to any of the dear brethren who should take the notion to let me have the paper for another six months or any length of time preferred. My best regards to all and thank you very much.

Yours in the great hope,
NILS S. HANSEN.

Having been a subscriber to the Tribune for nearly four years, will say that I think very highly of its stand for truth and righteousness and appreciate the many good things published in its columns.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

"Bethel Home" during working hours.

But be it here stated that in all my experience in coming in contact at unexpected and inopportune moments, with the venerable divine who has charge of the interests of the whole concern, I have never caught him indisposed or ruffled; nor at anytime did I notice any sign of the weight of the responsibility he carries. He has always been the same calm, serene and easy going friend, always on the alert to try his steel with a batle of wits for diversion. Thus the greatness of a really great man looms above that of the men, however capable they may be, who are drawn to the support and execution of his plans. Similarlly Judge Rutherford, his legal adviser, relates that on one occasion they were grappling with a legal problem that predicted a dark future, and, the lawyer having spent a restless night, enquired how he slept: "I never slept better in my life," he replied, adding that the whole affair was the Lord's doings; and he was able to solve the problem and remains on the alert to note what move Providence would indicate next. He never magnifies his own importance, as if everything depended on his judgment and foresight. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

All who had to do with the management of the Creation enterprise in the field, like the general manager and his counsellors, graviated to where they could best serve the cause—their personal interests being second to making it a success. In this work we have the self-sacrificing spirit carried beyond credibility;—talented mechanics, business men, reporters, doctors, lawyers, men of every profession and walk of life; humble individuals exalted to places of honor to learn how to be exalted and keep their poise; men from high profession linked to some menial service to learn how to be abased; many of them educated to operate the moving picture machines and phonographs, sitting in these booths that were veritable sweat shops in the heat of the day and the humidity of night, a condition that requires the genius of Dante to describe; to this is added other hardships connected with transportation of paraphernalia from city to city, which kept them up until late hours of the night, to make sure that there was no hitch in dispatching and receiving the parts by the express companies forming the circuits. All this, and other inconveniences endured for mere living expenses, you say? No! Some of them paid their own expenses and went into training for the privilege—all done to please and serve the public by the exhibition; they all loved the truth presented, and rejoiced in the privilege, not obligation, of having their personalities lost in the great endeavor. Here is where human nature had no sway; they, like the colporteurs that tramp the streets of the cities of the world, many of whom left their children in the hands of relatives so as to be free to serve in the "Harvest Work," and spread the "Good News of the Kingdom," did it all for love, and to honor the God of Love and Justice by heralding His true character as revealed in the Divine Plan of Redemption for the groaning Creation! We bow our heads in silent admiration to this selfabnegation.

Some have sarcastically remarked concerning these people that they expected the present order of things to be wrecked in anarchy by the fall of that year, and for this reason they parted with most of their earthly effects, to put it into the enterprise, and went to work; but this was not the case with all. Some of them expected their "change" into glory, but this was not the moving power; for they had already been in service otherwise for years. Most of them had accepted Russell's outlook at the beginning of that year, in which he pointed out that many unfulfilled prophecies were due to be fulfilled before the "change" of the "feet" members of the church could occur and that these fulfillments could not be crowded into such a short interval of time. It was simply love, zeal, not fanaticism, that actuated them to financial and self-sacrificing service. And there were no regrets after the affair died out when they revelled in the memories of the days of opportunities that seemed more like dreams than realities. Many of the editors fled to get down from their psychic perch, who got close enough to see the magnitude of the undertaking and amount of expense envolved, could not be convinced that it was being financed by the members of the Associated Bible Students; and in their write-ups accused the "Big Biz" of being back of it to quell the turbulent spirit of the laboring class, to make them contented with their conditions and wages by the hope of future happiness in a paradise on earth depicted by the Drama.

After the Creation Drama was launched by its author and was in full swing, under capable hands, he was busy with another program; that was to go into the small towns and hamlets that could not be reached by Creation Drama owing to the expense involved. This was called the Eureka Drama which was the Creation Drama with the "movies" left out, These were sold to the Associated Bible Students which operated them in villages within an accessible radius of their locations. This plan was in successful operation when the Creation Drama was still before the public. But this is not all. The Creation Drama is now about to be introduced under a new scheme that will be self supporting and may continue to make war on the now tottering creed idols of Orthodoxy and shatter them to the winds of oblivion. It will be interesting to watch for the next surprise this remarkable man of action may spring upon the public, and set the clerics to guessing what to do next to block his influence amongst the people.

The marked and immediate effect that this unique production, which presents and harmonizes the lessons of Science, History and the Bible, has upon those that see it, is sure to bring some general results, as well as in church circles. Not only does it liberate Reason, the greatest of God's gifts to men, still fettered by shackles of creeds of the dark past, but, it also serves to give ballast to those running amuck in Modern Rationalism. Who can foretell the results? Will it modify the impending battle of Armageddon in the United States? We are safe in anticipating history to the extent that Russell's influence upon the American mind will yet in his lifetime be as immediate as was the venerable Beecher's—and that in spite of the influential clergymen and statesmen either openly opposed, or maintaining a "dignified" (?) silence through whom Beecher's influence became general and immediate.

Your work will surely not go unrewarded. Wishing you the Lord's blessings, Yours for Truth and Righteousness.

JONAS JOHNSON.

Duquesne, Pa., Oct. 7.

I am pleased to note the improvements in your paper of late, especially in the material appearing on your second page. While I enjoy the items on the presidential campaign and the special items on the labor question, my special interest is in the several side lights to the instructive sermons of Pastor Russell. Your "No. 2-A", or "Questions and Answers," is an interesting addition and am pleased to note that the "Scape Goat" question is handled ably and corrects an error that crept into your columns, and it is told in such simple language. Who ever handles this department is a reliable councelor, for, having a clear conception of the two phases of this vital doctrine — "The Cross" - our Lord's sacrifical death and the churches share in His suffering, cannot go far wrong. This speaks well for its future prospects and value.

I am especially pleased with your item, "Why we hate Reformers" and the statement is certainly true: "He disturbs our ————. He jars our respectable conservation. He forces upon us a sonse of our part of the responsibility which society owes for the existence of wrong." The Tribune as a medium of furthering reform work amongst God's chosen people—the Commoner—is a paper that we need not be ashamed to haul then, for it is not "too much Russell."

The poems from the pen of G. W. Seibert are soothing and comforting and is poetry with a message.

Respectfully,
N. C. NELSON.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

MERCY TRIUMPHANT YET JUSTICE ABIDES.

HOW THESE TWO IMPORTANT QUALITIES OF GOD'S CHARACTER ARE CO-ORDINATED IN HIS PLAN

God's Word Presents a Wonderful Picture of His Plan of Salvation —Mercy, or Love, Beautifully Harmonized with Justice—The Character of Our Creator Our Greatest Study—Correct Understanding of the Divine Character Arouses Admiration and Love —Heathen Theory of Soul's Inherent Immortality Responsible For Many Gross Errors of Doctrine—Trinity Doctrine Another Source of Confusion—Light Now Growing Clearer.

DAYTON, Ohio, October 8.—Pastor Russell was the principal speaker today before the I. B. S. A. assembled in convention at the Soldiers' Home Memorial Hall for the past few days. His discourse was based upon the literal rendering of the last clause of James 2:13 —"Mercy glorieth against judgment." The Pastor said:

To the careful Bible student the Scriptures present a wonderful picture of the victory of Love, or Mercy, over Justice in God's great Plan of the Ages for man's recovery from the fallen condition into which the human race was plunged by the disobedience of Adam, the father of mankind. The Bible shows how our mighty Creator was able to provide for the rescue of the race from the penalty of DEATH, pronounced upon our first parents and inherited by all of Adam's posterity; and how this rescue could be accomplished without violation of the Divine decree or of the principle of Justice, which God declares to be the very foundation of His Throne.—Psalm 97:2.

It has been said that "the proper study of mankind is man"; but we can more truly say that the greatest study of mankind is our great Creator. The character of Jehovah is the example, the pattern, for all His intelligent creatures to follow. How important, then, it is that we understand aright the real character of our God in order that we may be able to imitate Him and develop characters like His! (Matthew 5:48; 1 Peter 1:16.) All who are children of God are called to partake of their Father's holiness; and ultimately the standard of perfect holiness—righteousness—will be required of all.

In the past, our lack of a knowledge of the true character of God has been one of our greatest difficulties. How could we copy the character of the God of the Bible unless we understand Him? We have not properly known our God. Thus the Bible declares, "My people perish for lack of knowledge." (Hosea 4:6.) The necessary knowledge has been supplied by the Lord in His Word; but in the main His people have permitted themselves to be drawn aside and misled by the great Adversary. (1 Timothy 4:1; 2 Peter 2:2.) The Lord has permitted this as a test to all of His professed servants.

OUR EYES OF UNDERSTANDING OPENING.

We believe that today there are many honest people feeling after God, if haply they might find Him. (Acts 17:27.) But, alas! Christian people have been misled, and have unintentionally misled others, by the terrible doctrines of the Dark Ages, introduced into the Christian Church after the Apostles "fell asleep." (Matthew 13:24-30.) Thus harm has been done where only good was intended. Although sure that our Heavenly Father will not lay to our charge that which was unintentionally done, nevertheless we cannot but feel remorse for our serious mistake in thus maligning the character of our gracious God. How thankful we are that the light is now breaking in, and that we can see as never before the lengths, the breadths, the heights and the depths of our great Creator's Love; that we can see in clear outline in His Word His glorious Plan for the salvation of the whole world!

By nature the highest organs of our head are those that tend toward love and reverence. Spirituality, veneration, hope, conscientiousness, are the very highest qualities in our organism. The baneful influences of the Adamic fall have dwarfed these qualities in all mankind; nevertheless they have made their influence felt to some extent in our natural character. Yet despite all this, error has been creeping in. The Bible tells us that the one to whom we should charge this imperfection is "your Adversary, the Devil."

The spirit of impatience and discontent is everywhere prevalent today. Satan is responsible for this condition. When we speak of Satan we mean a personal Devil. We believe in a real Adversary, once a glorious and powerful angel, created in full accord with his Maker, but later a rebel against the Divine Government. We also believe in the existence of a host of fallen angels, or evil spirits, who followed Satan's lead and over whom he became prince, as the Scriptures plainly declare.—Ephesians 2:2; 6:12, margin; Genesis 6:1-4; Jude 6; etc.

These powerful enemies of poor, fallen humanity have their mission and are working in so secret and crafty a manner that in our fallen condition we are no match for these higher intelligences, with the wisdom of ages at their command. They well know how to entrap; and they have entrapped some. In thus seeking to delude and mislead mankind, they know that they can cause humanity to dread their Creator, to hate rather than to love Him. The Apostle Paul declares that "the god of this world (Satan) hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." (2 Corinthians 4:4.) The Adversary knows full well that if the light of the knowledge of God's glorious character should shine into men's hearts, it would make a great transformation. God's work in the heart of the Christian is for the purpose of transforming him by the renewing of the mind.—Romans 12:2.

What a blessed thought it is, dear brethren in Christ, that we are getting rid of this blindness! The eyes of our understanding are indeed opening. The Aposle Paul thus prayed for the Church—"I pray for you, that the eyes of your understanding being enlightened, ye may know what is the hope of your calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what the exceeding greatness of His power of us-ward who believe." (Ephesians 1:16-19.) Further on, he prays, "that ye may be able to comprehend with all saits what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and know the LOVE of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God."—Ephesians 3:14-19.

TRUE LOVE FOUNDED UPON JUSTICE.

In our text the Apostle is showing us that in God's wonderful Plan for man's recovery from sin and death Divine Mercy, which means Divine Love, has triumphed over Divine Justice, and yet without impinging God's Justice in the slightest degree. It is a very interesting and important study for us to learn just how this was accomplished; for if we do not see it clearly we shall have confused ideas of God's Plan as revealed in His Word. If we do see it clearly, many of the theological tangles which long have troubled and hindered us will be unraveled.

We remember that it is written, "Righteousness and Judgment (Justice) are the habitation of His Throne." God's whole Empire is founded upon Justice—not love, but JUSTICE. We see the propriety of this. How else could He be the proper Administrator of the universe This statement does not conflict with the other Scriptural declaration, "God is LOVE." Justice is the very basis upon which true love is built. At first these two elements of the Divine character might seem to conflict, when we remember that while God's Justice demanded the punishment of the sinner, nevertheless His Love provided a way to bless that sinner. Let us see how the Word of God harmonizes these facts of theology.

This matter is very simple to understand in our day; whereas in the past our forefathers had great confusion on the subject. Many and fierce were the theological battles fought along this line. They had long arguments as to whether God's Justice would finally prevail, or whether God's Love would override His Justice, and how this would be accomplished. Here was the difficulty in our minds.

Before we can understand what constitutes God's Justice, we must rid ourselves of the errors embodied in the creeds of the Dark Ages, whether these errors be Calvinistic, Arminian, or whatsoever they may be. We are astonished today at the monstrous errors held by some of these well-meaning forefathers of ours. Take, for instance, Jonathan Edwards, who doubtless was a wonderful man, of wide influence. He believed in a literal Hell of fire and torture, into which the great majority of humanity were to be cast. He preached eloquently upon the subject. When asked on one occasion whether Christians would not be unhappy in Heaven, knowing that the majority of their friends and relatives were suffering agony in Hell, he replied, "No; we shall be so changed that we shall not suffer in seeing our friends in Hell. We shall look ever the battlements of Heaven and see their agony and then, turning around, we shall praise God the louder that His Justice is made manifest."

MINDS SADLY PERVERTED.

It seems past belief that an intelligent, sincere man could have so perverted an idea of justice. Can any sane mind today see any justice in a God who would create billions of human beings, with powers of feeling, with capabilities of the most acute suffering, who would permit them to be born into the world under conditions of weakness, prone to sin as the sparks to fly upward, surrounded by temptation, beset by evil angels, and who would then declare that if they did not live saintly lives and love supremely the God who thus created them they should be damned to an eternity of torture? Ah, something is radically wrong with the brain of the man who can accept such a creed and worship such a God. Such is not the God of the Bible, but a monstrous Demon. The god that originated such a creed is "the god of this world"—the Devil.

No human being would ascribe such a character to any human parent. How, then, can any believe such a monstrous libel upon the character of the God of all grace. How strange that we should ever have been thus trapped by this wicked lie of Satan's.

Many who have long discarded the creeds of the Dark Ages still profess to believe them, and still retain membership in the denomination which holds one or another of these creeds. No intelligent minister of our day believes these monstrosities of medieval doctrine. We need God's leading and teaching. The difficulty has been that we have leaned upon the creeds of human tradition, instead of relying upon the Word of God.

THE ROOT OF ALL DOCTRINAL ERROR.

Let us see what God says of His Justice. He declares that the penalty pronounced upon man for sin was DEATH. "The wages of sin is death." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "In the day that thou eatest thereof, dying, thou shalt die." (Romans 6:23; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; Genesis 2:17, margin.) The entire Scriptures bear out this declaration. Only a few highly figurative statements could be so misinterpreted as to seem to teach otherwise. But when the symbolic character of such passages is recognized, they are seen to be in full harmony with the plain declarations of the Bible.

The pagan doctrines of the immortality of the soul, a trinity of gods, etc., are responsible for the great confusion of Christendom regarding the fundamental doctrines of the Word of God. There is not a word of Sripture for the almost universally accepted idea of the natural immortality of the soul. The Bible declares that man is mortal. How absurd the thought that God would so make a soul that even He could not destroy it under any circumstances, however desirable this might later prove to be. The generally accepted idea is that man HAS a soul. The Scriptural teaching is that man IS a soul. (Genesis 2:7.) It is man's physical organism that makes him superior to the brute creation.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE RANSOM.

What a marvelous mind must have been possessed by the perfect man Adam before his fall. The measure of the image of God possessed by mankind today is only what remains after the blighting effects of six thousand years of weakness and sin. The perfect Adam, in his Maker's image and likeness, must have been a very wonderful and beautiful specimen of manhood, physically, mentally and morally. The size and the shape of the head, the form of the features, the expression of the face, the poise and the carriage of the body, the shape of the hands, the feet—all would proclaim the glorious perfection of the first man, Adam.

This perfect man brought the penalty of death upon his posterity, however, by reason of his disobedience of God's just commands. Therefore the whole Adamic race has been born in a dying condition. All mankind came under sin and death conditions because of one man's disobedience. God provided that only this one man Adam should be condemned to death, and that through him condemnation should come upon all his posterity while they were still in his loins. By this arrangement one man could pay the penalty for all. One man sinned. One Man was to be the Redeemer.—1 Corinthians 15:-21-23.

We have never heard of anything so wonderful as the Divine economy manifested in the great Divine Plan for human salvation. In this marvelous Plan, covering six thousand years, the salvation of twenty billions of human creatures involved; and yet every feature is easily and is perfectly poised. Justice will not be cheated out of its dues; but Love gains the victory and provides the way out of the difficulty, at the expense of the One through whom the whole Plan is consummated—our blessed Lord Jesus Christ. His perfect human life offset Adam's perfect human life; and the whole Adamic race is included, because they were all children of the one sinner, merely sharers by heredity in his sin.

MERCY FINALLY TRIUMPHANT.

The RANSOM is the very foundation of all of God's dealings with the race of mankind. It is even through that Ransom that He is now showing mercy. The Bible assures us that to the Logos, the Word, the Messenger—Michael, the Godlike One—God made the proposition that by the purchase of the whole race of Adam through His sacrifice He might obtain the honor and glory of Messiah—the opportunity of blessing the billions who had been condemned to death in Adam; and that then, as a reward, He should be supremely exalted, even to the Divine nature—far above angels, principalities, powers and every name that is named.—Hebrews 2:9; Philippians 2:8-11.

In God's due time, the Logos laid aside His glorious spirit nature, came to earth as a man, and by the grace of God tasted death for EVERY MAN. By purchasing the forfeited life of Adam, He purchases all who fell in Adam while yet unborn. It is only when we see the nature of man—that he is mortal, NOT immortal—and the penalty of sin—DEATH, not an eternity of torture—that we begin to see the significance of the death of our Lord Jesus Christ. He "gave Himself a Ransom (Greek, antilutron, a corresponding price) for ALL, to be testified in due time."—1 Timothy 2:5, 6.

For the Church the due time is in the present life. For the world it is during the thousand years of the Reign of Christ. All this is the triumph of Love over Justice. While Justice remains forever inviolate, yet Love is the victor. Mercy rejoiceth against Judgment —Justice. Christ and the Church will have the great work of uplifting the world from their degradation and of bringing them up to that full perfection, that image and likeness of God, lost by Father Adam in Eden. Then, when the world shall have been recovered from the Adamic fall—all wilful sinners having been utterly destroyed in the Second Death—all will see the infinite Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power of our great Creator, and bow in loving adoration and praise.

The faithful Church will be associated with our Lord in all His Kingdom glory and honor. In order to be of this class, not only must we be begotten by the Holy Spirit of God, but we must be quickened by it. We must manifest the fruits of that Holy Spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, brothely-kindness, love. Then in the First Resurrection we shall be born of the Spirit, and shall share with our Lord this work of love for all mankind. At the conclusion of the Messianic Reign this glorious work of Divine Mercy will have been accomplished, through all the varied features of which will be observed, operating in full harmony, absolute Love and absolute Justice.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

RUSSELL'S PHOTO-DRAMA OF CREATION.

Those who, for the first time, sit and watch the beautiful slides and colored "movies" depicted upon the screen, and hear the remarkably distinct lectures of the phonographs of Russell's Photo-Drama of Creation, and at the same time have in mind the advertisements that prompted them to see this production, will be thrown off the track in their estimates of the promoter and author of this gigantic philanthropic enterprise. While it is true that it represents three years' of hard labor during the spare moments stolen from the time that would have been applied to the other phases of the work, all that is displayed on the canvas was not produced during that time. Many of the beautiful "movies," like the works of art and the lessons taught from science, were on the market waiting for his appropriation. This beautiful and instructive arrangement of using the eye and ear in combination, the pleasant surprises in the constant changes to relieve the monotony, tends to hypnotise the audience the same way as does the dazzling language of gifted orators and great poets; and tends to create an over-estimation of the promoter of the remarkable production.

It is not our purpose to detract any honor due to the promoter and author of the Creation Drama, but these statements are made with a view of pointing out some facts which will prove his own assertions that the whole propaganda is not due to his own ingenuity, but to Providence. The Drama did not run in the course laid out by its promoter; in fact it fell into the hands of the rank and file of his movement when he was endeavoring to steer it into the world without it being identified with his propaganda. ("Man proposes, God disposes"). It made such rapid strides that it astounded its promoter and those that were at the helm. It was exhibited to upwards of ten million (10,000,000) people in the United States, Canda and Europe, during the summer and fall of 1914 without the exhibitors realizing a cent at the doors. It was advertised under the old trade mark, "Seats free, No collection," with the variation: "If I am ashamed to beg, would God be less ashamed to beg or to have me beg for Him?"

Russell gives due credit for the success of the management to the talented members who took charge after it was set in motion. Much of the machinery in handling the paraphernalia over the circuits was due to the organizing genius and geographical knowledge of Clayton J. Woodworth, of Maplewood, N. J., who was the Drama's general manager. This happened to be his line of work, for he was formerly identified with the International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, Pa., in its early days, as asistant general manager; he compiled the catalogues, planned the sales organization, named the institution, and in fact left his impress upon that institution for all time. Woodworth's qualifications for this special service were not lessened by the fact that after leaving the I. C. S. he was manager of two large corporations doing interstate business for ten years. As indicating the volume of work connected with attending to the many details of this new enterprise which had not existed long enough for its constituents to get familiar with the routine, we present here an extract from a personal letter written by Woodworth to the writer, dated August 18th, 1914. It will give a glimpse into the conditions that this organizing genius assisted to create and managed successfully:

"It is very hard to compile any statistics that will give you an adequate idea of what the Drama is doing; the number of people reached in this country alone is something wonderful. The daily average attendance on Saturday, August 15th, 1914, was 54,221; the average number of cities being served daily, 60; total number of cities served to date 392; total attendance to date, 5,111,639. On the same date we sent out 170 telegrams and on Monday the number of responses was 116. These figures are so large that the ordinary person, unfamiliar with gigantic enterprises, could form no adequate comprehension of what they represent in loving, faithful, self-sacrificing zeal for the Lord and for His Truth."

At the date of this letter the undertaking was in full blast, and by the time the cold October winds were fanning the earth the total attendance had aggregated to a total of over nine million (9,000,00) in the United States alone; and the Drama was being launched in Europe at the same time. Mark you! this enormously large number of people were reached during the summer of 1914. In the States the Creation Drama loomed into public view when nature was beginning to clothe herself with her green vesture, and was well out of sight when the autumn leaves were falling. To keep tab on all details of such an enormous undertaking traveling at such rate of speed must have been a tax on the time and energies of the management, for had the headquarters lost control, its own velocity would have wrecked the entire enterprise and wasted the finances placed under its control by the members of the Associated Bible Students.

This responsibility resting upon the shoulders of the general manager of the Creation Drama was fully appreciated, and he concentrated on the work to such an extent that his application to it led to slight breaches of etiquette in keeping his friends at bay, when occasions for social amenities presented themselves. In fact the same self-sacrificing devotion permeates all those connected with the work in general, having no time to fool away; one feels that he has been given the "cold shoulder" when he visits the

ROBERT GARLAND MAKES BIG HIT ON TARIFF

President of the Chamber of Commerce Sounds the Alarm and Gives Terrific Slam to Artificial Prosperity.

That the tariff is still the burning issue before the American people and that a choice between artificial prosperity caused by the abnormal conditions of the European war and the solid business fostered by protection must be made in the coming election, were the keynotes in a keynote speech made Wednesday at the noon-day meeting at Republican headquarters by Robert Garland, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh.

President Garland showed that the interests sacred to the workman and the business man in this country are still the same—that the protection of American industry is the only guarantee to substantial prosperity. He told his hearers that the Democratic party could not befog the real issues with figures of war-made booms in industry and urged on all the importance of a rally of every adherent to pure Republican principles. In a critical time like this he said the welfare of the nation depends on the success of the party of Lincoln and McKinley and calls for the patriotic support of every Republican.

President Garland said:

We hear a great deal these days about the Tariff, and our Democratic friends generally, when they speak of Tariff, have in mind "High Tariff." In fact there are some who consider that the terms "Tariff and High Tariff" are synonymous. As a matter of fact the days of High Tariff have long since disappeared. And remember that what obtained some years ago, and which when we look back upon, we designate as "High Tariff," was at that time vitally necessary in order to foster and to support in proper manner the infant industries of our country. As these industries developed by reason of inventions, discoveries, and application of new and improved machinery and mechanical appliances, new processes, more modern methods, and labor saving devices, as well as our rapid strides in the mastery of transportation problems, not to speak of the genius in a constructive sense of our great Iron Masters, the necessity for "High Tariff" became less and less; and now, for some years past, the Republican Party has stood for a Fair Protective Tariff.

Pittsburgh, and what is known as the Pittsburgh District, would not be recognized by the last census returns as the Fourth Metropolitan District in the country, nor would she have the world-wide fame she has today if her industries had not been fostered and nurtured in the past by adequate protection as against foreign competion, with its known low-priced labor.

The Republican Platform stands today, and has stood during recent years, for Protection to American Industries to the extent of the difference between the rate of wages paid here and abroad.

The Democratic Platform proclaims boldly that Tariff should be for revenue only, and in his campaign four years ago, Professor Wilson referred to a Protective Tariff as a "malignant growth which threatened the life of the Nation."

Not until the Southern States, or a majority of them, wake up to realization of what Protective Tariff means to the business interests of the country, will it be safe to elect a Democratic Congress or President, for it is a notorious fact that the Democratic occupant of the White House has always been governed by caucus, in which Southern sentiments and policy invariably prevail.

Recognizing that conditions are now rather abnormal, let us go back for a moment to the period just previous to the great European War, and analyze conditions. Under the Underwood-Simmons bill, iron and steel products were being imported to this country from Europe in large quantities, principally to Texas and the Pacific Coast district.

Considerable of this foreign steel was installed in the skyscrapers of San Francisco.

Let me give you one concrete example which can be fully substantiated by Pittsburgh manufacturers. Just before the war broke out Belgian steel bars were being sold at $1.10 per 100 pounds, delivered at Galveston, Texas, duty paid, this price being equivalent to 75c per 100 pounds, or ¾c per pound f. o. b. cars Pittsburgh.

Ask any man, employer or employe, acquainted with the steel industry, what wages would obtain to the steel worker if steel bars were selling at 75c per 100 pounds!

When the war is over and the time arrives when conditions become normal may we not have a repetition of this form of competition?

It is well known that trans-Atlantic freight rates from European ports, and from many of the European mills and factories located in the interior are as low, and in some cases, lower than our rail freight from this district to New York City and other Atlantic seaboard points. How then is it possible for an American manufacturer to compete with the foreign article when the wage paid here in normal times for skilled and unskilled labor is approximately double the rate paid abroad.

There are some who maintain that we can overcome this great difference by other methods such as improved machinery, and by superior workmen. Don't let us make any mistake as to this. France, Germany and Belgium are well advanced in engineering and mechanical skill.

We must now reckon with a new industrial competitor. I refer to the Orient. Japan, through a new Japanese freight line whose establishment was induced largely by the low tariff in the United States, recently began to send her milled cotton and other factory products to this country, thereby inaugurating a system of the most ruinous competition that ever jeopardized the prosperity of the American workman.

Co-incident with this, Japan adopted a new factory law which became effective only a few weeks ago. We might have expected that this new law would in some way reduce the hours of labor in Japan, but instead it establishes a ten-year period during which the employe may be worked from 13 to 14 hours a day. What chance has the American workman and his employer in competition with such labor when the Democratic Party removes the safeguard of the Tariff?

But we have more to contend with than the long working hours in Japan. In that country there are 3,000 children under 12 years of age working in the factories; between the ages of 12 and 14 there are 40,000 children, and between the ages of 14 and 16 there are more than 100,000 boys and girls, most of them girls.

The wages paid in these Japanese cotton mills to skilled male operatives average 30 to 40 cents a day, while ordinary workmen receive from 12 to 20 cents a day. The competence handed the children who are ground down under this merciless system is only a few pennies a day. While there is general talk of humanity at home, the Democratic Party is not innocent of culpability in wringing toil from innocent children in foreign lands, by allowing their product to invade our markets.

As a result of the competition of this ten-twenty-thirty cents per day Oriental labor, the Japanese already have captured considerable of our baseball bat business and for some the textbooks for the California schools. Only a Democratic Tariff would make possible this alien invasion directed at our National game and our public schools.

Of all the imported goods entering our ports 70 per cent are on the free list. While the American people are burdened with additional taxes, under

REPUBLICANS STRONG FOR NATHAN L. STRONG

Support the Man Who is Already a Public Benefactor--A Great Candidate With a Great Record

All classes of men turn out to honor Nathan L. Strong. This remarkable man who has given so much of his time, energy and resources to making two blades of grass grow where one used to grow and to making two jobs for each man where only one could be found before and rarely that.

No man has done more for his community and the surrounding country than Mr. Strong and none deserve the support of the citizen voters more enthusiastically than he.

Nathan L. Strong has no selfish interest to satisfy. He seeks office only that he may be of greater service to the district and the citizens whom he wishes to represent. And why should not the citizens turn out en mass to his support?

The citizens of Jefferson and Armstrong counties must concede that N. L. Strong has done more for the industrial and social development of the communities within the sphere of his influence than his opponent. It was largely due to Mr. Strong's genius and capacity that the Pittsburgh & Shawmut railroad was promoted and built and this railroad opened large coal fields in this and Armstrong counties. Personal gain was not the greatest motive in these matters, but as in all others, his love for the development of the resources of the hills and valleys of his birth, that the community might become prosperous; that the owners of the land might realize upon the buried treasure, and that men might have employment. Brookville knows how he has donated his interest in manufacturing sites to plants; his promotive and financial assistance to the glass plant, the wagon factory, the Deemer furniture factory, and other local industries.. He was active in the erection of the beautiful M. E. church of Brookville. He is one of the leading spirits of the Boy Scout work in Jefferson and Armstrong counties, and also in the Brookville Park and Jefferson County Fair Associations, both of which are public enterprises not for profit. Notwithstanding his very great press of business, he has devoted weeks and months of his time to public undertakings and human welfare, because of his philanthropic impulses, and desire that mankind might be better and happier. He served two terms as district attorney of this county. He has ever been interested in farming and farm life; all matters that will improve the prosperity of the farmer have always had his generous aid and assistance and the law firm of which he is a member has been a liberal supporter of the farm bureau work in this county.

His eloquence as a speaker, his educational advantages, his power as a writer, his brilliant business career, starting as a poor village boy, a telegraph operator while studying law, his human sympathy, make him the right man for congress.

Realizing what he has done for the communities the citizens want to make it possible for him yet to do greater things, and at the same time give him a chance in the halls of congress to make the district known to the nation and the world. Let none falter. Let the great Republican voters appreciate the opportunity of standing by able men who are willing to shoulder the responsibility of public office.

Railwaymen's Labor Trouble Settled.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—It is generally felt that by securing the addition on September 21st, the trade union officials have achieved a considerable success, and it is believed that the grant will give wide satisfaction. The original demand for an advance of $2.50 a week was distated by the branches in districts where the wages of other workers have been greatly increased during the war and food prices have become excessive. In country districts the increase in the cost of living has not been so severely felt.

It is estimated that some 350,000 workers will benefit by the present award. The case of shopmen, who do not receive bonus, but war wages, has not yet been dealt with, but is to be reviewed at an early date. The case of the women workers is also to be considered separately in the course of a few days. A certain number of women who were engaged on the railways before the war will come under the agreement signed on September 20th, but the many thousands of newcomers to the work are outside the award, and the amount of the increased pay that they shall now receive is to be the subject of negotiation. An agreement was reached on the 21st by which the workers on the London underground railways will receive the same increase in the bonus as the railway managers have agreed to give to the men.

J. H. Thomas, railwaymen's leader and labor Member of Parliament, who has been the chief spokesman of the National Union of Railwaymen during the negotiations, said that they had emerged successfully from a hard and difficult task. The public had no idea how near the country had been to a crisis. The negotiations had been conducted with the best of spirit, and he had nothing but admiration for the courtesy with which the general managers, although they combated the demand placed before them, had considered the position. He believed that the settlement would everywhere be approved by the railway workers. He thought a very substantial victory had been achieved.

When the South Wales railwaymen decided on September 14th to suspend their strike resolution they declared that "nothing less than the full concession of $2.50 per week increase will be accepted by us as a satisfactory settlement," and they claimed that unless "our just demands are met" a national strike should be declared. This on the face of it leaves the position in South Wales a little delicate, and a Welsh railway leader expressed the opinion that the $1.25 would not wholly satisfy the men in the colliery districts, who see the miners earning such large sums.

A meeting has been arranged between the National Union of Railwaymen and the General Managers' Committee, which is practically the Government council in control of all our railways now, to consider the whole question of women employees on railways.

At the annual convention of the Associated Iron and Steel Workers of Great Britain at Llandudno, Wales, a resolution was unanimously passed that the delegates, having fully considered the scheme for the federation of the unions in the iron and steel industry, as agreed upon at a conference of delegates of the unions concerned held in London in April, and subsequently submitted to the members, recorded their approval of the scheme, and resolved to carry it into effect at the earliest opportunity.

An interesting light upon the extension of female labor into regions hitherto untouched by the women was thrown at the annual convention of the Municipal Tramways' Association which opened in London last week. It appears there are now 8,609 females employed on tramways and of these 3,433 are conductors and 176 drivers. A tribute to the efficiency of the women was paid by the president of the convention who spoke of the splendid manner in which the women had taken up this work and the facility with which they had adapted themselves to the new employment.

John Hill, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, general secretary of the Boilermakers' Society, was on September 27th unanimously elected chairman for the ensuing year of the Trade Union Congress Parliamentary Committee, in succession to Harry Gosling, who becomes vice-chairman. Other business before the committee included the appointment of a deputation to the Board of Trade to convey the resolution passed by the congress protesting against the inclusion of certain trades in the unemployment section of the National Insurance Act. The deputation will be introduced by John Hill, who will be accompanied by C. W. Bowerman,

WILSON TURNS DOWN 80 PER CENT OF THE MEN

Only 20 Per Cent of the Railway Men Included in Wilson's Eight Hour Farce---80% of the Lowest Paid and Hardest Worked Are Ignored by Him

Only 20 per cent of the railway employes of the country get an advance in wages while 80 per cent whose average wages are much lower are absolutely ignored.

The 20 per cent represent the highest paid salaried employes; those who are already enjoying special privileges and are regarded as the aristocracy of the great railway systems of the nation while the 80 per cent who represent the great toiling masses and those who must brave the dangers, buffett the storms and submit to the hardships have been ignored.

Ten hours pay for eight hours work for 350,000 men as a political bait while 1,500,000 men must literally starve.

President Wilson deliberately ignores a petition containing the signatures of 105,000 men representing 80 per cent of the railway employes and forces a 25 per cent advance for those who sought no such emoluments.

The advance is a myth so far as practical service is concerned as it expires in January. It is looked upon as one of the greatest political tricks ever practiced by a President of the United States.

The great army representing 80 per cent of the men present the issue thus:

J. H. Vitchestain,

Editor National Labor Tribune,

Pittsburgh, Pa.

As you are the oldest and most conservative labor paper in America we submit to you the following letter for your kind consideration and publication trusting you will be generous enough to insert the same for publication. We beg to remain.

P. W. WALDEN.

Headquarters Employes' Eighty Per Cent Movement,

608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 10, 1916.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

With reference to the Railway Wage Controversy, the Eighty Per Cent of Railway Employes not in train service have called for a report of how their petition to the President and Congress was handled by us, who are heading the movement, and how it was received at the White House. We are issuing the enclosed statement to them.

We may add that the Eighty Per Cent are very much opposed to the legislation as enacted, and to President Wilson's recommendations to Congress, which altogether ignore their rights and sacrifice their chances of betterment, in order to grant a tremendous increase of wages to the other men, already receiving double the average wage of the Eighty Per Cent.

We are pushing the movement forward with determination, and expect to present at the next session of Congress a strenuous appeal for a full and just investigation of the whole railway wage situation.

Yours very truly,

ROBERT T. FRAZIER, Jr.,

P. W. WALDEN.

HOW PETITION WAS HANDLED.

To Our Friends and Associates of the Eighty Per Cent: As the men who originated, circulated and carried to Washington the petition of the Eighty Per Cent of Railway Employes asking for definite legislation to protect us from destructive interruption of interstate commerce, and provide for fair arbitration of all differences between railways and employes, we feel it our duty to report the manner in which the petition was handled and received at the White House.

At the most strenuous solicitation of President Wilson the Congress of the United States, in the closing hours of the last session, enacted what is commonly called the Adamson law.

That law was designed to give and does give a wage increase of 25 per cent to the engineers, firemen, conductors and others in railway train service, who threatened a nation-wide strike if the law was not passed exactly as they wanted it by a certain hour.

These men constitute only 20 per cent of the railway employes of the country. In enacting a law for their benefit Congress ignored the interests, rights and even the existence of the 80 per cent of employes, whose average wages are much lower than those of the specially favored few.

During the negotiations following the strike threat of the 350,000 men in the four railway labor organizations it became apparent that President Wilson was thoroughly in sympathy with their demand for 10 hours' pay for eight hours' work, or less.

President Ignored Men.

Realizing this fact, we endeavored constantly for three weeks to place before President Wilson the case of the 80 per cent of railway employes not in train service.

Either together or singly we were daily at the White House during the period given over mainly by the President to consideration of the railway situation.

President Wilson would not receive your representatives, although fully aware of our presence and purpose to ask for fair and impartial treatment for all railway employes in any legislation that might be enacted.

The President persisted in his determination to secure the 25 per cent wage increase, disguised as an "eight-hour day." for the 350,000 brother-

The Greatest Thing in the World

"Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love."—1 Cor. 13.

Love is a quality which seems beyond the power of man to describe. The best that we can do is to describe its conduct. Those who possess this quality are able to appreciate it, but are not able to explain it; for it is of God—God-likeness in the heart, in the tongue, in the hands, in the thoughts, permeating all the human attributes and seeking to control them.

There are different kinds of love, however; and the Apostle is not speaking of general affection, but of that particular kind of love which belongs to God and to the New Creation, begotten of Him. There is an animal love, such as the brute creation exercises toward their young—a love which frequently leads to the sacrifice of life itself in its devotion. This kind of love inheres in the natural man, even in his fallen condition. It is all a more or less selfish love; for at times it is even ready to rob others in order to lavish good things upon those whom it favors. This is not the love which the Apostle describes, nor is he addressing the natural man. He addresses the New Creation, and informs them that the natural man will not be able to appreciate that which he presents. In order to have a clear comprehension of this love and a hearty acceptance of it as the rule of life, it is apparently necessary that we be begotten from Above, by the Most High.—1 Corinthians 2:9-14.

THE "MORE EXCELLENT WAY."

The Church at Corinth had been founded for nearly five years, and had enjoyed a wide range of Divine providences. In addressing this Epistle to them, St. Paul was evidently considering well their needs, and seeking to minister to them the Divine Message of grace. He may not have realized how great a work he was doing and how far-reaching would be the scope of his instructions. Perhaps it was better for himself that he did not know how important was his service to the entire Church of the Gospel Age. Such a knowledge might have made him heady—the very condition of things which the Lord was warding off by permitting him to have still the "thorn of the flesh."—2 Corinthians 12:7-10.

In this Epistle St. Paul has been gradually leading the minds of his readers up to a higher appreciation of the blessings which they were enjoying. In the chapter preceding today's study he calls attention to the various "gifts of the Spirit" which were conferred upon the early Church for its establishment and development. He closes the chapter with the exhortation that while esteeming these gifts, each member of the Church should covet earnestly the superior ones. Then he adds, "Yet I show unto you a more excellent way"—something still better than any of these gifts of the Holy Spirit. Our Study pertains to this more excellent ambition which should actuate every child of God; namely, the acquisition and development of the spirit of Love, the Spirit of the Lord.

The gifts of the Spirit, which the Apostle discusses in the chapter preceding our lesson, took, with the early Church, the place of other blessings which we now enjoy. They had no Bibles, as we have, no Concordances, no helps in Bible study. Therefore they needed the miraculous "gift of tongues" to draw them together once a week to consider the Lord's Message. They needed that the Message should come in this miraculous manner, in order that they might the better appreciate it and realize that it was of the Lord, not of themselves. This made opportunity for another gift, "the interpretation of tongues." Thus by the various gifts of the Holy Spirit they were drawn together and edified—built up—until such times as the books of the New Testament gradually accumulated. After the death of the Apostles and the consequent cessation of the gifts, these Divine providences of the written Word were quite sufficient, as the Apostle here sets forth.

After St. Paul had called attention to these various facts and to the oneness of the Church, he pointed out to the Corinthians that they were putting rather too high a value upon the "gift of tongues." While a gift had its proper place in the Church as a blessing, he explained, yet a still higher blessing lay in the ability to present the Truth in a well-understood tongue, or language. He declared himself able to speak with more tongues than could any of them, and yet pointed out that he preferred to speak in that tongue which would be understood by his hearers. Finally in his argument he came to our present lesson, which he gave as the climax to his hints preceding.

SUPERIORITY OF THE TONGUE OF LOVE.

Boldly the Apostle sets forth a great truth, which has come to be more recognized amongst Christian people everywhere, in proportion to their development in the character-likeness of their Redeemer in proportion to their development as the children of God. St. Paul declares that not knowledge, not wisdom, not talents, not gifts of any kind are the things to be sought for above all else, but that love should be most highly esteemed.

God is Love; and therefore whoever would be pleasing to Him must develop this disposition; for according to the Divine Law no one will ever have full Divine approval or life everlasting on any plane of being without the full establishment in the heart, in the character, of this Divine quality of Love. Therefore "Love is the fulfilling of the Law." (Romans 13:10) The truth of this statement is obvious to all.

St. Paul forcefully declares that if he had all the tongues of earth and of Heaven and could speak them with perfection and charming rhythm, even these would not constitute a proof of his acceptance to life eternal. Should he do all this in a perfunctory manner, even to the extent of speaking of Divine character and in the interests of his fellows, he might still have no heart in the matter, but be merely like sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. The argument, therefore, is that tongues were not to be esteemed as a proof of Christian character.

The Apostle's declaration is introduced with an "if," which might be challenged to a certain extent, by the assertion that no one could speak forth with power the Gospel of Christ unless he possessed the spirit of love. Although we have all heard public speakers who could deliver very beautiful essays upon Scriptural themes, we have generally perceived a hollowness in their teachings unless they spoke from the heart, prompted by love of the Truth—not by love of applause, nor for love of money.

Next he argues respecting prophecy—oratory—and the understanding of mysteries and knowledge and respecting the possession of mountain-moving faith. He asks, Would these abilities not signify a glorious development of character, a full acceptance with God and an assurance of life eternal? Then he answers, No; precious as these abilities are, they would have no value whatever in the Divine estimation, would profit us nothing, unless based upon love. How the Apostle's argument exalts this quality of Love before our minds! He proceeds to say that although we should give all of our goods to feed the poor, and although as martyrs we should be burned at the stake, yet it would profit us nothing if the motive, the sentiment, behind the giving and behind the endurance of martyrdom were not love. Without proper love as the mainspring of our conduct, there will be no reward.

LOVE'S CONSTITUENT ELEMENTS

To those of the Lord's people who have never studied out the elements of love, its constituent parts, the Apostle's suggestions in today's study will seem like a revelation. He enumerates nine component parts:

1. Patience—"Love suffereth long";
2. Kindness—"and is kind";
3. Generosity—"Love envieth not";
4. Humility—"Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up";
5. Courtesy—"Doth not behave itself unseemly";
6. Unselfishness—"Seeketh not her own";
7. Good Temper—"Is not easily provoked";
8. Guilelessness — "Thinketh not evil";
9. Honesty—"Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the Truth."

Despite all our pains and aches physical, what a wonderful world this would be if every member of the race were perfect in these qualities enumerated! However, it would be a useless waste of time to weep over what we have not, or to chide unnecessarily our neighbors and our friends because they, like ourselves, are not perfect in love. Indeed, the more we come to understand the teachings of the Bible, the more sympathy we may have with the poor "groaning creation." In one sense of the word our sympathies are all for this glorious standard which the Apostle holds up before us. We cannot sympathize with the wrong, the error, the evil. It is uncongenial to us. But, understanding the situation, we can sympathize with our fellows and with ourselves as being in a fallen condition, in which none can do the things he would.

The Scriptural key to the situation is the fact that as a race we were born and shapen in iniquity, in sin did our mother conceive us. (Psalm 51:5; Genesis 3:20.) The calamity of sin, imperfection and death has injured the whole world mentally, morally and physically—has made us what the Apostle describes as a "groaning creation." (Romans 8:22.) This knowledge of the facts in the case, possessed by so few, understood by so few, should tend to make these few a peculiar people in their loving sympathy and kindness towards their fellows in distress. Alas, the difficulty is that even these few who know these facts from the Divine Word have selfishness so ingrained in them, and are so oppressed by the cares of this life, that often their sympathies are not all that they should be!

NEW CREATURES ALONE ADDRESSED.

It is for this reason that the Scriptures do not address the natural man; for his mind is so sodden with selfishness that his eye of pity and his ear of sympathy are well nigh closed. Instead of appealing to the natural man in general, the Scriptures represent that the Lord especially draws some who are possessed of certain qualities of heart and mind, and especially leads these to a knowledge of the Redeemer, leaving it open with them to accept or to reject the offer of Divine grace and forgiveness.

Such as respond are still further enlightened; and, if further responsive, they are treated as justified because of their faith in the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. Then are granted further special opportunities, and exhortations to make a full consecration of themselves to God and to His service even unto death. If they still respond and make this consecration, they have then come to the place where the Lord is pleased to reckon them dead to earthly things, according to their profession, and to beget them of the Holy Spirit and the glorious promises of His Word, and to count them New Creatures in Christ—members of the Redeemer's Body, which is the Church.

Now they have reached the stage where, as children of God, they must go to school and develop in knowledge and in character, that they may be made actually fit, prepared, suitable, for eternal life and a share with their Redeemer in His Kingdom.

LESSONS TAUGHT IN THIS SCHOOL.

When we enter the School of Christ, the ultimate purpose of the course of instruction is set before us in the Great Teacher's words, "Be ye like unto your Father which is in Heaven." The same thought is presented to us in St. Paul's assurance that God has predetermined that only such as becomes copies of His dear Son—in character likeness—can be His joint-heirs in the promised Kingdom. (Romans 8:29.) When we entered the School of Christ, we did not know that so much would be required of us. We did not understand all that we did when we made our consecration even unto death in the service of righteousness. However, no advantage was taken of us; for what was presented to us, and what we consecrated to do, includes everything in our power—and no more—even unto death. So then, no lesson that can be set before us is beyond our covenant, or agreement to perform.

In the spectrum of love given us in today's Study the Apostle is delineating the various parts of this one great lesson of Christ-likeness, which is God likeness. He is pointing out what constitutes such a character as God has predetermined that we must have in order to be worthy of the gift of God, which is eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Romans 6:23.

LOVE VIEWED IN COMPARISON.

"Love beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." Its elements of patience and gentleness are love in the sense of willingness to endure under all sorts of opposition, wherever it sees a proper subject for its sympathy. Love "believeth all things" in the sense that it is not given to doubt, to disbelieve, to impung the motives and the truthfulness of its fellows. Only after full and convincing proofs to the contrary will it cease to exercise faith. Love "hopeth all things" in the sense that it desires a blessing for all with whom it is in contact; and in harmony with its desire it is continually striving to do them good. Love "endureth all things" in the sense that it cannot be quenched wherever there is anything upon which it can properly exercise itself.

Viewed from another standpoint, these qualities might be interpreted thus: Love "beareth all things," as enduring pressure on every side without being crushed. It "believeth all things," as being full of faith in the Divine promises and arrangement, doubting nothing. It "hopeth all things in the sense that this perfect love toward God enables the heart to be filled with confidence in the Almighty, in whose love it reposes. It "endureth all things," in the sense that the soul which is united to God by the link of love cannot be vanquished, cannot be overcome; for this is the Divine arrangement. God will not suffer any of these little ones to be tempted above that which they are able to bear, but will with every temptation provide a way of escape.—1 Corinthians 10:13.

The Apostle institutes a comparison between love and some of the gifts of the Spirit which the Corinthian Church properly held in high esteem. He would have us all see how infinitely higher love is than any of the gifts in which the early church rejoiced. Love is not a gift, but a growth. It is a fruitage which must be developed in the garden of our souls, and which must be tended with much care, in order to its proper development. He says that love never fails, but that the other things will fail; namely, the power of prophecy—oratory—the gift of tongues, knowledge, etc. They would lose their value as changing conditions would comparatively do away with their necessity. Prophesying would be done away with, tongues would cease, and knowledge would vanish.

The argument advanced by St. Paul is that all these things would necessarily come to an end, when perfection would come in; for all our gifts and talents are imperfect. Surely with our glorious "change" in the First Resurrection and with the ushering in of the Millennium our conditions will be so different that many things now highly esteemed under present unfavorable circumstances will then be valueless! Just so flints were once valuable for the striking of a light, but are now never used, having been supplanted by matches, electric lights, etc. Many of those gifts, however, including the gift of tongues, perished long before the morning light of the Millennium. Shortly after the death of the Apostles they ceased altogether; for they were imparted only by the Apostles.

"GIFTS" VS. "FRUITS."

Next the Apostle compares the gifts of the Spirit with the fruits of the Spirit, and shows that the former, when contrasted with the latter, were as the toys of childhood in comparison with the valuables of manhood. "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things." So the gifts of tongues, interpretation of tongues, etc., were given to the Church in its infancy, and served useful purposes then. But they were put away as the Church emerged from infancy to the strength and development accruing from a greater knowledge of God's great Plan. The milk of the Word and the strong meat of the Word were purposed by God to develop the members of the Body of Christ, until they all came to the stature of manhood in Christ. The more advanced the Christian, the more surely would he know that the gifts of the Spirit were merely like a childish plaything, to be supplanted by the fruits of the Spirit, much more valuable to the Church in its developed condition.—Hebrews 5:12-14.

St. Paul points us further to the fact that we are living not merely for the present, but especially for the future; and that whatever will last us into the eternal future must certainly be the most important matter for us to acquire. He would have us see that to the Christian that most important thing is the Love which he has described in our Study. Our knowledge, our tongues, etc., of the present time are mere shadows of the great powers which will be ours if we attain to the glorious blessings of the First Resurrection. Whatever clearness of sight we have at the present time we shall then find to be darkness in comparison with the full light of the glorious Millennial Day. Where now we see as through an obscure glass, then we shall see face to face. Now we know in part; then we shall know even as we are known.

The Apostle would have the Church see that faith, hope and love—three fruits of the Holy Spirit—are far superior to all the gifts of the Spirit; for these fruits will abide throughout the Age. Until the Millennial Morning we shall need faith, hope and love. We cannot get along without them. We cannot make any progress if the Master's footsteps without these qualities. But if we seek to contrast these imperfect qualities amongst themselves, he points out that the chiefest of these is love.

Love is the Divine quality without which we should still be unsatisfactory to God, even if we possessed all the other qualities which go to make up Christian character. Love is the quality which will persist to all eternity. If we would abide in Divine favor, we shall need always to have Love. As for faith and hope, excellent qualities though they be, the time will come when they shall be swallowed up by sight, by the actualities of the glorious condition of fellowship with the Lord. But love will never fail. Amongst all the graces of the Spirit it stands supreme and eternal.

Questions and Answers

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. A. they may do so, and they will be answered strictly according to those teachings which claim to be in harmony with the Bible. Address questions to the Question Department of the National Labor Tribune.

Question—Does the Scape Goat typify a class. If so explain Lev. 16-22, where it says the Goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities into a land not inhabited and he shall let go the Scape Goat in the Wilderness. I want an explanation of the wilderness, and the land not inhabited.

D. J. McWHARTER,
Rhonesboro, Tex.

Answer.—The Israelites occupied the space outside the Court and the Tabernacle, there they lived in their tents. Outside the camp was the wilderness, a barren place "not inhabited" by any one.

The Bullock and the Lord's Goat were both killed and their bodies burned outside the camp. The Scape Goat was taken alive out to the wilderness and there left to die.

We believe the Goats represent two classes, who present themselves at the door of the Tabernacle, Romans 12-1. The Lord's Goat class go willingly outside the camp and have their bodies burned. The Bullock, which is our Lord Jesus, went first, and the Apostle says: "Let us, therefore, go to Him, without (outside) the camp, 'bearing his reproach." This represents a condition of seperateness from the world, suffering, shame and ignomy for Christ's sake.

The Scape Goat class draw back from sacrifice, and are forced into the wilderness condition, for the "destruction of the flesh that the spirit may be saved in the Day of the Lord Jesus."

The Scape Goat class is in a condition not occupied by any others of mankind, outside the camp. The Lord's Goat class are out there too, but they are dead, and their bodies are being burned, but the others are alive—have not carried out their sacrifice unto death, which they agreed to do—but "through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage."

So they can be said to be in a "land not inhabited."

A DIRGE.

"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"
Here the evil and the just,
EIGHT TRIBUNE
Here the youthful and the old,
Here the fearful and the bold,
Here the matron and the maid
In one silent bed are laid.
Here the vassal and the king,
Side by side, lie withering:
Here the sword and scepter rust;
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

Age on age hath rolled along,
O'er this pale and mighty throng;
Those that slumber, those that sleep,
The grave shall soon no longer keep.
Brothers, sisters of the worm,
Summer's sun, or winter's storm,
Song of peace, or battle's roar,
Ne'er could break their slumbers more;
Death hath kept his sullen trust;
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

But a conflict's coming fast,
Earth, thy mightiest and thy last!
It shall come in fear and wonder,
Heralded by trump and thunder;
It shall come in strife and toil;
It shall come in blood and spoil;
It shall come in empire's groans,
Then, Ambition, rue thy lust!
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

Then shall come the judgment sign;
In the east the King shall shine;
Clashing from Heaven's golden gate,
Thousands, thousands round His state,
Kings and Priests with crown and plume,
Tremble, then, thou solemn tomb;
Heaven shall open on our sight;
Earth be blest with wondrous light,
Kingdom of the ransomed just!
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust."

Then thy Mount, Jerusalem,
Shall be gorgeous as a gem;
Then shall in the desert rise
Fruits of more than Paradise,
Earth by saintly feet be trod,
One great garden of her God!
Till are dried the martyr's tears
Through a thousand glorious years.
Now, in hope of Him, we trust;
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

hope you will come and make us a visit.

Your Sincere,
ELBERT HUBBARD

Mr. N. E. N. Berea,
Duquesne, Pa.
EH—S.

A good example of this slavery of men dwelling in the lime light, to their tenents and the freedom of those who absorb and feed upon them, is furnished in American politics. Their party spirit and diametrically opposite principles of the planks of their respective platforms are advocated by capable and brilliant men, why, no matter how evident they realize themselves in the wrong, cannot switch to the other party, as do the commoner, without the loss of their influence and prestige. The public are so accustomed to this ridiculous and strange spectacle of brilliant men divided on political issues, the one fighting the principles of the other, that it does not occur to them that they should publicly acknowledge the merits of their opponents or get together and hash out the truth. But, like the prize fight where the spectators see all the points the public gets the benefit and has also the privilege of expression, for they do not pose in the lime light or are on record as having espoused a certain set of principles. There are good reasons which will justify a public man in guarding his expressions, but in Hubbard's case his recognized opposition to all things religious has evidently contributed to this otherwise strange silence here noted, but those of the Roycroft fraternity who may handle and approve of his "Hot Stuff" may appreciate and speak without hindrance and fear of consequence. For example, contrast with the letter from Hubbard presented which gives no acknowledgment of Russell's merits, the following extract from a letter from John T. Hoyle, managing editor of The Fra, who, in commenting on our first essay published, "A Man of Action," said:

"Your treatment of your subject is very well done indeed and displays a philosophic insight into the secret springs of life and conduct that is decidedly interesting. I am particularly well pleased with your classification of Eliot, Hubbard and Russell, which seems to me an eminently just and wise distinction. Your expression 'Hubbard stands for the Heart of the common mind,' is very clever."

"Elbert Hubbard during his lifetime fought the good fight and did a man's part—both as a sayer and a doer; he dealt and received mighty blows, but at heart he was very gentle and considerate and never in his private life gave sign by word or deed that there was any bitterness in his heart toward his traducers. He possessed in an eminent degree the sense of humor, which kept him sweet and sane. He could laugh at himself—which is not so easy as it looks. Now that he has left the stage, his real nobility of character is being appreciated at something like its true worth.

"Pastor Russell is also doing a great work, the real effects of which may not be so apparent until he, too, has passed into the silence. I have met many ardent admirers of Pastor Russell—among them being my own brother—and although I have not been able to agree with their conclusions, I have yet noted that these men and women are among the most intelligent and prosperous in the community of which they are members."

WM. T. ELLIS SPECULATES.

Wm. T. Ellis has attributed the remarkable success of the movement to the business proclivites of Pastor Russell whom he regards as the "cleverest propagandist of the age" who "would have been a dangerous rival for John D. Rockefeller, had he gone exclusively into the oil business," and "I hold that his gifts are commercial." There is no doubt but that the pastor has commercial gifts, and that these have been used in his work. The only section of the entire movement dominated directly by Rusell's business principles is the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society in which he has the wage system of Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward" actually applied: merely living expenses are paid, all from the president down to the janitor, receiving a like wage. The plan works admirably in automatically sifting out drones and those seeking fishes and loaves from the whole office force of self-sacrificing Christians who live and dine at the "Bethel Home." What!—talented people working for mere expenses? who could command large salaries elsewhere? That is the situation exactly; and better still, they were loath to leave when they were obliged to of late on account of lack of funds to continue the work in full force.

Mr. Ellis' theory is proven to be incomplete by the history of the movement. The fact is the most redeeming features of it were forced upon the pastor by circumstances which he endeavored to overcome. What a skeptic would call an accident, is in fact providence. He, like Henry Ford, has succeeded beyond the wildest dreams of his imagination, except that he has used his entire fortune in the movement instead of amassing one; and in being an instrument in the hands of God in supervising the energies of these Christian people, and in being the channel of Dispensational Truth he has been well repaid. But Russell's success cannot be accounted for by the principles that created the Ford Motor Company or similar business institutions.

THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

"Great peace in Europe. Order reigns
From Tiber's hills to Danube's plains!"
So say her kings and priests; so say
The lying prophets of our day.
Go lay to earth a listening ear;
The tramp of measured marches hear,—
The rolling of the cannon's wheel,
The shotted musket's murderous peal,
The night alarm, the sentry's call,
The quick-eared spy in hut and hall!
From polar sea and tropic fen
The dying groans of exiled men!
The bolted cell, the galley's chains,
The scaffold smoking with its stains
Order—the hush of brooding slaves!
Peace—in the dungeon-vaults and graves!"

O Fisher! of the world-wide net,
With meshes in all waters set,
Whose fabled keys to heaven and hell
Bolt hard the patriot's prison cell,
And open wide the banquet hall
Where kings and priests hold carnival!
Speak, Prince and Kaiser, Priest and Czar!
If this be peace, pray what is war?

White angel of the Lord! unmeet
That soil accursed, for thy pure feet,
Never in slavery's dessert flows
The fountain of thy charmed repose;
No tyrant's hand thy chaplet weaves
Of lilies and of olive leaves;
Not with the wicked shalt thou dwell,
Thus saith the Eternal Oracle;
Thy home is with the pure and free!

Stern herald of thy better day,
Before thee to prepare thy way,
The Baptist shade of Liberty,
Gray, scarred, and hairy-robed, must press
With bleeding feet the wilderness!
O that its voice might pierce the ear
Of priest and princes while they hear
A cry of the Hebrew seer.
Repent! God's Kingdom draweth near!

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs, and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

CONVENTIONS TO BE ADDRESED BY PASTOR RUSSELL.

of
PASTOR RUSSELL
of the
LONDON TABERNACLE
and of
NEW YORK CITY
— TEMPLE —

DOUBTING CHRISTIANS DISHONOR THEIR GOD.

THE CHRISTIAN SHOULD HAVE FULL ASSURANCE OF HIS ACCEPTANCE OF THE LORD.

Comparatively Few Today Have This Assurance—the Reason For This Condition—Higher Criticism and Evolution Have Undermined the Faith of Many—Abandoning the Blasphemous Errors of the Past, the Majority are Casting Aside the Bible—The Apostle Warned That in the End of This Age Many Would Depart From the Faith—How Christians May Be Fully Assured of Divine Acceptance.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 15.—Pastor Russell was here today and addressed a large audience upon the theme, "Full Assurance of Faith." His discourse was based upon Hebrews 10:22—"Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." He said in part:

Full assurance of faith is something that every Christian should have; and yet we are all sadly aware that in our day but comparatively few professing Christians have this assurance. The great majority seem to be losing their faith; and, worse than this, they are in many cases losing the very foundation, or basis, for faith. For years the great colleges of Christendom have been undermining faith by undermining the Bible. They do not make an attack upon faith itself; indeed, they all admit that it has its place, and is a glorious quality. But straightway they proceed to do the same work that Thomas Paine and Robert Ingersoll tried to do—to undermine confidence in the Bible as the Word of God.

Confidence in the Bible is the very basis of faith. After one has lost his confidence in it as the Word of God, what has he left? He would have merely the vagaries and guesses of Higher Criticism and Evolution. We have very little use for guesses. We have little confidence in fallen flesh. We know that all men are imperfect in every sense of the word, that their judgments are exceedingly fallible. When men undertake to picture a God to their own liking, we have as many gods as there are men.

Looking into the past, we see what many of the noblest minds came to in the way of image-worship, bowing down to some of the worst idols that could be imagined; for more black misrepresentation can be done by pen and ink or by the printing-press than by making the most hideous idols of the heathen nations. The creeds of Christendom have carved out the worst idol in all the Universe. Yet great men made these creeds—men of noble minds. This shows us how little confidence we can have in any theory that men can evolve. We may be sure that if we had been in their places we could not have done any better. We are not finding fault with them. We are finding fault with the real source of the whole matter. This the Apostle Paul declares when he tells us that "the god of this world" has been responsible for this misleading. Satan has done this lest the light of God's goodness should shine into men's hearts.—2 Corinthians 4:4-6.

BASIS OF FAITH GONE WITH MANY

The Apostle also explains why it is that many Christians cannot see the light of the Gospel of Christ—the true Message of Salvation. Satan has gotten his bandages upon their eyes, and as a result they cannot see the things of God. The Apostles warned the Church that after their time many would depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons. (2 Peter 2:1-2; 1 Timothy 4:1.) We have come to the time when many good, intelligent people—including ministers in the various pulpits, professors, theologians, presidents of colleges, etc.—confess that they have lost the basis of their faith.

We are not for one moment to suppose that those who have lost confidence in the Bible as the Word of God are wicked people. On the contrary, the majority of them are fine, well-intentioned people. But they are under a delusion. The delusion of the Dark Ages coming in contact now with the full blaze of the New Dispensation just upon us, there is a conflict between the light of our day and the darkness of the past. There is such a clash that everybody sees stars, so to speak. People are astonished, and do not know what to think.

Some are still holding to the Bible in a sort of blind way, bewildered and uncertain as to their real position, hoping against hope that they will not lose what little faith they have left, afraid to think and afraid to read lest they be cast adrift in an unknown sea. We sympathize with these people. But the fact is that they never have had faith enough to worry about. It was not a well established faith, a full assurance of faith. On the contrary, it was a blind faith, a kind of credulity. They have hoped that they were of the Elect; but they had little or no conception of what is meant by election or to what this class were elected. In the light of our day such faith, or rather credulity, is crumbling to pieces.

THE CHRISTIAN'S FIRM FOUNDATION.

Yet at this very time when Higher Criticism and Evolution are undermining the foundation of religion, and when nearly all thinking people are losing faith in the Bible as the Word of God, how gracious our Creator has been to those who have retained their faith in His sure Word! The eyes of their understanding are opening more and more widely; and they are coming to see that the Bible is the most wonderful book in the world. Never before have God's people understood the Divine Plan as they do now, in the midst of the turmoil of all the denominations and of the learned men of all lands. Truly we can sing with the poet:

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in His excellent Word!
What more can He say than to you He hath said,
You who unto Jesus for refuge have fled!"

We have often wondered whether God did not partially inspire some of these precious hymns that have cheered, comforted and refreshed the Lord's people in their journey through the wilderness of this world; for they seem to fit so wonderfully our time and our condition, and the real knowledge of God's Word seemed so misty at the time when many of them were written. The strongest language would not be strong enough today to express the faith, the confidence, the trust, which we have in our God through seeing His real character and His real plan as outlined in His Word. This is full assurance of faith.

There is a vast difference, however, between a full assurance of faith and a full assurance of credulity. Credulity is a readiness to swallow everything and anything, without any real basis of believing, without proof. This is what most people have called faith. But it is not. Faith must have a basis; and the basis must have some intelligent presentation.

When asked, "Why do you believe the Bible?" many people will reply, "My father and my mother believed it; and I was taught to believe it." When asked as to what is their real basis of faith, they look bewildered, hesitate, and either acknowledge that they have none, or else change the subject of conversation. This is not faith; it is mere credulity. Heathen people could do as well; for their parents and their grandparents believed their heathen books. To really believe the Bible it is necessary that we understand it. That which gives us faith in the Bible is proof that it is the Word of God. To understand it we must understand God's Plan therein outlined; we must learn rightly to "divide the Word of Truth."—2 Timothy 2:15.

Higher Critics are busy trying to prove that Isaiah never wrote the book of Isaiah, but that it was written by different persons; that Moses never wrote the Pentateuch; that Daniel never wrote the book called by his name. The fact that Jesus and the Apostles quoted from these books and ascribe them to the very authors claimed in the books has no weight whatever.

THE BASIS FOR OUR FAITH.

Our confidence in the Bible is based upon the fact that it contains a great Divine Plan, far superior to anything that mortal man could have produced. Show me a watch with the wheels revolving with perfect a great Divine Plan, far superior to anything that mortal man could have precision and with perfect relationship to each other, a watch that keeps correct time without variation; and I shall know that some skilful hand, guided by an intelligent mind, made that watch. Such a piece of workmanship never came by chance. The hands did not get on the dial by accident. There was some intelligent power in operation there.

So it is with the Bible. When we find the prophesies of the Old Testament, the types of the Mosaic Law, and the teachings of our Lord Jesus and His Apostles all interlocking, based and dependent one upon another in the most marvelous way, all telling the same story, although written by various men, in various ages, and under various conditions, with Genesis describing the fall of man into sin, with Revelation portraying his recovery from that fall, with each intervening book corroborating both—tell me, who made that Plan? No one could convince me that any human being or set of human beings made it. The very conditions of today, so wonderfully fulfilling the prophecies of the Bible, are amongst the strongest proofs of its Divine inspiration.

AN ARGUMENT WITH AN INFIDEL.

Once in early life I had an argument with an infidel, who claimed that "the Bible was written by priests and knaves." When I asked him, "which set of priests and knaves do you think made it up?" he hesitated; for he had not anticipated that question. Then I suggested that we reason a little on the subject. I showed him that if any of the denominations had made the Bible, they would surely have put into it many things that are not there, and would have left out of it many things that are therein.

For instance, they do not know what to do with the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. Having a theory that at death people go to Heaven, Purgatory or Hell, they have no need of a resurrection. Yet they know that it is in the Bible. If ever they come across it in their reading, it is a sort of "thorn in the flesh" to them; for it disturbs their peace of mind. Nor do they know what to do with the Judgment Day. They must think the Judgment is past. Otherwise how could the dead be in Heaven, Hell or Purgatory? Then there is the theory of the Trinity, in which all, practically, believe, though not a word of Scripture justifies such a belief.

Surely our Calvinistic friends would not make up the Bible as it is today. Neither would our Arminian friends. The latter would surely leave out all of those texts which speak of an election, of foreordination, of predestination, of making our calling and election sure, of "the very elect," etc. The former would doubtless leave out some of the texts which tell about free grace; for these do not fit with their idea of election. Of course both would put in something about a Trinity; for all hold that theory as the very essence of faith. The thing which you cannot understand, and which is the most mysterious, is the most important!—1 Corinthians 8:6, 7; Ephesians 4:4-6.

THE BIBLE SIMPLE, REASONABLE.

But, dear friends, from the standpoint of itself the Bible is simple; and everything is thoroughly explained, when we get our mental telescope properly adjusted and see the wonderful Plan of God as it is mapped out in His Word. However, no amount of learning or of worldly wisdom or of knowledge will enable one to see this and to have a heart appreciation of it. The deep things of God are revealed only by His Holy Spirit. (1 Corinthians 2:10.) They are especially clear at this time, because God's due time has come for the full unfolding of His Plan. These deep things are revealed to the faithful, watching children of God, who are walking hand in hand with the Master, seeking in all things to be guided by Him.

Thank God for the Morning light! Thank God that we are living in the time when the path of the just is shining so brightly! For it was to shine more and more unto the perfect Day. (Proverbs 4:18.) Now the perfect Day is almost here. It is so near that we can see the first rays of its dawning, although before its full glory breaks upon the world the storm clouds will gather dark and gloomy, and soon will let fall "hailstones and coals of fire." But it is merely the darkness that precedes the full dawning.

The creeds formulated during the Dark Ages have greatly injured the whole world. Doubtless many people today are following sin who would, if they had a right knowledge of God, be following after righteousness. Many men have been led to drink, to debauchery and to all sorts of sin simply by reason of not seeing the true God. For any one to see the real God is to love Him. Mankind are made upon that basis. Notwithstanding the six thousand years of the Adamic fall, there is in every man's head—unless he be an idiot or in some way deformed—that quality of reverence of a Supreme Being and a desire to render worship.

PROFITABLE QUESTIONS FOR GOD'S PEOPLE.

The Christian's assurance of faith is based upon the Word of God and the realization that he has taken the various steps which God therein directs. He tells us that by nature we are sinners, that Christ Jesus tasted death for every man, that by and by He will give Restitution to human perfection to whosoever will accept the arrangement which He has made and which is soon to be opened up to all mankind. He tells us, too, that during this Gospel Age there is a Call for those who desire to come out from the world to be a peculiar people unto Him, a Royal Priesthood, a holy nation, zealous of good works, zealous of everything that is God's will, and ready to lay down their lives in the doing of it. Have you heard and accepted this Call?

To those Christians who do not have that full assurance regarding their standing with the Lord which they wish to have, and which is their privilege, we would suggest that they ask themselves the following questions:

Have I forsaken sin and accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as my personal Redeemer? Have I made a full consecration of myself to God through Christ, giving Him my time, my means, my all, surrendering myself fully to His keeping, to be henceforth guided by His Holy Spirit in all things as His will is made clear to me through His Word?

As I thus gave myself to the Lord, did I realize that I am still imperfect, and that my standing before God is only in Christ? Did I realize that thus He imputed, or counted, to me the perfection which He would otherwise give me in the next Age, in order that now I might lay it down in sacrifice with Jesus, sharing His sufferings and death that I might also share His glory, when His Kingdom is set up for the blessing of the world?

As the result of my consecration to the Lord, am I able, to some extent at least, to grasp spiritual things? Do they appeal to me? Am I gradually attaining a holy mind, a holy disposition? Do I desire above all things to do God's will, and is my holy mind bearing fruitage to the Lord's praise so that others can see it? Am I gradually growing more meek, more gentle, more patient, more long-suffering, more kind and loving? Is my heart growing broader, deeper and more sympathetic?

Whoever can say "Yes!" to these questions, even though keenly realizing, as all God's children should, that he has many imperfections, may have full assurance of faith that he is a child of God in full standing, that the Father's smile of approval is upon him, and that if he continues thus to develop in the likeness of Christ he will inherit the Kingdom as a joint-heir with Christ Jesus our Lord.

It is our Heavenly Father's will that we have this full assurance, that thus we may be kept in perfect peace of heart, and may demonstrate our trust in Him and in His precious promises, despite our suffering for righteousness' sake. But let us never suffer as busy-bodies in other men's matters. Yet if we suffer as Christians, let us glorify God on this behalf.—1 Peter 4:15, 16.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

HUBBARD'S STRANGE SILENCE.

The late Elbert Hubbard, who has espoused the cause of the modern business man that occupies the center of the stage of modern life, and who has had so much to say about, and assisted in the way of advertising for, the Sons of Jove, has been singularly silent concerning the I. B. S. A. concern. Perhaps it was on account of the nature of the goods handled; if his antipathy for theologians accounts for this, it proves his own observations from history that genius seldom recognizes genius contemporarily: "Voltaire and Rousseau were contemporaries; they expressed the same thoughts, each in his own way, absolutely independent of the other. And as genius seldom recognizes genius, neither knew the greatness of the other." Since Hubbard's career was closed by his tragic death on board the Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine, the writer was prompted to ascertain if he has ever said anything concerning the remarkable man of action—Pastor Russell. In reply to a letter sent to Elbert Hubbard II, Mr. John T. Hoyle, assistant editor of The Fra replied: "I have searched diligently through our material here and can find nothing that Mr. Hubbard has said concerning Pastor Russell. I do know, however, that Mr. Hubbard held the Pastor in great esteem."

Hubbard's "Essay on Silence" has special application here and had the blank pages of that booklet contained a notation of the achievements of the Brooklyn divine, it would be well worth the price set upon it by the Roycrofters. Since his observations of living men and measures has been noted to be of a remarkable scope, it is clear slavery to his own passions for this furnishes us a case of a brilliant and penetrating mind swayed by his antipathy for religion from mentioning the marvelous system and rapidity of the business features of the Russell propaganda, for he made it his hobby to write essays on this very line of thought. His "Message to Garcia" which has reached such an enormous circulation through being distributed extensively by the captains of industry amongst their employes, contains a splendid description of the faithfulness and effectual service of the people connected with the Watch Tower, Bible and Tract Society, both in the office and in the field. Many of the captains of industry and business men have recognized this fact for the "Russell-Lights" are trusted and in demand.

We cannot otherwise account for his silence on the teachings of Pastor Russell (for he made this line his special topic also) unless we apply his own statement here: "Genius seldom recognizes genius." Hubbard, like Ingersoll, has been railing at "Orthodoxy," especially fighting the flames of hell, and it is singular that he did not note this, to his viewpoint, commendable feature, since Russell's literature on the question has reached more people in his life time than that of Hubbard and Ingersoll combined. He has even given publicity to the Persian "prophet of peace," Abdul Baha. Why? Was this his reason for he said of him: "According to Abdul Baha we will soon live in a period of time that marks the beginning of the millennium—a thousand years of peace, happiness and prosperity." If so then no apologies can be offered in not being aware of Russell's teaching on hell, and the grand and glorious prospects for the future state of humanity, for the writer of these lines had occasion to call his attention to this very fact during the spring of 1908. We submit the following correspondence:

Duquesne, Pa., March 5, 1908.

Mr. Elbert Hubbard,
East Aurora, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Hubbard:—

Pardon a word from an unexpected source. I have just returned from Cincinnati, Ohio, where I heard the Russell-White debate, and a copy of The Philistines was in my mail awaiting me. Your remarks concerning Rev. Patterson and Rev. Harris naming you as a candidate for the inquisitorial benefits, prompted me to write. I was impressed with the thought that perhaps you would be interested to know that the Bible is not responsible for the horrors of the Dark Ages, the spirit of which, still lingers with some of the Orthodox preachers of our day, but that this practice of burning people at the stake was due to the doctrines of hell-fire borrowed from the Pagans and came into the church prior to the Dark Ages.

Pastor Russell is the only one in the field, so far as I know, that is calling attention to the fact that the Bible does not and never did teach the horrible doctrine. For this reason I take the trouble of sending you a copy of a special edition of the Cincinnati Inquirer containing a complete report of the debate in which Pastor Russell points out the facts concerning the origin of the doctrine of Hell.

I am aware of the fact that you do not like "theological quibbling" and for this reason you do not like St. Paul and others of his type. I agree with you that there is too much of this "quibbling" and not enough of the spirit of the Humble Nazarine, but Paul explained the reason for his "quibbling"—"I speak after the manner of men on account of your infirmities." He condescended to their level of reasoning in order to benefit them and hope you will tolerate this "quibbling" long enough to read the debate.

Right ideals is what makes good people. It is because we are getting rid of the horrible nightmare of the Dark Ages that we have a spirit of courtesy and benevolence in the world today. The best test that we can apply to any religion is the effect that it has on its votaries. I have not read all of your publications nor have I met any of the Roycrofters to judge concerning your religion, but I have yet to find a class of people that will compare with the love that is manifested between the votaries of Millennial Dawn. They are in my judgment the Greatest Lovers the world has ever seen, not by nature, but are so on account of their ideals and the cause they have espoused.

I have just recently come in contact with some of your writings and so far will say that I have had all that I have seen in yours (not through the eyes of Reason or Philosophy, but Faith) plus many things and would be interested to know what Pastor Russell has in his publications from your viewpoint.

Respectfully yours,
N. E. N. BEREA.

Thank you very much for your kind letter. I have received the newspaper, which you so kindly sent, and am reading the account of the debate with pleasure and profit.

THE APPEAL TO CAESAR

Acts 25:1-12.—October 15.

Festus the New Roman Governor of Judea—St. Paul's Enemies on the Alert to Injure Him—A New Plot Against His Life—St. Paul Unwilling to Accept a Discharge Respecting the Roman Court and to Stand For Trial Before the Sanhedrin—His Appeal to Caesar's Court.

"It is enough for the disciple that he be as his teacher, and the servant as his lord."—Matthew 10:25. R. V.

FELIX, the Roman governor of Judea, was succeeded by Festus; and, willing to curry favor with the Jews, he left St. Paul a prisoner, although confessedly he had found the Apostle not guilty of any infraction of the Roman law and was persuaded that St. Paul's enemies were frantically jealous of him. The two years of the Apostle's imprisonment doubtless afforded excellent opportunities for his mature study of the Divine Plan set forth in the Scriptures.

Festus, the new governor, went at once to Jerusalem, the center of his province, there to acquaint himself with the chief men of the people amongst whom he must preside as governor and judge. He was of a totally different character from his predecessor. The Apostle styles him "noble Festus," and history confirms the appellation.

Conspirators Against St. Paul.

St. Paul's enemies were on the alert to accomplish against him, through the new governor, what they had failed to do with Felix. Without delay they brought the case of St. Paul to the attention of Festus. However, after setting forth the arguments of Tertullus to prejudice the governor's mind, they feared to have a trial before him because of the weakness of their cause.

Apparently their explanation was that the Apostle's conduct had been an assault upon their religion, along lines which the Roman governor, unacquainted with their religious customs, would not be prepared to appreciate. Hence they proposed to Festus that, after all, their dispute with St. Paul was more along religious than civil lines, and that therefore the desirable thing would be that the prisoner should be delivered to the Sanhedrin at Jerusalem for trial according to Jewish law. Meantime, plans had been matured whereby in the name of God and religion the Apostle was to be assassinated on the journey from Caesarea to Jerusalem.

Alas, that in every Age, and in almost every religious system, the mental unbalance is such that in the heat of the moment atrocious crimes have been perpetrated in the name of God and holiness! What lessons we may learn from these excerpts of history!

When will mankind learn that as Justice is the foundation of the Divine Government (Psalm 97:2), everything contrary thereto must be displeasing to God? When shall we learn that the results of injustice will ultimately be more injurious to the doer than to the sufferer therefrom?

St. Paul Appeals to Caesar.

Governor Festus acknowledged his ignorance of the Jewish religion, and made no objection to the trial of the prisoner by the religious court of his countrymen. On Festus' return to Caesarea, he placed the proposition before St. Paul, asking him—because the Apostle was a Roman citizen—whether he were willing to accept a discharge as respected the Roman Court and to stand trial before the Sanhedrin.

The Apostle promptly replied that he would not consent to this; that as a Roman citizen he had a right to Roman privileges, and therefore appealed his case to Caesar's court at Rome, the imperial capital. He well knew the animosity of his countrymen, and realized that those who two years before were ready to assassinate him were probably still unchanged in heart.

Festus was placed in a peculiar position. In sending the Apostle to Rome, as he was obliged to do in the case of appeal of a Roman citizen, he must of necessity send some charges; and being a just man, he desired that the charges should be truthfully stated. Therefore he was puzzled to know what charges, if any, he could formulate against the Apostle.

Festus and King Agrippa.

Shortly after this, the ceremonies incident to the inauguration of Festus took place in Caesarea. King Agrippa of Galilee attended, his sister Bernice accompanying him. Although Edomites, the king and Bernice professed the Hebrew faith; and Festus, who had no knowledge thereof, embraced the opportunity to have their assistance in formulating charges against St. Paul, whose crime, if any, could be understood only from the Jewish standpoint. Hence the Apostle was called to give, before the king, Bernice, the chief captains of the military forces and the prominent citizens, his version of the enmity of his people against him.

St. Paul's course furnishes a good example for all of the Lord's people in similar circumstances. It is our privilege to avail ourselves of every right granted us by the laws of the country in which we live. But we should be submissive to the results.

ST. PAUL'S DEFENSE BEFORE KING AGRIPPA

Acts 26:1, 24-32.—October 22.

Preaching Christ to the Rulers—The Salient Features of the Gospel Emphasized—The Hope of Israel—The Selection of Abraham's Spiritual Seed The Long-Promised Messianic Kingdom—Israel to Be Blessed First Then All Mankind.

"I was not disobedient unto the Heavenly vision."—Acts 26:19.

OUR LAST STUDY showed us that St. Paul's appeal to Caesar's Court afforded the Apostle an opportunity of preaching the Gospel before people of prominence whom he could otherwise never have expected to reach. He seems to have appreciated the occasion thoroughly; for he made a stirring address, the theme of which was the circumstance of his own conversion, here narrated for the third time. Thus does God mysteriously work the counsel of His own will and cause the wrath of men to praise Him.

As a true gentleman, St. Paul opened his speech by complimenting King Agrippa, as much as he truthfully could, on the fact that the king was expert in all Jewish matters. The Apostle pointed to the fact that his course of life from youth was well known in Jerusalem and throughout the Jewish nation. If his countrymen would, many of them could witness to his strictness as a religionist. "And now," he declared, "I am on trial for my hope in the Promise which God made unto our fathers—a Promise which all Jews hope will have fulfilment.

St. Paul Before Agrippa.

The Hope of Israel.

Israel's hope centered in God's Oath-Bound Covenant to Abraham: "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Genesis 12:3; 22:15-18.) St. Paul was preaching that this Promise was in process of fulfilment; that Jesus of Nazareth, as the Son of God, by obedience to the Law and by His sacrifice of His earthly rights, had become the Head of this promised Seed of Abraham by His resurrection to the plane of spirit glory, honor and immortality. Moreover, he taught that since Pentecost the Lord was selecting from both Jews and Gentiles a "little flock," to be Messiah's Bride and Joint-heir, members of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham; and that when this selection is accomplished, The Messiah, Head and Body, in glory will set up the long-promised Kingdom of God, through which blessings will come first to Natural Israel and subsequently through Israel to all the families of the earth.—Galatians 3:8, 16, 29; Romans 11:7-15.

Surely St. Paul pointed to the prophecies telling of Messiah's sufferings and the glory to follow! All the Jews knew of the sufferings of Jesus and His followers. But they disputed His resurrection to glory and the hope that by and by His followers share His resurrection change. The whole dispute between the Apostle and the Jews was in respect to whether Jesus arose from the dead. No valid hopes could be built upon a dead man. If Jesus arose, St. Paul and the followers of Jesus were right; for His resurrection to glory should be considered a demonstration of Divine approval and of the Messiahship which Jesus had claimed.

St. Paul explained how once he also had opposed Jesus and had persecuted His followers. He described the revelation given him near Damascus—the light above the brightness of the sun, and the voice saying, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest." Then he explained the commission he had received from the Lord on that occasion—that he was to preach to the Gentiles, as well as to the Jews, the resurrection of Jesus, the gathering of His Elect and, in due time, the establishment of His Kingdom.

Festus heard with amazement the Apostle's recital. Then, interrupting the speaker, he said, "Thou art beside thyself. Much learning doth make thee mad." But St. Paul replied, "I am not mad, most noble Festus, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness. King Agrippa knoweth these things." Then he appealed to Agrippa: Did not the king believe the prophecies cited?

Almost Persuaded.

Agrippa's reply is a matter of dispute—whether he said, "With a little more time and eloquence you might persuade me to be a Christian"; or, "Do you think that in so brief an argument you could make of me a Christian, with all of discredit which that word means?" St. Paul's reply (Verse 29) favors the former interpretation. A nobler sentiment, a broader spirit of charity, in a prisoner, falsely accused and unjustly restrained, cannot be imagined. Only those who have learned of Jesus could thus exemplify the moderation which He taught.

How many in Christian lands have been "almost persuaded" to lay hold of Divine grace, but have lost their appreciation of the privilege! When they shall come forth from the grave and enjoy the privileges of the Millennial Kingdom, it will amaze them to know what greater opportunities they missed—joint-heirship with Christ.

LABORERS RAISE WAGES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9.—Every contractor in this city has accepted the new $3 minimum wage rate of the United Laborers' union. About 1,200 workers are directly affected, but the movement will result in raising wages of all classes of unorganized laborers.

hood members, and to give no consideration to the interests of the other 1,500,000 railway employes.

Although the President was holding lengthy conferences daily with the brotherhood leaders, he would not receive your representatives even for a few minutes, to present to him the petition signed by 105,000 railway employes, and to ask for justice for the remainder of the unorganized 80 per cent.

Later, copies of the petition, with thousands of signatures which were mailed to the President, apparently received no attention from him.

From the fact that the conference of the President with the Board of Mediation, the managers and the brotherhoods did not consume all of his time on any of the days during that long period we are at a loss to understand why he would not even hear our side of the case.

Limitation of Adamson Law.

We feel in duty bound to give you these facts as to the Adamson law:

1. It applies only to one class of railway employes—the small class engaged in railway train service.

2. It does not attempt to establish a real eight-hour work day for this class, but merely an eight-hour payday.

3. It does not require any employe to work eight hours a day, nor restrain him from working any number of hours under 16.

4. It provides that after January 1 the employes in train service shall receive for eight hours' work the present pay for 10 hours. This means nothing but a 25 per cent increase in wages for those working eight hours or longer.

5. It absolutely ignores the rights, the welfare and even the existence of the other 80 per cent of railway employes.

6. By voting a 25 per cent increase of wages to 20 per cent of railway employes, and these the very highest paid men in the service, it necessarily renders it more difficult, or even impossible, for the railway companies to make improvements in the wages and conditions of work of the other 80 per cent.

Want Investigation.

We do not think that the enactment of the Adamson law, under attendant circumstances, is in accordance with the fundamental principles of the American nation and believe that, inasmuch as the government has taken jurisdiction of the matter, we should as citizens appeal to the President and Congress at the next session of Congress and insist that all railway employes be considered and a commission be appointed to investigate all hours of service and wages of all such employes.

Copies of letters which passed between Mr. Frazier and the President are appended and explain themselves.

Yours,
P. W. WALDEN,

Railwaymen's Labor Trouble Settled

M. P., and representatives of three or four of the interests affected.

Stephen Walsh, Labor Member of Parliament and president of the Workmen's Section of the Coal Conciliation Board for England and North Wales, presided at a conference of delegates from the mining districts of the federated area in England and North Wales, held at Blackpool on September 22nd. Some 350,000 workmen were represented. In his presidential address Walsh said that since their last conference wages of miners in the federated area had advanced by successive stages to the maximum figure under the present agreement. Every leader in the federated area was desirous of standing by the agreement arrived at in the middle of 1915. But all agreements in an industry like coal mining were based upon the maintenance of conditions approximating to the normal, and they could not be indifferent to the fact that, although the nominal standard of wages was the highest ever reached in the English and North Wales area, yet, while that standard was being secured, a most serious and continuous fall in the purchasing power of wages was taking place.

During the last two years Government control and ownership had greatly developed in many directions, and would, he thought, continue to do so. For every purpose of war and peace the coal mining industry had proved vital to the national existence. He was satisfied that the views of the general public as to State ownership of mines and minerals had materially changed. Three years ago he had the honor, under the ten minutes' rule, to submit a bill with that object to the House of Commons. It was promoted by the Miners' Federation, and was met by the thinly-veiled contempt of most members of Parliament. The painful experience of the public during the last two years would, he thought, ensure for any similar bill a more cordial reception. In the course of the negotiations with the employers' representatives over the recent wage advances no point had been so strongly urged by them in opposition to the workmen's claims as the great increase in the cost of production, and in no single commodity necessary for the working of the mines had the increase been so marked as in pit timber. Before the war it was estimated that Great Britain was dependent upon foreign countries—Sweden, Norway, Russia—for more than 80 per cent of the timber used at the mines. Conditions arising out of the war gravely handicapped these sources of supply, thus compelling colliery owners to rely far more upon home-grown timber. A great advance in prices followed, which, in his opinion, would have been much greater but for the timely intervention of the Home Office. But surely, he said, the true remedy for such a state of things was to initiate large schemes of afforestation, so that in the future they might find within their own land the material necessary for carrying on fundamental industries such as coal mining.

The most important proposals to come before the conference are that applications be made for a further advance in wages, regardless of the maximum, should the selling price continue to increase, and that five shifts be regarded as a week for men employed at night.

WANT LABOR LAW AMENDED.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 9.—At the first convention of Massachusetts physicians and surgeons ever held in this state it was decided to urge an amendment to the workmen's compensation law that would permit injured workers to select their own doctor. The act now provides that medical attendance shall be supplied by the insurance associations interested. It was also decided to take a more active part, as a body, in legislation affecting the health and welfare of the people, and a committee was appointed for this purpose.

STAGE EMPLOYES ADVANCE.

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—The local union of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes has secured a two-years' contract with the large play houses of this city. Conferences made possible recognition of the union and wage increases that totaled in some instances 40 per cent.

TO INVESTIGATE COSSACKS.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 9.—The state police is to be investigated as a result of the riot in this city on the night of September 11 when these cossacks rode down Wilkes-Barre citizens. Brutality charges have been laid before Governor Brumbaugh by President Maurer of the state federation of labor.

COAL MINERS TO DEMAND A 7-HOUR WORKING DAY

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Oct. 16.—Demands for a seven-hour day will be made by coal miners of the country at coming wage conferences, according to John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, speaking at the Miners' Day celebration held here. Such a move is necessary, he said, in order to conserve the economic and social welfare of members of the miners' organization and results from the increase in the use of mining machines.

President White reviewed the progress made by the miners' union, declaring that the men by their collective efforts have raised themselves practically from the condition of serfdom to that "of respect in the eyes of the whole community."

"The persecution of our people in some sections where our organization has engaged in industrial strife is without parallel," he added. "Particularly do I refer to the great strikes of Colorado, West Virginia and certain sections of Pennsylvania. But the steady entry of our movement into these citadels of opposition is bearing fruit and the opposition to the establishment of our union is gradually yielding to the enlightening influences of the organization and wage increases and reduction in hours of labor are being accomplished in the interest of these deserving fellow workers."

Thousands of miners from all parts of eastern Ohio attended the celebration and participated in a parade which preceded the address of President White. Other speakers were William Green, international secretary and treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America; John Walker, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and John Moore, president of the organization of miners in Ohio.

Miners' Day is being celebrated throughout eastern Ohio here, with a big picnic dinner and speechmaking.

MORE PROFIT; LESS WAGES.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—The Remington Arms Company has begun a "weeding-out" process among the thousands of workmen who rushed to the new plant at Eddystone when the firm began the manufacture of army rifles for the allies.

More than 2,000 workmen have been discharged during the last few days. The company does not contemplate reducing its force. The present action is in the nature of a "housecleaning" to reduce expenses and increase efficiency of the working force. More men will be hired until the force is brought ultimately to 20,000 men.

RAILROAD SHOP MEN GAIN.

DuBOIS, Pa., Oct. 16.—Over 1,000 Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railroad shop men organized, but were almost immediately forced on strike because of discrimination. After a two-days' suspension of work, the management agreed that all men would be reinstated in their former positions and that there would be no discrimination because of union affiliation. Wages were increased 15 per cent for day workers and 10 per cent for piece workers. Improved shop conditions were also agreed to. The shop men of the same road at Salamanca, N. Y., and Punxsutawney, Pa., were then organized. These workers were successful in securing the same agreement as at DuBois.

50,000 COMPENSATED.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 16.—Nearly 50,000 awards for compensation have been made in the nine months that the state compensation law has been in existence. The total number awards that became effective without contest on either side was 34,950, and the referees decided 1,300 additional cases. Only 117 appeals were made to the board from decisions of the referees, while the number of cases taken to the courts was an even dozen.

HOW E. V. BABCOCK SWATS DEMOCRACY

The Much Promised Cheap Beef Steak and Rib Roast Now Only for the Idle Rich.

It was E. V. Babcock, the successful lumber merchant and financier, who flayed Democracy for the empty promises and the pledges made four years ago, which have become absolutely worthless. The low prices for provisions and clothing are no longer being played upon. Democracy is now holding a club over the heads of the employers of labor and threatening disaster if manufacturer or merchant refuses to whip into line or coerce the employes. The Pittsburgh district is threatened with the removal of the Armor plate business to a plant to cost $11,000,000, said plant to be constructed, not for the purpose of giving men employment, but with the specific charge that it is a splendid bait for voter and that another cabinet office may be created. There is not a political trick which the National Democratic Committee is not playing and the most cunning and desperate is that involving the armor plate appropriation, which is meant to intimidate and threaten the financiers and buncombe the various communities alleging to bid for the political hold-up. After November the United States Senate will be controlled by the Republican Party and Democracy will have gone to pieces. In his address at the noon-day meeting Mr. Babcock said:

"Laying aside all the claims which the Republican Party has on the suffrage of the American people at this particular crisis in its hirtory, let us consider just this one question: 'Has the Democratic Party made good?'

"Four years since the Democrats were specific in their promises. Economy and efficiency, non-partisan statesmanship, guarantees to uphold the National honor, remedies for patent wrongs—nothing was left uncovered by that famous document known as the Democratic platform of 1912. Upon that they made their stand and by its carrying out they will have to be judged by the American people.

"Starting with the pledge of one-term for the President—which may fairly be cited as an example of how the Democratic Party and its leaders tried to keep faith with the American people—their performances have never come within hailing distance of their promises nor in most cases was any attempt made to redeem them. To tell the sorry tale of the sordid partisanship, the wasteful extravagance, the class legislation, the hollow pretence, already written in history, would serve only to add to the shame which their course has caused in the hearts of patriotic Americans.

"As the greatest industrial center in the world Pittrburgh is vitally interested in such conduct of the government as will subserve and conserve the interests of the employer of labor as well as the employe. A protective tariff, created and maintained by the Republican Party, is the one thing which made this community industrially great and no true Pittrburgher can encourage tariff tinkering which will unsettle the steady employment of our people. No one will attempt to deny that the Underwood Tariff bill closed our mills and factories and caused widespread disaster until the European war brought again temporary prosperity. How necessary then to see to it that after the war is over a Republican protective tariff law be on the statute books. This alone ought to suffice to roll up a Republican majority in this county like that which caused Abraham Lincoln to christen us as "the State of Allegheny."

"Historically, (their antics on protection and a Tariff Commission for campaign purposes in the recent Congress to the contrary notwithstanding), the Democratic Party believes in a tariff foi revenue only. Thir permits of no protection against pauper labor from Europe or protection from its handiwork. It is the purest faliacy to assert and try to maintain that removing the tariff on commodities will automatically bring about better conditions for all the people. Yet such was the guarantee of the Democratic Party in 1912. Their platform said:

> 'The high cost of living is a serious problem in every American home. Excessive prices result in a large measure from the high tariff laws enacted and maintained by the Republican Party * * * and we assert that no substantial relief can be secured for the people without import duties on the necessaries of life are materially reduced.'

Pittsburghers will remember that display window on Smithfield street containing all sorts of household necessities which the tags said would be reduced by so much if the Democratic Party was entrusted with power. How well was this pledge kept? A Democratic Congress was elected and the tariff was revised according to their ideas. The following table prepared in large part by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor will answer the question for every American housewife:

	1912	1916
Sirloin steak	20c per lb.	30c per lb.
Round Steak	18c per lb.	25c per lb.
Rib Roast	18c per lb.	28c per lb.
Pork Chops	16c per lb.	25c per lb.
Ham	16c per lb.	22c per lb.
Lard	15c per lb.	20c per lb.
Eggs	28c per doz.	40c per doz.

BIG FAKIRS ALL READY FOR HOLIDAY SEASON

Furniture Fakirs, Jewelry Trimmers, Fur Skinners, Auctioneers and New Suit Schemers All in a Big Game to Plunder the People

WARNING.

All Shoppers Take Notice

THE GREATEST FAKIRS ARE HERE

All Ready for the Great Trimming and Public Skinning Season.

The fake furniture dealer is on the ground. The fake jeweler is also with us and the fake fur man will be here within the next, two weeks, while the prince of bargain men—the fake auctioneer—like a tuberculosis germ sticks to the finish. Come along, don't be discouraged before running the gauntlet. There is the cheap new suit man pulling over something equally as raw as the furniture fakir, the jewelry hold-up man, the fur skinner or the go-thro-him auction clique.

Shoppers should know something of the methods of this marvelous gang and how they work. The out-of-town shopper, as well as the resident buyer should be guarded and the fakir must be avoided. The fakir must not be looked for on the street corner but in stores exhibiting most elaborate displays. The show windows are crowded with baits and how alluring these baits are is apparent when close observers on the outside see the suckers biting. It is a carnival of bunk and junk.

The fake furniture man has one large store which he calls the "wholesale" house and he has a number of small stores, located near the big stores that are doing big advertising. When shoppers seek the large legitimate stores the "barkers" of the fake stores point to the great "bargains" in the windows of the small fake furniture stores. The furniture is marked probably one-half or one-fourth below the actual cost. This is good bait and the victim bites. No article is sold from the small fake store, but the shopper is taken to the "wholesale" house, where the selection is greater and there the trimming is done to perfection. The victim then is shown expensive furniture as bargains and articles selected and paid for but when the delivery is made the articles delivered to the home of the unfortunate shopper are nothing compared to the articles selected. The customer then returns to complain but instead of a business-like reception the "salesmen" of the fake furniture house crowd around and there the shopper meets with the most abusive and insulting language. Threat, eventually is made to smash the shopper in the face if he or she persists in demanding what is just. And if the argument continues it is nothing unusual to have the one making the complaint thrown out. Another gag is to go to the 'phone and under the pretense that the police is being called a "salesman" from one of the fake chain of small stores is called; he comes under the impersonation of an officer from the police station; he takes the intruder by the arm and pretends to make an arrest. The game is well worked and the sharks equal the most expert gang of thieves that ever infested this city. Beware! The Tribune cries, BEWARE! In buying furniture seek a legitimate house. The Tribune carries no advertising of fakirs. The Tribune has been offered the advertisements of fake houses and has rejected them. Nothing doing with the burglars so far as the Tribune is concerned. The subscribers of the Tribune are warned against the thieves.

The fake jeweler is the next. Nine out of every ten alleged jewelry stores in Pittsburgh and crowded along the principle thoroughfares are deliberate fakes. Recently a purchaser bought a diamond ring with a single setting. For several weeks he wore it and during that time his associates at intervals twitted him about the apparent fraud. Finally, without making it known to his friends he went to a legitimate jeweler and had the stone tested. The jeweler was asked to put a price upon it and said, "the ring and setting is worth at the highest $50." The owner had paid $160.00 for the ring and setting. He took it back, asked for the return of his money but the jeweler refused the demand.

However, he was permitted to make another selection. This time he selected what he thought was a most beautiful ring with three magnificent settings. He took the second ring to have it tested and after the jeweler examined it he remarked, "The first ring was a lemon this one is nothing but a handful of brick." The case is now in the hands of Attorney R. G. Woodside.

In the windows of the jewelry fakirs there are valuable jewels offered at approximately oue-fourth of their actual cost. These are on display in the window but never sold. They are the baits for the unsuspecting and are there merely to deceive and allure into the store.

Amalgamation of Big Trade Unions.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—One of the most interesting features of modern trade union development in this country is the steady progress of the amalgamation idea. We are still a long way short of the "one craft one union" idea but gradually things are building up that way. Already we have an array of individual unions that have long since passed in membership and financial standing all the old records. Others are coming along. Negotiations are now proceeding for the amalgamation of the Dock, Wharf, Riverside and General Workers' Union (Ben Tillett's organization) with the National Union of General Workers, formerly the Gasworkers' Union, of which Will Thorne, M. P., is the general secretary. A joint conference of the two unions has been appointed to formulate the terms and conditions of the scheme. The Dockers' Union has a membership of 45,000, and the National Union a membership of 132,000.

Although trade unionists have worked and are working so wonderfully well to help along the national side of the present European war they are not altogether overlooking their own union questions. The South Wales and Monmouthshire railwaymen have just held an important convention at which it was decided to ask the national executive to fix a date when the railway corporations would be notified that members of the National Unioin of Railwaymen finally and definitely refused to work any longer with non-unionists.

The postal workers' unions are watching closely the question of wages—a question of pre-eminent importance in these days when the cost of living rises every month. In the month of July last year Sir James Woodhouse, as Government arbitrator, awarded a certain war bonus, which it was stated "should continue so long as the increased prices continued." During the present year the committee of the allied postal workers' union was compelled to ask for an increase of wages, and a claim was submitted to the Postmaster General, which Postmaster-General Pease agreed to put before the Government. H. Dubery, who is voicing the postal workers' g rievances, a dds: "In September the Government, ignoring our demands, decided, without consultation with us, to withdraw the arbitrator's award of July, 1915, to the postal servants, and having awarded a war bonus to the Civil Service substituted this new award as an answer to the request for a wage increase. The effect of this is that a demand of from $1.25 to 75 cents to males and females alike is met by a war bonus increase of 25 cents for men and 12 cents for women; nothing for those in receipt of more than $15.50; and the abrogation of the Woodhouse award, so that the increase lasts for the period of the war only, instead of while prices remain high. It will be seen that the demands of my committee have in no way been met. My committee challenges the right of the Government as employers to abrogate an arbitrator's award without the consent of all the parties thereto. The demand was for a wage increase and not a war bonus. It was in addition to, and not in substitution of, the Woodhouse award. It was for an amount which still left a goodly proportion of the burden on the shoulders of the men. My committee has decided to press for arbitration on the original demand for a wage increase."

The introduction of female cop packers in the Lancashire cotton mills to replace men called to the colors is referred to in the quarterly report of the Oldham and District Cop Packers' Association. All firms employing females in such a capacity, the report states, should first give an undertaking to the association that females would be employed only until male labor was available and on the same terms and conditions as male labor.

The efforts made to secure the inclusion of cop packers in the list of cotton trade reservations (which would have made the whole of the male cop packers not available for military service) had so far proved unsuccessful. In view of military necessities they could not entertain much hope of further representation being made with regard to the subject, as there were pronounced indications that in the near future many of the cotton trade exemptions would be abolished. They considered that taking into account all the circumstances with regard to the official manipulation of cotton trade exemptions cop packers had been humiliated and made the victims of an unjust discrimination.

BIGELOW THE MASTER CITY BUILDER

May Be the New Director of the Department of Public Works Under Mayor Armstrong.

Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong, through the sudden death of Director Robert Swan, has thrust upon him one of the most important tasks that has fallen to his lot since he has been in office and the politicians are now busily engaged naming a successor to the late director.

The most important names already mentioned are State Highway Commissioner Edward Manning Bigelow, Ex-Secretary of the Commonwealth, Robert McAfee, Ex-Councilman William G. Wilkins, one of Pittsburgh's great mining and civil engineers, and John Swan, brother of the deceased director. In the event of delay in the appointment, the name of Superintendent Charles Finley has been mentioned as acting director. It is intimated that Mr. Finley would not care to accept an appointment for the remainder of the term of the present administration, as under the law his present office is under civil service and this assures him a place under the next administration.

The concensus of opinion is that no name mentioned bringr so much general satisfaction as that of Ex-State Highway Commissioner Bigelow, and should his health permit, he will undoubtedly be made the next Director, an office which he is more familiar with than any man who has ever filled it. Bigelow, he of statue fame, is a master city builder, a great municipal giant, a civic monster, the incomparable road builder, and the matchless park planner. He who transformed garbage dumps into gardens of blooming beauties and through his marvelous genius and indefatigable energies taught the rose to lift itself above the ash heaps to spend its sweetness at the door of the humble as well as the affluent.

Edward Manning Bigelow, a name honored at every fireside and a by-word on every city boulevard. He changed the barren wastes into magnificent city parks. Like Moses, he touched the rock with a wand and a crystal stream leaped forth to rush over cascade and falls, aye, he went beyond that, he struck the ground and stately trees came into being to wave their welcome to the morning sun. Stroll through the parks, roll over the boulevards, lounge beneath the shade of the majestic trees, observe the flowers bowing their heads to the gentle summer zeyphers, wollow on the green in the perfumed ladened atmosphere and amid the scenes and in and through it all there is an indescribable intuition that suggests Bigelow. The very mention of his name gives an astounding thrill as well as an amazing satisfaction that if Bigelow undertakes the task it will be accomplished regardless of its difficulties or the obstacles that may threaten to impede the progress. Then, too, it will be done and better than any one as yet has been able to do similar work.

Think of the vast undertakings of Bigelow and the cost in the aggregate as they may now be measured. The great parks, the wonderful boulevards, the beautiful drive-ways and walks, as well as shady nooks and a thousand and one things that bring pleasure, recreation, profit, and makes Pittsburgh greater; then, too, remember that all these great improvements were made on one-fourth the present assessed valuation of the homes and besides on a 12 mill tax levy and you have only a slight conception as to what economy was practiced by Edward Manning Bigelow, when he was Director of the Department of Public Works. In addition to building the great boulevards, improving the barren wastes and transforming shale heaps into beautiful parks he built city streets, constructed sewers, extended the water mains and pushed through to practical completion the greatest filtration plant in any city of this country, and all, all, yes all accomplished on a 12-mill tax and a valuation so low that the people of the greatest industrial center in the world could do no other than rise up and call him blessed. To symbolize this, that magnificent monument was built to his memory and well does he deserve it. How little and frail in expressing the gratitude of a grateful people to a genius who has done so much; how empty and meaningless are words in an effort to express an appreciation to one who has achieved so much. The monument stands at the entrance of Schenley Park, a tribute enjoyed by but few living men. All Pittsburghers point to it with pride; it is not blemished with extravagance in office nor marred with graft; it is as immaculate as the snow-capped peaks of the Alps, and without spot or wrinkle.

If Mayor Armstrong would appoint a master mind whose genius to perform Herculean tasks is known in every home; if Mayor Armstrong would bring everlasting credit to his administration and climax it with an act that would live in history, he should then make Edward Manning Bigelow his Director of Department of Public Works, and Mayor Armstrong will then name the next Mayor of the City of Pittsburgh to succeed himself. Besides Bigelow the Builder of Cities, the Civic Genius, is the best organizer in the state today. Since he left the State Highway department that deparment has become a joke and a lieing, cheating governor has become a monumental farce. Had Bigelow remained at the head of the State Highway Department and been given the genuine support of the administration to which Mr. Bigelow was entitled, the people would have built at every cross roads a monument to the

HENRY DRUMMONDISM.

Copyrighted Property—all Rights Reserved.

BY ALPHIA BEREA.

As indicating how Satan's modern delusion—Darwinism—can blind the perception of the votaries of this sophism, we place a remark from Henry Drummond concerning the present state of society:

"The world is about as good as might be. It has been long in making, it's furniture is all in, it's laws are in perfect working order; and although wise men at various times suggest improvements, there is on the whole a tolerably unanimous vote of confidence in things as they exist."

It is really amusing to note how speculators on Darwinism (Evolution applied to the creation of man) resort to subterfuge to give an account for this serious obstacle to their theory—man's depraved condition as depicted in the Bible and in history—by applying the principles elsewhere noted in Nature, that man has become a victim of "Arrested Development" and how they endeavor to apply the principle, "Reversion to Type," "Survival of the fittest," etc. The fact is constantly intruding itself from History and the Constitution of Man, that man is a separate and special creation, but out of his natural state by being driven from his original Edenic environments. Drummond's question serves to illustrate how this type of speculators are blinded to one of the most evident facts of history and experience—man's alienation and estrangements from his proper environments and Creator.

Speculators of other types, such as Henry T. Finck, have dabbled into history, and like the man with colored glasses who sees everything tinted, with their minds inoculated with the Darwinian theory, the facts of history, like the facts from the Book of Nature, have been prostituted to illegitimate purposes. They have endeavored to account for the origen of every emotion of man in the lower animals and savages, and traced it's development in the annals of literature of nations that have kept records. Their claim is that a superior race is being developed through the Transforming power of Romantic Love through the laws of heredity—"Selectual Selection." If Nature is evolving a superior race, then why all this prattle about Eugenics or "Artificial Selection?"

Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, the last giant of the original Darwinian school, admits that history proves the theory of "Natural Selection" a failure, and that Eugenics is the only possibility of the evolution of the race, but thro some other social regime where women have more freedom of choice in marriage. He also points out that this would not be sufficiently cumulative to offset the downward tendency noted in history, and in instances where improvement is attained through heredity, it is usually at the expense of vital force.

This has been proven in many instances which we will refer to in another essay dealing with that quest not properly belonging here. But granting, for the sake of argument, a race improved upon through heredity and vital forces increased, this would still not be sufficient to maintain that state—for man's nature is not entirely functunal as with lower animals. Man has been created to be governed principally by his reason and morals, which is his "image" and "likeness" to his Creator. Being created to be governed by principle, good or bad, with the powers of choice as to which (volition), accounts for the fact that man rises above and sinks below the brute creation in their love and procreative powers, and, this endowment, the solace for human woes, if not fused with religious ethics, becomes a vitiating and consuming fire. Whether Wallace has noted this fact or not matters little since his deductions from history is in line with the Bible account and against the much vaunted evolutionary theory applied to man: "I have come to the general conclusion that there has been no advance either in intellect or morals from the days of the earliest Egyptians to the keel-laying of the latest dreadnaught."

Evolution, the radii of Rationalism, is applicable to man, but is restricted to the unfoldment of his God-given endowment in experience. As indicating the truth that these so-called Higher Critics have perverted and have thrown them off the scent, we mention a few items.

Briefly we state that man, represented in Adam and Eve, the generators of the race in transmitting the "spark" of life to their progeny, was created (1) originally perfect, phrenologically and this endowment has been marked by the fall through the laws of heredity; but the principle of evolution in the sense of progress is applicable to man in certain directions, in the unfoldment of that endowment transmitted to Adam's posterity in life or experience. Man has been endowed with an instinctive appreciation of right and wrong principles and the existence of evil serving the purpose of elucidating good and developing character in those who adopt the right principles in life, does not necessarily mean that evil is good, or that evil is to be a permanent thing in the Divine program; but, with the temporary existence of evil, the principles of evolution are applicable only to the development of character, which, when the altruistic principles are adopted, is created in the world's stream of life; this is a very limited application of this principle on account of the scarcity of good and few strive against the stream. The application of the evolutionary principle to the race collectively is also very limited, being true only in the cumulation of knowledge or education, the results of experience recorded in history and science and the Bible, serves to hold the balance measurably true in offsetting the downward tendency of the original God-given endowment through the laws of heredity, which has reached the border-line of insanity, generally, intellectually and morally, and denegerating to the extent that the original spark of life is being extinguished—the vital forces are ebbing away in those where the balance, not capacity is measurably restored through heredity. Heredity ("vertical" evolution which produces individuality) is to fail by losing vitality due to the fact that man is out of his proper environments, which also prohibits the proper growth of personality ("horizontal" evolution) owing to the existence of evil, the results of error.

The "Golden Age" of Jewish prophecy, later clothed in the garb of theology, is where good predominates evil, the individual opportunity of coming into contact with the principles of righteousness (Universalism) is in the future life beyond the grave, through the RE-generation of the human race from the grave, by the Great Corporate Christ, developed and tried during this Gospel Age (Pre-Millinnialism) to be the future spiritual ruling power that succeeds Satan's present regime (Post-Millennialism), poetically styled the second Adam and Eve, in being the second life-giver and nourish them back to the ideal perfection represented in Adam before he was sexed—a complete Hu-Man. In the perfect environments of which Eden was only a sample, man will develop by gradual restitution (Acts 3:21) "o fall things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets," or in other words we have the full application of the principles of evolution to man's organism as well as to his character. The incorrigible wicked being finally destroyed in the Second Death, the evil goes with them Right here we wish to intrude a lesson taught by a story concernng the reformers. That story published in the Tribune pointed out the hardening effects that a large percentage of error in combination of Truth has upon the human heart, as illustrated in the lives of St. Augustine and Calvin, as against St. Paul and Luther the channels of Truth. To rehearse the detailed effects of error and truth upon these men—one in the direction of intolerance and bondage and the other in the direction of good will and liberty—is not necessary. The doctrine of indulgence produced profligacy, corruption and licentiousness of the priesthood, and the disease and misery of the Dark Ages in general are the results of their fear produced by their superstition. Luther's doctrine of "the just shall live by faith" purified the lives of those that were influenced by it, and Calvin's doctrine of predestination applied to man's volition counteracted this by shifting the responsibility from the individual to the Creator who supposedly ordained their course in life.

Here is a bitter rosé for our proud "philosophers" of an agnostic cast who insist that "theological quibbling" has nothing to do with ethics—such as Hubbard, who insisted that religion and morals are two distinct elements that will not blend. The lesson from history is to the very reverse—that intellect and morals and physical well-being are all related. Man has been endowed with intellect and it must be fed, either with truth or error, or varying combinations of both and the larger percentage of truth promotes health of mind and body, as well as enlarges the morals and benevolence.

Hubbard's contention that health of mind and body is in ratio to the desolution of the superstition of the Dark Ages, and Russell's theology to the effect that Satan is to be bound for a thousand years in order to deceive the natives no more and the subsequent restitution to follow in the human race amount to about the same. Hubbard centered more on the rational proposition of "Love, Laughter and Work," and Mrs. Eddy supplying the proposition "There is no evil, all is good." ("The truth that she was feeling after, but did not fully grasp, is that sin, sickness, sorrow, death, are abnormal conditions, resulting from the curse that came upon our race at the beginning because of disloyalty to God."—Pastor Russell). Hubbard proposes a similar proposition, "The universe is planned for good." But Eddyism and Hubbardism has the same dash of lavendar that colors the whole intellectual fabric and theories of the world, she, "all is life, there is no death," he, "death is a manifestation of life and just as good." But the full truth of Christian Science and Roycroftism respecting health is found in Millennial Dawn in that it teaches that following the desolution of the present Satanic regime, (dying a violent instead of lingering death, remotely due to destructive isms that have dissolved the superstition instead of the constructive theology of the Millennial Dawn) will be followed by the "Sun of Righteousness rising with healing in His beams" as a result of "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God filling the earth" as the waters cover the great deep.

Millennial Dawn is not the only age of Jewish prophecy but also the dream of all poets of every age and clime, and the undefined hope of the whole groaning creation traveling in pain waiting for "the manifestation of the Sons of God." This is no longer "the one far off divine event toward which all creation moves," for the genius of modern science, corroberating the Great Calendar of Time, is already giving us fore-glaims of it and indicating its nearness.

"Oh happy Earth, reality of Heven!
Genius has seen thee in her passionate dreams;
And dim foreboding of thy loveliness,
Haunting the human heart, have there entwined
Those rooted hopes of some sweet place of bliss,
Where friends and lovers meet to part no more."

To return to Drummond's statement he endeavors to strain the facts of history into conformity to the laws of Nature in certain departments, it is a case of making a local principle universal at the wrong time. He tries to account for matters as they should be and would be true if man was in his proper estate, in proper adjustment to Nature to which he is a counterpart. A proper version of his thought for the present would be:

"The golden harvests spring; the unfailing sun
Sheds light and life; the fruits, the flowers, the trees,
Arise in due succession; all things speak
Peace, harmony and love. The universe
In Nature's silent eloquence, declares
That all fulfill the works of love and joy—
All but the outcast, Man. He fabricates
The sword that stabs his peace; he cherishes
The snake that knaw his heart; he raiseth up
The tyrant whose delight is in his woe,
Whose sport is in his agony."

Questions and Answers.

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. A. they may do so, and they will be answered strictly according to those teachings which claim to be in harmony with the Bible. Address questions to the Question Department of the National Labor Tribune.

Please explain Matthew 27:52-52. Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Swissvale Ave., Wilkinsburg, Pa.

Answer—This is listed as a spurious passage, as there seems to be no record of it, in the older manuscripts. There seems to be no way in which it can be harmonized with other scripture teachings. Some have attempted to explain it as typifying the resurrection of the church, as a result of Christ's resurrection, but if it is genuine, we are disposed to think a correct understanding of it is yet to be learned.

Why were not the goats taken into the "Holy" instead of being presented before the Lord at the door? P. D.
Shinglehouse, Pa.

Answer—The goats were not taken into the "Holy" for the same reason that the bullock was not. Only the blood, which represented the sacrificed life, was taken in for a sin offering. The High Priest, who carried the blood represented the new nature of Jesus, who offers all the sacrifices. The bodies of the beasts represent the humanity of the church, head and body, which is consumed by being burned outside the camp.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

Shadows"—the touchstone of all his subsequent writings. The circumstance of being brought a little later, into touch with Darwinism, by the same men, made his theology produced later an antidote for Higher Criticism Infidelity. He asserts too that had he not submitted to the simply and apparently insignificant ritual of water immersion, he would have ceased to be the channel of dispensational truth. The great take note of the commonplace while simple folk the extraordinary and this fact has led Russell to his present method of advertising himself and credentials, in connection with his public lectures, contrary to his better judgment. In line with the value of the commonplace affairs of life, in our next article we relate some incidents recorded by others who have come in contact with the subject of this monogram, together with some of the writer's experience and contact with the venerable divine, with a view of noting their lessons and which may serve the purpose of this story.

Dover, N. H., Oct. 19.

I am renewing my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower. I enjoy the paper very much, especially that relating to Pastor Russell. In a recent letter from Morton Edgar, of Glasgow, Scotland, he expressed a desire that you insert a notice in your paper to the effect that anyone desiring any of his literature, relative to the Great Pyramid, etc., could have their orders promptly filled as the mail service between the United States and Great Britain has not been interfered with. Thanking you, I remain.
Very truly yours,

THE VOYAGE TO ROME

Acts 27:13-26.—October 29.

St. Paul Sent to the Imperial Capital. A Stormy Voyage—Days of Trial and Testing—The Apostle Encouraged by a Vision—"God Moves in a Mysterious Way"—The Sailors Cheered by the Helpful Spirit of the Apostle.

"Commit thy way unto Jehovah; trust also in Him, and He will bring it to pass."—Psalm 37:5.

NOT long after St. Paul's discourse before Festus and King Agrippa, opportunity was afforded for sending the Apostle and other prisoners to Rome under a strong guard. There were no derogatory charges preferred against St. Paul, however.

There being no direct intercourse between Rome and the little port of Caesarea, for a distance of six hundred miles the journey was made in a small trading vessel. The trip lasted from about the middle of August to September 1—good speed for a sailing vessel in those days; but the weather was fine. At Myra, St. Paul and two brethren who accompanied him were transferred, along with the other prisoners and the guard, to an Egyptian vessel en route to Rome with a cargo of wheat. Besides the crew, this vessel bore a considerable number of passengers—in all, two hundred and seventy-six persons.

For several days the pleasant weather continued, and then it became stormy. The vessel abandoned her intended route in order to get under the lee of the island of Crete, and tarried until about October 1 at the port of Fair Havens, awaiting better weather. St. Paul drew attention to the dangers of continuing the voyage, and advised that they winter there. His opinion may have been the result of inspiration, but quite possibly was merely his own judgment of the weather, etc.; for his trade as sailmaker would naturally bring him into contact with sailors, and interest him in all matters pertaining to the craft.

Tempest-tossed.

But those in authority concluded to go to Phenice, a larger port. Before they had gone far, however, a typhonic northeast wind struck the vessel suddenly; and they were driven southward until they came under the shelter of the little island called Clauda. Here they undergirded the ship by placing chains and ropes under her keel, because the weight of the cargo and the severity of the storm had strained her. Then they lowered the gearing of the sails and continued to drive before the wind, guarding against sandbanks. The ship labored heavily in the storm. Part of her cargo was thrown overboard; and later on she was further lightened by casting overboard her heavier furniture, tackle, etc.

Days of Trial and Danger.

The storm continued for several days. Neither sun nor stars were visible; and the captain could not tell his whereabouts; for the compass had not yet been invented. Hence all on board were abandoning hope. They had ceased to eat, and were almost in despair.

During those fourteen days the Apostle had abundant opportunity to fear, to doubt and to question the Lord's providence. Apparently it was not until the night of the thirteenth day that the Lord sent an angel to St. Paul with a consoling message. (Verse 24.) We may safely assume that during those days of testing the Apostle remained heartily loyal in faith toward God, and that this message at the close was in the nature of an encouragement and an expression of approval.

Promptly the Apostle made the matter known to the ship's company. Then he manifested his own faith in the message by cheerfulness and by breaking his fast, and by advising all the others to do likewise. His spirit was contagious. All were cheered; and doubtless all were impressed not only by the fact that this disaster had resulted from their failure to follow his advice, but also by the evidence of God's special favor toward him in connection with the knowledge of their ultimate rescue.

"Be of Good Cheer!"

So should it be with the Lord's people. Whatever we know that is good or comforting or refreshing to ourselves we should dispense to others. Had the Apostle kept the good news to himself, it would have implied either that he did not have faith in its fulfilment or that he was selfish. But having the Lord's spirit of generosity, as well as large trust in the Lord, he did not hesitate to make known the coming deliverance; and he glorified God in that he credited this knowledge to a revelation from Him.

Evidently the prisoner had produced a deep impression upon many of the soldiers and the sailors. Who can say that at some future time the Apostle's brave, noble conduct may not have influenced some of his two hundred and seventy-six companions—possibly drawing some of them eventually to the Lord? So it should be with each of us. We should be prompt to tell to others the best tidings we have. Sympathy with the groaning creation in the various trials of life should lead us to point to the Lord's promises respecting the coming Kingdom and the blessings which shall then come to all.

A TREAT FOR OUR READERS

It is not often that the Tribune has the privilege to offer its readers something for nothing, but this week we have.

Beginning next Sunday evening, October 29, at 7:30 P. M. at the Lyceum Theatre, Penn Avenue, near Federal Street (old Sixth), the Photo Drama of Creation, an illustrated Bible lecture, will be given by the International Bible Students' Association. This lecture has been held in all the principal cities of this country with remarkable success, and in quite a number of foreign cities.

All our readers, especially those not affiliated with the Truth are earnestly invited to attend. The seats are free, and no collection will be taken up, and we are sure that those who attend will be amply repaid.

A HELP UP THE LADDER.

Some days ago, at a depot in a West Virginia town, a man with a heavy suit-case in each hand, and carrying also a folded go-cart and lunhc-box, was vainly trying to locate a porter or conductor to help his aged mother, wife and baby into the train.

Along came a quiet litle man in dark clothes, with a quick smile and a mop of black hair. Seeing the predicament, he graciously assisted the ladies and relieved the gentleman of one suit-case and the go-cart, that he might board the care more easily.

Inside and seated, the gentleman proffered his benefactor a cigar. No, he didn't smoke.

"Well, if I knew your name, I would be better able to thank you."

Said the courteous little man: "My name is La Follette, from Wisconsin."

True politeness seems to be a characteristic of great men.

But perhaps the young man has reflected somewhat on the matter, and has concluded that such things as being polite are small things, anyway. Perhaps he says he is not a believer in show, but if a lady is in real trouble he will be as gallant as any one, and help her.

He may feel some disgust for certain youths who are all manners and smiles and bows. Perhaps they do make too much of a show at being overly polite. Yet there are lots of manly boys and youths he unjustly considers shams.

Polished manners—courtesy—are by no means everything. They are not even the first things. But no youth, rich or poor, at the bottom or at the top, can afford to ignore their power and usefulness. He ought to make it an infallible rule to be polite. It pays. And, in this old, experienced world, where so many things are valuable that we do not at first appreciate, it is the accepted ideal. Few good things exist without some good reason.

It is both a small and a great thing to make others happy by a smile, a bow, a kind word.

I know a little chap, who runs an elevator in a downtown office building. Everybody calls him "Sunny Jim." He is never surly, and he is not afraid to go out of his way to do a favor. Everybody likes him. He has hosts of friends among the business men and woman. Jim is going to climb swiftly. I never saw a boy like him who didn't win out. He'll soon quit the elevator.

One gets training by his courtesies. Politeness becomes a habit; and a good one.

A youth makes a mistake when he supposes he can be ill-mannered, gruff and abrupt at times, and be polite and gracious when it suits him. He will find himself making awkward breaks, forgetting when he should remember, and being embarrassingly self-conscious in all efforts at good manners. Habitual courtesy will put him always at his ease.

Many people believe courtesy to be associated only with "sham" people, but such an idea is certainly far from being right.

Courtesy assists toward advancement. The finest talents seem to lack something when it is absent.

A man, on returning to his home town after a visit to Lincoln, when he was president, was asked by a fellow-townsman how the great man impressed him.

"He is a man of wonderful make-up," returned the other, with deep feeling; "six feet four, a great, lank frame, with legs and arms abnormally long. He has a powerful head, and his face, gaunt and lined, is crowned with a mass of hair which always seems to be mussed up.

"But his manner! You forget his homely face and his uncouth frame when he speaks. His calm, even courtesy, and quietness make him seem even more powerful, if that is possible. I tell you, he has a wonderful manner!"

The commonest-appearing features may be made to shine if one cultivates an engaging manner, together with unassuming, even courtesy.

It marks any one, whoever or wherever he may be, with power and distinctive charm.

The young man who has a way to make, a position to gain and hold, may make the way easier for himself by simple courtesy.

He reflects credit on his home and his training by this habit. New acquaintances say to themselves and to each other that evidently he has been well reared, and that his parents, his brothers and sisters must be refined persons. They envy him. Their envy turns into a desire to do likewise. And so courtesy pays all around.

If true courtesy is a characteristic of great men, certainly it will smooth the way and give no little help to those who are climbing up the ladder.

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

Sent by parcel post anywhere in the United States. Send cash, stamps or money order. Address, H. H. Von Schlick, 50 Marvel Building, Third and Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

IS CHRIST YOUR ADVOCATE WITH GOD?

HE IS THE ADVOCATE ONLY FOR FULLY CONSECRATED BELIEVERS

Only Those Who Have Taken the Steps of Repentance, Faith and Consecration can Truly Understand the Plan of God—the Meek and the Broken-Hearted Now Sought by the Lord—God's Message not a Hammer to Break Hard Hearts—These to be Broken Later—This Age to Gather the "Jewels," Who are Then to be Made Up—When Christ Became the Advocate of the Church—the Work of the Advocate.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 22.—Pastor Russell is here today, in attendance upon the I. B. S. A. Convention. His address to the Bible Students was based upon 1 John 2:1—"We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." He said:

For some time we have been deeply impressed with the thought that no one can have a proper understanding and appreciation of the Plan of God unless he has taken the steps of repentance from sin, of faith in Christ as his atoning Sacrifice, and of full consecration to God. We have noted that many who express great appreciation of God's wonderful Plan of Salvation still neglect or postpone the giving of themselves to God. This is a serious mistake. When one sees that he is a sinner, the first thing that he should do is to repent of his sins and accept Christ as his Savior. Then he should dedicate his life to God, yielding up his will to be guided thenceforth by the Divine will. After these steps have been taken, the individual is for the first time able to have a heart appreciation of Heavenly things.

One who is living in unrepented-of sin is in no condition to appreciate the deep things of God; for Jehovah has declared that "none of the wicked shall understand, but only the Heavenly wise. (Daniel 12:10.) God does not wish these glorious things to be understood by the wicked or even by those who prefer earthly things. The Lord is not trying now to break men's hearts. The very reverse is true. It is His design to bind up the broken-hearted—those whose hearts are already broken by the experiences of life. The Message of God speaks peace to those who are looking to Him and seeking for the righteousness which He will provide.

Some, we think, have made a great mistake in thinking that the Gospel is a hammer wherewith to break men's hearts. We believe that the Devil does a great deal of the breaking of hearts, but we know of no commission from the Lord for His people to do so. In the great Time of Trouble, even now coming upon the world, many hard hearts will be broken because of conditions resulting from man's selfishness and sin. This breaking up of men's hearts will do them good, bringing them into a humble, teachable condition where the Voice of God may be heard. During the incoming Age, the Lord will take away the stoniness of heart from mankind and will give them hearts of flesh. Instead of being callous and selfish, men's hearts will gradually become soft, tender, kind, gentle.—Ezekiel 11:19; 36:26.

GOSPEL CALL FOR MEEK ONLY

But now, in advance of the Messianic Kingdom, God is seeking those whose hearts are already in a receptive attitude. On one occasion our Lord Jesus quoted, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me [Christ], because He hath annointed Me to preach Good Things to the meek; He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." (Isaiah 61:1-3.) This is the Divine commission for the Gospel Age. So we are especially to seek for the meek, the teachable. The proud and haughty are not in the heart attitude to be blessed by the Gospel Message. The Lord is not looking for such characters to compose the Body of Christ. He will deal with them later.

This is an important point to be borne in mind by those who desire to present the Truth to others. If, when the Message is being presented, any attend who have not the hearing ear, it will bear no fruit in them. But as Christian people we should know how to deal with such. We should give them the thought that they will not see the Divine Plan clearly unless they fully consecrate themselves to God and receive the gift of the Holy Spirit; for unless one becomes a New Creature in Christ he will never understand the Divine Plan.—2 Corinthians 5:17; 1 Corinthians 2:14.

But if the Lord's ambassadors find one who realizes that he is a sinner weary of sin, and who feels his need of a strong Burden-bearer, a Savior, let them remind him of the Master's words, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden and I will give you rest." Point him to the right path, and say, "This is the way; walk in it." Show him the steps which he must take to become a disciple of Christ. The step of turning from sin is sometimes spoken of as conversion, and it is a conversion to some extent. Whoever seeks to draw near to God will seek to leave sin. Whoever continues to live in sin wishes to be far from God.

The repentent one must not only turn from sin, but must accept the Lord Jesus Christ as his Savior. He must turn fully to God and give himself, with all that he has or hopes to have, to the Lord in entire surrender. He must renounce his human nature to be a joint-sacrificer with the Lord Jesus, in order that he may be begotten to the new spiritual nature, to be thenceforth a New Creature in Christ. Then our Lord Jesus becomes his Advocate. He receives the robe of Christ's imupted righteousness, covering all his imperfections.

THE WORK OF THE ADVOCATE

An advocate is one who pleads the cause of another, standing as his representative. The word is used as a synonym of the word attorney, lawyer, a representative at a court of law. All mankind, represented in Father Adam, stood before the Divine Court of the Universe. Father Adam was on trial, and was sentenced to death. He was a sinner, and all of his posteriey have been born in a sin and death condition. If any of the Adamic race would now come back to the Divine Court and ask that as far as he was concerned the record of sin be blotted out, the great Court of Heaven would say to him, "We cannot receive you; for We do not receive sinners. The only way to approach Us is through the Advocate whom we have appointed—Jesus Christ, the Righteous."

Our text says, "We [the Church], have an Advocate with the Father." Our Lord Jesus Christ became the Advocate of the Church after His resurrection, when He ascended on High and appeared in the presence of God for His followers; (Hebrews 9:24. This word "appeared" is a legal term. A lawyer appears for his client when he goes into court and gives his name as his client's representative. Thenceforth the court refers to the lawyer anything that it has to say regarding that particular case. When our Lord ascended on High, He appeared in the Divine Presence for His Church, not for the world. The world wishes to forget God, having no hope and busy with its own affairs. Furthermore, Satan has so blinded the majority of mankind that they do not desire to have an Advocate with the Father. Only a few feel their need of an Advocate—those who desire to come into fellowship with God.

Our Lord Jesus appeared for the whole Church at once; for this was the Divine arrangement. In His wisdom God foreknew just what He would do. He had forcordained the Call of the Gospel Church, the number of the Elect and the character which they must attain. They must become copies of His dear Son. They must become living sacrifices, holy, desirous of pleasing God. (Romans 8:28, 29, 30; 12:1.) The work of the entire Gospel Age is the finding of this class; and at the very beginning of the Age Christ Jesus appeared in the Heavenly Court as the Advocate for all who would come to the Father through Him. There He made a presentation of His sacrificial merit to the Heavenly Father on behalf of the Church. He advocates our cause by imputing to us the merit of His sacrifice, thus making us presentable in the Father's presence and acceptable as sons of God.—John 1:12; 1 John 3:2.

Because of this advocacy those who have offered themselves in full consecration to God have, through Jesus Christ, received the Holy Spirit and have been begotten as New Creatures. As such they still need their Advocate; for they cannot do the things that they would—cannot fully control the imperfections of the flesh. Hence they need the Throne of Grace and an Advocate through whom they may maintain their relationship with the Father; for although our Advocate cancelled all sins and weaknesses resulting from Adam's sin, yet there are daily trespasses, daily shortcomings, for which we must daily ask forgiveness.

Six—TRIBUNE

EXPERIENCE IN THE NARROW WAY

From the moment that one who has forsaken sin, accepted Christ as his Redeemer and presented himself to God in full consecration, the old nature is reckoned dead and the New Creature is begotten of the Holy Spirit. Thenceforth his human body is counted as the property of the New Creature, and is to be quickened, energized, by the Holy Spirit of God, in order to serve the interests of the new nature. The natural tendencies must now be crucified, and the affections and aspirations trained Heavenward. This will be a continuous work until the death of the human body. But grace and help are furnished by the Lord, through study of the Word of God, through daily providences in life, through prayer, and often through the helpful ministrations of the brethren. Prunings and disciplinings will be applied by the Lord, in order that the character may be developed and crystalized, and thus the New Creature made ready for the Kingdom.

Our ability as New Creatures to endure faithfully is in proportion to our appreciation of the Heavenly things. When first we came into Christ, we saw only in a measure. We could suffer somewhat; we could sacrifice a little. God kindly veiled our eyes to an extent until we had grown stronger. Gradually He showed us more and more what was comprehended in our consecration. He showed us a little more that we could do for Him. As we followed the light, it grew brighter. Faithfulness, obedience, light and knowledge kept pace with each other.

The Christian walk is a path that "shines more and more unto the perfect Day." (Proverbs 4:18.) It is a path that indeed shows more and more the sufferings with Christ, but not necessarily more of unhappiness. Quite the reverse. Instead of meaning unhappiness to the true child of God, it means great joy; for the sufferings of Christ participated in by His people bring the highest and sweetest joy. As the Apostle declared, we rejoice in tribulation. We recall how he learned to rejoice in tribulation himself. In the prison at Philippi, with their backs bleeding from the scourge, with their feet fast in the stocks, St. Paul and Silas could rejoice and sing praises to the Lord because they were accounted worthy to suffer for Christ's sake.—Acts 16:23-25; Romans 5:1-5.

CUTTING AND POLISHING OF JEWELS

The Apostle Peter, who also rejoiced in his sufferings for Christ, says that when severe experiences come upon us for Christ's sake we should remember that "the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon us." (1 Peter 4:12-16.) We are assured that in proportion as we are found faithful, and worthy to suffer for Christ's sake, we may expect a heavier, richer weight of glory in the future. So this matter of suffering with Christ in the flesh is something that the Christian can appreciate and enjoy; for it is a witness of the Spirit that we belong to Christ.—Romans 8:16-18.

In His Word the Lord gives us a picture of the experiences of the Church. He tells us that we are His jewels, now being made ready to be mounted. When His jewels are all gathered and placed in the Kingdom, they are to be a royal diadem in His hand. (Malachi 3:16, 17; Isaiah 62:1-3.) If we are the Lord's jewels, taken from the earth to be prepared as precious gems, we may expect to receive the trials and tribulations necessary to this end. A jewel that is uncut and unpolished is worth but little; that is to say, it would have no value were it to remain uncut. The real value is brought forth in the cutting and polishing. So the Lord gives His children, His jewels, the necessary cutting and polishing to enable them to reflect the glorius light of His goodness by and bye.

A small diamond can be cut more easily, and requires less polishing, than a large diamond. The larger the diamond, the more work must be put upon it and the greater its value; and the more gloriously will it show forth the skill of the hand that prepared it. So let us hope, dear brethren, that we may be large jewels in the Lord's hands, that we may be accounted worthy of a good deal of cutting and polishing, that by His grace

"We may have a glorious part
When grace hath well refined our heart."

THE JEWELS SOON TO BE MOUNTED

We are instructed in the Lord's Word that when all the jewels are ready, Jehovah will "make up" His jewels. When a jeweler wishes to arrange a gorgeous collection of precious stones into a coronet, he selects with great care the stones he wishes to use, and arranges them in their places, deciding the relative position of each of the others, in order that each whslliehrdtdetaointaoinshrdlhrdl of the others, in order that each will shed upon the others more or less of beauty. This is called making up the jewels. This well illustrates what the Lord is doing.

Throughout the entire Gospel Age God has been gathering out from the world a select class, which He has been cutting and grinding as jewels, preparatory to setting them in the gold of the Divine nature. (2 Peter 1:4.) Those that contained flaws He has laid aside; for they could not bear the necessary processes, could not reflect the Lapidary's skill. Only those that would submit to all the preparations needed could be used. Now, at the close of the Age, the jewels are being "made up." They are being gathered together and arranged into a glorious Diadem. They are now being set in the gold of the Divine nature, as they are being taken one by one beyond the veil. The moment of their death is now the moment of their glorious "change."—1 Corinthians 15:50-53.

FAITHFUL JEWEL CLASS TO BE KNOWN

Glorious indeed will this great Diadem of God be when completed. But the Almighty is not to wear it upon His head. There is no such incongruous picture in the Bible. There we read that His jewels are to be a Diadem, a glorious Crown, in the hand of our God. He will so turn it around in the light that all of His intelligent creatures may behold its glory. He will show forth these priceless gems which He has been cutting, grinding and polishing for the past eighteen hundred years. Angels and men will know something of the grandeur of these jewels.

The question has sometimes been asked, "Will the world ever know the names of those who constitute this jewel class?" We answer, Yes; they will know. It is written in the Word, "and of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her." (Psalms 87:5.) After the faithful Church have all passed beyond the veil, a complete list will be made. Mankind will know who have gone to the other side, who have made their calling and election sure, who have gained "the prize of the High Calling."—Philippians 3:14.

It is a matter of the utmost importance that we keep our names written in "the Lamb's Book of Life." It is one thing to have our names written, but another to have them remain there. If we would not have ours blotted out, we must be wholly faithful to our covenant with the Lord. We must confess Christ both by word and by our daily lives, in our business dealings, in our daily walk, in all the affairs of life; for if we deny Him, He will deny us. Whether we eat or drink or whatever we do, let us do all to the glory of God. Our Lord declares that if we thus confess Him, He will not deny us, but will confess us before His Father in Heaven.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

RUSSELL DISCLAIMS ALL CREDIT

Speculate as you will, concerning the remarkable achievements of this religious movement scarcely more than forty years old, the closer you get to its work and theology, the more you will realize that the only sensible solution to the problem is that of the promoter himself—that he is only an instrument in the hands of God in supervising the time, money and energies of these self-sacrificing Christians—that the Lord Himself is present judging and rebuking His unfaithful servants and shepherds through this channel and through which He is culminating the Reformation! But it has been said that if other people would contribute as liberally to their respective denominational publishing concerns and place their publications in the hands of the people, they could accomplish just as much. That is just the point we are endeavoring to emphasize! They have the finances and have endeavored to interest the rank and file, but have failed. Why does it not work for "Orthodoxy" as well as the I. B. S. A. people The rank and file are indispensable to success and God works through them to co-operate with His faithful Shepherds by His Holy Spirit and a knowledge of His plans and purposes in connection with the work done. It is intelligent co-operation with God's purposes as they understand it—"it is God that worketh in you, both to will and to do His good pleasure." It is the conviction that Millinnial Dawn Theology produces that is at the bottom of this movement, and its accomplishments, and this conviction is power enough to lead men to martyrdom when stirred into action by persecution! As indicating this we mention an incident connected with a report that got circulated that some irresponsible person from Kentucky threatened to dynamite the headquarters at Pittsburgh, Pa. Russell relates that in speaking of this to some of his movement, one of them said: "If we only knew for a certainty that that report was true—wouldn't we fill that Bible House full?"

The following Scripture contains the thought that we have here endeavored to prove—that God is working through man to accomplish His purposes, and uses such humble individuals as best suit His purposes, in order that "no flesh should glory in His sight:—

"The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. * * * all these worketh that one and self-same Spirit. For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are ye all baptised into one body. God hath set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased Him. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular."—1st Cor. 12:—

"Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor Me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men. Therefore, behold I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder, for the wisdom of the wise men shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent man shall be hid."—Isa. 29:12, 14.

BIOGRAPHY IN BRIEF.

Emerson has made one expression concerning great men that has special application to Russell and is a very appropriate remark to present here at the conclusion of this brief sketch of his propaganda. Says Emerson: "Great geniuses' have the shortest biographies. Their cousins can tell you nothing about them. They live in their writings, and so their house and street life was trivial and commonplace." In line with this we state that Russell has lived in his work and his life must be extracted from it—you cannot get it elsewhere—his life is reflected in his work and his work is reflected in the records of the Society he created and in the columns of The Watch Tower; all his virtues, characteristics, achievements, limitations and mistakes are recorded here by his own deeds and words. The Millennial Dawn series do not reflect the man—they are a work of art—they reflect the scholar. We give a condensed statement of the biography of this remarkable man of action.

At the age of fifteen, an enthusiastic Sunday school worker; at seventeen, a skeptic; at twenty an earnest Bible student; at twenty-five a public speaker; at thirty, the editor of a religious journal and owner and manager of Tower Publishing Co., and pastor of a congregation in Allegheny, Pa.; at thirty-five, the author of a book that is near the five million mark; at forty well known through the States and Canada as a public speaker; at forty-five, prominent as a writer on Jewish topics; at fifty, president of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society; at fifty-five, the author of five additional works on Biblical research; at sixty, pastor of Brooklyn Tabernacle and president of the Peoples' Pulpit Associatoin; later, pastor of London Tabernacle and president of International Bible Students Association, and author and promoter of the famous Photo-Drama of Creation, exhibited to over nine million people during the summer of 1914 in the United States alone. He still finds himself charged with the duties incumbent upon the holder of the foregoing positions—all of his own creation. And in the words of the poet, "Still there is more to follow."

The trivial and commonplace incidents of life are important in consequence, and are of value to the philosopher. "The mighty gates of circumstances turn on the smallest hinge, and oft the smallest trivial gives life its after tinge." An illustration of "despise not the day of small things" is supplied in the life of Russell. At one time he publicy confessed his inability to meet on a rational basis, his early associates, who were destroying the faith of the readers of the journal to which all contributed, he asserts that this confession was rewarded by being guided to produce "Tabernacle

THE EIGHT HOUR LAW SECURED 18 YEARS AGO

President Gompers is Unfair in His Refusal to Give the Republican Party Credit for the Eight Hours Won Under McKinley

Why make the Eight Hour law an issue now when the United Mine Workers of America won that great victory 18 years ago under a Republican administration. The great battle was fought and won before John Mitchell was elected President of the United Mine Workers. It was a victory won by M. D. Ratchford, of Ohio, who was then President of the miners' organization and President Sumael Gompers is as familiar with the circumstances as any man can be. Why give the Democrats credit? Gompers is unjust. On July 28, 1897 President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, Grand Master J. W. Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, and President M. D. Ratchford, met in conference at Wheeling before calling upon Governor Atkinson, at Charleston, West Virginia, to enlist the Governor's support in the miners' cause then being waged after the starvation periods of Cleveland and Democracy.

Read the following article as reproduced from the Pittsburgh Post. It appeared in the Post in the issue of January 27, 1898. It shows 200,000 miners for the first time securing the Eight Hour law.

NEXT CONVENTION IN PITTSBURG

Special to the Pittsburg Post

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—"America" was sung with a vim at the close of the interstate covention of miners and operators tonight. The miners have been granted an advance all along the line, after one of the most stubborn of struggles.

The rate agreed upon, according to President Patrick Dolan, means 72 cents for the Pittsburgh miners.

The few objectors from Ohio were driven into a corner, and the differential is a thing of the past. J. W. Ellsworth, who is alleged to represent the Hocking Valley interests and a railroad, made an ugly fight, and disruption was imminent.

Tonight all elements were pulled together, and it only remains for the National officials of the miners and a committee of operators to ratify the contract.

Pittsburgh operators and miners are in high feather, and are being congratulated for the victory that has been won.

The miners were jubilant over the results of their 10 days' session, for it means to nearly 200,000 soft coal miners an advance of 10 cents per ton, and a uniform day of eight hours at uniform day wages. And the operators congratulate one another with a victory over themselves.

The following are the resolutions adopted with but two dissenting votes:

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

"That an advance of 10 cents per ton for mining screened coal to take effect in the Western Pennsylvania district, Hocking Valley (Ohio) district and Indiana bituminous district, the first day of April, 1898; and that a relative run-of-mine price be determined in all the districts named, by a uniform flat or Akron shaped bar screen of 72 feet superficial area, 1¼ inch space between the bars; that the price of run-of-mine coal in Grape Creek district and in the Indiana bituminous district be 40 cents per ton for the same district, based upon 66 cents in Pittsburgh thin vein district, and that in Hocking Valley and Indiana; and that on and after April 1, 1898, the eight-hour day shall be in effect in all districts here represented; that uniform wages for day labor shall be paid the different classes of labor in the field named; and that internal differences in any of the States, both as to price and conditions, shall be referred to the States affected; that we further agree to the use of the diamond bar screen of present pattern in the block district of Indiana, with the privilege of run-of-mine, as may be desired by the market conditions.

The convention completed its work by naming a scale committee to consist of the National executive board of the mine workers, the district presidents and secretaries and two operators from each State to tabulate the scale and perfect all the arrangements for putting it into effect the date set. It was determined that hereafter the miners and operators will meet in January each year to fix a scale for the 12 months beginning April 1.

Pittsburgh was selected for the next annual joint convention, which will meet the third Tuesday of January, 1899.

STORMY SESSION.

The afternoon session of the convention today was very stormy, and for a few hours appearances led to the belief that after 10 days' hard work the convention would fail to reach a settlement. The scale committee's final report, as outlined above, was presented, and with it came the protests of two Hocking Valley operators, Messrs. Morton and Ellsworth.

They insisted upon a differential being established between their scale and that of the thin vein of Pennsylvania, and quoted masses of statistics to show that if the plan were put into operation Hocking Valley mines would be compelled to close down in face of competition from Pittsburgh and West Virginia.

Operator Robbins, of Pennsylvania, finally proposed that the question of differential in favor of the Hocking Valley district be left to arbitration. This was at once accepted by the Hocking Valley operators, but brought out a demand from the operators of Ohio, outside the Hocking Valley, that they be included in the arbitration and be allowed a differential as well.

When the Ohio operators got throu objecting to the plan, the Indiana miners, or a part of them, announced that they could not support the new scale. Instead of basing on Grape Creek scale of 40 cents, they demanded that it be made 43 2-3 cents. In the midst of this tangle the convention took a recess. No further trouble was made by the Indiana miners, they being prevailed upon not to wreck the work of the convention.

Upon reassembling a roll call was ordered on the resolution. It resulted —ayes 34, nays 2—as follows: Illinois operators 4 votes aye, miners 4 votes aye; Ohio operators 2 aye, 2 nay; miners 4 aye; Pennsylvania operators 4 aye; miners 4 aye; West Virginia miners 4 aye.

THE OHIO VOTES.

Mr. Morton, of Ohio, in casting the two negative votes, explained that they were against the 66-cent rate for Hocking Valley. Mr. Chapman, in casting two votes aye, explained that he cast them for the balance of Ohio except Guernsey county. In order to ascertain the standing of Guernsey county operators President Ratchford called for a vote from them. This plainly meant that if it became necessary to tie up the Hocking valley mines Guernsey county was to be included if they voted nay. After a short conference the Guernsey county men voted for the resolution.

President Ratchford then moved that the majority vote on the resolution be made the sense of the convention by a viva voce vote. The motion carried unanimously, and the convention applauded for several minutes.

WILSON AND GARY AFTER THE CHINESE

The Chinese and Japs Promised Jobs of American Workmen if Democracy Wins--Bars to Be Let Down.

The American artisan as well as common laborer is to compete with Chinese labor in the very near future and Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, is said to have an understanding with President Woodrow Wilson that in the event of the latter's re-election such legislative enactments essential to relieving the country of the scarcity of labor now everywhere felt shall be introduced and passed at the earliest possible moment.

These conditions are being investigated now by Chairman Gary who for several months has been traveling and meeting the financiers in the Orient and it is said that Chairman Gary has discovered since his visit to China and Japan that the Oriental is as good if not a much better workman than the American; that he is better adapted to intense heat than the American; that his skill in the manufacture of steel cannot be surpassed.

The amazing feature of Chairman Gary's visit to the Orient is that Judge Gary has discovered that the Japs and the Chinese are making a remarkable success with the new window glass machine the patents of which are controlled by the American Window Glass Company of Pittsburgh. Not until Chairman Gary's visit to Japan and China was it generally known that the patents controlled by the American Window Glass Company had been sold to the Orientals but the Japs and the Chinese are outrivaling the Americans in the manufacture of window glass and mirrors. If Wilson is re-elected the Japs and Chinese will drive the American window glass manufacturer out of business and they will also destroy the manufacturers of mirrors. The American cannot compete with this cheap labor and glass manufacturers as well as the manufacturers of mirrors are alarmed over the threatening situation.

There has been a tremendous scarcity of labor in this country since the war broke out and there are plants that are actually idle and cannot operate for want of men while the United States Steel Corporation is unable to meet its demands for want of labor.

The Democratic leaders held the $11,000,000 armor plate plant club over Judge Gary and it is said that if the big corporation attempted to go into politics or even took any part indirectly the time intervening between the defeat of Wilson and the expiration of his term would be ample to put over some very radical measures which the Democratic members of the Senate and the House were prepared to do.

After the defeat of their standard bearer or themselves they would be in splendid frame of mind to retaliate. Judge Gary it is said took the hint and was next heard of dining with the Japs and the Chinks. Judge Gary, however, it is silently whispered also had an understanding which was to eventually culminate in a sort of invitation or sub-rosa tip that the Japs and Chinese would be most welcome to this country and that their introduction into the plants would be by way of seeking technical knowledge. To push a wheelbarrow would, presumably, be a first introduction to machinery and thus the road to the machine shop, while rolling pig iron or ingots would be a sort of kindergarten to roll turning. The open door to the Orient is almost ready to burst open and Judge Gary and President Wilson are preparing to spring the bolt. Every mill man, factory hand and miner knows what scarcity of labor there is in this country and the street paving work and contractors have been and are practically at a stand still for men. The concrete work was almost suspended during the summer as well as all kinds of contract work and Democracy has promised to relieve the situation.

The Democrats it is said will not argue for the exclusion of the Chinese or Japs but will be for them and will give them the welcome hand. The Republican Party has always stood for the exclusion of Oriental labor and for a High Protective Tariff in order to protect the American Workman but the Mongolian is looking upon the American market with a keen realization that Democracy will be successful; that the bars to Oriental trade will be dropped and that cheap labor and a low tariff will admit him and his products. The Mongolian is closely observing the Panama Canal route for bringing coal into the American market and a Democratic President with a Democratic Congress will make this possible in a short time. Who will dare to say the Chinese will not become in the very near future the coal barons of this country. They bid fair to be the coal kings of the future. Those who are familiar with the facts realize that the great coal area of various Provinces of the Flowery Empire show remarkable possibilities. The new day has dawned and China has awakened. She has her steel mills as well as her great coal industries and she is already knocking at our door with the hope that Democracy will succeed and she shall be an early competitor.

Recent indications show that the Chinese Government has really awakened to the desirability of exploiting the mineral wealth of the kingdom. A mining concession has been granted to large concerns desirous of working the gold deposits of Manchuria, and a bureau of mines has been established in Ho Nan. These innovations mark such a radical departure from the attitude hitherto taken by the Chinese in matters of internal development that they are of

State Adviser On All Labor Questions

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The recently-constituted department under the Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, M. P., the Labor Adviser to His Majesty's Government, is now in full operation at the new government offices in Great George street, Westminster. One of the Labor Adviser's first undertakings was to lay the foundations for a regular and definite system of co-operation and communication between industry and the Government. With this object, consultative committees of employers and trade unionists have already been appointed, with a separate consultative committee on women's labor. Other committees would deal with Colonial and international problems affecting labor and with general social and economic questions.

These committees will, it is hoped, perform a very useful function. They will be able to assist the Adviser in an unofficial and personal way, and will be readily available should any question arise on which it is desirable to have the advantage of their knowledge and experience. It is not proposed that the members should act in any representative capacity, and it is intended that the committees should meet for the consideration of specific topics rather than for general discussion of policy. This procedure, it is anticipated, will obviate any possibility of the department arriving at conclusions on matters referred to it for advice without having first given the interests concerning an opportunity of being heard.

Where it is necessary to consult any industry or branch of industry from either the employers' or workmen's standpoint the representatives of the industry will be approached and full opportunity given to them to submit any considerations which appear material to the question at issue and important from their point of view. The Adviser is confident that all sections of industry will co-operate in assisting the new department and he will be glad to receive from employers or workpeople information as to any important points of principle to which they desire consideration should be given.

The interesting point about the new code of improved working conditions and rates of pay for girl workers in the West End of London dressmaking firms is that it is an entirely spontaneous action on the part of the big employers. It is, of course, much to their interest to make the workroom conditions more attractive, because in these times girls can easily get well-paid employment elsewhere. The conditions in the workrooms for learners in dressmaking and tailoring have been far from satisfactory, and they are to be greatly improved. The most novel change is the provision for technical training. The employers have agreed to allow the girls to spend two or three hours each day at a training school, the time to be counted as part of the forty-eight hours' week that is now laid down, and without deduction of pay. Arrangements are also being made to prevent irregularity of work caused by the slack season, work being distributed so as to give steady employment. The firms emphasise the importance of the girls being properly fed by supplying tea and so on in pleasant surroundings, and the paternal care extends to providing shelter for girls who travel by workmen's trains and trams. This excellent little reform is certain to set a standard which will be copied in many other trades where girls are employed.

A meeting of the Gas Workers' Union in Manchester on October 5th discussed in private several movements for the closer co-operation of labor organizations. J. R. Clynes stated that the project of one general laborers' union was in abeyance, but that progress was being made in the amalgamation of certain existing unions and in the framing of working agreements between others. The Gas Workers' Union was at present he asid, in touch with the Dockers' Union. Reports had been received on the completion of working agreements with the National Federation of Women Workers, the Craft Union and other bodies. These agreements provided for joint action on wage and other questions. Will Thorne, M. P., the general secretary of the Gas Workers' Union, was appointed a delegate to the congress to be held on October 15th of transport workers in the Allied countries.

Even after two years of war, with its large demand on women's labor, the number is extraordinary. This statement has the sanction of the chief woman inspector of the Board of Trade Labor Exchanges. Women love substitution jobs; there is a patriotic glamor about replacing men which is

THE DINGLEY BILL BECOMES A LAW

The Merchant Prince Wanamaker Talks On the Wilson and Gorman Tariff Farce and Starvation.

Compare what Republican Prosperity has done with Democratic inefficiency and starvation. A panic was only averted in 1914 through the war and had not the war occurred the American industries would have been practically paralyzed. Not only did the war avert a panic but it actually blocked a catastrophe, the extent of which could probably never have been measured. No thanks to Democracy or President Woodrow Wilson. There would never have been any discussion as to the result of President Wilson's re-election had not the war come as a God send but the war brought artificial prosperity and some believe it actual. There are bankers who are marvelously deceived or pretend to be but the men in the mills are awakening to the real conditions particularly when they see the miners now boasting of 400,000 members in the organization which secured an Eight Hour day by mutual agreement with the operators in joint conference when they only had something over 7,000 members and not through Congress. This was nearly 20 years ago. And that Eight Hours was secured under a Republican administration.

Each year or each settlement since that under a Republican administration the miners have succeeded in securing a raise in wages. From 54 cents a ton which was a visionary figure the miners have gone up to $1.05 a ton while the mining conditions have improved one thousand per cent. Under the Republican administrations the miners got their Eight Hour Law, the Department of Mines and Mining was established, Test Stations have been created, rescue apparatus has been provided and safety devices of every conceivable character installed or handy. All to improve the condition of the men employed. Republicans have never overlooked a single turn and overwhelming victory awaits them November 7th.

Here is an interesting interview given out by the great Marchant Prince of Philadelphia in that city July 28, 1897 and the Tribune reproduces it from the Commercial Gazette. As the reader goes through the lines he should absorb its contents and compare it with present day Democratic clap-trap.

Read what John Wannamaker said:

WANAMAKER ON PROSPERITY.

It Did Not Come in a Night, But the Road is Now Clear for It.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 28—(Special)—John Wanamaker in an interview with the Commercial Gazette correspondent today said:

"Last Saturday's bonfire of the Wilson and Gorman tariff bill has lit up the business world with a brighter light than has been seen for many a day. The Dingley bill makes it possible to build the fires in factories, workshops and mills that have been quenched since the old tariff sub-let so many industries to Europe.

"The administration has prepared and given out the tools to work with, but the capitalist and workman must take hold of them and with united force make them productive.

"Any man who loves his country will drop doubts and fear, if he has any, and make the best of what is to be the law of the land for a considerable time. Most assuredly the tariff is the root of the national tree that yields fruit to American labor. It is again replanted carefully and we hope wisely. Let us give it a chance to grow and not crowd it with proposition of change or be pulling it up every three or four years to try another planting. Better for the country even an imperfect high tariff that competition will regulate than a useless low tariff that will not permit profitable investment of capital or furnish any employment.

"One would think from reading the newspapers that prosperity has already come in a night, like the vast horde of Jersey mosquitoes come last week. It has not so come and never comes in that way. There is hard work to be done to make the Klondyke gold available—it is also with the tariff—capital must flow out and enterprising men must turn in and hustle. When laboring people have plenty of work and good wages the country will know that real prosperity is here. Fictitious booms are disastrous, because of their reactions."

A. F. OF L. VS. THE BIG FOUR

J. H. Vitchestain, Editor National Labor Tribune—I am herewith enclosing you an article which I trust you will insert in your next issue with an appropriate explanation:

"Can the rank and file of organized labor as represented by the two and one half million members in the American Federation of Labor consistently extend their support to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors in their attempt to inaugurate the Eight hour day on railroads for a favored few?" This question seems to linger in the minds of the thinking people of the entire country and being one of the paramount issues before the citizens today it should have your explanation.

In the American Federation there are about 115 International and National Unions, representing approximately 25,000 local unions. These associations voluntary affiliate with the parent organization and their monthly per capita tax makes it possible for the movement to exist, to have its being and to carry on the work for the ultimate emancipation of the toilers of this country.

BROTHERHOODS NOT CONNECTED

Despite the fact that the American Federation of Labor has been instituted for nearly forty years these Brotherhood organizations have steadfastly declined to affiliate themselves with the Federa-

The Great Delusion of Our Time

It would be but human if this age were a trifle supercilious, not to say deluded, concerning its own powers. Great things have been said of it, nor can it be denied that it has fallen heir to great things. At least it has enjoyed and tested beyond all other ages the fruit of the tree of knowledge. "It is an epoch," says John Fiske, "the grandeur of which dwarfs all others that can be named since the beginning of the historic period, if not since man first became distictively human. In their mental habits, in their methods of inquiry, and in the data at their command, the men of the present day who have fully kept pace with the scientific movement are separated from the men whose education ended in eighteen hundred and thirty by an immeasurably wider gulf than has ever before divided one progressive generation of men from their predecessors. The intellectual development of the human race has been suddenly, almost abruptly, raised to a higher plane than that upon which it had proceeded from the days of the primitive troglodyte to the days of our great grandfathers."

This statement is so far true that it is dangerous. Doubtless there are a great many people, possibly a majority of so-called educated men, who would, without considering the limitations of scientific knowledge, accept these words literally, who have formed the habit of thinking that the light which we possess today is, compared with that possessed by Luther or George Washington or Socrates, as sunlight to starlight. Their view is not only that we know infinitely more than George Washington knew, but that we alone possess the final criteria of knowledge. Socrates and Washington knew a good deal, but they knew vaguely; they could not distinguish accurately between fact and delusion. Our supreme advantage is supposed to be not only that we know but that we know we know.

This egotistic cast or vogue of thought envelops the mind of the age. It is more authoritative than Kaiser or Pope, than dogma or creed. It percolates through all classes, it penetrates our literature, it colors our judgment. It predetermines our view, shapes the outline of our facts, and is interwoven with the texture of our thought. In a considerable proportion of our typical men it has bred a sense of supreme judicial qualification. In the presence of a magisterial equipment so vast and complete, men of previous ages appear dwarfed; their efforts seem infantile. Even Jesus appears to grope. Our Scientific Judiciary does indeed reverence the purity of his spirit; but when it comes to his authority, or his views about God, they tenderly but firmly put him out of court.

"PRIDE GOETH BEFORE DESTRUCTION."

Now this sovereign attitude of the human mind has in the course of history proved intoxicating, and therefore perilous. There was a man who once said, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built" Too much magistracy has begun to impair the finer workings of his mind. His next step was to eat straw like an ox. He lost sight somehow of organic relations. This suggests a vital question. Does our age actually possess the equipment for a magisterial attitude? Let us apply a test: Let us take those writers who most thoroughly represent the magisterial attitude of our times; let us see what light they throw on the social problem, what that radiance is which has caused the glory of Socrates and of Jesus to grow pale, and has made the intellectual distance between Washington and ourselves so vast that we can hardly see him. I quote from an article by Brooks Adams in the Atlantic Monthly for last November:

THE ABSURDITY OF "EVOLUTION" SHOWN.

"From the humblest peasant to the mightiest empire humanity is waging a ceaseless and pitiless struggle for existence in which the unfit perish. This struggle is maintained with every weapon and by every artifice, and success is attained not only by endurance and sagacity, but by cunning and ferocity. Chief, however, among the faculties which have given superiority must rank the material quality, for history teaches us that nothing can compensate a community for defeat in battle. War is competition in its fiercest form." "Human destiny has been wrought out through war." "The first settlers slew the Indians, or were themselves slain. To consolidate an homogeneous empire we crushed the social system of the South, and lastly we cast forth Spain. The story is written in blood, and common sense teaches us that as the past has been, so will be the future."

Applying this pitiless principle to our commercial relations, Mr. Adams argues that our only salvation is to maintain it to the bitter end. There is no hope of improvement; the human organism must fight or die. "The evolution of human society, like that of the brute, must be along lines of pitiless warfare." Notice in this quotation what the light of today is, according to Mr. Adams; it is the doctrine of Natural Seletcion. By its "pure white light" he discerns without any illusions the pathway of society. "Human destiny has been wrought out through war." "Dreams of peace have always allured mankind to their undoing." "Nature has decreed that animals shall compete for life, in other words, destroy or be destroyed. We can hope for no exemption from the common lot." Surely nothing could be more logical than this.

It ought to come with a shock to those who have never thought out in their own minds the unlimited application of this modern scientific theory to human life. It has been said by the highest authority, "Natural Selection works through death." As Mr. Adams has put it, war is Nature's decree, not human brotherhood. The latter, alas, is in illusion, a tradition handed down from the vague and unconsequential ages. Nature's real decree for mankind is war to the knife.

SELFISHNESS IN ALL MEN.

In a powerfully written article by Mr. London on the "Scab," the same view is maintained. I quote the following:

"In a competitive society, where men struggle with one another for food and shelter, what is more natural than that generosity, when it diminishes the food and shelter of men other than he who is generous, should be held an accursed thing? To strike at a man's food and shelter is to strike at his life, and in a society organized through it may be under the guise of generosity, is none the less menacing and terrible.

"It is for this reason that a laborer is so fiercely hostile to another laborer who offers to work for less pay or longer hours.

"Thus, the generous laborer, giving more of a day's work for less return, threatens the life of his less generous brother laborer, and, at the best, if he does not destroy that life, he deminishes it. Whereupon the less generous laborer looks upon him an an enemy, and, as men are inclined to do in a tooth-and-nail society, he tries to kill the man who is trying to kill him.

"When a striker kills with a brick the man who has taken his place, he has no sense of wrong doing. In the deepest holds of his being, though he does not reason the impulse, he has an ethical sanction. He feels dimly that he has justification, just as the home-defending Boer felt, though more sharply, with each bullet he fired at the invading English. Behind every brick thrown by a striker is the selfish 'will to live' of himself, and the slightly altruistic will to live of his family. The family groups came into the world before the state group, and society being still on the primitive basis of tooth and nail, the will to live of the state is not so compelling to the striker as the will to live of his family and himself."

Mr. London scientifically clears up the moral character of the Scab, generously including most of us in his diagnosis. He shows that, however, we may appear to the casual observer, we are all Scabs by turn, and that thought outwardly we often seem to be generous, we are really true at heart to the principle of Natural Selection. Concerning each one of us, he remarks, "He does not scab because he wants to scab. No whim of the spirit, no burgeoning of the heart, leads him to give more of his labor-power than they for a certain sum.

"It is because he cannot get work on the same terms as they that he is a Scab. Nobody desires to scab, to give most for least. The ambition of every individual is quite the opposite."

I pass over the argument by which Mr. London goes on to show that everybody, except King Edward and a few people whom hereditary advantage has rescued from the real struggle of life, is at times a Scab—the laborer, the capitalist, the merchant, the minister of the gospel, the American nation, the English nation—in short, every human organism which is in this competitive warfare plays by turn the part of Scab, according as the strategy of its situation requires. We work for less pay to get control of the situation, but having once got control of the situation we use it to crush the Scab, reduce competition and secure larger returns.

MY TIMES ARE IN THY HAND.

Father, I know that all my life
  Is portioned out for me;
And the changes that are sure to come
  I do not fear to see;
But I ask Thee for a present mind
  Intent on pleasing Thee.

I ask Thee for a thankful love,
  Through constant watching wise,
To meet the good with joyful smiles
  To wish the weeping eyes
And a heart at leisure from itself,
  To soothe and sympathize.

I would not have the restless will
  That hurries to and fro,
Seeking for some great things to do,
  Or secret thing to know;
I would be dealt with as a child
  And guided where to go.

I ask Thee for the daily strength
  To none that ask denied
And a mind to blend with outward life
  While keeping at Thy side,
Content to fill a little space,
  If Thou be glorified

OUR BURDEN BEARER.

The little sharp vexations,
  And the briers that catch and fret,
Why not take all to the Helper,
  Who hath never failed us yet?

Tell Him about the heartaches,
  And tell Him the longings to;
Tell Him the baffled purpose,
  When we scarce know what to do.

Then leave allour weakness,
  With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden,
  And carry away the song.

Questions and Answers.

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. A. they may do so, and they will be answered strictly according to those teachings which claim to be in harmony with the Bible. Address questions to the Question Department of the National Labor Tribune.

Will you kindly tell me why the difference in time between the Jewish and Gentile (?) reckoning? In the Watch Tower the year of the world is 6044. In an article on the Jewish new year, in New York Times, the writer states that the Jews reckon their year 5677. Why this difference of 367 years. J. W. McLONE.

Cromwell, Ct.

Answer—We have consulted a Jewish Rabbi to try to obtain a correct answer to this question, but he was not able to give much information about it. In comparing chronological tables we found that the difference is somewhere between the flood and the beginning of the seventy years desolation. They agree that it was 1656 years from the creation to the end of the flood; and that it was 606 years from the beginning of the seventy years desolation, to A. D. 1. So the difference lies somewhere between Their chronology is rather complicated and hard to figure out. Perhaps some Jewish friends who reads this, and who understands, can give some information on the subject.

In reading the Tribune every week, I naturally read Pastor Russell's sermons, and see where he is on week and some place else next week. I have frequently attended meetings where he preached, in the Exposition Building, and Soldiers Memorial Hall. Now, I never saw a collection taken at any of these meetings, and never heard a word said about money. How does Pastor Russell do all he does, and the audience never asked for a penny? Where does he get the money to run such a stupendous machinery for the promulgation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ? I. H. PARKHILL, 14th Ward, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Answer—This is a matter which has perplexed many people, and the best explanation which we have heard was that given by an usher at an exhibition of the Photo Drama. A gentleman accosted him on his way out of the building and asked: "how can Pastor Russell run this thing without money?" and suggested that he must be a very wealthy man, to which the usher replied—No Pastor Russell is not a wealthy man, but he has a very wealthy Father.

Yes, it is the wealthy Father who supplies the funds to run all the machinery, and according to His own statement, He owns "all the silver and gold, and the cattle on a thousand hills," and He is not a bit stingy of His wealth, nor does He require His Stewards to whom He has entrusted His wealth, to beg for Him, either by taking up collections, or by holding fairs, festivals, grab bag parties, or any of the many foolish things which they of the nominal church think they have to do to raise money. But on the contrary He says to His people "Freely ye have received, freely give."

The I. B. S. A. is run entirely by voluntary contributions. When any one sees the wonderful love of God as it shines in the face of Jesus Christ, he is constrained to give his all, be it much or little. Not of course, to the extent of not "providing things needful in the sight of all men," for that would be disobeying a command. But his song henceforth is "Naught that I have I call my own, I hold it for the giver." So where he gives himself, it includes all his possessions which he seeks to use to the best of his ability in the Lord's service.

The Society has a fund which is supplied by contributions from 'Truth' friends everywhere, out of which Pastor Russell and all other traveling lecturers' expenses are paid, and they are entertained by the friends where they speak, free of charge.

A small salary is paid to all for personal expenses, on the Edward Bellamy plan, the janitor receiving just the same as the president of the society. There is no other organization on earth that is run with such smoothness and exactness, and where such a vast amount of work is done, on so small an amount of money, all on account of the wonderful management, and the strict economy used.

When we were considering whether we would have the Photo Drama in our town, a meeting was called and the question asked, "Shall we have the Photo Drama?" Every hand went up. No one was asked how much they would give. Money was not mentioned. The treasurer was a member of our household, and in a few days the contributions came pouring in, from one to fifty dollars, until we had more than we needed to pay rent for a theater building, and all other expenses. some of the workers asking for the privilege of giving their services free. This is a sample of the way in which the work is carried on in every place. Of course the Drama outfit is provided by the society.

There is another source from which some money comes, and which deserves to be mentioned, that is from those we sometimes call "outsiders" or those who belong to the "big church." It is not an uncommon occurence for some of these, who often find their way into places where lectures are being given, or Dramas being shown, to come around with some money and say, "Here, take this to help pay these expenses." The self-sacrificing spirit shown by the workers, and the absence of the begging spirit seems to appeal to them, and they want to do the thing they are not asked to do.

Not long since at a question meeting which was being conducted by Pastor Russell, and the questions were written on slips of paper, as he took one out of his pocket, he found it to be a check for $27.00, and the question connected with it was, "will you accept this, and use it in the work?" So we see how the wealthy Father can manage things if we will only let Him.

A little incident comes to mind, which serves to show the contrast.

A lady who was the president of a society for the prevention of Divine bankruptcy, came into the room where we were, and began telling a doleful tale about her trials and difficulties about getting money, and in getting others to do their part in helping her, and expressed herself as not knowing what course to pursue, or what to do next. We interrupted her by saying—Mrs. ———, why don't you consult the scriptures? We are told that they are profitable, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Why don't you look and see what Peter's and Paul's wives did about those things.

She looked at us as though she were wondering if we had lost our mind, as whether we had any to lose, and replied that she guessed they did not do things of that kind in those days.

We told her we did not think they did either, and that there was no authority for us doing it.

Those who have given themselves entirely to the Lord, and have entered into covenant relationship with Him, do not have for their motto—"Must I give?" but "May I sacrifice?"

Ithica, N. Y., Oct. 26.

We are Watch Tower subscribers and wish to renew our subscription through the Bible House as we have been doing in the past, only we have sent to them and let them forward it to you but will try sending direct to you and thus save time as we are back on our subscription now and need to make haste.

We are very much pleased with the paper or we would not take it as we already are taking two others that contain Pastor Russell's sermons and times are so hard. We have been taking it so long it seems like an old friend and the sermon is printed in such clear type.

Thank you for being so patient with us.

Yours truly,
MRS. FRANCES HOLMES.

St. Peters, Pa., Oct. 24.

I have taken the Tribune through the Watch Tower Society for the last ten years, and wish to say how much I appreciate it, and I am so glad it continues to print Pastor Russell's sermons, and other articles so helpful to the Christian life. After reading it I send it on to relatives in England. As it can preach the truth better than I can I pray the Lord will bless and prosper it's continuance in well doing. Hearing considerable about the distress and trouble from my various relatives both in England and Scotland and some of them wondering what it is all about, the dreadful wars, I have written the enclosed verses, and if you care to print them in your paper, I shall want some extra papers to send to friends.

Your well wisher,
MRS. WM. CAMERON.

WHAT FOR?

I hear the noise of battle, and strife
Horrors unspeakable, death begged for not life,
Carnage revolting, midst rivers of blood,
Tumult of wars coming in like a flood,
  What for, what for?

As cattle unheeding to slaughter, are driven,
They are sending their millions to add to the living
Who unheeding the dieing, unheeding the dead,
The hordes still march on to make up for those fled,
  What for, what for?

Where the kings, and princes gather
And the mighty ones on earth,
In their secret counsel chamber
Where ambition has its birth
  What for, what for?

Each one striving for the mastery
Each one holding out for more,
Each one wanting the supremacy,
That they never had before,
  That's what for, that's what for.

I hear the voice of prophecy,
Echoing down from ages past,
Saying, "Nation, shall rise against nation,"
Till all kingdoms, be o'er cast,
  That's what for, that's what for.

Yes, peace shall come at last by Him,
Whoes right it is to reign,
The Son of God, "the Prince of Peace,"
O'er all shall have domain,
  That's what for, that's what for.

And then the prayer, so often heard,
Its answer shall be given,
God's will on earth, will then be done,
As it is done in heaven.
  That's what for, that's what for.

Talk About Orders - War Profits--War Stocks. After the War--What?

If You Have Money to Investigate--- Investigate This Proposition.

Place your money where it is absolutely safe and where it will bring you the largest returns. Invest in the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company—now selling at par $1.00 per share. The Gasoline Industry is the livest and most talked of industry in the country today. It will continue to be the most important industry for the next twenty years to come.

When you purchase shares in the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company you are purchasing an interest in a company with an established business and on an absolutely safe and sound financial basis. The immense property controlled by the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company is in an old established oil and gas field—the best territory in the world for obtaining WET GAS, the kind of gas from which the Highest Grade of Gasoline is produced. The territory is ABSOLUTELY PROVEN by the drilling of 31 wells—all producers. The supply of gas is practically inexhaustible. The property is less than 5% developed, yet the company can show daily gross earnings in excess of $600.00 and is producing approximately 7,500 gallons of gasoline per day and over 1,000,000 cubic feet of refined gas.

Such a Splendid Showing clearly indicates that the proposition IS NOT A PROSPECT OR IN AN UNDEVELOPED STAGE. The future possibilities are most remarkable for the reason that there are drilling locations for at least 800 additional wells. If you want QUICK AND LARGE RETURNS on your investment—then place your order AT ONCE for a substantial block of the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company.

After the war—what? The bottom as well as the Profits will drop out of the WAR SECURITIES—but the business of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company will go on as usual and the profits will be greater than ever—because the consumption of gasoline will be greater than ever, and also the price.

By the first of the year the management of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company estimates that the company will be producing about 20,000 gallons of gasoline per day. Increased production means increased earnings. Do you suppose that at that time you will be able to purchase the stock at par $1.00 per share? It is not at all likely. In all probability by that time the stock will be quoted on the New York Curb around $2.00 or possibly $3.00 per share. Do not delay, but PLACE YOUR ORDER NOW for a substantial block of the stock. All indications point to the fact that the stock will be placed on a DIVIDEND PAYING BASIS at an early date. If you want any of this stock you will have to ACT QUICKLY. The allotment at our disposal is limited. It is being rapidly exhausted. If a proposition has MERIT back of it you do not have to be offering it for sale indefinitely. Such propositions are quickly taken up. The very best and most intelligent class of investors are purchasing the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company. They realize the unusual conditions surrounding this industry, and furthermore they are familiar with the Tremendous Profits already made—and they are fully aware of the fact THIS IS THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY THE GENERAL PUBLIC HAVE EVER HAD TO SHARE IN THE PROFITS. You can find plenty of opportunities prenested to you for investing—but we believe we are safe in saying—that this is the first opportunity the public have ever had to invest in a company producing Gasoline in Large, Paying Quantities and safe and sound in every way.

Immediate action on your part is necessary if you want to secure any of this stock. The whole proposition will stand the closest investigation. Orders by wire will receive our prompt attention. Booklet and other interesting data furnished on application. Bank and commercial references.

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food-stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

I want to tell you that I appreciate very much your valuable paper. Especially Pastor Russell's sermons and questions and answers, with all the other good things you are giving us at this time. I also want to thank the dear friend who is sending me the paper for this year. I wrote to you when my time was out that I did not feel able to take it this year as I was getting the sermons in two other papers. But the Lord has been very kind to me knowing there would be things especially needful to me this year. So now I will try and be ready to send in my subscription when the time is up myself. I would also like to ask of any of the friends if they could furnish me any back Watch Towers. If I can only get the numbers I am asking for will make all files complete from 1900 up to now. In 1900—Jan. 1, May 15, and July 1; 1901—Aug. 1; 1902—Jan. 1; 1903—April 1, 15, Aug. 1, Oct. 1, 15 and Nov. 1; 1906—July 15; 1907—Jan. 15 and April 1. In 1913 I did not know there was such papers as the Labor Tribune and Watch Tower published or Scripture Studies, either, but now I receive many blessings from them all.

Thanks be to our Heavenly Father. May you receive many blessings for your kindness to God's little ones.

I like the Tribune and would miss it very much, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and the essays of N. E. With kindest wishes for the Tribune staff as long as it fights for right.

SOUL AWAKENING ARISE,
O SLEEPER!

HUMANITY'S LONG SLEEP OF SIX THOUSAND YEARS SOON TO BE BROKEN

The Sleep of Death—God's Call to Arise From the Dead—Sleeping In the Tomb—Sleeping Under Potion Administered by the Adversary—The Soul's Awakening—Responsibility of Parents and Teachers—"High Time to Awake Out of Sleep"—Sleepy Christians.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Oct. 29—Pastor Russell was in our city today, and preached a stirring sermon from the text, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light!" (Ephesians 5:14.) He said in part:

The world in general is asleep. In one sense of the word it is dead. As we know, the death sentence passed upon all men because of Adam's sin. (Romans 5:12.) Since that time all of the human family have been going into the tomb; and even those still having a measure of life are spoken of in the Scriptures as "dead in trespasses and sins." (Esphesians 2:1.) But this death sentence resting upon all mankind has been transmuted by the Lord to be a sentence of a period of sleep to be followed by an awakening. God had this arrangement in His glorious Purpose from the beginning, from before mankind came into existence. In the Divine Program our Lord Jesus was the Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world. God purposed the redemption and restitution of mankind. For this reason the Bible refers to the death state as a "sleep."

When God spoke to Moses at the burning bush, He called Himself the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob, although these men had long been dead. Our Lord Jesus referred to this statement, and declared that the fact that God so spoke of them when they were dead proved that there is to be A RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD. (Luke 20:37, 38; Exodus 3:6) He did not say that this proved that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were not dead, but alive in some other world, but that it proved that they were to be raised from the dead; "for all live unto Him" (God). In other words, it is God's purpose that all shall yet live (John 5:28, 29); and He can properly speak from the standpoint of His pre-determined purpose. In both Old and New Testaments death is spoken of as sleep, because of the redemption and the deliverance from the Adamic death penalty purposed through Christ's sacrificed death on the cross.

An understanding of the Plan of the Ages given in the Scriptures reveals the fact that all mankind will be awakened from the Adamic death state, in order that they may "come to a knowledge of the Truth," which will be made plain to all during the Messianic Reign of our Lord. (1 Timothy 2:3-6. This will be the individual enlightenment then brought to all mankind; and the attitude of each toward God's revealed provision for all will determine his case, whether he shall have life everlasting or shall be cast into the death state again. This will be the Second Death—eternal destruction. In the Bible the Second Death is never spoken of as a "sleep". This term is applied only to the Adamic death.

"AWAKE, THOU THAT SLEEPEST!"

Our text applies especially to those who, although still having an existence, are dead in trespasses and sins, who are sleeping so far as the highest interests of their souls, their being, are concerned, those who are under the benumbing influence of the potion administered by the great Adversary. (2 Corinthians 4:4.) Since our Lord's death as the great Sacrifice for sin, the call has gone out in a general way to all who have heard the Gospel Message that they should repent of sin, should arise from their dormant condition, and live in accordance with the purpose for which they were created. To those who heed this Message comes the special Call of the Gospel Age.

The Majority of the human family seem to be passing through life in a sort of mase. They are not awake; they seem to be in a dream. As a rule, they are not thinking about the more important things of life, but of the trivialities—what they shall eat, what they shall drink, wherewithal shall they be clothed, where they shall find pleasure or amusement, how they can multiply their dollars. These matters are indeed very trifling compared to the weighty question—"Why am I living? What was the purpose of my creation? What are my responsibilities to my God and my fellowmen? What is to be my eternal destiny?"—Matthew 6:31-33.

In the experience of practically all who have come to the Lord there has been first a soul awakening. Their coming to Him has been preceded by an awakening of their inmost being, their nobler self, a dissatisfaction with the things of this world and a yearning for something that will satisfy, a hungering and thirsting for God. To the one who is beginning to experience this soul-stirring, the words of our text should be especially effective: "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light!" First must come the awakening, the realization of our need, the hungering for God. Then the light will come, as the heart comes into the right attitude to receive it.

AN IMPORTANT CRISIS IN LIFE

This thought of the need of an awakening should give us sympathy for those who have never yet heard the voice of the Lord. They need our sympathy. "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear," said our Lord to His disciples. (Matthew 13:16, 17.) This benediction is for the disciples of Jesus today as well as for those to whom the words were directly spoken. These have had the soul awakening; they see and hear things unknown before—things of incomparable value. A very large number of the poor world of mankind are steeped in sin and degradation. They are living merely for the things of time and sense. They seem to do very little profitable thinking. Although they have heard of God and of Heaven, yet what they heard seemingly has made but little impression upon them.

To some who have lived thus for years there comes a time of awakening. Suddenly, through the experience of life, they are aroused from their lethargy to a realization that there is something to live for beyond what they have heretofore seen. They come to realize that they are sinners needing a Savior, that they are helpless and need a Helper. Perhaps they get the right view—that the sentence resting upon fallen man is death. (Genesis 3:19.) More likely they get the wrong view—that it is eternal torment. But from the moment of their awakening they faced a crisis in their lives. How would they respond? Would they come near to God and receive a blessing? Or would they turn from Him and the voice of conscience, and wander off into greater darkness, greater sin, and thereafter be more difficult to reach than ever before?

In the case of others, however, it was not an awakening to a realization of sin; for from childhood they had been children of the Lord, accustomed to the Bible, the hearing of prayer and the singing of hymns. They were Christians; yet their soul was not really awake. They were going through the form of singing hymns, of reading the Bible and of offering prayer, without thinking seriously what the words meant. They were asleep, in a cort of somnambulistic condition, as it were, going around in a stupid way, having a form of godliness wtih little or none of its power.

Then, in the Lord's providence, they were brought to a sudden stand-still. They received a mental shock which shook them out of their torpid condition. They were brought face to face with a crisis in their lives. They saw in just what condition they were. They heard the Call to a higher, nobler life. We well remember when we received this soul-awakening. We were about fifteen years old at the time.

SUGGESTIONS TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS

This time of soul-awakening is an important period in the life of the young. About this time there seems to be a great change in human nature. It is the age when conditions of thoughtfulness are reached, the time when the forces making for spirituality have the most favorable effect upon the youthful mind. This is a thought which parents, guardians and teachers of youth do well to have before them. By this we do not mean, however, that no special attempt should be made to bring the child to the Lord previous to this time. Quite to the contrary, from birth the child should be trained in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Indeed, the child's training should begin even earlier than this; for the parental influence upon the mind of the infant during the pre-natal period is of the utmost importance and has a decided bearing upon the character in later life.

In speaking of the importance of the period of life at the age of fifteen years or thereabouts, our thought is that at about that time the child's mind is sufficiently developed to begin to reach out as never before to wonder, to question, to see things in a new light, to look beyond the trivial things of the present time, to lose interest in previous childish diversions. Parents and teachers should use much wisdom in dealing with children at this crucial age. They should neither reprove nor seek to check these first stirrings of the mind toward higher, more important things.

It seems somewhat remarkable that at this age children reason with a great deal of accuracy, about as accurately, perhaps, as they will ever reason; but experience seems to show that this is true. It is afterward that their minds frequently become perverted by false reasoning, and their brain power becomes so confused that they do not know how to think or what to think. From their elders they learn deceit, and get improper views of life and its responsibilities. They imbibe erroneous teachings, which are often difficult to unlearn.

PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY VERY GREAT

Strange to say, there are parents—and some of them professedly Christian—who say, "All children must sow their wild oats." How surprising that any parent could so reason! Whoever sows wild oats will reap in kind. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Galatians 6:7.) There is no escape from this inexorable law of nature.

From the first dawn of its understanding the child should be kept very near to the Divine standard. The parents should be able to express to the child in sympathic terms those qualities of nobility and righteousness which the opening mind is so ready to reveive, just as a sponge sucks up water. The child mind is ready to absorb very fully the thoughts which are given to it by sincere parents or by any one in whom it has confidence. But children soon lose confidence in one whom they find to be deceitful, one who tells them untruths.

Children are very quick to note whether the parent is untruthful or unjust. Thus their confidence is destroyed; and in time they learn to deceive others, to practice falsehood and injustice. We regret to say that there are parents who seemingly think it wise and proper to teach their children to be shrewd and "thrifty," as they call it—to take advantage of others and to fib a little. We are sure that all who come to a real knowledge of Divine Truth, and who have imbibed its spirit, will have no such sentiments. Having learned the right way themselves, they will be very desirous that their children and all whom they can influence shall take the same Godlike viewpoint as themselves.

AFTER AWAKENING, REMAIN AWAKE

Those who have experienced an awakening of soul should be very watchful lest they fall asleep again—drift back into the old worldly ways. After one has awakened in the morning, and his senses have become fully aroused it is possible for him to turn over and fall asleep once more. Upon a second awakening, however, the energies are sluggish, and the mind is more or less dull and stupid. Upon first awakening after a refreshing sleep, there is a freshness of mind which seems to be lost if one permits himself to doze off again; and perhaps after his second awakening there is a languor or torpidity of feeling for the entire day.

So it is with those that fall asleep again after having been awakened to a realization of the higher and nobler aspirations and enjoyments. Such may be awakened a second time; but if they are, the perceptions of the soul are likely to be less acute, the conscience less sensitive. For this reason we should encourage those who have awakened to arise at once from the dead world and to be separate from those around them who are still asleep.

After one has awakened and begun to arise from the dead world, the soul is in the attitude to receive the light of Heaven. "Christ shall give thee light." "Light is sown for the righteous and gladness for the upright in heart." (Psalm 97:11.) Those who are arising from the dead world are approaching this condition of uprightness. The dead are represented as being prostrate. (1 John 5:19.) Arising to a standing position represents an entire change of sentiment.

The awakened one should at once seek to know what the Lord desires him to do. He should begin to study the Word of God. There he finds that the Way to God is Christ—the only way. The path that leads to God is by way of the Cross of Calvary. The soul must lay hold upon Jesus, by acceptance of the merit of His sacrifice death and by a complete surrender of God through Christ Jesus as the great Advocate. When he has taken this step, the light will begin to dawn upon him. Heavenly things can now for the first time be grasped by the soul. Light, increasing light, is his portion; for each step of obedience brings greater knowledge. "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."—Proverbs 4:18.

In the past many of us made the great mistake of supposing that we became Christians when first we awakened, when first we arose from the dead world about us. But we were merely looking toward Christianity, merely awakening to the fact that there is such a thing as harmony with God and an escape from the condemnation that is upon the world because of sin.

There is still condemnation upon all except those who are in Christ. The Apostle truly says, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Romans 8:1.) From the moment we come into Christ we are counted members of His Body, and we lose all condemnation of Adamic death. His sacrificial merit has been imputed to cover all our imperfections, as well as the sins of the past. Arising from the dead, in this sense of the expression, means that we are living the resurrection life, that the new life in Christ is begun in us. (Romans 6:4.) This life will, if we continue in the good way, be completed when we receive our glorious spiritual bodies in the First Resurrection.

ON TRIAL FOR LIFE OR DEATH

From the time that we lose the condemnation of death that came upon mankind through Adam's disobedience, by taking the steps of faith in Jesus as our Redeemer and of full consecration to God through Him, we are again placed on trial for life. The first trial for life was given to Father Adam; and when he failed, condemnation came upon all his posterity. But no one can be tried twice for a capital offense unless in the meantime he has been cleared of the previous condemnation. Therefore no one can have a second trial until he gets from under the condemnation that came through Adam.

Only the Church of Christ is now on trial for life eternal. They are reckoned as having passed from death unto life, but this is a salvation only by hope. They have yet to be proved, to be developed as New Creatures in Christ. They are now on probation. They have entered the School of Christ, to be perfected in character, to be made copies of God's dear Son, who is their great instructor. They must be prepared for their future work in the Kingdom; for, if they prove faithful even unto death, they will become the teachers of the next Age—instructing, uplifting, encouraging, blessing, the whole world of mankind, who died in Adam and who are to be awakened and dealt with during the incoming Dispensation.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The following is the standing of the fund to date:

Previously reported	$54.00

The first part of the "PHOTO-DRAMA OF CREATION" was shown in the Lyceum Theater, Pittsburgh, on Sunday evening. This theater, which is one of the largest in the city, was packed from pit to dome, and hundreds were turned away. The Drama has been improved upon since it was shown here almost two years ago at Exposition Hall, and we think has many additional attractive features.

The second part will be given Sunday evening, November 5, and on November 12 the third part, and November 19 the fourth part. All our readers are invited. The seats are free and no collection. Come early, friends, if you want a seat.

St. Paul, Miin. October 21, 1916.

Editor The National Labor Tribune,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

My Dear Sir.—In your issue of October 12, page 2, column 6, is a reference to me to which a friend has called my attention, he thinking the statement to be an injustice to me. My first impulse was to ignore the matter altogether; as one o fthe best lessons I have learned as a follower of Christ is the impropriety of one of His followers fighting for justice.

In view of the possibility, however, that some might be injured by entertaining wrong impressions, if they were allowed to go unchallenged, I think you will be glad, from a sense of fidelity to common truth, and to keep the standard of your paper up to that level, to permit me to say through its columns that there is no truth whatever in the following statement copied from the issue above mentioned:

"Since he has had the privilege of replying through the Tribune."

Who wrote the above statement was not made apparent; therefore the editor is presumably responsible for it. It is not to be doubted that the editor allowed this statement to slip in through inadvertence; since he assuredly knows it to be a fact that the writer has never officially been offered the privilege of the columns of The Tribune. Such privilege has never been offered, either officially, semi-officially or un-officially; so that it is very evident that the writer has not side-stepped or neglected any privileges at any time within his grasp.

With cordial good wishes, I am,
Yours sincerely,
W. H. BRADFORD.

You apparently do not understand our syntax. The clause you quote belongs to the opening remarks of the paragraph. The reference to you is an incidental, and perhaps would have been clearer had it been placed in parenthesis. The clause you quote has reference to Pastor Russell's estimates of Prof. Henry Drummond published in the Tribune Dec. 23, 1915. Read the introduction to John Henry Barrow's estimates of Henry Ward Beecher carefully—your misconception cannot be reconciled with the contex.—Editor Tribune.

"Prof. Drummond, in his 'Natural Law in the Spiritual World,' after cautiously advancing the doctrine of Evolution—so guardedly that many of his readers absorbed his suggestions without realizing what they implied of Scripture contradiction—has now thrown off the mask and declares his anti-Scriptural views in his new book 'The Ascent of Man.' How could we expect this learned gentleman (See Isa. 29:14) to be interested in, or to appreciate, the Bible doctrines of redemption and restitution from the fall? (See Acts 3:21). Far easier for him would it be to forget all the greatness of the past—the statesmanship of Moses, and wisdom of Solomon and Confucious, the logic of St. Paul and Socrates and Plato; the poetry of the Psalmist, Job and Shakespeare; the 'Lost Arts' of manufacture, elastic glass, tempered copper and Damascus steel; and the musicians and sculptures and painters of the past; and to think only of the greatness of the present so-called 'brain age.' Far easier would it be for him to conclude that St. Peter and all the holy prophets since the world began were mistaken, deluded, and that he and all the 'higher critics are correct. Because, forsooth, the 'times of restitution' which Peter and all the holy prophets and Apostles hold forth as the hope of the world, would, according to these self-styled critics, be a return to apehood.' Truly the words of the Lord are fulfilled—'The wisdom of the wise men shall be hid.' "

TAKING A REST.

"Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation" has been temporarely discontinued. This does not mean that the end of this interesting story has been published, but think that our readers maybe have grown tired of it, and for the present at least it will be discontinued. Look out for it in the near future.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 26.

Enclosed find $2.00 for poor fund to help one or two of the truth friends to get your valuable paper which is getting better all the time, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and all the other truth features.

With Christian greetings.
Yours for the Truth,
MRS. N. SCHNEIDER.

The Eight Hour Law Secured 18 Years Ago

President Ratchford addressed the convention briefly, urging the operators of Hocking valley and Pennsylvania to get together and adjust their differences, so that April 1 they would be able to give their miners the advance and better hours, which would then become effective elsewhere, and he promised to use his best endeavors to bring them together.

Operator Dalzell, of Illinois, put through a motion that the scale adopted be in effect from April 1, 1898, to April 1, 1899, and that the miners and operators meet in joint conference in January, 1899, to adopt a scale for the rate of mining for the ensuing year.

The arrangement of the State scales was then discussed. President Ratchford explained that the adjustment of the day rate would be arranged by each State, the day men to have an advance in ratio with the mining rate, eight hours' labor with, eight hours' pay, 48 hours' labor per week. Mr. Ratchford expressed the hope that at the end of the year perhaps even better hours could be obtained.

CONGRATULATED THE MINERS

Operator Robbins, of Pennsylvania, congratulated the miners on the grand victory. In conclusion he moved that the same relative price that existed between pick and machine mining shall be in force during the ensuing year. The motion was unanimously carried.

Arrangements were made for the meetings of the various committees to arrange State differentials, and the convention adjourned sine die.

President D. M. Ratchford, of the United Mine Workers, expressed himself as highly satisfied with the work of the convention. He said:

"I consider the establishment of an 8-hour day for the miners one of the greatest labor victories of the century. It is, in my estimation, of far more importance than the 10 cents per ton advance. We are bound to consider the conditions of the coal industry in asking for an advance in the mining scale and, perhaps, when we meet in annual conference next year, conditions may be such that the advance would be lost. But the uniform day of eight hours' work and 48 hours for the week will stand as one of the greatest achievements in the history of the miners or any other organization. It may be that the new scale is not all that the miners in some districts have desired, but as a whole I consider it as an eminently satisfactory one."

Colonel W. P. Rend, of Chicago, who owns and operates coal mines in Pennsylvania and Indiana, expressed himself as highly pleased with the results of the convention. He said:

COLONEL REND'S VIEWS.

"When the convention met a week ago last Monday I predicted a peaceful settlement. Of course, there were many young delegates who insisted on being heard, and the deliberations were long drawn out, but moderation which I have counseled from the beginning, has prevailed and I congratulate the miners of this country on their splendid achievement."

Walter S. Bogle, an extensive operator in Indiana, expressed himself in a like manner. Mr. Bogle was, perhaps, the strongest ally the miners had among the operators for a uniform day of eight hours. He said:

"The convention has been a grand success. The miners have been very considerate in their demands, especially as to the date of a new scale, changing the time from January 16 to April 1, and in so doing went far to conciliate the operators in regard to the general terms. We of Indiana have made a strong fight for the eight-hour day, and I consider its establishment as the grandest step forward in the history of organized labor."

Wilson and Gary After the Chinese.

the greatest significance. The truth is, the mineral wealth of China is enormous, and its development will have considerable effect not only on this country, but on Europe.

The most plentiful of all China's minerals is coal, and one of the most attractive features of the principal deposits is their proximity to navigable rivers. Iron ores occur abundantly in China, but only one variety is used. The methods of manufacture are no longer primitive, the iron produced is of high quality—that of the Shan Se province being preferred in the country to iron imported from Europe.

Gold is widely distributed, occurring in at least sixty-four provinces. The quantity obtained, however, is small, and the mines are unprofitable, with the exception of those in one province, Yun-Nan. Lead, silver, copper, tin, and zinc are found in large quantities. In the Yun-Nan province alone the area through which they are distributed comprises at least 80,000 square miles.

The mineral of vast importance to China is the coal, which is found in eight provinces. It is practically impossible to make any fair comparison between the value and extent of China's coal fields and those of the United States, but some idea may be gained when it is known that in the Shan Se province alone it is estimated the quantity is about 630,000,000 tons, which compared with the amount produced in one year in Pennsylvania (according to the last census a little over 81,000,000 tons), certainly makes a creditable showing.

The province of Shan Se is first in importance, and in proportion to its area has probably the largest and most easily workable coal fields of any region on the globe. The coal is in a plateau in the southeastern part of the province, both bituminous and anthracite being found, the latter as good as the best Pennsylvania. The coal bed is thin where it crops out on the hillside, but at a distance of 200 feet from the entrance of the mine the thickness increases to over thirty feet. The price ranges from 12 to 40 cents per ton while in the Pittsburgh District coal is $2.00 and $3.00 a ton at the pit mouth.

OTHER PROVINCES

Shan Tung province has four considerable coal districts and several of minor importance. The province is bounded on the south and west by the courses of the Hoang-Ho River, and is also traversed by the Grand Canal, which would give excellent water facilities. In one district pits are in operation, both anthracite and bituminous coal of excellent quality abound there.

In Hu Nan there are three coal fields, two furnishing bituminous and one anthracite. In the extent of its coal fields this province ranks next in importance to Shan Se. It possesses a coal-bearing area of 21,000 square miles, which, compared to the 1,700 square miles of Pennsylvania seems tremendous, and makes a creditable showing even against the 37,000 square miles of the State of Illinois. Here again, however, the difficulty of obtaining reliable figures makes comparison of little value. The mines are worked after obsolete methods, and only the best quality and largest lumps are sent away.

Pe-Chi-Li's coal formation is noted for its almost unparalleled stratagraphical development, having an aggregate minimum of 140 feet of coal. One of the mines—that of Kaiping—is the only one in the country for the development of which European aid has been invoked.

The province of Yun Nan abounds in minerals of all kinds, and for its variety ranks first in China. Coal is found in three places, and is an excellent quality of anthracite, called by the people of the province "no smoke" coal.

The principal reasons for the lack of the development of coal mining in China seems to be the absence of deep mine workings and the exorbitant freight charges.

Vote for Steady Work; Hughes and High Wages

WILSON WITHOUT WAR MEANS POVERTY AND STARVATION—HUGHES AND A HIGH PROTECTIVE TARIFF MEANS PROSPERITY, PLENTY AND A BIG BANK ACCOUNT—VOTE FOR A FULL DINNER PAIL.

The political campaign virtually is over. The issue is up to the wage earner. For the last few months he has heard a great deal about his "friends." Now he is called upon to look beneath the surface and vote for his best interests.

The American workingman is more interested in fundamental issues than in individual candidates. He will study history in the light of his own experience and vote accordingly. He knows which of the poltical parties protects him in his job and in the secrecy of the polling booth he will vote for protection to himself and his family.

The next four years will be a period of tremendous importance in the economic history of the United States. The great war which is now devastating Europe, will come to an end, in all human probability, within that period. What effect will the ending of the war have upon the American workingman?

Does the American workman propose to have himself subjected to the competition of European workers, trained to the highest degree of efficiency that the world has ever known; workers content with a lower standard of living than prevails in this country, or does he propose to be protected from such competition? That is the question which he must decide for himself on November 7 next.

The American workman knows the effect of European competition upon his opportunities for earning a living. He has not forgotten how mills and factories closed down upon the passage of the Underwood tariff law. He has not forgotten how he was denied employment, while he saw those dependent on him suffer hunger and want and saw them compelled to accept charity in order that they might live.

The American workingman is too intelligent to be deceivd by the present temporary prosperity which he is enjoying. He understands that such prosperity is not due to the Underwood tariff law, but was brought about in spite of it, by reason of the abnormal demand of the warring nations for American products. Except for the European war, American mills and factories would be closed, or partially closed today, as they were for nearly two years under the present administration, before war orders came to relieve the situation.

If American industries were forced to shut down on account of European competition in normal times, how can they survive that competition after the close of the war? It is well known that European industry never was organized on such an efficient basis as it is today. The stern necessity of war compelled the nations to put forth their utmost efforts to increase production. Comparatively few of the skilled workers are engaged in actual fighting. At an early stage in the war, the nations realized that its outcome would depend, not on the men at the front, but on the skilled workers at home in the workshops and factories. For that reason the unskilled workers were drafted into the fighting ranks and the skilled were drafted into industry and trained in efficiency such as never before.

Those highly skilled and trained workers, will be competitors of American workingmen after the war, unless steps are taken to see that their products are not admitted to this country, except under conditions that will protect the wages and standards which obtain here.

Which of the two great political parties offers the greater protection to the American worker? The Republican party, with its policy of protection to American industry, or the Democratic party with its policy of free trade, or tariff for revenue? Does the American worker need to be told? Does not his experience tell him? Is he going to be fooled by claims that this or that law was enacted for his benefit?

Of what use are minor laws designed to protect workers, if they are deprived of the opportunity to work? The Democratic party, passes a law which robs the American workman of his right to work and then tries to catch his vote by pointing to some other laws which have been enacted, presumably for his benefit. But he will not be fooled that way. He knows that he cannot live on laws. He must have work.

The Republican party proposes, as it has done in the past, first to protect the workers in their right to work. It proposes, as it has in the past to protect them while at work. From the claims made by Democrats the worker must suppose that all the laws designed to protect him were passed within the last year or two. But the records tell a different story. The eight-hour law for government employes was enacted by a Republican Congress. It was extended by a Republican administration to include work done by contract for the government. The law requiring safety appliances on the railroads, was enacted under a Republican administration, as was most of the other labor laws now on the statute books.

Which party has stood against the evils of child labor and sought to protect children from exploitation? In what section of the country are children permitted to work in mills and factories? In the South, of course, which is always Democratic and whose representatives now control Congress. Who fought against the passage of the recently enacted federal child labor law? In the final passage of the bill in the House of Representatives on Feb. 2, 1916, 179 Republicans voted for it and one against it. On the Democratic side 136 voted for it and forty-five against it. Which party deserves the credit? In the Senate, of twelve votes against the bill, ten were cast by Democratic Senators.

The records speak for themselves. The workers will not be fooled by specious claims made to catch their votes. They know that the Republican party stands for the protection of American industry, which means employment, at fair wages for American workingmen. The Democratic party stands for free trade and the competition of cheap foreign labor. Which does the American worker want to see in power?

Wilson without war means poverty and starvation, while Hughes and Fairbanks mean a high protective tariff, prosperity, plenty, happy homes and a big bank account. Tuesday, November 7, is the day when the American citizen shall be given an opportunity to cast his ballot for the Republican Standard Bearers and a full dinner pail.

SHIPWRECKED ON MELITA—MALTA

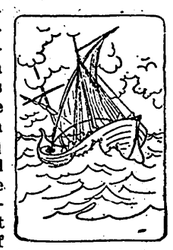
Acts 27:38-44.—November 5.

St. Paul as a Man Amongst Men—His Example Ever Worthy of Emulation. His Transformation of Character a Witness to the Power of God—His Courage During the Hurricane—His Influence With the Centurion—His Experiences on the Island.

"Jehovah redeemeth the soul of His servants; and none of them that take refuge in Him shall be condemned."—Psalm 34:22. R. V.

OUR STUDIES for the current year show St. Paul from various standpoints—a bigoted persecutor, a humble penitent, a courageous witness to the Truth amongst his own people, a self-sacrificing missionary in foreign lands. We have noted his conduct in the presence of kings and nobles. We have admired his courage in the midst of danger on his voyage to Rome as a prisoner. Today we view him as a man amongst men in the midst of a great disaster.

From the time when he became a follower of the Lord Jesus, St. Paul's deportment was noble, humble, reverential, saintly, worthy of emulation by all the Master's followers. The transformation wrought in St. Paul is possible in all who receive the Gospel Message into good and honest hearts. Of itself such a transformation is a witness to the reality of the Religion of the Bible. What a changed world we should be in if all mankind underwent such a transformation!



Committed to the Sea.

But not all are in the heart condition to be thus influenced by the Gospel. Some will need Messiah's strong arm—the authority and the force of the Millennial Kingdom—to bring them into subjection and show them the advantages of right over wrong. Thank God that with faith we may pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in Heaven!

Encouraging His Companions.

Scudding before the storm for fourteen days and nights, the vessel finally reached a place where the seamen's trained ears caught the sound of the surf during the night. Then they cast four anchors out of the stern and waited for morning. Meantime the Apostle exhorted his companions to be of good cheer. Reminding them of his vision and assuring them of his absolute faith therein, he urged them to take food in order that they might be strengthened for the exertions of the coming day. His cheerfulness and his example were contagious.

With the morning light they discerned the shore and a little bay, now known as St. Paul's Bay, in the island of Malta, then called Melita. The sailors cut loose from the anchors, hoisted sail and sought to beach the boat. But the vessel grounded on a mudbank. The forepart holding fast, the rear began to go to pieces with the force of the waves; for it was a meeting place for two sea currents. In the night the lifeboat had been cut adrift, because the sailors had attempted to desert the ship. St. Paul had discerned their intention, and had communicated the facts to the centurion, advising that the lifeboat be sent adrift and pointing out the necessity of compliance with reasonable precautions to insure the fulfilment of the Divine promise.

Seeing that only by swimming or by floating on wreckage could the shore be reached, the soldiers proposed that the prisoners be killed; for under Roman law they were answerable with their lives for the security of those committed to their charge. But the centurion had learned to esteem the Apostle, and for his sake spared all the prisoners, doubtless remembering the vision which had inspired them all with the hope and the courage which had brought them thus far toward safety. It turned out as St. Paul had foretold—every human life was spared, but the ship with her cargo was lost.

St. Paul From a New Viewpoint.

On the shore we get a new picture of the Apostle. He neither stood on any dignity nor assumed superiority. On the contrary, he promptly assisted in serving the interests of the entire company. We find him gathering sticks for a fire, at which the company might be warmed and dried. The barbarians of the island — so-called because they spoke neither Greek nor Latin, but Phoenician—showed them various kindnesses.

Escape to Land.

But when a viper, warmed to life by the fire, fastened itself upon the Apostle's hand, the natives reasoned that he was doubtless a murderer who, having escaped the perils of shipwreck, was still pursued by Divine Justice and bitten that he might die. But when St. Paul shook off the viper and suffered no injury, they concluded that he must be a god. Soon afterward the Apostle found that the father of the governor was sick, and miraculously healed him and other sick people. Thus the knowledge of Christ and His minister spread abroad to a considerable extent, although as far as we have any information the Apostle did not attempt to preach the Gospel Message, either to his companions on shipboard or to the people of the island. Therefore we may safely presume that he found no "hearing ears."

NECKWEAR WORKERS STRIKE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Employes in the neckwear industry, a unit of the sweater trades, are on strike for better working conditions and higher wages. These workers have organized and are affiliated to the A. F. of L. Wage rates of 10 cents an hour is common and the season lasts only six months in the year.

WINNING THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 30.—The Housesmiths and Architectural Iron Workers union is gradually winning its fight for the eight-hour day. The Pacific Structural company conceded the demand of the union and is now operating its plant on an eight-hour basis.

This concern is the fourth of its kind to grant the eight-hour day to the housesmiths within the past month, leaving only six steel firms on the "unfair" list of the Building Trades Council.

EIGHT HOURS AND INCREASE.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 30.—The boiler makers and helpers employed at the refineries have had their wages raised from 10 to 25 cents per day as the result of several conferences. In addition to the increase an eight-hour day has also been agreed upon.

METAL WORKERS MEET.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—President O'Connell of the metal trades department of the A. F. of L. announces that the eighth annual meeting will be held at Moose hall, 410 West Fayette street, Baltimore, beginning November 9. Headquarters are at the Rennert hotel.

STAGE EMPLOYES' NEW SCALE.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Oct. 30.—A new wage scale has been accepted by the managers of the Grand and Royal theaters which carries with it an increase of $1 to $2 per week, recognition of the union and terminates November 1, 1917.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE

New York Public Library 476 Fifth Ave.

ESTABLISHED 1872—No. 49 PITTSBURGH, PA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1916 FIVE CENTS A COPY

CANDIDATE HUGHES SENDS STIRRING MESSAGE

The Decision Now Up to the Voter While the Country Hopes for a Full Dinner Pail.

The last message from Presidential Candidate Charles Evans Hughes sent special to the National Labor Tribune is one of the most important that the candidate has issued since he decided to run for office. It sets forth with exceptional clearness issues that should cause every voter in this great industrial section to think and it is as important to the farmer as those engaged in the great American industries.

The message is as follows:

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The national political campaign virtually is at an end. The issue is up to the voters of the country. Upon their decision rests the question whether the industrial prosperity of the country is to be placed on a firm foundation, or whether we are to continue the weak and vacillating policies, which have characterized the present administration.

To the hundreds of thousands of workers in the mines, mills and factories of the country, the issue to be determined next Tuesday is fraught with tremendous possibilities. No class of citizens have a more direct interest in our government, than have the men who work for daily wages in our great steel mills and coal mines. A political party which fails to protect the great army of workers in their employment, is a menace to the industrial life of the country.

Workers in the mines, mills and factories, who are now enjoying a measure of prosperity, should not be deceived, nor should they follow false gods. They should understand that the present prosperity has actually been thrust upon them in spite of the Democratic administration which wiped out the protective tariff and removed the only safeguard which the workers possess against the cheap products of foreign labor.

That the present good demand for labor, skilled and unskilled, is due entirely to the European war, is so plainly evident that it is hardly necessary to repeat it to the intelligent American workingman. The European war with all its horror and economic waste; its heartless cruelty and bloodshed, rescued the American nation from the worst industrial depression in its history, brought on by the uneconomic and unstable policy of a Democratic administration.

Does the intelligent workman doubt the truth of that statement? If he does let him turn his thoughts back to the conditions prevailing in the winter of 1914-15, before the war orders of the warring nations came to relieve the situation. Surely he cannot forget the closed mills and mines; the hundreds of thousands of idle railroad cars; the general industrial stagnation with its sickening bread lines and heartbreaking poverty and distress. The Underwood tariff law, which took from the American workman the opportunity to earn a living for himself and his family, got in its deadly work for months before the European war created an entirely abnormal condition which relieved the situation.

But the workingman has had other experiences to guide him in his selection next Tuesday. The Underwood tariff law did only what was to be expected. The Democratic party ran true to form. The older workmen will remember the conditions which prevailed from 1893 to 1896 under a former Democratic administration. They will remember that immediately the protective tariff was wiped out, the mills and factories closed down and an army of unemployed was thrown upon the charity of the country. That has been the net result of the Democratic policy of tariff for revenue, or free trade every time it has been put into effect.

The workingman who remembers the distressing times following 1893, will remember also how prosperity followed upon the election of President McKinley and the restoration of the protective tariff. The tariff proved the stimulant which injected new life and blood into American industry. It always has done so and every intelligent workman knows it.

There can be no surer method of judging the future than by the past. Within the next four years the European war will come to an end. What effect will that end have upon the American workman, if he is to be subjected to the competition of the impoverished labor of European countries? If the competition of European labor closed the door of opportunity for the American workman before the war, as it did under the Underwood tariff, what may be expected after the war when the millions now engaged in the business of killing, return to peaceful pursuits, ready and willing to accept any wages they are offered? Can the American workman under such conditions hope to maintain his present high standards of living? That is the question which he must decide for himself and those dependent upon him in the secrecy of the polling booth next Tuesday.

Never in the history of the country has an election been fraught with greater possibilities, from the workingman's point of view. The great war, which is temporarily benefiting him, will on its close bring about new alignments in the industrial world. The industrial efficiency of the European worker has reached today a higher point than ever dreamed of in the past. While the millions of unskilled workers have been drafted to the front to do actual fighting, the millions of skilled workers have been trained in efficiency in the factories and workshops, so that more than ever have they become dangerous competitors.

The necessities of the war have vitalized industry in Great

BIGELOW'S APPOINTMENT SATISFACTORY TO ALL

Ex-Director Needed in Armstrong's Cabinet to Strengthen the Administration--Enemies Already Planning Mayor's Overthrow

There is general satisfaction expressed everywhere over the belief that Edward Manning Bigelow will be the next Director of the Department of Public Works and all agree that the Ex-Commissioner of State Highways is the best qualified man in the state of Pennsylvania for the place. There is no man in the city who can compare with him in any way in road building or municipal improvements and none have been able to exercise the economy he exercised in the great improvements he advanced. Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong will not make the selection until after the election on Tuesday next but it is said that Director Bigelow is his choice and that everything points to the Ex-State Highway Commissioner again becoming the Director of the Department of Public Works. Businessmen throughout the city declare Mr. Bigelow is the best qualified man that could be found and the Tribune after a thorough canvas of several of the large office buildings found the feeling not partly but wholly unanimous for Bigelow. It is said that Council will not hesitate to confirm his appointment at the earliest opportunity and while there are other candidates whose friends are seeking the office for them there are none who have such absolute control over the details as Mr. Bigelow. The office requires an able man and the present administration needs men of exceptional executive ability in the cabinet if the administration is not to go down in ignominious defeat. There is no use hiding the fact if Mayor Armstrong is to survive another administration he must strengthen his position as already the enemy has plans in shape for his overthrow and there disaster ahead.

His successor has already been selected and powerful forces are at work. On the appointment of a Director of the Department of Public Works may depend his future and the choice of Bigelow would be generally accepted as a determination on the part of Mayor Armstrong to respond to the wishes of the people and strengthen his stand for a successful contest a year hence. Should he wish to name his successor.

The name of Bigelow will be an inspiration and will certainly bring to the present administration exceptional strength.

BETTER WAGES FOR SHOPMEN.

DENISON, Tex., Nov. 6.—The Missiouri, Kansas & Texas Railway company shopmen in the locomotive departments of the entire lines have been granted an increase in wages ranging from 1 1-2 cents to 2 1-2 cents an hour and better working conditions, it has been officially announced. The increase, it was stated, dates back to August 1. Fifteen hundred men are affected.

WANT MORE MONEY.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 6.—The Building Laborers' union has filed formal notice with the state industrial commission of a demand for an increase of wages from $3.75 to $4 per day for eight hours. This action was taken in accordance with a law recently enacted by the legislature, which requires that 30 days' notice of such a demand must be given.

PRINTERS GET NEW SCALE.

BEAUMONT, Tex., Nov. 4.—Typographical union 339 has had under advisement the adoption and enforcement of a new job scale for some time. An agreement was finally reached whereby a slight increase will be added each year and continue until January 1, 1920. Commencing January 1 next $1 per week will be added; the second year $1.50, and the third year the same amount, making the total in the three years $4.

MACHINISTS WIN EIGHT HOURS.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6.—The 600 machinists employed by the Emerson Electric Manufacturing company have been granted the eight-hour day at the same rate of pay as was received for the longer hours. The agreement conceded to the Machinists' union goes into effect on November 15.

The St. Louis Metal Ware company also granted the eight-hour day, which went into effect the first of the month and carries with it a rate of 50 cents per hour.

EIGHT HOURS RATIONAL DAY.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6.—"The economic argument that industry can thrive only with a long day, and that any curtailment of it would be destructive, can be met very effectively by the fact that shortening the work period, even to eight hours, almost invariably increases the quantity and improves the quality of output." Thus did Dr. Frederick S. Lee, professor of physiology in Columbia University, New York, answer the question: "Is the eight-hour working day rational?" before the American Public Health Assocation's annual meeting here.

Dr. Lee, in discussing this matter, made it plain that he was not in any sense considering the political aspects of the eight-hour problem. "The eight-hour problem is primarily a problem of physiology; if the physiological effects of any kind of labor are bad, its conditions ought to be changed," said Dr. Lee. "This is fundamental, and should precede any consideration of the economic and social effects of a change of conditions. Since the middle of the nineteenth century the eight-hour day has been the goal of labor. It has gradually been gained, and is doubtless destined to become very widespread. The duration of daily hours should be determined by the physiological effects of the work, and, secondarily, by its economic and social features. Labor produces fatigue, and, when continued farther, exhaustion.

"In fatigue the physiological powers are weakened, and in exhaustion this may pass on to increased susceptibility to disease, neurasthenia, immortality of disease, neurasthia, immoral-cessive industrial work is often responsible for these serious results."

MEDIATORS ARE ON THE JOB.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Efforts are being made by John A. Moffitt and James A. Smyth, United States mediators, to bring about a conference between the representatives of the striking street car men and the officials of the street car companies, looking to a settlement of the strike. The mediators are acting under instructions of Secretary of Labor Wilson, who sent them to investigate, on request of Organizer Fitzgerald.

As yet little progress has been made by the mediators. Efforts were made to secure a conference with the representatives of the street car companies involved, but nothing definite has developed. The mediators are, however, said to be optimistic and hopeful of being able to bring the representatives of the men and the officials of the companies together.

Street car service is very badly crippled, and Organizer Fitzgerald claims that there are still 11,048 men on strike, and that only 110 have returned to work.

Governor Whitman refused to renden any assistance when appealed to on behalf of the strikers. He answered by notifying Organizer Fitzgeraid that he had referred his request to the Public Service Commission, and there the matter rests for the present.

After a conference with the mediators Organizer Fitzgerald denied a statement that terms of settlement had been made to him. He said that responsibility for further peace parlies was in the hands of the mediators. It is asserted that 1,500 of the strikers have found other employment, and that the remainder are still holding out.

MORE WAGES AND EIGHT HOURS.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—The jewelry workers are claiming a 100 per per cent. organization, which is a very substantial victory, and marks a new era in this city. The Jewelry Workers' union has succeeded in securing a single agreement with their employers which will secure peace and harmony until September 1, 1917. Under its provisions all disputes are to be adjusted by conciliation. The hours will be 47 per week, Saturday being limited to 7 hours. All work done after 5 p. m., Sundays and legal holidays must be paid for at the rate of 50 cents an hour. Five hours and twenty minutes overtime to be figured at an 8-hour day. All piece work is abolished and no employe is permitted to take work home. This has heretofore been one of the worst abuses of the industry. An increase of 20 per cent. is also conceded all members of the union.

BOYS AND GIRLS WIN STRIKE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Eight hundred boys and girls employed in the necktie industry have been on strike for several days. An adjustment has been reached between representatives of the union they organized and the National Men's Neckwear association and the youngsters have returned to work, having secured a reduction in hours and increased wages. The hours hereafter will be 54 per week and time and a half for overtime. Minimum wages for all members of the union will be $6 per week.

PRESIDENT GARLAND SOUNDS THE LAST CALL

A Stirring Appeal by the President of the Chamber of Commerce to Employe as Well as Employer to Vote for Prosperity and Plenty.

Never was there a more earnest plea made to the employe to be guarded at the present time as to his action on November 7 when selecting the candidates for whom he shall cast his vote than this appeal made by Robert Garland, President of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and it is most fitting that such an appeal should come from those who so thoroughly represent the life and spirit of our industrial, commercial and financial progress. In order to fully awaken to the dangers of Democracy, both employer and employe need but glance backward to the Democratic fallacies thrust upon the employer and the employe prior to the election of McKinley. In that retrospection he has a picture of wretchedness, dispair, want, woe and misery climaxed by soup houses.

ROBERT GARLAND

During that period there were in the Monongahela, Ohio and Allegheny Valleys nothing save idle factories, mills, shops, furnaces and mines with corroding stacks towering like monuments over the dead industries. They marked the burial place of thrift, progress and plenty, which had been smitten with Democratic paralysis. The hope of industrial supremacy had gone; there was no industrial hustle, bustle or commotion but all was "peace" and the intense silence was broken only by the cry for bread from the children who felt the piercing pangs of hunger. The head of the household was happy if fortune by chance should choose him from among thousands of other applicants who begged a day's labor, which sweet charity was providing in the parks at the munificent sum of $1 a day. A ray of hope to be blasted ere the start was made was inspired by Coxey's announcement that he would with an army of unemployed march on to Washington. The half starved aggregation failed in its original purpose to move Democracy to action and conditions became more pathetic.

It is a vision and fear of a reoccurance such as this that undoubtedly prompts President Garland to sound an alarm. Surely no man represents a greater aggregation of commerce and labor than he who as the executive head of one of the greatest bodies of business men in this County and none realize more keenly the necessity of keeping the industries in full operation as well as keeping employed the men whose genious and skill have not only made Pittsburgh great but who have added vastly to the wealth of this Nation. Thus the Tribune realizing the extraordinary value of this message mutually joins the employer in carrying into the homes of men in the mills, shops, factories and mines with the sincere hope that after November 7 we shall find that Hughes and Fairbanks have been elected and that prosperity and plenty shall again return to remain at least another four years.

The message is as follows:

COMMUNITY SPIRIT

There should be more of the Community Spirit in the relations between employer and employee.

The fact should not be overlooked that their interests are mutual, that they are interwoven one with the other, the employer being dependent on the worker, and the worker on the employer; in fact no one in the system is independent, whether it be the head, the lieutenant or the private.

The most important point at issue confronting every man engaged in industrial or in mercantile pursuits at this time is that of a fair Protective Tariff. Not only are the mills, factories, workshops and mines affected, but also the great department stores, grocery, hardware, drugs and other lines. The success of one is the success of all.

If the employer or the employee have the proper "Community Spirit," if they will but believe that their interests are identical, that where the firm prospers all prosper, and when it suffers all suffer, they should the n make common cause and vote to protect their common interest against the commercial encroachments of the foreign invader. Pulling in different directions will never get one anywhere.

The question of Protection is after all a simple one. Forget for the moment bewildering statistics as to imports and exports. Simply put to yourself the question:—How is it possible for American Manufacturers of iron or steel, or glass, or electrical apparatus, machinery, leather boots and shoes, textiles of all kinds,—in fact every line of industry,—to compete with European Countries (not to mention the very cheap labor of Japan) when just before the war the average wage was less than one half that paid in America and the freight rate across the ocean considerably less than that from Pittsburgh to New York, Boston, Philadelphia or Baltimore.

The Great Delusion of Our Time

SELFISHNESS IS DEGREDATION NOT EVOLUTION.

I have quoted these two writers because they are representative. Not only have they carefully studied the organization of society, but they clearly reflect the illumination of that philosophy which, more than any other, is the distinguished and magisterial equipment of our day. It is by light of "Evolution" that we feel qualified to test the Bible, Christianity, and, in fact, every human belief or moral position. For evolution is to the popular scientific mind so absolutely established as to seem approximately identical with the cosmos itself. It is therefore a final and authorative test.

It is evident at a glance that both these writers have studied our social problems by the light of Natural selection, and that this is to their minds the only light worth considering. This fact classifies them as distinctly men of the type referred to by John Fiske. They are, according to him, separated from the men whose education ended in eighteen hundred and thirty by an immensely wider gulf than has ever before divided one progressive generation of men from their predecessors. For Natural Selection is the authoritative type of evolution so far as living organisms are concerned, and evolution is our distinctive magisterial equipment. Scientific observation existed before our time, but it is our peculiar glory (?) to have discovered the scientific philosophy which appears to co-ordinate, account for, and interpret all known facts, past and present, and which have therefore suggested the idea of an apparently absolute yet purely intellectual criterion of truth and test of realitv.

Moreover, these writers are consistent: they follow their logic to the bitter end. They do not mix things up. Natural selection which works through death, figures in their scheme as the sole law of human development. It is Nature's decree. "Dreams of peace are an illusion." "Human destiny has been wrought out through blood." "Common sense teaches us that as has been the past so will be the future." That condemns the Hague Tribunal to the limbo of hopeless phantasms. It exposes the folly of our modern attempts to mitigate the ferocity of war. We are but trifling with an irresistible force; ferocity and murderous cunning are always nature's tools, by which she shapes not only our physical but our ethical manhood.

This, then, is the way in which the magisterial doctrine solves our social problems, and this is the present social status of the age which has basked in its light, which "has been suddenly, almost abruptly, raised to a higher plane than that upon which the race had proceeded from the days of the primitive troglodyte to the days of our great grandfathers."

Let us take account of stock. We have society actually organized today on a priimtive tooth-and-nail basis. "From the humblest peasant to the mightiest empire humanity is waging a ceaseless and pitiless struggle for existence, in which the unfit perish," a struggle in which "success is attained not only by endurance and sagacity, but by cunning and ferocity." In fact, we are, according to Mr. London's article, already passing some important milestones on the backward road toward the moral status of the primitive troglodyte. "When a striker kills with a brick the man who has taken his place, he has no sense of wrong-doing. He has an ethical sanction. The family group came into the world before the state group, and society being still on the primitive basis of tooth and nail, the will to live of the state is not so compelling to the striker as the will to live of his family and himself."

MORAL PROGRESS OPPOSES "NATURAL SELECTION."

Now, as Mr. Adams would say, common sense teaches us whither this points. If the family group existed before the state group, then family needs existed before state or religious ordinances. "Thou shalt not steal." "Thou shalt not kill." What are these belated requirements of social convention compared to the necessities of the family development! If a brother clergyman draws away your congregation, reduces your salary, and so compels your children to go barefoot, why not knock him on the head! This is troglodytism, if the present writer understands the word, and he thinks that he does. It solves the social question by disintegrating society, and the singular fact is that Natural Selection, which is supposed to be the principle operating in moral development, which is, in fact, identical with the cosmic order, should have led us back in a kind of blind-man's waltz, till we have, according to these writers, actuaiy reached the primitive tooth-and-nail basis, from which, according to modern science, we started hundreds of thousands of years ago; and have reached the lowest point thus far under the guidance of an age whose intellectual grandeur dwarfs all others (?)

No doubt every optimist in the country will declare that this is a stalwart misrepresentation of the present facts, but if a sober-minded man considers the present aspect of the labor question, the political situation in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and our other great cities, the enormous development of graft, the thievish character of our methods of finance, the fact that the small investor is today, like the man of scriptural times who traveled between Jerusalem and Jericho, sure to fall among thieves unless personally conducted; if he reflects on the Standard oil operations and the Turkish situation and the impotency of our modern civilization to put a stop to lynching, or to prevent such a fearful catastrophe as war between Japan and Russia, he is forced to confess that there is, after all, too much truth in this dark picture, and that our conduct is quite often on the tooth-and-nail basis.

Duquesne, Pa., Nov. 4.

The unexpected always happens, apparently. Pastor Russell is called home.

I am reminded of the statement by Mr. John T. Hayle published in your paper to the effect that Pastor Russell's inuence will not be felt generally until he has passed into the silence. Pastor Russell is dead; but still speaks through his literature and achievements.

Also, keener pangs of attachments will felt by those who knew him, since they can no longer meet him here.

I appreciate the fact that the Tribune is the only publication of Russell's home city that has continued to publish his sermons since they first began to appear; thus making it an exceptnon to the rule given by the Great Teacher: "A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country."

Respectfully yours,
N. R. NELSON.

Pittsburgh, N. S., Nov. 4.

Would a suggestion to re-publish Pastor Russell's sermons beginning a few years back meet your approval. Since our beloved Pastor has been called from our midst, and to you who have served us so faithfully during his life here through your paper. Surely the friends will not be forgetful now as to forget, we all need our minds refreshed and I would think a re-publishing of Pastor Russell's sermons in your paper would be helpful and appreciated by the majority of your readers, until later on some other arrangements might be made as to publish no one, but several of the brother's discourses. But I believe for the present the re-publishing of Pastor Russell's sermons would be best. Someone remarked when Brother Barton died, there was a great one fellen in Isreal, but Pastor Russell's remark was, "No, there was a great one risen in Israel today." So we also now believe that on October 31, 1916, that in the twinkle of the eye that by the death of the flesh in Pastor Russell here, that there was a great one risen that day in the spiritual relem with Christ the Head, and by His calling home we are comforted in Christ by our Heavenly Father.

Sincerely yours,
ROBERT J. CRAIG.

Appreciations

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 5.

In answering a request to explain Matt. 27:52-53, in your Question and Answer column, it states that the passage, "is listed as a spurious passage, as there seems to be no record in the older manuscripts." This is a mistake, because it is recorded in its entirety in the Vatican MSS, and the Sinaitic MSS omits "and the graves were opened" in the 52 verse, "and went" in the 53rd verse, which does not effect the sense of the passage.

The Scripture frequently very abruptly changes its subject, and in some instances will return to that same subject after a verse or two. Along this method, I will suggest the following interpretation of the passage as recorded in the Emphatic Diaglott.

Fifty-first verse begins thus: "And behold the veil of the temple was rent in two from top to bottom; and the earth trembled, and the rocks were rent (by a great earth quake); and the Tombs were opened (by this earthquake); and many (not saints) but (dead) bodies of the sleeping saints were raised (thrown out of the tombs by this great earthquake); and the (Christ) coming forth from the tombs after His resurrection went into the Holy City, and appeared unto many."

While this interpretation harmonizes with other Scripture it is not advanced dogmatically, but merely suggested for criticism.

Yours respectfully,
A. B. DABNEY.

We have been getting your paper a year or little over, perhaps some of the Truth people sent it to us. We are poor and the high waters in August and February rolled us about till we are still poorer.

We lie your paper exceedingly fine. You seem to think Pastor Russell and the Pilgrim say some good things or else you would not print them. We are too poor to renew the subscription.

Think you and the Brother that sent us your good paper.

We remain your friends,
O. W. ANDERSON.

Belleville, Ill., Nov. 5.

It being the will of our Heavenly Father to change our residence, I will kindly ask you to send your welcome paper, from which I have derived so many blessings through the study of God's word, to new address, where we are now making our home. It is my wish that you continue to publish the Truth and receive your just reward for so doing. I will thank you in advance for your trouble.

Yours in the Lord,
ALBERT HEUBLER.

BE TRUE.

Thou must be true thyself
If thou the truth wouldest teach,
Thy soul must overflow, if thou
Another's soul would reach;
It needs the overfow of heart
To give the lips full speech.

Think truly and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed.
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed.
Live truly and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

Pastor Russell Gone Home

What a terrific shock was that which the followers of Pastor C. T. Russell received last Wednesday morning when, on opening the morning paper, they read the announcement of his sudden demise. It was not a matter in which alone his followers were interested but a whole nation, and it does not stop there, as his followers are found in every country on the globe and in the remotest parts.

There are but few men in this country or abroad who has been the subject of more comment than Pastor Russell and small and insignificant indeed is the pulpit that has not either supported or taken issue with him. Evangelists all over the world have discussed Pastor Russell and no evangelistic or revival meeting could be carried on without devoting at least one meeting to the great Divine whose power and influence was so great as to attract millions to his fold. Billy Sunday was frequent in his mention of Pastor Russell and while Sunday's teachings did not altogether harmonize with what Pastor Russell taught, yet Sunday is finding the whole world does not exactly harmonize with his teachings.

Whatever the differences were, Pastor Russell naturally enough found himself in the position of his predecessors in the great religious movements of the world. These may begin with Stephen or earlier and include such mighty factors as St. Paul, Savanarola, Martin Luther, John Knox, John Wesley, William Booth, head of the Salvation Army, Moody, and a hoast of others whose power and prominence is felt throughout the world. Pastor Russell for years was compelled to combat the press of the world which has been largely dominated by recognized supporters of the older religious sects, but regardless of these influences Pastor Russell carried his message all around the world and millions gripped the significance of a gospel message that far outweighted others of more ancient conception.

He braved many a storm, he fought a great fight, he has entered into his reward. He has left a place so large and conspicuous that but few are prepared to take up the work where he has laid it down. He has taken his flight to realms above. He heard the last trumpet sound. The call came forth and he responded. It was at a time when in one of Pittsburgh's prominent theaters a great production, the "Photo-Drama of Creation" was going on, and thousands were crowding that building to get a vision of Pastor Russell's conception of Creation. Pastor Russell was on his way from the West to his headquarters in New York, having closed his last service in San Diego, California. When the call came he died as he himself expressed a desire to die—in the harness. He was pulling his load; bearing his burden on his way to the eternal city when the dark winged angel of death swooped down upon him and carried him off. Ere the noise of the flutter of wings could be silenced he could hear the final order and the grand reception: "Well done thou good and Faithful Servant, enter thou into the Joy of the Lord!"

The remains of Pastor Russell were brought to Pittsburgh Sunday, and on Monday laid in state in Carnegie Music Hall, North Side, between 12 and 1 o'clock. At 2 o'clock the funeral services were held, and later he was buried in the United Cemeteries, West View, where Bro. J. A. Bohnet has charge.

Charles Tate Russell, known universally as Pastor Russell, formerly of Pittsburgh, the editor of the Watch Tower and a prominent outhor of studies of the Scripture, died at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon on an Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe train en route from Los Angeles to New York, according to a dispatch received last night from Canadian, Tex. Death was due to heart disease, the end coming at Pampa, Tex. The body was sent to Kansas City, Mo.

Shortly after leaving Los Angeles Pastor Russell complained of feeling ill, his secretary said, and he gradually grew worse as they proceeded on their eastward course. The end, however, came as a great surprise, not alone to his thousands of friends scattered over the world, and those in particular of Pittsburgh. A general expression of regret was voiced last night by all his old friends who were told of his demise.

Pastor Russell was born in Pittsburgh February 16, 1852. During his boyhood days he attended the old Grant school in the Third ward, his parents residing at that time in that district. After finishing school he entered the men's furnishing store conducted by his father on Fifth avenue near the present location of the Hotel Henry. During this time he became a patient Sunday school worker, spending much of his time in this kind of work. A few years later, however, when the haberdashery shop was moved on Fifth avenue below Smithfield street, Pastor Russell became one of the greatest Bible students in the city, attending classes in the old Congregational church on Ninth street below Penn avenue.

During the eighties he founded the new denomination known as the Second Adventists, advocating the second coming of Christ; he established a church on the North Side, and began the publication of his sermons and disquisitions. In order to facilitate their distribution he organized the Zion Publishing Company, through which he issued the Watch Tower, and his voluminous array of religious treaties. These continued during the rest of his stay in Pittsburgh.

Some years ago the headquarters of the Watch Tower were removed from then Allegheny, Pa., (now North Side, Pittsburgh,) to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he established himself in a tabernacle known as the Plymouth Bethel Church, where Henry Ward Beecher once conducted meetings in Brooklyn. It was while here that he became best known to his thousands of followers, for his sermons were sent broadcast, being both mailed and syndicated to the newspapers. It was during this time also that he traveled in Europe, receiving recognition there and increasing his popularity. He was president of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, of the International Bible Students' Association of London, and of the Peoples' Pulpit Association of New York.

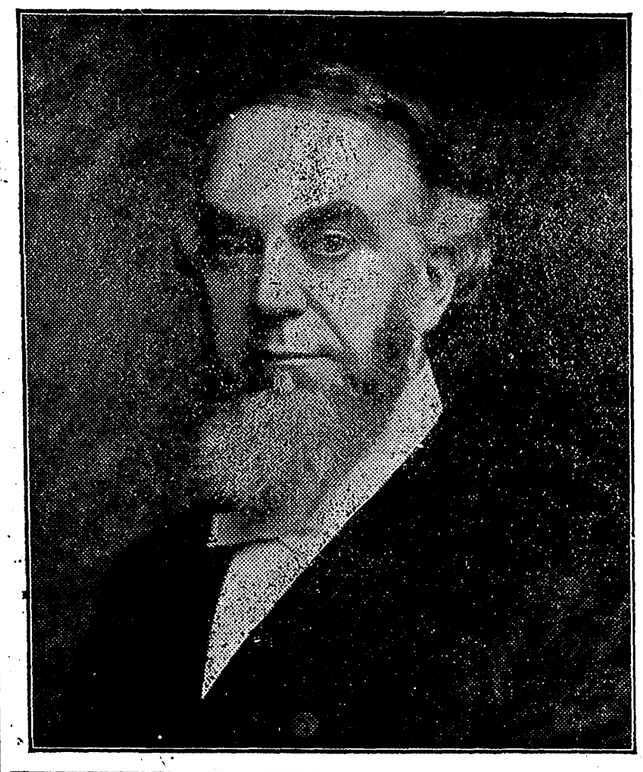
The following telegram of condolence was telegraphed to Brooklyn by the National Labor Tribune:

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 2.

W. E. Van Amburg,

Dear Brother:—The National Labor Tribune, on behalf of its thousands of Truth readers condoles with you in the death of Pastor C. T. Russell.

J. H. VITCHESTAIN,
President.



Weston, Oregon, Nov. 5.

Dear Friend of "The Truth"—Although my own subscription for the good old Tribune does not expire until March 17th of next year I like the paper so very much that I herewith inclose you a P. O. money order for three dollars, and ask you to advance my own subscription up to March 17th, 1918. The remaining two dollars you will please credit to your "Help Others" fund. I am very glad that you have inaugurated that blessed method among the many other grand features of the Tribune, and thereby be able to help a number of worthy appncants who through sickness or poverty, are themselves unable to subscribe for that worthy paper.

As the Apostle says: "Let us not be weary in well-doing, but, as we therefore have opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the housenoia of faith." Gal. 6:9-10. Yes, to be sure, I, myself, as a member of our Lord's household, would greatly prefer that the needy fellow members of that fold should receive assistance as first of all others. And along that line of reasoning, I am satisfied I have the best of reasons for believing that the Tribune Editor, (an earnest advocate of the Truth), can be depended upon to always use his very best judgment in harmony with the Apostle's, words above quoted.

As it has been a long time now since I last wrote the Tribune, I feel prompted at this time to encourage you in the great good work you are doing; by expressing my warm and sincerest appreciation for the clear and lofty standard continuously manifested in the columns of the Tribune. I considered it was a clean good paper, and a staunch friend and supporter of the glorious Truth of God, when I first subscribed for it now more than 4 years ago; but, dear friend, I am truly glad and thankful to be able to say, that today I consider the National Labor Tribune far advanced in a spirit of real faithful service and assistance in spreading the true gospel of our precious Lord Jesus.

And I assure you, dear Editor, that your readers, the Bible students, out here in far away Oregon, are greatly rejoicing to note "your ever increasing zeal, and fearless stand in presenting and supporting the sure word of God. And last, but not least, the very attractive, double columns, and clear large type in which you presents your readers every week with our beloved Pastor Russell's sermons; the Question columns, and the several other grand features along the same line now finding space in your columns, all of these things are certainly appreciated, and are a great credit to the Editor of the Tribune, and are deserving of both praise and financial support from every loyal and earnest lover of the pure Divine Truth, and the Glorious Plan of God for the eternal blessings of His fallen human creatures.

How beautiful; is the "Plan of God"
His precious Truth our hearts make glad;
In Christ, our Lord our Hope, our friend;
We'll trust our all unto the end.
Amen.

Warm Christian love and Greeting to every heart that loves the Truth.

ABDUL BAHA COMES AS PROPHET OF PEACE.

By Elbert Hubbard.

Out of Persia comes Abdul Baha, who calls himself "The Servant of God." This man has diverted one-third of the population of Persia from Mohammedanism. Throughout all Asia, Europe and the United States there are constantly growing bodies of adherents to the faith of Adbul Baha.

This man comes to the western world on a distinct mission, and no one who meets him can doubt his sincerity.

The message he brings is the unification of the world in the bonds of brotherly love, and an understanding which means peace on earth, good will toward men.

According to Abdul Baha, we will soon live in a period of time that marks the beginning of the millennium —a thousand years of peace, happiness and prosperity.

After that Abdul Baha does not say what will happen, but he does not preach disaster.

He thinks that after the thousand years still better things are in store for us. He has the world-vision, and sees clearly this new time upon which we are now reaching. He upholds the dawn of the great peace upon the horizon of the world. His business is to proclaim it.

The refrain of his message is always and forever: "The day of the Lord is at hand. God's kingdom of peace and love shall be established upon the earth, and the dreams of all the prophets and poets are to become true."

Literally, poetically and symbolically, the desert shall blossom like the rose, and the waste places shall be made green, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

One distinguishing and peculiar thing about Abdul Baha is that he does not make war upon, or even criticize, and other religious faith.

Every faith fits a certain attitude of mind. It is all a part of the work of the Creator, and it is good in its time and place; and at the right time it will be sloughed and left behind, and the imprisoned soul will burst its bonds, and the captive shall be made free.

Abdul Baha is now 70 years of age. He began his public work when 18. For just 52 years he has proclaimed his faith.

But from his forty-second year to his sixty-sixth—24 years—he was in prison. But even his jailers dared not forbid him sending out his msesages of faith.

In prison he was still in touch with the world of thinkers and the world of doers.

He was treated with a reverence and awe that is not very difficult to understand when you meet the man.

Abdul Baha has magnetism, plus. His zeal, enthusiasm, animation, hope and faith run over and inundate everything.

No man can argue with him. No man can dispute with him, Every one has to agree with him—and every one does. He is what he is. He was born to this work, and for this work, and considers himself divinely appointed.

Mohammedanism ranks fourth today in the number of its followers, Christianity coming first, Confucianism second and Hinduism third.

Abdul Baha leads a revolt from Islam, and takes with him as followers today the intellectual pick of Mohammedanism. He is to Persia what Emerson was to America—only more so.

Abdul Baha does not give his message to the lowly and the ignorant.

The man is regal in his way of living and in his mental attitude. He travels with a retinue of servants, secretaries and followers, all craftan-robed. Evidently he is well supplied with money. He has everything he needs and wants. Wherever he goes he rides in automobiles and stops at the best hotels. He is in touch with big people on an equality.

Let him visit any bank, factory, office building, church, and everything is laid aside, and eyes bulge and ears listen until he takes his departure.

When he went to Washington and swept through the capitol even the supreme court of the United States saw fit to adjourn; the House the same, and the Senate, for a while, at least, forgot matters of investigation.

When Abdul Baha went to the White House one might have thought that he was going with the intent to take possession of it.

But his is not a kingdom of this world, so far as a desire to rule is concerned. Governments are mere matters of detail, matters of business, and they do not much interest this servant of God.

Yet, for the business genius of the West Abdul Balia has a great regard. He says we must teach the people of the East how to plant and sow and reap. The fact that America is supplying Persia automobiles, plows, reapers, threshing machines, traction engines, locomotives, trolley cars, proves for him, his case.

And so he, in degree, repays us by bringing to us the message of love and good-will.

War, he says, is to be done away with absolutely. The governments of the world are merely to be business institutions. We are learning what is best, and what is best is righteous and right. Sin is merely the wrong thing, and sin brings bad results.

There is no greater wickedness than that men should kill one another, destroy one another, seek to thwart and embarrass one another. Let every man live his life and do his work the best he can. We must be no cause of grief to any one. We must love humanity so much that we will be kind to all people, even to those who do wrong, having full faith that they, in time, will see that error brings pain, and love and unselfishness bring happiness and every good thing.

Talk About Orders - War Profits- War Stocks After the War--What?

If You Have Money to Investigate--- Investigate This Proposition.

Place your money where it is absolutely safe and where it will bring you the largest returns. Invest in the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company—now selling at par $1.00 per share. The Gasoline Industry is the livest and most talked of industry in the country today. It will continue to be the most important industry for the next twenty years to come.

When you purchase shares in the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company you are purchasing an interest in a company with an established business and on an absolutely safe and sound financial basis. The immense property controlled by the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company is in an old established oil and gas field—the best territory in the world for obtaining WET GAS, the kind of gas from which the Highest Grade of Gasoline is produced. The territory is ABSOLUTELY PROVEN by the drilling of 31 wells—all producers. The supply of gas is practically inexhaustible. The property is less than 5% developed, yet the company can show daily gross earnings in excess of $600.00 and is producing approximately 7,500 gallons of gasoline per day and over 1,000,000 cubic feet of refined gas.

Such a Splendid Showing clearly indicates that the proposition IS NOT A PROSPECT OR IN AN UNDEVELOPED STAGE. The future possibilities are most remarkable for the reason that there are drilling locations for at least 800 additional wells. If you want QUICK AND LARGE RETURNS on your investment—then place your order AT ONCE for a substantial block of the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company.

After the war—what? The bottom as well as the Profits will drop out of the WAR SECURITIES—but the business of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company will go on as usual and the profits will be greater than ever—because the consumption of gasoline will be greater than ever, and also the price.

By the first of the year the management of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company estimates that the company will be producing about 20,000 gallons of gasoline per day. Increased production means increased earnings. Do you suppose that at that time you will be able to purchase the stock at par $1.00 per share? It is not at all likely. In all probability by that time the stock will be quoted on the New York Curb around $2.00 or possibly $3.00 per share. Do not delay, but PLACE YOUR ORDER NOW for a substantial block of the stock. All indications point to the fact that the stock will be placed on a DIVIDEND PAYING BASIS at an early date. If you want any of this stock you will have to ACT QUICKLY. The allotment at our disposal is limited. It is being rapidly exhausted. If a proposition has MERIT back of it you do not have to be offering it for sale indefinitely. Such propositions are quickly taken up. The very best and most intelligent class of investors are purchasing the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company. They realize the unusual conditions surrounding this industry, and furthermore they are familiar with the Tremendous Profits already made—and they are fully aware of the fact THIS IS THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY THE GENERAL PUBLIC HAVE EVER HAD TO SHARE IN THE PROFITS. You can find plenty of opportunities prenested to you for investing—but we believe we are safe in saying—that this is the first opportunity the public have ever had to invest in a company producing Gasoline in Large, Paying Quantities and safe and sound in every way.

Immediate action on your part is necessary if you want to secure any of this stock. The whole proposition will stand the closest investigation. Orders by wire will receive our prompt attention. Booklet and other interesting data furnished on application. Bank and commercial references.

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

MORNING COMETH A NIGHT ALSO

A NEW DAY DAWNS AFTER A DARK NIGHT OF WEEPING

The Night Was Long—Its Sorrows and Tears Were Many—God's Promises Alone Illuminated It—The Morning Here at Last—A Wonderful Dawning—The Day to Be Still More Wonderful—Proofs All About Us Considered—A Brief Night of Trouble Settling Down—Already Begun in Europe—After It A Glorious Sunburst.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 1, 1916.—Pastor Russell died Tuesday, Oct. 31, at 2:30 o'clock. The following sermon was read at a memorial service for Pastor Russell, in the New York City Temple, November 5th, at 8 o'clock, the same time and place where he was scheduled to deliver it.

The literature of the world shows that intelligent men have refused to believe that the Divine Purpose in the creation of our earth has yet been attained. Continually we find references to "the Morning of the New Day," to the "Golden Age," etc., etc. Yet not to the longings of men's hearts, but to the promises of our God, do we look for real instruction on this subject. The Bible most emphatically declares that the entire period of human history thus far has been a night time.

The Prophet David explains, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the Morning." (Psalms 30:5.) Thus prophetically we are assured that there will be a Morning whose glory, brightness and blessings will fully compensate for all the dark shadows of the Night time past. Our text is another prophecy along the same line. The message of the Lord is, "The Morning cometh!" St. Paul writes that up to his time the world had been under a reign of Sin and Death, not under a Reign of Righteousness and Life. (Romans 5:21.) He points out also that the Day of the Lord will come, and will come gradually, stealthily taking the world unawares—"as a thief in the night"—1 Thessalonians 5:1-6.

All of the Apostles assure us that it is not God's purpose to permit the reign of Sin and Death to continue forever. They tell us that the Divine Program is that Messiah, in the Father's appointed time, will take to Himself His great power and reign King of kings and Lord of lords—putting down sin and every evil thing, uplifting humanity and granting a Divine blessing where for six thousand years there has been a Divine curse. The Bible writers explain that this does not signify a change in the Divine Purpose, but that God had planned this thing in Himself from before the foundation of the world; and that although He had permitted Sin to enter and death to reign, He had made fullest provision for the Redeemer to die for our sins and eventually to become the Redeemer and Life-giver to Adam and his race—to as many of them as will accept everlasting life on the Divine terms.

The Apostles tell us that during the "night time," since Jesus' death, God has been doing a special work—selecting from mankind a special class, a saintly few—"the Church of the First-borns, whose names are written in Heaven." These are not taken from any one nation or denomination. This "little flock," to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom (Luke 12:32), is composed of all the saintly followers of Jesus, who walk in His steps in the narrow way during this Gospel Age. Their experiences are to qualify them for association with their Redeemer in His Messianic Kingdom. Their trials, their obedience and their sufferings for righteousness' sake are to work out for these a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Suffering with the Master for the Truth's sake in the present life, they are to share His glory, honor and immortality in the life to come. They are to be His joint-heirs in His Kingdom.—Galations 3:29; 2 Timothy 2:11, 12.

THE KINGDOM SUNRISE NEARING

Amongst the Lord's people even, few yet understand that Jesus distinctly teaches that the "Sun of Righteousness," which will arise with healing in His beams and whose light will constitute the New Day, will be composed of the Church of Christ glorified—changed from human to Divine nature by participation in the First Resurrection. Our Lord Jesus tells this in the parable of the Wheat and the Tares. He declares that in the end of this Gospel Age all of the wheat class will be gathered into the Heavenly Garner, and that "then shall the righteous shine forth as the SUN in the Kingdom of their Father." (Matthew 13:43.) We must not think, however, that this signifies the Church without the Redeemer, but must remember that Jesus is "the Head over the Church which is His Body."—Ephesians 1:22, 23.

How wonderful, how beautiful, how appropriate are the word-pictures of the Bible! No one but the Lord knew of the great Divine Plan. No one but Him, therefore, could give these pictures of its development. In various terms and figures of speech the Bible attempts to give us a little glimpse of the glorious conditions of that Day. The New Day and the Kingdom will be "the desire of all peoples." In that Day the righteous will flourish, and evil-doers will be cut off from life. During that thousand-year Day of Messiah's Kingdom, Satan is to be bound, "that he may deceive the nations no more." (Revelation 20:23.) Landlordism will come to an end; for "they shall not build and another inhabit; they shall not plant and another eat the fruit thereof," but "shall long enjoy the work of their hands."—Isaiah 65:22.

The earth is to yield her increase. (Psalm 67:6. Streams are to come forth in the desert; the solitary places are to be made glad. The entire earth is to become like the Garden of Eden. It is God's footstool, and He declares that He will make it glorious. It is not to be burned up with literal fire, as once we supposed. It is to "abide forever." (Ecclesiastes 1:4; Psalms 104:5.) "He formed it not in vain; He formed it to be inhabited."—Isaiah 45:18; 66-1; 60:13; 35:1, 7.

WONDERFUL FOREGLEAMS OF LIGHT

The most wonderful thing that the Bible tells us respecting that New Day is that it will bring great intelligence and enlightenment to every creature. The light of the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the face of the great deep. (Isaiah 11:9; Habakkuk 2:14.) "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest, saieth the Lord." (Jeremiah 31:34.) Ultimately every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess, to the glory of God.—Phillippians 2:11; Isaiah 45:23.

What an enthusing prospect the Bible holds out before the Church and before as many of the world as can exercise a measure of faith to believe! The world indeed sees to some extent that great blessings are coming; but just what these are and how they are to come mankind know not; for "the world by wisdom knows not God." (1 Corinthians 1:21.) The worldly wise have rejected the Bible, and do not trust it as a Revelation from God. Thus the wise are caught in their own craftiness. (1 Corinthians 3:19.) Their boasted wisdom ensnares them and blinds them to the Divine Revelation.

Nevertheless, some of our greatest thinkers—Mr. Edison and others—are rapidly seeing that the world is just on the verge of the most wonderful inventions and knowledge, which will transform the face of the earth and the people thereof. They are corroborating the Bible unwittingly; for they believe it not and know not of its message.

THE DAWNING BEGUN IN A. D. 1874

Let us not stop now to discuss the darkness of the Night and its weeping. Let us awake, and take note of the fact that the dawning of the New Age is already here. For the past forty-two years we have been in it and enjoying many of its blessings. But those blessings came so stealthily—"like a thief in the night"—that few recognize their import. Some few have been calling attention to the fact that we have been in the Millennial dawn ever since 1874.

Bible chronology quite clearly teaches that the six thousand years since Adam's creation have ended—six great Days of a thousand years each, mentioned by St. Peter—"a Day with the Lord is as a thousand years." (2 Peter 3:8.) Now the great Seventh Day, also a thousand years long, has commenced. We have been enjoying its dawning. It is to be a grand Day! What wonder if the dawning be remarkable!

It may surprise some to be told that the past forty-two years mean more to the world in increase of education, increase of wealth, increase of all manner of labor-saving inventions and conveniences, increase of safeguards and protections for human life, than did all the six thousand years which preceded them—many times over. The world has probably created a thousand times as much wealth during these forty-two years as during the entire six thousand years preceding. Yet these changes have come so gradually that few have noticed them.

FULFILMENT OF PROPHECY EVERYWHERE

Forty-two years ago man labored from sun to sun; today we are rapidly approaching an eight-hour day. Forty-two years ago nearly all the labor of the world was done with sweat of face; today it is nearly all accomplished by machinery. Forty-two years ago the sewing-machine was just reaching perfection; today it is everywhere indispensable. So with the thousand household conveniences. So with nearly all of our sanitary plumbing arrangements. So with farming implements. Reapers and binders, mowers, automobiles, gas engines, etc., etc., all belong to these forty-two years. In our cities the modern conveniences are wonderful. Solomon in all his glory never even dreamed of such things as the poorest human being in America may enjoy!

Prophecies respecting streams in the desert and the wilderness blossoming as the rose are having fulfilment—not miraculously, but in harmony with the Divine order of an increased intelligence amongst men. Artesian wells are being drilled, irrigating canals constructed, not only in the western part of the United States and Canada, but also in far-off Mesopotamia. The results are marvelous. Land previously not worth fencing is valued at $500 per acre today. The increase of knowledge has been supplemented by governmental arrangements for the distribution of that knowledge amongst the people. The soils of various localities are being analyzed at public expense; and the tillers of the soil are given knowledge as respects what kind of fertilizers are required to bring satisfactory results.

Under these conditions it does not surprise us to know that as much as 156 bushels of corn have been raised to one acre, and that 600 bushels of potatoes and over are not an uncommon record. Is not the Bible being fulfilled? Who can dispute these facts? What do they signify? We answer that they exactly corroborate the Divine declaration which describes our day: Many shall run to and fro; knowledge shall be increased; the wise of God's people shall understand; and "there shall be a Time of Trouble such as never was since there was a nation."—Daniel 12:4, 10, 1; Matthew 24:21.

INCREASE OF WORLD-WIDE DISCONTENT

We are in the Morning of our text. Ah, what a glorious Morning! How changed the human conditions from those of our grandfathers! How thankful the whole world should be! Paeans of praise should be rising from all the people of the favored lands of civilization; and helping hands should be outstretched to carry the same blessings to heathen lands. But is it so? Are the people happy and rejoicing?—of the gifts of Divine Providence?

No! In proportion as the blessings of God have come, the discontent of humanity has increased; and unbelief, not only in respect to the Bible as the Divine Revelation, but in many instances in respect to the very existence of an intelligent Creator. Notwithstanding the great increase in the world's wealth, and the fact that there are some noble souls who are using their share of the wealth in a praiseworthy manner, nevertheless the general operation of the law of selfishness prevails; and all the legislation which has been enacted, or which can be enacted, fails to restrain the giant institutions—corporations—of our day, fails to hinder them from the exploiting of the masses in the interests of the comparatively few.

Did God know all these things? What will He do about them? Will He bring in the Millennial blessings, and risk that men shall take for granted that they have won the secrets of nature by their own wisdom and perseverance, and forget God entirely? Will they become more discontented? Would a Millennium of discontent be advantageous? What will God do about it?

THE DARK NIGHT ALREADY SETTLING

According to the Bible, God foreknew of the conditions of our day as we are now reviewing them; and in our text He gives a key to the situation—elsewhere in the Scriptures made very plain. Through the Prophet, God tells of the Dark Night coming—after the Morning Dawn had been well ushered in—a dark storm-cloud just at sunrise. This dark hour is described in the prophecy of Daniel, and also in that of our Lord Jesus, to be "a Time of Trouble, such as never was since there was a nation."

Bible students see this great Time of Trouble already beginning in the letting loose of the winds of strife in Europe. In the light of the Bible they perceive that the result of this present war will be the great wakening of the nations—of the governments of the earth—an increased knowledge and discontent amongst the people.

The next phase of the Trouble, according to the Bible, is to be the "great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great." (Revelation 16:18.) This is not a literal earthquake, but a symbolic one—revolution. Then the third phase of the calamity—the darkest of all—will be the symbolic fire of anarchy, which will utterly destroy our present civilization. Then, in the midst of that most awful Time of Trouble, Messiah, the great King, will take His great power and will exercise it, with the result that the raging waves of the sea of human passion will all be quieted, the fires of anarchy will all be extinguished, and the Reign of Righteousness and Peace will begin.

Cannot we see the wisdom of the great Creator's Program? He has determined to permit mankind to convince themselves of their own impotency, of their need of a God, and of the fact that there is a God, and that His glorious purposes for humanity are revealed in His Word. Ah, it is no wonder that the Bible speaks of that revelation of the Lord as the "still small voice of God," speaking to mankind through Messiah's Kingdom! No wonder the Lord declares that "then He will turn to the people a pure Message, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent!"—Zepheniah 3:8, 9.

MESSIAH WILL "MAKE ALL THINGS NEW"

St. Peter gives us a vivid picture of the New Order of things in Messiah's Kingdom. He says, "The Day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up. . . , the heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved. . . . Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherin dwelleth righteousness."—2 Peter 3:10, 12, 13.

The "new heavens" will be the glorified Church, consisting of Jesus the Head and His Bride class, selected from the world during the past eighteen centuries. The "new earth" will be the new social order under the control of the new heavens. There will be no patching of present institutions, but a clean sweep of them by the fire of Divine wrath preceding the establishment of the New Order, wherein only that which is righteous, just, equitable, true, will be recognized.

We rejoice that such glorious things are coming—even though the world must necessarily reach them through the tribulation of the Time of Trouble. Happy are those whose eyes and ears of understanding are open now, and who are in such heart relationship with the Lord that He can make known to them in advance something of the riches of His grace, and show them how the coming troubles will work out blessings for the human family.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

I have been getting your paper for the last six months, through the kindness of a friend to whom I feel very grateful. I see by the tag on my address label that my subscription expired Oct. 13. I would kindly ask you to drop me from your subscription list for the present. I think your paper is very good. I like the way you expose humbugs of all kinds. I also like the bold stand you take in publishing Pastor Russell's sermons and other Truth features. Thanking you for the good I have received from your paper, I am

Respectfully yours,
MR. F. C. PAUL.

Waukesha, Wis., Nov. 4.

The question of Mrs. Wm. Wilson, regarding Matt. 27;52, 53, which was asked, and answered in your issue of October 26, is one that has interested me for years before I came into the Truth, and one that I have thought about a great deal.

To say that the passage is spurious seems to me to be unwise, for it is given as authentic in all the versions of the Scriptures that I have access to, and in the Watch Tower of 1901 on page 156 we have Pastor Russell's own words:

"We were at first inclined to doubt the genuiness of this passage, but find that a portion of it at least appears in the oldest Greek MSS yet discovered."

The solution that I have found most satisfactory to myself is this. The devout Simeon of Luke 2:25—34, and Anna a prophetess of Veses 36-38, of the same chapter, were representatives of a class who recognized and accepted Jesus as the Messiah, and being "of a great age," in all probability had fallen asleep previous to the crusifiction, and that God as a reward for their faithfulness granted them an awakening in order that they might have an opportunity of obtaining a place in the body of the Christ.

Yours truly,

I thought I had renewed to the Tribune, but thinking I find I have not so I will inclose you a money order. I thank you for continuing the paper. I take it because of Pastor Russell's sermons and I like the other features of it, also I hope you will continue to print them. I certainly like the print, so large and plain.

Respectfully,

Britain, which in the past has been our best customer. At the close of the war instead of its continuing to purchase machinery and thousands of like commodities from us, it will become a formidable competitor for our home markets. Can the American workman stand such competition under a free trade policy and maintain his standards of living?

In England today a lathe hand gets $11 a week, which is more than he ever received in the past. In Germany a lathe hand gets 17 cents an hour, or $9.18 for a 54-hour week. In England at the present time there are 50,000 women working in machine shops and metal plants, doing men's work and doing it well. They are paid even less than men and they will continue to do that work after the war. Do you want to be subject to such competition? Do you want to return to power a political party which gives you no protection against the products of such workers?

After the military war in Europe is ended an industrial war will be started to gain control of the world's markets. America will have most of the gold of the world and the European nations will need that gold. They will go after American markets hardest of all and unless you have a protective tariff, the European worker will get your job. That is the question which is up to the American workman to decide by his ballot. It is a question of protection in his job.

When the Democratic party closed the mills and factories by removing the protective tariff, the promise was made that it would reduce the cost of living to the workers. Has that promise been made good? Has not the cost of living steadily increased? The workingman has to pay the bills of the butcher and the grocer and he knows that never before in his life were prices as high as they are today. The theory that free trade will reduce the cost of living has been exploded. The fact that it causes industrial stagnation, throwing millions of workers out of employment has been firmly established. Does the American workingman desire a continuation of this free trade policy?"

The Tribune Adds

The workingman should give these matters his most serious consideration when he enters the polling booth on Tuesday. They are of vital interest to him and to those dependent upon him. A vote for Wilson means a return to soup kitchens and bread lines after the close of the war. A vote for Hughes means protection for American labor and permanent prosperity. It is up to the workingman to choose wisely and he has seldom made a mistake in the past.

President Gafland Sounds the Last Call.

The American workingman who does not vote to protect his interests against the foreign commercial invasion is not worthy of the name American.

Abraham Lincoln, the greatest American since Washington, in his plain, blunt, matter-of-fact way, records himself upon the question of Protection as follows:

"I do not know much about the Tariff, but I know this much, when we buy manufactured goods abroad we get the goods and the foreigner gets the money. When we buy manufactured goods at home, we get both the goods and the money."

A few words, but a whole volume in itself.

The Republican party does not ask for excessive duties, but for some years past its policy has been "A Tariff to the extent of the difference between wages here and abroad."

When the present Underwood-Simmons Tariff Bill was signed by President Woodrow Wilson that fact was received with joyful acclamation in the Industrial Districts of Europe, and the foreign mills and factories became hives of industry. Even in far off Japan they buckled on their armor and not only increased their activity in many lines, but started a new merchant steamship line to ply the Pacific, and carry to our shores their products of low priced labor.

This great war, when ended, will unquestionably be followed by a war for commercial supremacy. Shall we complacently throw this great home market of ours at the feet of the foreigner, or shall we retain it for ourselves?

"To have and to hold" is a good motto.

As St. Paul says, "He that careth not for his own and especially for those of his own house hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."

EIGHT-HOUR DAY FOR MOVIES.

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, Nov. 3.—Manager Holton of the Port Arthur Amusement company has notified his movie operators that hereafter they will work eight hours a day.

They have been working nine hours and receiving $22.50 per week, the scale fixed by the union. In addition to the shorter hours, their wages were advanced to $25. Employes of the two other houses are alos receiving the same pay, having been granted these concessions.

SHOPMEN GET AN INCREASE.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 6.—At the final conference held in this city between committees representing Division No. 1 of the Railroad Department of the American Federation of Labor and officials of the Denver & Rio Grande system, an agreement was reached as to wages and working conditions. The agreement also covers the shopmen employed by the Moffat road. It provides for a general standardization of wages, with increases ranging from 11-2 to 71-2 cents per hour for the various departments of the shop employes. The unions benefiting by the increases are: The machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, pipe fitters, and railway carmen. The painters, not affiliated to the department, are also benefited.

TWO NEW UNIONS ADDED.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—The latest additions to the list of unions in this city are the Jewelery Workers, chartered by the International Jeweler Workers' union, and the Folding Paper Box Workers, chartered by the American Federation of Labor.

THE POWER OF THE WILL—SELF-CONTROL

Romans 14:13—15:3.—November 12.

The Evils of Intemperance—Restraint of Liberty For the Sake of Others—A Word of Warning In Regard to Proper Interpretation of Scripture—Faith vs. Condemnation — Application of Royal Law of Love.

"It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth."—Verse 21.

CERTAINLY no one claiming benevolence of heart and soundness of judgment could possibly advocate or encourage intemperance, realizing that it is a fruitful source of crime, depravity, immorality, etc. We note with pleasure the spread of local option and of total prohibition in these United States and elsewhere—not that such restraints are the highest ideals of liberty, but that those who love true liberty are willing to share the bondage of restraint for the sake of those to whom full liberty is injurious.

Either climatic variations or else financial and social changes account for the fact that in the days of our Lord and the Apostles there was less tendency to drunkenness than there is now; and probably for this reason the Scriptures have less to say respecting this vice, which is one of the chiefest evils of our day.

The Kingdom—Not Meat and Drink.

But no amount of interest in the temperance question should permit us to read into God's Word that which was not intended by its inspired writers, although we may properly enough draw conclusions. First of all, we must take the lesson provided for us as we find it. Today's Study is a part of the Apostle's discussion of law and liberty, custom and conscience, on questions prominent at the time of writing. With his accustomed vigor St. Paul is marking out the path of proper Christian conduct, in harmony with the second great commandment of the Divine Law—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Those who during the Gospel Age make a full surrender of their wills to the Lord and receive in return the begetting of the Holy Spirit are Scripturally termed New Creatures in Christ. (2 Corinthians 5:17.) Their wills are subjected to the Divine will. The lessons of God's Word and all of life's experiences under Divine provision are promised to work for their good—to strengthen their wills if too weak, to make their wills properly pliable if too rigid, and eventually to make of them the most that is possible in the present life and to prepare them for the life to come.

Such are addressed by St. Paul in today's Study. They are exhorted not to judge the brethren in the sense of condemning them, but rather to judge themselves, criticize themselves, thus to make of themselves shining examples for others to copy. Sooner or later all must give an account to the Lord. Therefore our judging of others is unnecessary. Hence if in the past we have judged, criticized, others, we should avoid so doing in the future and should criticize only ourselves—our words, our deeds, our thoughts.

Faith vs. Condemnation.

The ceremonial cleanness or uncleanness of food is nothing to the Christian, who is free from all but the Law of Love. But this Divine Law controls, and forbids us to stumble or even to grieve a brother less well-informed than ourselves. How could one controlled by love either eat, drink or speak in a manner that would injure another? It is good to have liberty; but let us use it so as not to injure those less advanced than ourselves. The Gospel Call is to joint-heirship with Christ in His Millennial Kingdom. But shall we say that the advantage of our relationship to the Lord consists chiefly in the liberty to eat and drink what we please? Surely not! Our chief blessing consists in justification, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit.

To minds laboring under the delusions of the Dark Ages, the Apostle's words in Verse 23 sound extremely harsh; for the idea is conveyed that whoever defiles his conscience by eating meat which he mistakenly thinks unclean would be sent to eternal torture. But no such thought was in the Apostle's mind. He is emphasizing the thought that whoever eats meat, however clean, but thinking that in so doing he was committing a sin, would consequently be under condemnation of conscience for having violated his judgment of the Lord's will; and that this condemnation would act as a barrier between him and the Lord.

Ought Not Please Ourselves.

The Apostle explains why this condemnation would hold, saying, "because he eateth not of faith"—not in harmony with his conscience; and whatever is not in harmony with faith and conscience is sin. The application of this principle to the question of using or not using spirituous liquors would certainly be profitable to all of God's people. Whoever uses these liquors when he believes that their use is a sin is thereby violating his conscience, and violating the Law of Love.

HOW DIVIDENDS INCREASE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—More than $154,000,000 will be paid to investors this month in dividends and interest, according to a compilation made by the Journal of Commerce, which declares that the total is the largest on record. It compares with $143,000,000 in November a year ago. It is figured out that 137 companies will distribute $62,000,000 among their stockholders, an increase of more than $5,000,000 over last year. The compilation includes 94 industrial and miscellaneous companies, 22 steam railroads and 21 street railways. The interest payments on bonds is placed at more than $91,000,000, which compares with $85,000,000 last year.

ELECTRICIANS GET INCREASE.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 6.—Electrical Workers union 230 has secured agreements with the British Columbia Electric Company and the British Columbia Telephone company which gives the members substantial increases. The companies, however, are rushing all work with the intention of precipitating a general layoff. A committee of women is now visiting all parts of the work and suggesting places where women could do the work of men, in which case the men are discharged to make way for the women.

WILL HAVE A WIDE EFFECT.

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 6.—The Circuit court has rendered a decision in the case of Edward L. Brown, a miner, against the Brewster & Evans Coal company, it is believed will have a wide effect on other similar cases involving the application of Illinois workmen's compensation act.

The decision of the court is to the effect that the compensation of Brown who was injured and is suing under the provisions of the compensation act, be based on his gross earnings. By net earnings is meant the earnings after the cost of powder, fuses and tools, which are chahrged to the miner, are deducted from his pay.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE

ESTABLISHED 1872—No. 50 PITTSBURGH, PA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1916 FIVE CENTS A COPY

New York Public Library 476 Fifth Ave.

THE LABOR GRAFTER MUST BE EXTERMINATED

War Being Waged On the Labor Fakir and Other Enemies of Society. What Chicago Did With Conspirators.

The National Labor Tribune has for many months been carrying on a campaign of extermination against grafters in the labor movement as well as the fake furniture dealers, the fake fur dealers, the fake jewelers, the fake auction men, the fake horse dealers, the fake patent medicine doctors, the quacks and tricksters who are making a business of robbing the public.

The grafting labor leaders have been holding up employers of labor, manufacturers and the contractors have suffered intensely through this species of burglar. The time, however, has come when he must be driven out and the National Labor Tribune offers the use of its Legal Department free of charge to any employer who is being held-up by that aggregation assuming the role of labor leader.

Only recently the National Labor Tribune exposed a deliberate and most desperate hold-up of an electric sign company where the company was compelled to pay to a Business Agent $110.00 after he had pulled the electrical workers off a job in Pittsburgh until the electric sign company came across. Another brazen hold-up was that of Electric Sign Service Co., 308 Cherry Way. A demand was made upon President Charles C. Wire for the wages of a foreman even in violation of the rules of the organization. Suit was brought against Mr. Wire representing the Electric Sign Service Company and the National Labor Tribune being convinced of the injustice of the demands furnished an attorney free of charge. President Wire won the victory. The labor skate is now realizing that the National Labor Tribune will protect the employer as well as the employe.

The Tribune is again renewing its campaign for a real genuine cleaning up.

Chicago went into the cleaning up business and the time is ripe for a cleaning up in the Pittsburgh district. The labor skate became such a menace to Chicago that even Chicago could no longer stand the strain and something happened. Evidence was collected and wholesale arrests were made. The betrayers of labor were run down; the grafting leaders were brought to justice and sentenced to prison for extortion and the destruction of property.

It is this species of labor crook that reflects dishonor upon labor and brings into contempt men whose motives cannot be questioned.

The course pursued in Chicago has had a tendency to clean up the grafter in the Windy City and he is cautious. Pittsburgh now needs a cleaning up. In Chicago the trial lasted twelve weeks and at the conclusion fourteen Chicago grafters who called themselves union men and union leaders were found guilty of conspiracy by a jury in Judge Scanlon's court.

The conspiracy among the defendants was carried on, according to the indictments, by calling strikes, breaking windows, boycotting and obtaining money under false pretenses. Six of the men were sentenced to serve penitentiary terms, ranging from one to three years, and the other eight to pay fines from $500 to $2,000. Three of the men on trial were acquitted.

Sentenced to prison:

Crowley, Charles, business agent Fixture Hangers' Union, three years.

Hahn, Hugo, business agent Glaziers' Union, two years.

Staley, Walter E., business agent Glaziers' Union, two years.

Stewart, Ray, business agent Wood Finishers' Union, two years.

Curran, Frank, business agent, Painters' District Council No. 14, one year.

Fined:

Cleary, John F., business agent Electrical Workers' Union, Local 134, $2,000.

Gordon, Israel, former business agent Painters' District Council, $2,000.

Grass, Harry F., former business agent Painters' District Council, $2,000.

Nestor, William E., former business agent Painters' District Council, $2,000.

Hanson, Charles, business agent Painters' Union, Local 637, $1,500.

Pekelsma, Nicholas, former business agent Painters' District Council, $750.

Murphy, John W., former business agent Electrical Workers' Union $500.

Tuckbreiter, George, business agent Painter's District Council, $500.

Acquitted:

Clauss, William, business agent Fixture Hangers' Union.

Kelly, Thomas, business agent Electrical Workers' Union.

White, John, former business agent Painters' District Council.

W. E. Geimer, President, and L. A. Lindeloff, Secretary of the Glaziers' Union were discharged upon motion of the State's Attorney before the case was given to the jury.

On the jury were three union and three ex-union members; none of the jurymen were employers of labor.

Selection of the jury began April 22 and was completed June 19. On July 12 the case was given to the jury, and the verdict of "guilty" for fourteen of the defendants returned on July 13. The cost to the labor leaders for attorney fees was $400 a day, which was donated by the unions or raised from assessments. The 11,000 members of the Painters' District Council were assessed $3 each.

The cases grew out of the window smashing campaign of the unions during the summer of 1915. The defendants were convicted of conspiracy to extort, to boycott and to commit acts of malicious mischief, by breaking windows in business places and then forcing the occupants to pay over various sums of money to the business agents before the glaziers are allowed to reset them. These cases were the first of a large number involving nearly two hundred union officials and others. Extracts from the testimony of the first witnesses called for the state were given in July number of The Review. Others appear in this article, as reported by the daily press.

Nearly all of the defendants took the stand in their own behalf and denied the charge of extorting money under threats of injury to property. Some, admitted receiving money as a "gift" but had a difficult time explaining why it was given them. The excises offered were varied and interesting.

John H. Murphy, former business agent of the electrical workers' union, testified he sent two members of his organization to John C. Schultz, a store owner, from whom they collected $50 each. "This was the equivalent of the cost of labor had the electric wiring already in been installed by union men," he explained. "The men were out of work at the time."

"And did those men ever do one stroke of work to earn their money?" asked Assistant State's Attorney Barnhart.

"I don't know," was the answer.

Hugo Hahn, business agent of the glaziers' union, admitted on the witness stand that he had heard complaints of glass being broken, and of money being passed at John B. Johnson's saloon. He denied, however, that he ever "took a cent of that kind of money in his life," and he stated also that he did not know who did receive the money.

UNION DEMANDS THWART PEACE AND LIBERTY

Closed Shops Means Submit or Starve and Run Counter to Prosperity--Open Shop Only Safe Refuge to Workmen from Tyranny of the Union.

There is considerable talk now about the closed shop proposition and the question at issue is the right of the employe to attempt to completely dictate the policy of an employer. Men who have had experience with trades unionism where the shop has been completely controlled by union labor hesitate to turn their business over to the Union on account of the arrogant method used by unscrupulous labor leaders and business agents. Nero in his palmiest day had nothing on some of this class and when the employer is reminded of the tyranny practiced by the old time mill committee, or the Pit committee or the present grafting aggregation of business agents he throws up both hands and cries out in dispair to be delivered from the awful torture that confronts him.

It is the unfair practices of the past that has turned the employer against organized labor and when he is met with unionism he becomes alarmed over the threatening situation. The labor skate in Pittsburgh when he could ruled with an iron hand and the very mention of union now excites the employer to the height of indignation and exercises the same influences as a red flag shaken before an already enraged bull.

The financial Chronicle, New York, discussing the impossible industrial conflict and the closed shop which denies the right of the employer to hire and the right of the employee to be hired, says:

The troubles in the cloak and suit-making trades continue unabated. If the employers have declared a lockout, that is only a legitimate form of return strike on their part; and if they are moving or will move their shops outside the metropolis, that also is entirely legitimate as a means of self-defence or of business policy.

The sympathizers are misled into an incorrect idea of the situation. It is denied that the wages offered are low; it is asserted that they are high. Whatever they are, they must be presumed as high as the market requires and employers could not go above the market without inclining to the ditch of bankruptcy; but the dispute is not over the rate of wages. As already defined, it goes deeper, involving the issue of the open shop, the right to employ and discharge and the right to insist upon a standard of efficiency. The union openly says that if an employer finds times dull and his work insufficient he must not discharge, for "we object to his correcting his own errors at our expense." The employers desire to fill their orders and get ready for the season's trade; but they insist upon the right to control their side of the employment, and (as their organization declares) have suffered so long and so unmistakable an experience with unionism that they have resolved "to break the unions or break the business."

Mr. F. P. Walsh, of St. Louis, who needs no reintroduction, rushes forward to assert that "public sentiment in New York is and has been all with the 60,000 garment workers in their splendid struggle to save the 200,000 members of their families from the most wretched industrial slavery." The defect in this is that it is not true, and, so far as public sentiment here takes that view, it is misinformed. If it is true, as Mr. Walsh declares, that the National Association of Manufacturers, is backing these employers in any manner, all the better; the Association has ample reason to do so. It is reckless misstatement that "everywhere the workers have asserted even a share in the control of their own lives the methods have been the same, to crush out ferociously all collective bargaining for wages," &c. Collective bargaining is not opposed, nor is a share in their own lives denied to workers; the "control" refused is the control of the shops by the employees. An organization calling itself the Humanitarian Cult has been printing broad advertisements calling for compulsory arbitration and proposing a voluntary undertaking to arbitrate in this matter; but the employers have replied that the right to control their own shops is not arbitrable, nor is it. They have tried and tried, and now they say they have definitely and finally taken their stand—the open shop or none.

Meanwhile the familiar intimidation by threatened and even actual violence is not lacking in this, as in other industrial struggles. An advertisement of a few days ago, headed "Have We a Right to Work?" prints letters addressed to the Mayor and one of the unions on behalf of two designers whose names are given. These two men were prevented from entering their places of employment and were ordered by the pickets on guard to report at union headquarters; they went, were threatened, attempted again to enter, were again prevented, and could get no aid from the policeman to whom they appealed. These are mentioned merely as typical cases. Counsel for the would-be workers also writes to the union representatives that many have been threatened and some have been severely hurt; that he has appealed to the union's counsel, who referred him to another, "who stated that he could afford me no remedy, that your union would not instruct your pickets not to molest these designers." The advertisement added a call to all designers of cloaks and suits to report any molestation experienced by them and gave notice of a special meeting for further action to be held on Tuesday evening.

The right to hire and the right to be hired and to work are denied

General Federation of Trade Unions.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—A memorandum on the subject of food prices which was circulated on October 20th by the General Federation of Trade Unions says that the Management Committee is being asked to advise all its affiliated membership to cease work unless they are given an advance in wages equivalent to the increase in the cost of living. The statement appears to have surprised a great many representative trade unionists, who are asking what the title is of the General Federation to interfere. It is pointed out that all trade unions are carrying through their own negotiations for war wages, and that so far none seriously entertains the idea of national action except through the joint Committee of the Trade Unions Congress and the Labor Party. The General Federation's attitude towards the Labor Exchanges (now more properly called employment exchanges which explains their real function) is much more in accordance with trade union opinion. The leaders of organized labor do not think very highly of the exchanges, and most of them no doubt share Mr. Appleton's view that they are "in constant though passive opposition to trade union and wage interests." For the fact that the antagonism is at the moment a little more pronounced than usual the prevailing fear that the exchanges are to be used for the demobilization of the army when the war comes to an end is assumed to be responsible.

It was announced on October 20th that the ballot which has been taking place on the amalgamation of the trade unions of the iron and steel industries of the kingdom will result in a large majority in favor of the scheme. The result of the ballot of the British Steel Smelters' Union is: For 17,542; against 1,609; majority 15,933. The Associated Firemen and Steel-workers of Great Britain and the National Steel Workers' Association have also voted in favor of the proposal, and the two remaining unions, the Amalgamated Steel and Iron Workers of Scotland and the Tin and Steel Millmen's Association, are expected to arrive at a similar result.

The Commissioners who are organizinig labor in the shipbuilding anc ship repairing trades on the Mersey, have made further progress, having concluded agreements with the Liverpool and District Committee of the Boilermakers and Iron and Steel Shippers' Society and local committee of the Operative Plumbers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, which represents an important shipyard trade. The First Lord of the Admiralty has sent the following telegram to Mr. Lynden Macassey, K. C., in Liverpool: "The Admiralty have learnt with the greatest satisfaction of the important decision of the Liverpool District Committee of the Boilermakers and Iron and Steel Shipbuilders to adopt a scheme of dilution (the name applied to the entry of new workers into the trade without the old stipulated appreticeship and restriction) in the shipbuilding and ship repairing yards on the Mersey. Please communicate to this Committee an expression of the Admiralty's appreciation of this action, which can not fail to be of immense benefit to the Royal Navy." Mr. Balfour sent a similar message for communication to the Plumbers' District Committee expressing the Admiralty's view of the value of the agreement with them.

It is rarely that strikes occur in this country now, but one is threatened for next Monday in the Birmingham building trade unless things happen, as most probably they will. The demand which is made by the operatives is for a general increase of 4 cents per hour, and the ground upon which the application is based is the greatly increased cost of living which it is held is so acute as to justify departure from an agreement made in October, 1915, granting a war bonus of a cent. This, it was stipulated at the time, should remain in force until three months after the war. The employers, on the other hand, insist on holding the men to their agreement, and point out that three increases of a cent have been granted to the men since hostilities commenced. The first two were agreed to prior to the war, but payment began some time afterwards. The terms of the resolution deciding to strike were communicated to the Board of Trade, and the Employers' Association were also officially informed of the course which it was intended to pursue. The number of men affected is about 7,000.

Women are being absorbed more and more into industrial work to take the place of men, says the "Board of Trade Gazette," but the depletion of in-

BIG POLITICAL FIGHT FOR SENATOR PENROSE

Flinn, Magee and O'Neil to Join With Church Folk While the Brewers Must Keep Hands Off.

The indications are that Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate, has again been elected President of the United States and that Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican Standard bearer has been defeated. This means that Vice President Marshall has also been re-elected and that Charles A. Fairbanks, the running mate of Mr. Hughes, has met disaster.

The margin for the re-election of President Wilson is so small that doubt is expressed as to the election and the announcement that California has given a majority for Wilson may be followed by a contest.

The campaign resulted in one of the closest and most bitterly fought contests in the history of this country and the returns indicate that Mr. Wilson's strength was in the west rather than in the east. Thus the campaign is looked upon as a victory for the west over the east and this in future campaigns may resolve itself into a contest of the east against the west rather than issues over which both parties have been in the past contesting but are now bringing themselves into closer harmony. The success of President Wilson from the view point of Pennsylvania forebodes one of the most bitter factional contests the Keystone state politicians have ever experienced. Within two years there is to be elected in Pennsylvania a Governor to succeed the present incumbent, Martin G. Brumbaugh.

The defeat of Charles E. Hughes is looked upon as keeping from United States Senator Penrose the naming of Federal employes who might have been of assistance in the next Gubernatorial campaign. This places the Vare forces on the same level as the Penrose faction and the state contest augmented by a terrific Mayorality contest which will be on in full within the next few months assures Pittsburgh a most enthusiastic season. But this not all; there are candidates galore seeking judiciary honors, to succeed the present five incumbents that must seek the suffrages of the people between now and November next. Then, too, a District Attorney to succeed R. H. Jackson, must be elected and a Sheriff to take the place of Sheriff George H. Richards, who cannot succeed himself, while Coroner Samuel Jamison must either go valiantly to the people or go down in ignominious defeat.

The present situation now centres around independent parties and news has already reached this community that the Federal Courts will not permit the brewing interests to get into the contest nor will they be permitted to contribute anything like a million dollars which they have been accustomed to contributing. Further the Vares are courting the Anti-liquor forces and this means that Senator William Flinn, will join forces with the church element for the overthrow of Penrose about whom the contest is to centre.

J. D. O'Neil will throw whatever strength he has to the Vares and William A. Magee, will lead the fight against Mayor Armstrong to capture Mayorality honors. This office in the hands of the friends of the Vares will be a powerful factor to strengthening the lines for an extraordinary state contest and politicians throughout the state have visions that bith the Delaware and the Ohio, besmutted with political gore, will run crimson to the sea.

PITTSBURGH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

With the completion of its new home at Seventh Avenue and Smithfield street the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh will have quarters that will eclipse those possessed by any other civic or commercial body in the country. In conveniences offered for its administrative forces, in accommodations afforded for meetings and assemblages and in the facilities for its executive work and the comfort of its members, the new building will present all the features of a first-class club and in addition will provide the public with a forum for carrying forward constructive civic enterprises.

Next Monday the Chamber of Commerce will inaugurate a campaign to double its present membership. This work will continue until November 29th and will bring together 200 of the leading business and professional men of Pittsburgh who are rallying in the effort to make the Chamber the strongest organization of its kind in the United States. Among their talking points the membership campaigners, however, are saying little of the club features of their new home. In a Chamber of Commerce which has in contemplation such a widening of its scope of usefulness, the provision of comfortable quarters for the entertainment of its members and their guests is looked upon as a matter of course.

Sidney F. Heckert, a director of the Chamber and chairman of its membership committee, who is conducting the campaign with an executive a staff of fourteen committeemen, is calling attention to manifold activities of the organization in the accomplishment of improvements for Pittsburgh and of the program of work in further development which is about to be undertaken Mr. Heckert's coworkers are A. Clarke Bane, Charles Bickel, J. C. Bily, Harry Dangerfield, Thomas A. Dunn, J. F. Erny, Louis Germain, Jr., Charles N. Hanna, Louis Lorch, Jr., Frank W. Main, Truman S. Morgan, G. G. O'Brien, C. S. The Great Delusion of Our Time

THE FALLACY OF THE ARGUMENT

But there is nothing new about this; it is the old story of a wicked world which moves in a circle, which needs salvation, which cannot save itself because it cannot make steady moral advancement, which builds empires only that they may perish under the weight of their corruption. It is the old human est errare, out of which grew that conviction of sin, that cry to Heaven for help, which since the time of the Vedas has echoed out of every quarter of the globe, from the heart of burdened humanity. The Troglodyte we have always with us; like the Wandering Jew, he never dies. His characteristics are always the same; he takes a few steps forward and then turns back toward the tiger and the ape. But he never becomes either tiger or ape. He becomes what we call a fiend, or, in modern day parlance, a degenerate. He is always urging plausibly for the tooth-and-nail ethics, always ignoring its limitations, always confounding the lines at which a higher principle should take control. He is always putting the struggle for a livelihood before honor and right.

How many there are of him we never know, though we always try to find out before election day. Often he lives in high places, and very often he succeeds in organizing society. He always controls a great many votes. He has a kind of primitive logic which takes hold of men with a sort of cosmic force. Behind him is the stern fact that man has an animal nature, that this animal nature is without doubt engaged in a severe struggle for physical existence. That Natural Selection, like gravitation, really has a grip on him. In short, it is the old story of the world, the flesh, and the devil, apparently, though not really, backed up by the cosmos itself.

It is the same world which Socrates faced, and Jesus and Paul. Righteous men have faced it in all ages and feared not. Often it has quailed before their rebuke. It has recognized an authority higher than intellect, greater than that of physical nature, and has cried out, "We have sinned!" The only difference in our own time is that we have noble-hearted and high-minded men, not at all troglodytes as to their personal conduct or ideals, who, writing with the magisterial authority vaguely supposed to be possessed by our modern science, deliberately acquite the wicked world. True, it is cruel, it is brutal; they would be ashamed, and high-minded gentlemen, to act on such principles; yet they declare with the finality of absolute truth that the world cannot act otherwise; it is simply carrying out Nature's decree.

The peculiar feature, then, of our times is, not that the world is on a primitive tooth-and-nail basis, but that it stands acquitted, nay, justified, by a verdict apparently based upon the doctrine of Evolution, and that conscience is discredited and put out of court by the apparent authority of those standards which have given us a supreme and magisterial position among the ages. The Troglodyte now has an unassailable backer in the scholar who sits on a judgment seat higher than that of Moses, and who says to the world, "You have no grounds for crying—'peccavi'; you have not sinned; you are doing just right; you are debtor to the flesh to live after the flesh. It is Nature's decree, not that you should be a brother to your neighbor, but that you should rob him and fight him for a livelihood."

Words would fail to tell how, from the time when Darwin's and Spencer's philosophies were published, this magisterial tendency has proceeded to assist the Troglodyte in cheapening character, by its judicial decisions based on the evolutionary hypothesis. It has not only enabled our primitive friends to throw bricks with greater cheerfulness, but is has made his creed impregnable; nay, it has enabled him to make all other creeds look foolish.

The Troglodyte always believed that preachers of righteousness retained the claw-foot under their shoes and stockings. He knew that prophets and apostles only waited for a chance to show their teeth. His intuition told him that generous people were really scabbing when they went about doing good. He saw by a kind of cosmic light that those great ideals upon which our higher morality fed were silly dreams. His reasons told him that the power which makes for righteousness was a sun-god, or a highly developed form of ghost worship, or a fetish, due to the effect of environment. He always understood that the moral nature itself was a product of circumstances without the least atom of final authority, a kind of vermiform appendix which were best removed, since its place has been superseded by the exact knowledge of the cosmic law. Why should a man longer be punched by conscience when he has risen to an understanding of Nature's decree? What do we want of morals when reason has become supreme?

All this the Troglodyte knew in his heart, but he was a little shy of telling it because the stalwart moralists had the ear of public opinion. Now, behold a Daniel come to judgment, who has not only confirmed his suspicions, proved his creed, and made him a prophet of the cosmos, but has made the stalwart moralist themselves give up the validity of their moral perceptions, while they try to explain that their opinions were really based on Evolution.

The scientific moralists are thinking their case over; many of them are still trying to patch it up with Evolution. They have not yet dreamed of falling back upon the validity of the moral perception itself. And there are a great many people who want to be good, but have lost faith in their moral ideals, and are humbly looking to the scientists and the philosophers for their moral nutriment. As to the prophets and apostles, their voice is still and small in the ear of a moral nature whose main study is to supply practical ethics enough to make business prosperous and the governing party secure.

N. E. Nelson,
Duquesne, Pa.

I am trying hard to realize what nas happened to us all, but somehow I fail; somehow everything seems on the hinges and I don't see clearly which way to turn. Oh how beautifully reverent and sweetly benevolent are all Pastor Russell's writings. In one moment I can detect his expression from that of another—for it is characterized with such simple dignity—with such unassailable purity of Truth—for he had the single eye that made his body full of light.

I can testify to this by my brief interview with him at Hershey. For a half hour after leaving his presence, I sat as in a dream of peace and bliss—ing from his personality—I felt awed and yet unafraid in his sympathetic presence. And it is the same when he is on the platform—you feel the magnetism of his spirituality—in the farthest corner of the auditorium. He never seems to say anything one could say was out of place as the phrenologist put it—"He has the power to present unpalatable things in an unobjectionable way" and how important it is that one should be able to do this in presenting the Truth!

And now his voice is silent! How little we appreciate the truly great, and how true it is that their contemporaries seldom rate them in the right perspective. It is true his "brethren" loved him devoutedly and are now indeed bereft without him, but what has the world or even the "Household of faith" to say, now he is passed from earth's activities?

Oh how I wish I might leave back such a record of faithfulness, and sincerity; what an incentive for us now to go and do likewise, and how our hearts beat with joy as we think of the sweet, because well-earned "Well done" that must have been his when he was greeted by his Lord and Master! We are surely happy in his reward—but how about our own stewardship? Shall we prove faithful in anything like so full a measure.

Dear Brother, while I have rejoiced greatly rejoiced at this significant taking away of our dear Pastor, yet there is a very sharp pain and a sense of loss that overbalances the joy—and now I feel like straining my eyes, as did the apostles after the ascending Jesus, to see if he will continue to love, and to care for, the struggling brethren left behind. It seems so sweet to think he does take even a keener and a more effective interest in all take consolation.

It seems to me that any one of us such was the spiritual power emanat the workers—and, in this thought I should be eloquent with our heart's deep love and gratitude as we speak or write of Brother Russell now. And we shall miss him, mark you—oh so sorely; but the harvest-work will be finished we know; this is our Father's way of drawing the rest of us together, and home—let us look at it in that way—and may the summons come soon! How is everybody taking this event in your ecclesia—and in Allegheny City? Are they all turning out now to honor him the greatest man of the epoch? Will there be an editorial in the Tribune, do you suppose? If not then you should surely insert something by way of tribute.

I enclose a folder of my Neff Studio a few years ago—perhaps you will be interested to look it over. The discontinuation of the Neff teaching was perhaps my greatest disappointment in life—and yet I have keener sorrows in Present Truth—tiny daggers that pierce my heart from those I must love and meet day by day—pray I may have "more grace" for each new occasion—we shall have new trials to face now I am sure.

Awaiting your reply
Yours cordially,
Sr. H. B. Y.

Drain, Oregon, Nov. 10.

I have renewed my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower office. For some time I had thought it necessary to discontinue the paper, but finally decided that it was too valuable to do without, as the various religious features are of great help to me and my son, who are the only ones in this section of country who are Bible Students and as we can not assemble with others of like precious faith for Bible study and fellowship, the Tribune is much appreciated by us.

We are pleased with the stand you take against "fakirs" and your efforts to bring them to speedy justice. Your endeavors to protect your readers and the public against fraud and injustice of every sort is very commendable and we believe you are being used of the Lord in bringing to light the hidden things of darkness.

How we do rejoice in the "Millennial Dawn" and to know that soon the "Son of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams," and all shall come to know the Lord, and not be deceived by that old serpent which is the Devil, and Satan; for he is to be bound for the thousand years of God's Kingdom under Christ. Then "let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of Life freely."

How good it is to know "The Divine Plan of the Ages," and the "exceeding great and precious promises" He has given to us that by these we might become partakers of the Divine Nature, and share in dispensing God's blessings to all the families of the earth."

With love and best wishes,
Your friend,
MRS MARY A. FRIER.

I notice my subscription has expired, I have enjoyed the religious features in your paper; appreciate the different features of the paper as being an all around paper suited to each and all subscribers. Thanking you for past efforts to please, ask that my subscription be discontinued as I find myself unable to renew.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The following is the standing of the fund to date:

The United States in Prophecy.

By Elder J. A. Oppy,
of Siloam Springs, Ark.

Greetings in His Name. God bless your clean paper. Several copies have fallen into my hands, and I am glad to know that its columns are open to the Lord's dear people, to present what they conceive to be a better understanding of the Truth, and also to additional Truth. With these thots in view, especially the last thot, I would like to present to the readers of the Tribune, especially Bible students, what I for years have conceived to be a symbol of the United States in Prophecy. I have chosen to present my thoughts in the form of questions and answers, this being the most forcible method of bringing out the Truth. (Prophecy).

(1) What are some of the strong probabilities that the United States would be in (a) Great nations of the past—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome, were definitely pointed out, giving the exact span of their years, and the scope and character of their work. (b) Great and even small cities—Babylon, Jerusalem, Nineveh, Sodom, Gomorrow, Bethesaida, Capernaum, Chorazin, Tyre, Sidon, Bethlehem, and even mean little Nazareth, came vividly under the prophetic pen. (c) Great and noted individuals, of both kinds, good and bad—Pharoah, Cleopatra, Herod, John Baptist, Nebuchadnezzer, Darius, Cyrus, (whose name was foretold 170 years before he was born, and his work outlined) Napoleon, and a host of others ancient and modern, have also been outlined, and their work portrayed. (d) Great and abominable systems of false worship—the Papal Hierarchy—Mother of Harlots, with her harlot daughters—apostate Protestism, have come under the power of the prophetic pen, and their work outlined.

(2) The United States could not logically, reasonably, scripturally be an exception to the above rules. The reasons which follow, are (a) It is not in any sense of the word one of the ten kingdoms of Europe—one of the ten divisions of the Roman Empire. (b) It is "another beast" definitely symbolized, and differently symbolized, from all other beasts (governments) that precede its rise. (c) It is the grand and central nation—the hub of all the nations of the world, from which radiates the Divine Plan, and the Divine Call to the Kingdom of Christ, embracing all the features of the Divine Plan. (d) Naturally, reasonably, and scripturally, it must become the grand center, from which will yet go forth the spirit of persecution, against the true church—the "Remnant" (those who have not yet passed under the "veil," and been glorified with their Head) the "elect," the Bride-class, because of its nonconformity to a system of false worship, similar in kind to that of the Papal beast. We pass to note United States symbol in prophecy. "And I saw another wild beast ascending from the earth and he had two morns like a lamb, and he spoke as a dragon. And he deceiveth them that dwell on the earth, by reason of the signs it was given him to do in the presence of the beast (the Papal beast (telling them that dwell on the earth that THEY should make an image to the beast which had the sword and lived." Rev. 13, 11-14. (1) What does a beast used in prophecy symbolize? Wild and ferocious beasts are chosen of God to represent earthly governments. See Dan. Chap. 7, 8. (2) What beast—government, is symbolized in prophecy, to which an image is to be made? See Rev. 13, 1-10. All agree it is the Papal beast, or government. (3) From what did the Papal beast arise? It came up out of the sea or waters—previously occupied territory. (4) From what did the two-horned beast arise? It came up out of the EARTH, a vast scope of country, unoccupied, save by the wild Indians of America. Sea or waters are used to represent "peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." Rev. 17, 15. If the two horned beast had come up as the other beasts, the Seer would not have said he came up out of the earth, a place to all human expectations it would be impossible for a beast or government to arise. In fact the rise and progress of the United States government and the manner of its rise was an astonishment to the whole civilized, and uncivilized world. (5) What are the symbols of the Papal beast that make it plain, that he came up out of "peoples, multitudes, nations and tongues?" He had the mouth of a lion, the feet of a bear, the body of a leopard, and is further said to have received his throne, and power, and authority, from the dragon, Pagan Rome. Moreover he had crowns on his honrs symbolizing monarchial form of government. (6) What are the symbols of the two horned beast? He had two horns like a lamb. His horns were not crowned, showing most conclusively that a Republican or Democratic form of government is symbolized, and not a monarchy or kingly form. His two horns like a lamb, also denote youthful government. These two horns denote governmental power, ecclesiastical, and civil, lying side by side, in perfect harmony with each other, church and state separate, not united, as in all kingly forms of government. (7) Why is it said that the two horned beast spoke as a dragon? Because of the change which is yet to come over this government, in uniting church and state. Listen to the federated clammer of the great so-called Christian churches of Christ in America. Here are their words, and what they propose: "We propose such a change to the Constitution of these United States as will recognize Almighty God as the Author of the nation's existence, the Bible as the rule of its conduct, Jesus Christ as the ruler of the nation, and place all Christian usages on an undeniable, legal basis, in the fundamental law of the land, and so indicate that this is a Christian nation." When this CHANGE comes over this government we will then have an "image to the beast." (8) Why does he, the two-horned say to them that dwell on the earth (that part of the earth only, over which he has jurisdiction) that they should make the image to the beast which had the wound by the sword, and lived? It shows that the United States has no right delegated to it, hence has no legal right to do so, for this is a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, and that the power is in the people, showing a Republican form of government, and not a kingly form. Kings do not address their subjects in this manner, but on the contrarywise, command their subjects to obey the laws whether they be good or bad. (9) Why is it said of the two-horned beast that it was given to give life or breath to the image? Because when he was "like a lamb," he had no such spirit or power, but such power was delegated to him when he speaks as a dragon. Here comes a voice, not from the two horned beast, but from the Christian statesman, mouth-piece for the National Reform Association, which is but an echo, of the voice of the "Federated Churches of Christ in America." "Give all men to understand that this is a Christian nation, and that believing that without Christianity, we perish, we must maintain by all means our Christian character. Inscribe this character on our Constitution, Enforce upon who come among us the laws of Christian morality. One more out of scores we might produce. Rev. M. A. Gault, a National Reform secretary, says: "Our remedy for all these malefic influences is to have the government simply set up the moral law, and recognize God's authority behind it, and lay its hands on any religion, that does not conform to it." Such a standard of religion would disfranchise every Bible student in the nation, and make outlaws of them, subjecting them to death penalties, for nonconformity to national law. (10) How does a government speak? Through its laws. Then it is evident that the laws of this nation will be so modified and the principles of religious liberty are repudiated as to enforce the doctrines and dogmas of the Papal beast upon the people as set forth by an apostate confederacy of all sects, creeds, and denominations of the nation.

(11) Through what three grand agencies is all the world to be deceived? "I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet For they are the spirits of demons, working signs, which go forth to the whole habitable to ga her them together, for the war of that great day of the Omnipotent God." Rev. 16, 13, 14. (12) What three great world powers do these three unclean frogs symbolize? Heathenism, or the great Pagan. Roman Catholicism, or the great Papal world. The changed form, or character of the United States Government or apostate Protestanism. The reason that these demons or unclean spirits now go forth to the kings of the earth and of the whole world, is that the original restraint has been removed for it was placed on them only till the Judgment of the Great Day, and we are now in that day, in the lapping period. Surely as we see the mountains and valleys soaked with human gore, the trenches filled with blood, and the red life of humanity running red in the rivers to the sea, we are led to believe that it is the work of demons. Great and marvelous things, such as earth has never seen, are on the eve of fulfillment now. The ecclesiastical heavens—the Papacy, and false Protestanism, have not yet been "rolled together, "hence they cannot "depart as a scroll." The false Protestant end of the scroll must of necessity move in the direction of the abomnible system of the Papacy, until the two ends meet, and when that is done the "image to the beast" will immediately be given life to enforce its dogmas and this will bring relentless persecution to the "Remnant of her seed." In the False-Prophet end of the "croll" is yet to be found all that has ever been repudiated by true Protestantism. This with its logical accompaniments, will no doubt be the finishing chapter of the "mystery of iniquity." (13) When did the Papal beast come up out of the sea, how long did it reign, and when go into captivity? Answer: A. D. 533 or 9; 1260 years: 1798 or 9. (14) After this dreadful beast with body like a leopard, mouth like a lion and teeth like a bear went into captivity, what did the prophet see "coming up" not out of the sea, but "out of the earth." He saw another wild beast. (15). How long had this wild beast with two horns like a lamb then been coming up? Just 23 years, for 1799, minus 1776, brings us the 4th of July Declaration of American Independence. We there and then passed out from under the power of a monarchy—out from under the tyranical rule of king George, launched our glorious Ship of State—a State without a king, and a church without a Pope.

Here in this land of the free and home of the brave, the lion, the bear, and the leopard, lie down with the lamb together, and the lamb is not inside of any of those wild beasts either. Here church and state, so to speak, lie side by side, indicated by the two horns like a lamb. But the lion is getting very hungry, and he is naturaly fond of lamb meat. The dragon spirit is getting a firm hold upon him, and as we see it, he will soon rise up to "devour much flesh." We may truthfully say, that these United States stand the solitary example of all the nations, kingdoms and empires of times, which have not spoken as a dragon. Therefore when this nation repudiates every principle of Protestantism, it will inspire courage in the beast to which the image is made, and then the mother of harlots, will exclaim: "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." All her husbands will then have returned to her to do her bidding, as Ahab did the bidding of Jezebel. (16) What are some of the characteristics or the beast? (a) It is that form of government in which the religious element has risen superior to the civil element and uses the civil element as an agency to enforce the dogmas and doctrines of the church nominal upon the people, by means of special church laws enacted for that purpose. For a special list of other features see comments in Bible Helps, on Rev. 13, 6. An image of the beast would be an accurate representation of the beast as a photo would be of yourself. It must perfectly represent the civil and the ecclesiastical phaze of governmental power. (17) What would be the necessity for an image to the beast, where the beast already has jurisdiction? The beast will take care of its own territory. There being no necessity for an image to the beast where the beast already has control, it logically follows that the image to the beast must be made, where the beast does not control. With the premise, this conclusion, to the writer seems unavoidable. Paganism is a huge system of false worship, where religion and state are united—devilism. The Papal system is the same. And so called Protestantism, when it has fully apostatised from "the faith once delivered to the saints," will be the same. Then it will "speak as a dragon" through the civil element and persecute all who dissent from its assumed authority. From this land of the free and home of the brave, has radiated the Divine Plan, and the high call to the kingdom. All the earth is being lightened" with God's glory. Hence it seems both reasonable and scriptural that this nation must figure very largely in Prophecy—yea more, be the subject of special prophecy.

Virgille, Mont., Nov. 10.

I see by the label that my paper is over due, thanking you for continuing it. I am renewing my subscription as I enjoy the good reading and especially our pastor's sermons. I see a notice in one of the daily papers that our beloved pastor has passed beyond. Nov. 1. I saw him just once in the flesh. It will make us all feel very lonely without him. Let us all pray more earnestly than ever that we may be kept from the evil one.

Respectfully yours,
MRS. H. B. GARDNER.

Lewiston, Maine, Nov. 10.

Dear Sir:—Wishing to have my address changed on your paper, I have at the same time renewed my subscription through the "Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society." I also send a mite for the "Help Others Fund." I have taken your paper for several years, and think a great deal of it, especially on account of the religious features of the paper.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. W. E. LEIGHTON.

Talk About Orders - War Profits- War Stocks After the War--What?

If You Have Money to Investigate--- Investigate This Proposition.

Place your money where it is absolutely safe and where it will bring you the largest returns. Invest in the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company—now selling at par $1.00 per share. The Gasoline Industry is the livest and most talked of industry in the country today. It will continue to be the most important industry for the next twenty years to come.

When you purchase shares in the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company you are purchasing an interest in a company with an established business and on an absolutely safe and sound financial basis. The immense property controlled by the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company is in an old established oil and gas field—the best territory in the world for obtaining WET GAS, the kind of gas from which the Highest Grade of Gasoline is produced. The territory is ABSOLUTELY PROVEN by the drilling of 31 wells—all producers. The supply of gas is practically inexhaustible. The property is less than 5% developed, yet the company can show daily gross earnings in excess of $600.00 and is producing approximately 7,500 gallons of gasoline per day and over 1,000,000 cubic feet of refined gas.

Such a Splendid Showing clearly indicates that the proposition IS NOT A PROSPECT OR IN AN UNDEVELOPED STAGE. The future possibilities are most remarkable for the reason that there are drilling locations for at least 800 additional wells. If you want QUICK AND LARGE RETURNS on your investment—then place your order AT ONCE for a substantial block of the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company.

After the war—what? The bottom as well as the Profits will drop out of the WAR SECURITIES—but the business of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company will go on as usual and the profits will be greater than ever—because the consumption of gasoline will be greater than ever, and also the price.

By the first of the year the management of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company estimates that the company will be producing about 20,000 gallons of gasoline per day. Increased production means increased earnings. Do you suppose that at that time you will be able to purchase the stock at par $1.00 per share? It is not at all likely. In all probability by that time the stock will be quoted on the New York Curb around $2.00 or possibly $3.00 per share. Do not delay, but PLACE YOUR ORDER NOW for a substantial block of the stock. All indications point to the fact that the stock will be placed on a DIVIDEND PAYING BASIS at an early date. If you want any of this stock you will have to ACT QUICKLY. The allotment at our disposal is limited. It is being rapidly exhausted. If a proposition has MERIT back of it you do not have to be offering it for sale indefinitely. Such propositions are quickly taken up. The very best and most intelligent class of investors are purchasing the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company. They realize the unusual conditions surrounding this industry, and furthermore they are familiar with the Tremendous Profits already made—and they are fully aware of the fact THIS IS THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY THE GENERAL PUBLIC HAVE EVER HAD TO SHARE IN THE PROFITS. You can find plenty of opportunities prenested to you for investing—but we believe we are safe in saying—that this is the first opportunity the public have ever had to invest in a company producing Gasoline in Large, Paying Quantities and safe and sound in every way.

Immediate action on your part is necessary if you want to secure any of this stock. The whole proposition will stand the closest investigation. Orders by wire will receive our prompt attention. Booklet and other interesting data furnished on application. Bank and commercial references.

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

THE STROMS OF LIFE.

By L. T. Cooper.

The storms of life with great fury blow,
Our peaceful days to assail;
There is now no lull we know
We must stand and face the raging gale.

The storms of lafe are rushing on
And getting nearer day by day,
And pressing hard the mighty throng
And soon will take us all away.

For years the storms have gathered in the East,
With clouds now bursting low;
They're spreading thick and fast to say the least,
And soon will stronger blow.

Man has no power to check the speed,
Satin raves—we stand and fear;
The cry of men he will not head,
But still inflates the war so near.

Let us trust God, that we may find
He'll call a halt to all this strife,
And bring peace to all mankind,
With glory, honor, eternal life.

Sharpstown, Md., Nov. 4.

THE GLORY OF THE LORD.

The reav'ns declare Thy glory, Lord,
Through all the realms of boundless space
The soaring mind may roam abroad,
And there Thy Power and Wisdom trace.

Author of Nature's wondrous laws,
Preserver of its glorious grace,
We hail Thee as the great First Cause,
And here delight Thy ways to trace.

Wide as creation is Thy Plan,
Deep laid in Wisdom's mighty rock;
The course of Ages is its span;
'Tis for Thy universal flock.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

TO HELL AND BACK WHO ARE THERE?

The following sermon was delivered by Pastor Russell at Lynn, Mass., on January 8, 1905, and was the first that appeared in the National Labor Tribune. Other sermons will appear weekly.
—Editor.

Pastor C. T. Russell of Allegheny addressed a large audience at Lynn, Mass., on "To Hell and Back—Who Are There." He prefaced his discourse with the remark that the topic might seem sensational, but it would be found to be otherwise—that many think he intended to speculate beyond what is written in the Scriptures, but they would find themselves mistaken, as he would confine himself strictly to the Word of God. His Discourse follows:

"The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple."—Psalm xix., 7.

Let us give heed to our text, dear friends, and realize that of ourselves we know nothing about the future, and that no other human beings know any more about the subject than we do. From God alone can come the information which we seek respecting the dead. Let us realize this fact and give the more earnest heed to the testimony of the Scriptures, which, as our text declares, are able to make wise the simple—the honest, the sincere, the unprejudiced, the unsophisticated. Heathendom has its own peculiar hells and purgatories, but none of them more revolting, more horrible, than those presented to our attention by the various denominations of Christendom. Quite evidently all these various conceptions came from some common origin and our view of the matter, dear friends, is that Satan himself was the author of this terrible doctrine, which has made millions unhappy, and sent thousands to insane asylums. "Yes, but," perhaps you will say, "if loyal to the Bible, we must believe in hell!" In which theory of hell must we believe, dear friends? Which is the scriptural theory respecting hell?

Our Catholic friends, Greek and Roman, outnumber Protestants more than two to one. These divide Inferno into two parts, the easier and milder of which is called purgatory. Catholic doctors of divinity have given us detailed accounts of the terrors of purgatory too awful for me to attempt to describe. Many of you are familiar with Dante's Inferno, illustrated by that great aetist, Dore. It represents poor humanity in the future enduring various torments for hundreds and sometimes thousands of years, and the mercy that it holds forth is that, by virtue of masses and prayers and fastings of many friends the period of the torture may be somewhat lessened. The pope, you know, on his jubilee year is accustomed to release many from purgatory, presumably in part to make room for others hastening hither from all parts of the world at the rate of 85 per minute.

Our Catholic friends assure us that all go to purgatory except a few called saints—who go direct to heaven and after several centuries are canonized and afterward prayed to by Catholics and heretics, for whom there is something worse than purgatory prepared. They tell us that even popes and bishops and archbishops go to purgatory, and need to remain there for a while at least to be prepared for the heavenly conditions. Perhaps you noticed recently an account of the death of Archbishop Elder of Cincinnati, O., and his recorded last words, which I quote: "Holy Mary, mother of God, pray for us sinners now at the hour of death! Amen!" The archbishop had no thought that he was freed from sins and no longer a sinner, but a saint; and his co-religionists evidently had no doubt of the kind either, for you notice from the papers also that masses were said on his behalf—for the peace of his troubled soul, supposed at the time to be in the anguish of purgatory in preparation for heaven. Doubtless many of you noticed also on the occasion of the death of Pope Leo XIII., similar prayers were said for the peace and rest and comfort and ultimate liberation of his soul from purgatory. There would be no object in saying masses for those believed to be in heaven—such would be beyond the need of masses. Masses are said for sinners, for the release from sins and the penalty of sins, according to the doctrine of the Catholic Church.

The Protestant view of the subject we hold to be less reasonable than that of Catholics. Theoretically they take the same position respecting the unfitness of mankind for heaven and admit that the heavenly promises belong only to those who walk in the narrow way—not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. They admit that the mass of Protestants are not saints, either but their shame be it said that they have a theory respecting hell which not only makes it as awful, but it affirms that there is no hope for recovery for any one who enters it. We ask ourselves, "Do Protestants mean this? Do they believe it?" Admitting that few are in that condition of holiness and purity of heart which would fit them for the divine presence and favor, do they believe that all the remainder, their neighbors, friends, brethren, sisters, parents, children, are passing rapidly into an eternity of torture beyond the power of tongue to describe? We answer that they do not believe it; that their actions speak louder than their words.,

Protestants assume great liberty in dealing with the subject of which they admit they have no personal knowledge. One will tell us that he does not believe in the literal flames and literal roasting by literal devils, with literal pitchforks, in literal ovens, but believes that it will be a gnawing of conscience, some place somewhere, he knows not where; somehow, he knows not how; but he is as sure as he lives that it is all going to take place as he has pictured it in his imagination. He feels himself infallible on this subject. Another tells us that he believes there will be no fire, that the punishment of the wicked will be their compulsory association with each other, and that they will get so satiated with their own company and sinful course that they will loathe their existence, but must continue it under these conditions to all eternity. Where? How? He knows not. He believes himself infallible in this particular point, though not so in his earthly affairs, his financial ventures, matrimonial engagements, etc.—just on this point he is infallible.

We ask these various infallible wise men why any such horrible conditions should be continued everlastingly? In what sense would God be glorified by the perpetuation of such conditions? In what way would He take pleasure in the pain or suffering of His creatures, however wicked? The answer to Jonathan Edwards to this question was that God's people would be so changed after death that they could look over the battlements of heaven and see their own parents, or children, or brothers, or neighbors in the most awful torture and turn around and praise the Lord louder. But few in our day would give this answer to the question. They prefer to avoid it; they realize that they have no reasonable answer.

We ask them another question—if mankind, under present conditions, tend to die without such awful torture as you describe for the future, would they not die much more quickly under those tortures? Is it not tendency of all suffering to destroy? Would it not then be more reasonable to expect that at some time these tortures which they describe would terminate in some natural way—lead to the destruction of the individual, of the mind, of the body, of every power? "Oh, but," they answer, "God will preserve them in being; He will supply them life. Only by His power can they be made to endure such suffering at all, and He will see to the perpetuation of the life so they may suffer on and on and on eternally. If that be true, dear friends, if these teachers be infallible, the race might well be sorry that the Almighty has so much power, or that, having the power, He did not use it in some better cause.

We return to the questions and ask, what evil could any human being commit in the brief span of an hour, or a day, or a month, or a year, or a century that would merit an eternity of torture such as this you describe? The reply is that our entire race was born under the curse, under condemnation, and that now God has provided a Saviour, and only those who will accept Him can be saved—from eternal torment. They tell us that this sentence or curse of our race to hell came upon us as a penalty for Father Adam's disobedience in Eden in the eating of the forbidden fruit, and that only those who accept of Christ, can be saved, from the terrible doom. But we reply that surely such a penalty would be unjust. To suppose that God would pronounce a curse of eternal torment upon 20,000,000 of Adam's race because of his disobedience in eating an apple is to accuse the Almighty of the grossest injustice, not to say lovelessness.

Dear friends, surely these teachings are not fresh from the word of God. Surely God is not the author of these terrible hallucinations which have been upon our race for now centuries. They have come down to us from the dark ages or immediately after them. None of them will stand the light of present-day enlightenment or scriptural investigation. If the scriptures tell of these various things, why do not these doctors of divinity point us to the Chapter and verse and give us the particulars in detail? And why are they not of one mind? Why have they such diversity of views on a subject which, from their statement, is the most awful and most important possible to be thought of? It is all a huge mistake, dear friends, as we hope to show you when investigating.

In old Testament Scriptures of our common English version the word hell occurs 31 times, but the original Hebrew word of which hell is the translation occurs many more times—66 in all. Why did not the translators give us the full benefit of all these occurrences of the word sheol in the Hebrew text? Were they anxious to cover up this question of hell so that they might translate the word otherwise as often as possible? No, there was another reason; and when we point out that other reason it will make clear to every one of us, I trust, that the 31 times that the word hell occurs in the Old Testament are all erroneous, that the word hell should not have been in the Old Testament at all—at least it should not be there with the meaning which is ordinarily attached to the word. Sheol in our common version Bibles is 31 times translated hell, 31 times translated grave, and three times translated pit, and should have been translated tomb or hidden state in every instance.

I would not be understood as charging the translators with a deliberate attempt to blindfold people, and hence will mention an extenuating fact, namely, that since the translation the English has experienced considerable change in respect to this word hell as well as in other respects. In old England literature we find the word hell used in speaking of thaching a house or pitting potatoes for winter use. To hell a house means to cover it, to hell potatoes means to cover or hide them from the light, frost, etc. If the word hell were still used in this sense there would be no need of this discourse, but the gradual change of the word signifying to cover, to secrete, to bury, to entomb, to mean a place of torturing humanity, makes necessary that we expose the error and thereby free our minds from the bondage of superstition which for centuries has beclouded the divine character and hindered us from having the proper appreciation of our Creator.

The word sheol, as every Hebrew scholar knows and will admit, signifies the dark, the hidden, the state of death. It has not in it the remotest suggestion of fire, or flames, or pitchforks, or torture, or anguish. Let us see this from the Scriptures themselves.

The first occurrence of sheol in the Scriptures is in Genesis 37:25, where it has been translated grave. Here Jacob is represented as mourning for his son, Joseph supposed to have been killed by the wild beasts. He is represented as saying, I will go down into sheol mourning for my son. He meant that nothing would comfort him as long as he would live, that he would mourn for his son until his last breath. The second occurence of the word sheol is in Genesis 42:38. Jacob again is the speaker. He refers to his favorite son, Benjamin, and tells his other sons if they return from their journey and bring not Benjamin with them they will surely bring his gray hairs down in sorrow to sheol—to the grave, to the tomb, to death. Has anyone any doubt as to the propriety of this translation, grave? Does any sane person thing that the translators should have rendered the word sheol here by our common word, hell? Surely not! Jacob had no desire, we may be sure, to go to a place of eternal torment, and made no suggestion of the kind, nor was there any such doubt ever before his mind. The devil had not yet formulated this terrible God-dishonoring doctrine.

We have all heard of the troubles of Job, and in the Scriptures narrative respecting him we are told of Job's prayers to the Lord in these words, "Oh, that Thou wouldst hide me in sheol until Thy wrath be overpast! Then shalt Thou call and I will answer Thee." Who thinks for a moment that Job was praying to go to eternal torment? No sane person so thinks. The translators were evidently correct again in rendering sheol by our English word grave. Job realized that himself and all the world of mankind at the present time are living under the divine curse or wrath which justly imposed upon our race—not a wrath of the future, which will torment the masses of mankind, but a wrath which is on the world now, which is permitting us to go down under the sentence of death through various troubles, pain, sorrow, sicknesses, weaknesses, into sheol. Job felt that if it were the Lord's will he would be glad to die speedily, as the burdens of the present life were more than he felt himself equal to bear. However, he had no desire to remain forever in the grave. On the contrary he had information respecting the divine plan which gave him the understanding that in due time the Lord would deliver the world from this curse, the sentence of death from the tomb and from all the weaknesses which have come upon our race through the original death sentence.

It is to this resurrection hope that Job referred, saying, "Thou wilt call and I will answer Thee." His words remind us of the teachings of the Lord, Jesus, who said, "Marvel not, the hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth." This was Job's hope, this was the meaning of his player, "Oh, that Thou wouldst hide me in the grave until Thy wrath be overpast. Then Thou shalt call me and I will answer Thee." He will share in the general blessings of the milenial age when, in harmony with the divine plan, Christ our Lord, who has redeemed the whole world with His Precious blood, with the sacrifice of Himself, shall be King over all the earth, to lift up and to assist every creature back from the weaknesses and imperfections of this dying conditions to the perfections and glories of Eden, lost and redeemed and to be restored to so many as will come back into harmony with God, in God's due time.

King David under the smiting hand of the Lord was sore distressed and fearful that his death was near. Mark his prayer: "O save me for Thy mercies sake." For in death there is no remembrance of Thee; in the grave (sheol), who shall give Thee thanks?" Evidently David was expecting to go to the grave, but desired that his life might be prolonged for a time and promised that the result would be to the Lord's praise. His argument is plain—that if he went to the grave he should neither praise God or serve Him. There is no suggestion in his words of an eternity of torture or that he thought of going there.

We see that Justice condemned our race to death—to the tomb—to destruction. We see that our Lord Jesus died for the deliverance of mankind from destruction. In view of this redemption death is not spoken of in the Scriptures as annililiation, but is frequently called asleep, and a thought is given that a general awakening shall take place in the morning of the next age, the millennium. Under another figure this death state, the tomb, sheol, hades, is described as a great prison-house, in which all who die are figuratively represented as prisoners, bound hand and foot unable to release themselves. Our Lord Jesus, by his death, is declared in the Scriptures to have secured the key of this prison-house—the authority, the control of all the prisoners, to do with them as He may please.

Our Lord referred to this prison when He quoted the words of the Prophet Isaiah and applied them to Himself, declaring that He would open the prison doors and set at liberty the captives. (Isa. 61:11; Luke 4:18). Our Lord made no attempt to open the prison doors. At the very time he made use of these words John the Baptist was languishing in prison, and our Lord made no effort to deliver him. His work is a greater one—the deliverance of all that are in the grave. This work He declares He will accomplish at His second coming. His words are, "The hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth." (John 5:28, 29, R. V.). The saints, the holy, will come forth to glorious perfection in what is known as the chief resurrection; the remainder of mankind will come forth to enjoy the blessed privileges and opportunities of the millennial age in which the judgment of the Lord will be abroad in the earth, causing the inhabitants to learn righteousness.

After our Lord's resurrection and ascension He sent a message to His people in which He declared: "I am He that was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore and have the keys of death and hades, (grave)." This is in keeping with the entire scriptural proposition that the dead are not in bliss, neither in torment, but dead, and needing an awakening by resurrection promised by the Redeemer.

Thus seen, your friends and relatives and neighbors as well as mine—the world in general—have been going to hell, into death, into the tomb, for the past 6000 years. If we follow the guidance of the inspired word, we know just where they are, and hear the divine message saying, "The dead know not anything." More than this, we hear the same word declaring that all in the grave shall come forth—as Job expressed it: "Thou shall call and I will answer Thee; Thou wilt have a desire to the work of Thine hands."—Job. 14:15.

Thus the Lord assures us of the deliverance of all from the Adamic death penalty, because Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man—to be testified to in due time.

While we do find in the Scriptures a universal redemption from the universal curse or death sentence, we also find that those released from the Adamic sentence will all be required to stand trial, each on his own account. No longer will the race lie under condemnation. The individual trial which will come to each will be decisive. Those who will obey the voice of that great Teacher shall live—everlastingly under blessed conditions. Those who will neglect or refuse to avail themselves of the great privileges thus secured to them through Christ will die the second death—be annihilated, be utterly destroyed without hope, for Christ dieth no more. One redemption and one full opportunity based upon it all is all that God's word proposes. It is sufficient. Any who will not choose righteousness and hate iniquity under the favorable conditions which the Lord proposes for their trial will surely be unworthy of the gift of God, eternal life.

Those who have the ears and eyes of faith, and are blessed with ability to grasp the evidences of divine favor in Christ at the present time are especially blessed. He that hath an ear let him hear; let him not wait for the blessings of the future. We who now hear and obey may make our calling and election sure to a part in the heavenly kingdom to glory, honor and immortality as spirit beings join theirs with our Redeemer. This blessing for the world is to reach it during the millennial age, through the agency of the "little flock," the "saints," whom God is selecting during this gospel age. The general blessings of the world will be very great, indeed, but not comparable to those provided for the "elect." I urge that so many of us as have the ear and eye of faith lay aside every weight and run with patience in the race, that we may make our calling and election sure to the greatest blessings placed within our reach.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMON

As will be seen in another column Pastor Russell's sermon is published as usual, and one will be published every week from now on. These are taken from our back files, and we believe we are the only paper that has them.

Also another new feature will be added next week. We have obtained permission to run in serial form Pastor Russell's "DIVINE PLAN OF THE AGES." Tell your friends about this, as we will all have to pull together until other arrangements are made.

THE PHOTO-DRAMA.

The thrd producton of the Photo-Drama of Creation was produced at the Lyceum Theater, this city, Sunday night. Like the two previous productions, the house was crowded, standing room only. Next Sunday night the fourth or last part will be produced, and we look for a large audience on that occasion.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Owing to the death of Pastor C. T. Russell, the weekly sermon will be discontinued for the present. The Tribune, however, will publish until further arrangements are made, a sermon delivered by Pastor Russell. These sermons will be taken from our back files and will make very interesting reading.

HIMSELF.

Once it was a blessing, now it is the Lord,
Once it was the feeling, now it is His Word,
Once His gifts I wanted, now Himself alone,
Once I sought for healing, now the Healer's own.

Once 'twas painful trying, now 'tis perfect trust.
Once a half revelation, now the uttermost.
Once 'twas ceaseless holding, now He holds me fast.
Once 'twas constant drifting, now my anchor's cast.

Once 'twas busy planning, now 'tis trustful prayer.
Once 'twas anxious caring, now He has the care.
Once 'twas what I wanted, now what Jesus says,
Once 'twas constant asking, now 'tis ceaseless praise.

Once it was my working, His is hense shall be!
Once I tried to use Him, now He uses me.
Once the Power I wanted, now the might one.
Once I worked for glory, now His will alone.
And my hopes are anchored safe within the veil. A. B.

Appreciations

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 4.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find money order for which please renew my subscription for another year. Please pardon me for being a little late; the time slipped by. I see my subscription ran out Oct. 22, 1916.

Since having my money order made out the news has reached us that our dearly beloved pastor has passed beyond the veil, "His labors are ended here and his works do follow." What an incentive to be more faithful in the Lord. The Truth and the brethren how loyal, how zealous, we must be. I hope that the Tribune will continue to publish all the helps for our upbuilding in the most holy faith, praying the blessing of the Lord upon you and the efforts you are making to spread the Truth.

Sincerely yours in the Master's service.

EDITH E. A. MORROW.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 11.

Words fail me when I try to express to you my deep gratitude for your ministry of service in publishing the wonderful sermons of him—'who shall long be remembered by what he hath done.' Nobly and grandly indeed have you unfurled the standards of truth and righteousness for these many years, and I know our dear, good Father—"too wise to err and too good to be unkind" shall in His own time and way, reward you abundantly. We shall miss these heart-cheering, these soul-reviving, these wonderful words of life, but on the other hand are indeed very thankful that in our Heavenly Father's Providence He saw fit to permit us to taste of these good things at all. It is the dear Lord who gave us all and it is also He who now has taken this Beloved One from our midst.

Thanking you for giving me this information at your earliest convenience I remain,

Very truly yours,

A FURNITURE CASE IN COURT.

A Jury Must Decide if Trickery Was Practised by a Purchaser.

An information was made before Alderman James J. Kirby by James Coons, representing the Globe Furniture Company. The offense complained of was "obtaining goods by trickery." It was admitted that the Globe Furniture Company had received forty dollars as a deposit on a walnut bed-room suite. It was alleged they delivered to Kirschbaum a second-hand or used bed-room suite and admitted that the leather was not genuine leather.

Kirschbaum refused to give up the furniture which he held as security until the suite he said he had bought had been delivered or his forty dollars returned to him.

The National Labor Tribune had its attorney, A. M. Lee, defend Mr. Kirschbaum. After the above facts had been testified to Attorney Lee announced that the defendant was ready to give bail for court if the Globe Furniture Company wanted Mr. Kirschbaum held. Those interested in the case expressed the opinion that no grounds had been established on which the defendant should be held for court. Mr. Coons demanded that the defendant be held and bail was immediately given. The alderman, Kirby, did not ask that bail in the sum of one thousand dollars, be furnished, as is usually required in such cases, but accepted bail in the sum of three hundred dollars.

Kirschbaum was notified that the case would be called for trial in the County Court Friday.

Much interest is being shown in this case.

VIRGINIA, Minn., Nov. 7, 1916.

National Labor Tribune,

Mr. J. H. Vitchestain, Editor:

As a writer upon industry and the human element therein, I have been requested by the Defense Committee in this locality, to give to the Tribune, the news and developments before and during trial.

The conviction last year, of John Lawson in Colorado, and numerous other cases, brings to view the importance of this present case, in which the most able attorneys the defense can procure, have promised that here will be decided the abolition or continuance, as a precedent, of the Chicago Anarchist Decision of 1887; the same precedent used in convicting Lawson, whose ultimate freedom is on appeal and will undoubtedly be affected by the breaking down of this outrageous precedent at this trial.

If you understand this, I know you will see the need for all to know of this case—a clean-cut labor case.

The big press associations are going to cover the trial and some of the leading magazines will devote space to the case.

The workers in jail accused of murder are Carlo Tresca, Joe Schmidt, Sam Scarlett, Mrs. Phil. Masonovitch, Phil. Masonovitch, Joe Nikich, Joe Cernogorovich and John Orlandich. The accuser is the U. S. Steel Trust and the trials start December 1.

We seldom consider the plights of others unless placed, in fancy at least, in their situations. Suppose, for instance, you chalk off a space in your room seven feet square, lower the ceiling to eight feet, imagine three walls and the ceiling are solid steel, the floor of reinforced concrete, the fourth side shut off from a gloomy corridor by crossed bars of steel. That you were under lock and key in this space day and night with two or three others. Thus girt round with metal you would, among other things, be impressed with the importance of steel in structural work.

When you stretched out your narrow canvas from wall to wall at night, and sleep o'er-came you, no doubt but your dream visions would reflect the hope of your waking hours; the hope of release, to walk and work again among your fellows, to be free to labor, to laugh and to love.

Such is the situation this day and hour, of seven men in the county jail at Duluth, Minnesota; under indictment for murder as result of a recent strike on the Mesaba Range. The wife of one is also indicted, but out on bail. All await trial December Fifth.

If you believe as do these men; that you were there because of your efforts to improve labor conditions by functioning in a great strike, guilty of no crime but opposing organized capital in that strike; you would doubtless like the world of labor to hear your story.

Here then in brief, is their story; as substantiated by investigators of the Industrial Relations Committee and the Minnesota Labor Commission; revealed by hundreds of affidavits and endorsed by the State Federations of labor of both Michigan and Minnesota.

The Mesaba Range produces 65 per cent of the nation's output of iron. It is controlled absolutely by the U. S. Steel Corporation, whose hostility to labor is infamous. In bygone years it imported workers from all nations to aid in keeping labor divided. Since the lost strike nine years ago, conditions grew worse day by day. Working per diem or by contract, your pay grew less and less; without you had a roll of bills, a pretty daughter or a handsome wife to turn over to the greed and lust of foremen.

A climax came. June 2nd last, a strike began at Aurora, spreading rapidly across the range. A mass of revolting workers, speaking many tongues; downed tools in every camp, without organization or spokesman. Someone among them sent for Carlo Tresca (Italian), Joe Schmidt (Slavic), and Sam Scarlet; to speak and organize. These came and worked night and day instructing the miners how to express themselves in a compact union body. They offered to leave the state when the operators would agree to confer with the men; but the operators, "had nothing to arbitrate."

Hundreds of gunmen of the usual type were imported by the Steel Trust and deputized. Over six hundred arrests were made on all sorts of pretexts. John Allar, an un-armed striker, was killed; shot in the back near his humble home. Many were beaten and wounded. All constitutional rights were revoked.

On July 3rd, four drunken deputies rushed into the home of Phillip Masonovich at Biwabik. One struck his wife, knocking her down. Her husband and three boarders, although un-armed, sprang up to defend her. In the fight that followed a deputy was killed; shot, as evidence indicates, by another in the confusion. Besides the occupants of the house, including the woman and her tiny baby; all the organizers on the range were gathered up, sent by special train to Duluth and charged with murder.

Despite discouragements the strike went on till late September, when the miners voted to resume work and devote all energy to the defense of their wrongly accused brothers.

They have engaged Judge O. N. Hilton of Denver, Arthur LeSueur of Ft. Scott and John A. Keyes of Duluth to head the counsel for the defense. A most momentous legal battle will soon begin, when these clash with the vindictive power of the Steel Trust.

And, as I write; in Joe Schmidt's Pennsylvania home, a wasted baby form lies in a little coffin; a babe that never knew its father—one of those men in the small steel cells at Duluth; where the chill winds from Lake Superior whistle around the prison, the abode always provided by capital for a rebellious worker.

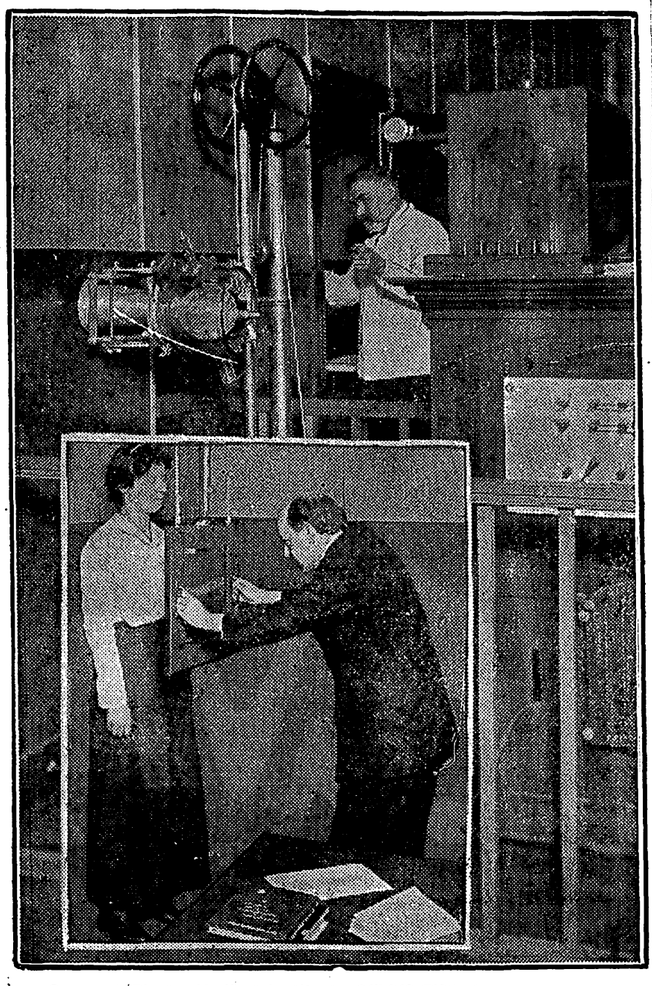
FAMOUS DOCTORS MAKE FREE OFFER

EXAMINATION INCLUDES FREE X-RAY, BLOOD PRESSURE TEST AND CHEMICAL ANALYSIS AT ELECTRO-MEDICAL INSTITUTE, 347-349 FIFTH AVE.



Scene at Electro-Medical Institu te, 347-349 Fifth Avenue. Actual Photograph of X Ray Examina tion Being Made Through Wall—Patient is Standing Opposite X -Ray Tube Within Consultation Room as Shown i n Small Insert Picture.

Free consultation, advice and examination, including the X-Ray Chemical Analysis and Blood Pressure Test Such is the offer made by The Electro-Medical Doctors to the sick and ailing who call upon them during the next seven days.

The Electro-Medical Doctors' object in making this offer is to give every sufferer a chance to know what can be done with the wonderful new Electro-Medical System of Treatment in his or her own particular case.

The examination is the most important part of the proceeding when a sick person calls upon The Electro-Medical Doctors. Whilst it is entirely free to those calling at the Institute during the next seven days, yet it is as accurate as if the patient had paid the regular examination charges in full. The most delicate man, woman or child need have no fear either of the X-Ray or of the electrical treatments, as they are harmless, painless and safe in the hands of experts.

The diagnostic and treatment apparatus used by The Electro-Medical Doctors are many. The machines—delicate and intricate electrical devices—find the cause of the trouble with astounding accuracy. The Electro-Medical Doctors daily prove the fact that science has so modified and tamed electricity that the weakest child or invalid can stand its force without the slightest fear or pain. The forces of electricity are sent through the body into every tissue and fibre without the patient experiencing the slightest sensation, except relief. One apparatus sprays electricity through the body, absorbing fibrous and decayed tissues, there being thousands of volts going through the body—yet the patient only experiences a sensation as of standing in a ray of sunshine. After the treatment the patient feels like a normal, healthy person on an ideal spring morning. No garments need be removed and no embarrassment is engendered.

Modern electrical treatments have no comparison with the old crude electric batteries and shocking currents. At The Electro-Medical Institute the current that lights homes and runs street cars is used and is harnessed to the wonderful machines by which every jar and jerk is removed and it is then sent through the body as softly, smoothly and pleasantly as a ray of sunshine. At this institute such treatments are given as the X-Ray, high frequency, D'Arsonval, Dia-thermic, Oudin, Tesla, Static, Induced, Morton Wave Current, Positive and Negative Crown Breeze, Galvanic, Faradic, Sinusoidal, Combined Galvanic and Faradic, Auto Induction, Auto Condensation and other currents, also Vibratory treatment, Ultra Violet Ray, Actinic light treatment, Ozone inhalation, medicated inhalation, in addition to many other treatments; the cost of which is so moderate that it is no longer the privilege of the rich only, but the poor and those in moderate circumstances as well.

While there is no sensation of the high voltage current going through the body, the patient may become aware of the force in his system by the doctor touching him and drawing out a string of sparks from any part of the body or igniting a sheet of paper from the body—or even illuminating an electric globe in his hand—all the time the patient feels nothing.

The effects of electrical treatments are marvelously rapid. Relief can be given in one or more treatments whilst often a cure is accomplished in the milder cases in the same time.

No force is so uniformly potent n relieving and eliminating human ills as electricity in the hands of experts who understand the use of the currents. It is the only remedy upon which all human beings can rely. It is positive and certain in action. If you value your life—your health—and want to keep your looks, and gain vitality and are tired of drugging, then throw away medicine bottles that may contain strong drugs or poisons and take the modern treatment used by The Electro-Medical Doctors, which is within the reach of all sufferers. The treatment that has snatched many from near death—from a life of pain and suffering. For each and every disease there is a definite electrical current which treats conditions—not symptoms. Electricity works with nature—not against it. It reaches sick spots which medicines do not reach and it causes no pain, no sickness—no bad taste. Every day you delay brings you nearer the incurable stage.

Among the ailments treated by The Electro-Medical Doctors are anemia, asthma, biliousness, bladder and blood troubles, catarrh, cystitis, constipation, dropsy, deafness, dyspepsia, epilepsy, eczema, female troubles, stomach gases, gall-stones, gastritis, goitre, heart weakness, hysteria, headaches, heartburn, intestinal troubles, insomnia, kidney trouble, liver complaints, weak lungs, nervous debility, obesity, paralysis, hemmorrhoids, psoriasis, rectal troubles, rheumatism, rupture, stomach trouble, scalp diseases and other diseases of women and men.

The office hours announced at the Institute are daily from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m., and Sundays, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

The Electro-Medical Institute occupies the complete second oor of the Cameraphone Theater Bldg. at 347-349 Fifth ave. (Opposite Fank & Seder's store).

Funeral of Pastor C. T. Russell

The great city of Pittsburgh has seen many funerals within the past two decades and many that actually astonished the people for the vast crowds who turned out to observe the funeral procession or view the corpse but not within the memory of the people has such a large funeral been seen as that of the late Pastor Charles T. Russell which took place Monday, November 6.

It was very apparent that Pastor Russell's fame was even unlike the prophet not only had it extended all around the world but the people of the city of his birth had been gripped by his marvelous popularity and the renown which he had earned even against those who assailed him for his teachings.

In order to supply the demands made by those who desired to join the funeral procession or follow the body to the grave almost every available automobile in the great city of Pittsburgh was brought into action, and in order to still meet the needs special arrangements had to be entered into with the Pittsburgh Railways Company to supply special cars to carry those who could not secure accommodations in carriages or automobiles. Sad as was the scene of those who came to pay their everlasting farewell as far as this mundane and benighted sphere is concerned yet it was a splendid tribute to the late Pastor Charles T. Russell, who began his career in the greatest industrial city in the world and now rests there in peace.

Funeral services were held in Carnegie Music Hall, North Side, and the interment was made in the United cemeteries, West View. A number of prominent men accompanied the body to this city, among them were the following pilgrims: V. Menta Sturgeon, J. D. Wright, P. S. L. Johnson, I. F. Hoskins, J. G. Kuehne, A. H. McMillan, E. D. Burgess and A. Bauerlein, all of New York City, and W. L. Jones, Chicago; Horace Blinn, Cincinnati, and William Hersee, Ontario, Can.

The active pall-bearers were: R. H. Bricker, Samuel McComb, W. H. Moore, E. F. Williams, Charles A. Saunders and Joseph Clarkson.

The honorary pallbearers were: Dr. W. E. Spill, J. V. Causer, Thomas Good, George Wazenegger, James Hettenbaugh, Charles H. Stewart, Edward Mauer, J. A. Bohnet, E. M. Whan, E. W. Keib, and W. E. Coates, all of whom are elders of the Pittsburgh congregation of the International Bible Students' association.

The services were conducted by Charles A. Saunders, R. H. Bricker and Dr. William E. Spill, of Pittsburgh, members of the International Bible Students' association, Pilgrim Menta Sturgeon, of New York City, and Charles H. Stewart, of Pittsburgh.

The floral emblems were many and came from almost every part of the country.

"TOM TRACY" IS DEAD.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Thomas F. Tracy, secretary of the Union Label Trades department, A. F. of L., and vice president of the Cigarmakers' International union, died at his home in this city, last Saturday, after an illness covering several months.

The remains were interred Wednesday. The A. F. of L. building was closed during the day. The funeral services were attended by all the resident officials of the A. F. of L. and its departments and a large number of trade union officials from the east and middle west.

The active pallbearers were President Perkins of the International Cigarmakers' union and the following executives of the Union Label Trades department: Secretary-Treasurer Hays International Typographical union; International Secretary Proebstle, International Union of the United Brewery Workmen; President Thomas Ricket, United Garment Workers of America; President McAndrews, Tobacco Workers' International union, and Secretary-Treasurer Fisher, Journeymen Barbers' International union.

Members of Washington Lodge No. 15, Benevolent and Protective Order or Elks acted as honorary pallbearers.

Standing beside the grave, President Gompers said the last farewell to this lifelong trade unionist and his friend and intimate who had remained true to a plighted faith. "No man of my acquaintance had a more penetrating mind, was more devoted to a principle, more unflinching in his courage than Thomas F. Tracy," said President Gompers.

Deceased was president of Boston Cigarmakers' union, vice president of the International Cigarmakers' union for over 15 years; legislative committeeman of the A. F. of L.; general organizer of the A. F. of L. and the first secretary of the Union Label Trades department. His wife died two years ago. Four children survive.

Thomas F. Tracy was a Spartan in his adherence to the cause of trade unionism and was numbered among the early pioneers who builded the present trade union structure. While others might waver when the ship occasionally reeled under attacks from within and without, "Tom" Tracy's loyalty was never questioned. He was a trade unionist, first and last, and was uncompromising in his belief that the trade union movement was the only hope for better conditions and a fuller life for those who toil.

WON SHORTER HOURS.

FROM MELITA TO ROME

Acts 28:11-24, 30, 31.—November 19.

The Journey to Rome Accomplished. Meeting With the Brethren—Fresh Evidences of Brotherly Love—St. Paul Calls Together the Leaders Amongst the Jews at Rome—The Gospel Proclaimed and Expounded.

"I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Romans 1:16.

EARLY in the following spring Centurion Julius and his soldiers sailed from Melita with St. Paul and the other prisoners, Luke and Aristarchus accompanying the Apostle. The voyage was effected without special incident, the landing being made at Puteoli, the seaport of Rome, which is one hundred and fifty miles inland. Here they tarried seven days, the centurion awaiting orders from Rome respecting the disposal of his prisoners.

The delay afforded St. Paul an opportunity to meet with a little band of Christians residing at Puteoli. Doubtless he sent word to the Christians residing at Rome, whom he repeatedly declared that he longed to meet and whom the Lord promised that he should meet. The journey to Rome was made on foot. En route the Apostle was frequently cheered by evidences of the Christian love of the brethren. Some of these met him at Appii Forum, forty-three miles distant from Rome; and another delegation met him at The Three Taverns, thirty miles from the great city. Doubtless the brethren came on the journey for their own refreshment and joy, not realizing, perhaps, that the Apostle needed this evidence of love.

En Route to Rome.

"In His Own Hired House."

The fact that there were no charges of an evil character against St. Paul, and the further fact that the centurion who had him in charge during the voyage became his friend, were quite sufficient reasons why he should not be treated as an ordinary prisoner, but should be permitted to live in his own hired house under the care of a soldier to whom he was lightly chained. However, although not permitted to go at liberty, nevertheless he was able to receive his friends and others who called upon him.

It is difficult to estimate how much Divine providence had to do with these arrangements. Moreover, the soldier on guard was changed every few hours, so that probably the Apostle came into close contact with at least six soldiers daily. Thus gradually he probably had contact with the entire imperial guard. Thus many were brought into contact with Christian teaching and example. It is claimed that through some of these soldiers the Gospel was carried to France, Germany and even Great Britain. St. Paul must have had some financial means. It is assumed that by this time he had come into his patrimony. The Scriptures intimate that Felix held him captive at Caesarea in hope of receiving a bribe for his release, evidently having some information respecting St. Paul's finances.

The Lord's servant was not slow in using his God-given privileges. First of all he met the Christian brethren. But, as early as the third day after his arrival, he sent for the Jewish leaders and officers of the synagogues, of which there were seven in Rome. He desired to give them information at first-hand respecting his presence there as a prisoner and to preach to them the Gospel. He explained that, although a prisoner at the instance of the Jews in Palestine, he was not disloyal to his nation or its customs. He had been pronounced innocent at the Roman Court there, but had been compelled to appeal to Caesar for his safety, although even then he was making no accusation against his countrymen. He then proposed that gladly would he explain to them the good news that the long-expected Messiah had come.

The response was that the Jewish leaders at Rome had received no communication injurious to the Apostle. Then they expressed a desire to hear for themselves what he had to say; for they had heard of this sect and knew that everywhere it was denounced as evil. If he could say anything favorable to it, they would hear him.

"Preaching the Kingdom of God."

On the appointed day the Jews came to hear the Apostle's Message. From morning until evening he demonstrated from the Law and the Prophets that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah; that He is now gathering a Spiritual Seed of Abraham to be His joint-heirs in the Kingdom; and that when this company is complete, they will be glorified in the First Resurrection and then will begin the work of blessing all.

Preaching the Kingdom.

When some refused the Message, the Apostle sought to influence the believing ones by quoting from the Prophet Isaiah, showing that God had foretold that the majority of the Jews would reject the Message when it should come to them. He did not mean that those deaf to the Gospel would be eternally tormented, but that they would lose the wonderful privilege of becoming joint-heirs with Jesus in His Millennial Kingdom.

THE EMPLOYERS' LABOR BUREAU GETTING JOBS

Unions Refuse to Let the Employer Help So as to Keep the Business Agent in a Job and Make Him the Master of the Slave.

By A. J. ALLEN

Secretary Associated Employers of Indianapolis before the National Association of Employment Managers.

Local employment bureaus are of mutual advantage to employer and employee and are the shortest cut between supply and demand.

Employers found they could not obtain competent help through "private pay agencies." Workers of the higher class are not inclined to pay for the privilege of hunting work. The "agencies" which are not under State supervision merely promise to "assist" the applicant; they do not guarantee to get him a job. If he succeeds in finding work himself, this does not secure for him the return of his fee.

Newspaper advertising for help wanted did not secure the desired results. Of those laborers who answered such advertisements many were perhaps unsuited in various ways for the work offered, resulting in a waste of time and effort on the part of foremen or others in giving unnecessary interviews to a conglomeration of more or less unqualified applicants.

This led employers to conceive the idea of establishing their own employment bureaus in connection with the numerous trade, civic, and other business organizations throughout the country. These bureaus are all in charge of regularly paid secretaries of the various associations, who may be considered as direct personal representatives of association members.

In discussing the operative policies of local employment offices, let us take for example the two bureaus which for the past 10 years have been conducted in conjunction with each other in the same office by the Associated Employers of Indianapolis and the Indianapolis branch of the National Metal Trades Association, respectively.

By way of explanation, let me state that the Associated Employers of Indianapolis is an organization local in its scope, including in its membership several hundred employers, representing widely diversified interests and practically every branch of commercial and industrial activity in the city. The National Metal Trades Association, as its name implies, is national in scope and comprises a membership of almost 1,000 representative employers in the metal manufacturing line.

The National Metal Trades Association has 14 branches in various large industrial centers. These branches conduct local employment bureaus in the following cities: Springfield, Worcester, and Boston, Mass.; Hartford and New Haven, Conn.; Cleveland and Cincinnati, Ohio; Chicago and Moline, Ill.; Providence, R. I.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; St. Louis, Mo., New York, N. Y., and Indianapolis, Ind.

These bureaus charge no fee to employer or applicant. Their combined registration of several hundred thousand workers would practically be impossible of duplication by any individual manufacturer without extraordinary expense and painstaking labor. This registration is largely dependent upon the power of the bureaus to place their applicants. In order to make them popular institutions, places must be found for those who apply.

Applicants come to these bureaus either in response to advertisements or upon the recommendation of employers, or by reason of their having been referred to the office by workmen whom the bureaus have assisted, and from whom many letters of thanks and appreciation have been received. Many of the association members have assisted in making the bureau efficient by posting in conspicuous places about their establishments large placards stating that preference would be given to applicants who present cards of introduction from the employment bureau maintained by the association.

Several of the largest association members hire practically all their help through these bureaus. One of them recently stated that during a given period of time only five workers, out of a total of 1,200 who applied at the shop, were employed without coming from the bureau. This indicates the value of a bureau registration card to the man in quest of work. The place it holds in the workers' estimation is indicated by the frequent requests made at the office for these introduction cards by applicants who state that, at this or that place, they have noticed that persons presenting these cards are given employment, while those standing in the same line who do not have them are told to step aside. This is because the employer feels reasonably sure that the worker with the card is more or less suited for the job and hence no lengthy interview is necessary. The capabilities of the man who does not present a card are doubtful and he must await the employer's opportunity to interview him.

Thus the wage earners are taught that instead of trusting to

WARNING.

The City of Pittsburgh is infested with all kinds of fakirs doing business in the roll of ligitimate business houses and people are warned to be guarded in the purchase of Jewelry, Furs, Furniture, and look out for articles offered at auction.

Never was the city visited by a more cunning, thieving aggregation than the fake jeweler, the fake fur dealer, the fake furniture man and the fake auctioneer. The purchasers in the auction houses are what the police call "Cappers." They bid up the article to a certain price and when it gets beyond that price the "Sucker" gets it. When the price is not high enough the article is knocked down to the "Capper." The bell sheep of the crooks. Beware! Beware! They all play their game very successfully. Keep out of these traps which are on every street. Watch next week's Tribune for the expose of the fakir.

MACHINISTS' STRIKE AT MILWAUKEE NOW OFF

Employers of a Large Number of Plants Vote to Return to Work--Other Plants Working at Normal Capacity

The machinists' strike at Milwaukee is practically over. A large number of men have lost work and nobody has benefitted but the agitators who stirred up the trouble. No concessions were made by the firms. The men returned under the same conditions as existed before the strike. An official investigation showed these conditions to be fair and equitable.

The strike was called July 18th, and for three weeks the men were drawn out in different shops, one at a time. The first actual break, so far as the men returning is concerned, occurred on September 12, when the employes of one of the largest shops voted to go back to work. A week later the employes of two other large shops did likewise, and within another week, eight other concerns followed suit.

In some ten shops the strike still technically exists. Two of these are operating to 100 per cent capacity. The other eight are at practically normal capacity.

In attempting to coerce the proprietors and the independent workmen, the union resorted to the usual violence and intimidation. There have been about fifty arrests for assault and battery, most of the cases being still in the courts.

Under the Riot Statute the county is liable for damages inflicted by a riotous gathering if the sheriff or other county officers cannot disperse the mob. As a consequence, Henry Ratajski, a 17-year-old boy, has sued the county under this statute for $5,000 for injuries received during one of these disturbances. The complaint alleges that through an attack by a mob, the boy lost three teeth, and suffered numerous cuts and bruises.

MORE VIOLENCE.

The chauffeur's union, in its attempt to force the closed shop the Atlas Motor Company of Chicago, is pursuing the orthodox closed shop union methods. The daily press reports two recent instances where women riding in Atlas cabs have been badly injured by missiles thrown through the windows. In one of the cases, Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, a bride on her wedding journey, was knocked unconscious by a stone hurled through the cab window. Another favorite method employed by the union drivers in their misionary work is to throw lighted bombs beneath taxicabs driven by independent chauffeurs.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT.

Walter W. Lower, former chief cost accountant of the Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Co., Pittsburgh, has been appointed secretary of the National Association of Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturers, recently organized by virtually all the independent sheet and tin plate manufacturers in the country. Before becoming identified with the Pittsburgh Crucible company, Mr. Lower was connected with the Lackawanna Steel Co., Buffalo. Officers of the National Asociation of Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturers are: President, W. S. Horner, Pittsburgh representative of the American Rolling Mill Co., Middletown, O.; vice president, Joseph B. Andrews, Newport Rolling Mill Co., Newport, Ky.; secretary, Mr. Lower, who has offices in the Oliver building, Pittsburgh.

Women Munition Workers' Schools.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—On several occasions recently I have mentioned the great influx of women into industry. Now I hear that the Munitions Department is very shortly going to open a large training school for women munition workers not very far from London, and that this will be devoted to making metal parts of aircraft. This is, I believe, new work for women, who have hitherto in aircraft factories chiefly worked on wood fabrics, but it is now realized that they are quite able to do the delicate accurate work of making the queerly shaped fittings of the metal body. They will be wanted immediately in all the factories from which large numbers of men are being drawn off and I understand that the existing training schools for women munitioners in London—there are very few of them—are also going to train for aircraft works.

These schools have passed a large number of women through their classes since they were first started early in 1915, but they find that, while the demand is greater than ever the supply is decreasing, because women are now engaged in the manufacture of practically every sort of army equipment, from saddles to mess-tins. They have done very well in the schools, and, curiously enough, it has been found that women who have never done anything but housework before have taken to the lathes as successfully as women who have previously had some handicraft, and that elderly women often pick it up as quickly as young girls. In fact one class reckoned among its star pupils a woman of nearly fifty, whose whole care had hitherto been to look after her home and her eight children.

The new war time spirit of labor revealed in the Trades Union Congress at Birmingham early in September—the spirit of repugnance towards industrial strife and readiness to negotiate a treaty of peace with capital—has found practical expression in the opening of communications between the Parliamentary Committee of the Congress and the Employers' Parliamentary Committee with a view to the joint discussion of the problems of industrial readjustment after the war. The Congress Committee, I am informed, have asked the Employers' Committee to meet them the next time the latter Committee, which has its headquarters in Manchester, finds itself in London, in order to consider the resolutions on post-war problems passed by the Birmingham Congress. The employers' committee have agreed to the meeting, but no date for holding it has been fixed.

The leaders of the organized labor movement have taken this important step in obedience to a direct mandate from 600 delegates representing upwards of 2,850,000 trade unionists who attended the Congress. One of the numerous resolutions passed by the Congress contained the following declarations:

"In view of the importance of maintaining the trade and commerce of the country in the period immediately following the declaration of peace, when industrial adjustments of all kinds will require to be made, this Congress is of the opinion that every effort should be put forth to preserve industrial peace, and thereby assist to secure the material prosperity of the nation after the war. That, for the purpose of removing causes of friction likely to lead to industrial disturbances, the Parliamentary Committee is hereby instructed to approach Government and the Employers' Parliamentary Committee with the object of discussing terms that will secure the end in view for a period of three years."

The resolution went on to specify certain proposals, among them a 48-hour working week, compulsory membership of trade unions, and a $7.50 minimum wage for all adult workers, which should be accepted as part of the terms of peace; but it was explained by the sponsor of the resolution (T. E. Naylor, of the London Society of Compositors) that these proposals were really put forward to serve as a basis of negotiation and not as irreducible demands. The resolution quoted, it will be noticed directed the Congress Committee to approach the Government as well as the Employers' Committee, and it may be anticipated that they will carry out that part of the instructions also, if they have not already done so.

Neil Primrose, writing from the Ministry of Munitions under date of October 27 says:

"I hope you will allow me to correct an impression that the Clyde workers are now working overtime because

COLLEGE PROFESSOR ON THE RAILROAD CRISIS

We Should Not Grant the Demands of Any Set of Men Merely Because They Threaten Great Damage if We Refuse.

The following letter from Professor Taussig and the editorial reference to it are reprinted from the New York "Evening Post" of September 2, 1916. Mr. Taussig is professor of economics at Harvard University and Editor of the Quarterly Journal of Economics.

To comment on it would be superfluous. Its points are simple, direct, and vital. They deal not with the sinuosities of a special situation, nor with the perplexities of a particular economic problem, but with principles as broad and as fundamental as democratic government itself. To the force which inherently belong to what Professor Taussig says in his letter must be added all the weight which attaches to his eminent position as an economist and to his almost unique reputation as an impartial, mature and human thinker on the great question of industrial society. When the present flurry is over and men's minds settle down to a clear and sober judgment of what has been taking place, the view expressed in Professor Taussig's letter will be registered as the general verdict of the nation."

To the Editor of The Evening Post:—

With profound regret and disappointment, I enter a protest against the way in which President Wilson, and apparently Congress, following the President's lead, dealt with the railroad strike situation.

I protest because the policy is one of surrender. We are told the business of the country must go on, that arbitration has failed, that such a situation must not be allowed to develop again, but that now we are helpless. What does this mean? That a body of men may call on society to stand and deliver, and that society must submit. This is a cowardly attitude, and moreover one that invites contiued recurrence of the same fatality. The men will naturally smother or put off the measures designed to prevent recurrence; they will keep themselves in the same dominating position. A machinery for arbitration is in existence now. It has been very lately remodelled in accordance with the very wishes of the railroad brotherhoods. But they will not allow it to be used nor will they agree to any other that is suggested. The same attitude is sure to be taken in the future. If we submit to the threat of ruin now, we may be certain that the same threat under the same essential conditions will be enforced again and again; and not only by these men but by any and every body of men who happen to be stationed at vital industrial points.

The justice of the men's demands is not material in such an emergency as the present. Nobody pretends that there is any obvious crying injustice, any intolerable evil which cannot be endured for a moment. My general sympathy is with the eight-hour movement. Whether this particular demand for an eight hour day, for these men under these proposed conditions, ought to be granted, I do not undertake to say. It is precisely the matter on which impartial investigation is needed. But one's attitude on the eight-hour movement is not material. The essential question is: Shall any body of men be permitted to secure their demands by threatening society with a complete breakdown of industry.

I say permitted—shall they be encouraged? The attitude of the Government has been one to encourage the policy of rule or ruin. We are told that a crisis of this kind must not be allowed to come again, which is an admission that it ought not to be allowed to come now. President Wilson's wise course would have been to urge the men, as well as the railroads to get together; to tell the brotherhood leaders, not that the country was helpless before them, but that he would publicly urge their members to remain at work, and would call on the entire community to stand by them in fulfilling their duties, and that a board of arbitration, or a Congressional commission, or Congress itself, could and should be trusted to consider their demands with equity. No one can predict with certainty what effect such a course would have had in heading off a strike, or in preventing it from strangling the country if not headed off; but something of this sort would alone have been consistent with the principle of arbitration to which such unqualified adhesion is given. We are told—that the eight hour principle is one which "society itself or any arbitrators who represented public sentiment" would be likely to approve. Then why not urge it on the men that they should leave it for society or the arbitrators to approve and enforce, with deliberation and with careful consideration of the method of its application to the particular case.

Any organized body of men is likely to press for its own advantage, regardless or perhaps ignorant, of what its selfish action entails on the community. No body of men can be trusted to act as judges on their own demands. I hold no brief for the railroads, and would not be supposed to endorse all that their representatives have said on this controversy. But they stand now for a sound principle, and the men stand for an unsound principle. And that principle, stripped of all inessentials is: We should not grant the demands of any set of men merely because they threaten great damage if we refuse.

EVEN HUXLEY HEDGED.

Now Mr. Husley long ago discovered the blunder that had been made in applying the theory of Natural Selection to Social Evolution. He saw that the cosmis light had failed at this point, and he introduced a variation as follows: "There is another fallacy which seems to me to prevade the so-called "Ethics of Evolution". It is the notion that, because, on the whole, animals and plants have advanced in perfection of organization by means of the struggle for existence and the consequent survival of the fittest, therefore men in society men as ethical beings, must look to the same process to help them toward perfection. Social progress which may be called the ethical process. What we call goodness or virtue involves a course of conduct which in all respects is opposed to that which leads to success in the cosmic struggle for existencee.

"In place of ruthless self-assertion it demands self-restraint: in place of thrusting aside or treading down all competitors it requires that the individual shall not merely respect, but shall help his fellows. Its influence is directed not so much to the survival of the fittest, as to the fitting of as many as possible to survive. It repudiates what we call the gladiatorial theory of existence. Laws and moral precepts are directed to the end of curbing the cosmic process and reminding the individual of his duty to the community, to the protection and interest of which he owes, if not existence itself, at least the life of something better than a brutal savage."

Mr. Huxley made this discovery just as any one of us might, by a simple common-sense of observation of human nature as it works practically. He did not however, sympathetically observe all the phenomena involved and he excluded some of them for this reason. So that his theory of Social Evolution never could claim magisterial authority, simply because it is incomplete. It is no doubt a profound discovery that the altruistic principle conserves and builds up human society, while antagonism disintegrates it; that love conquers, over-rules, and fructifies the lower competitive forces, as animal life conquers, over-rules and fructifies chemical affinity or gravitation in organic development.

But it was not original with Mr. Huxley; thousands of people had seen and applied it before he was born. Jesus was the real discoverer (revealer); He first mastered the social or etheical principle. He found it to be universal good neighborhood or brotherhood, traced it to its source in God's fatherhood flooded it with Divine affection, put it into his own self-sacrificing life, and showed us how we might practically attain to it through his self. Since then the idea has been symbolized by the Cross of Christ, and has for eighteen centuries been regarded as the Christian solution,—though Christendom has too often been antagonistic to it.

Mr. Huxley asserted that this ethical process must be substituted for the cosmic process. Jesus and Paul declared it to be the supreme force in the cosmic process itself. Mr. Huxley's trouble was that he, too, fell under the great delusion of fancying that this philosophic form of truth was the final and ultimate one, and, therefore, he identified Natural Selection with the cosmic process itself; but when he followed his new light he lost his magisterial authority over the high church evolutionists; and they are, today barking at the same old tree up which they suppose their truth has climbed, though it has gone out of sight.

INTELLECTUAL MAGISTRACY WRONG.

But, whichever theory is correct, could there be a greater delusion than this sense of magistracy? Have we anything to back it up? Have we any theory on any subject which is universally accepted or can be reckoned as a final and absolute form of knowledge? Philosophy is surely an enormous help to both intellectual and moral perception, but is it possible to have a philosophy that can take the place of perception. And if it were possible, what would become of perception and of individuality and of genius, and of inventive discovery under such a predetermining influence? I would not be understood for a moment as holding these writers whom I have quoted as responsible for this tendency. We are all infected. We all take turns at it. Let us say that it is the Zeitgeist that has done it, and shake hands all round.

It ws Count Ito who said that when he was preparing the Japanese Constitution he tried to think how Buddha would look at the matter, and he added, "I think that I did succeed fairly well in getting into his skin." . . . It might be worth while if some of us would occasionally try to get outside the epidermis of our so-called modern thought, and take a straight look at the age from an exterior point of view: it need not be so far off as Buddha, but sufficiently remote to afford a good perspective. It is quite possible that from such a clear, cool height of vision our generation might seem to be, like Nebuchadnezzar, a little touched in the head.

I have selected these writers because they are strictly lobical, and, unlike some of us they do not straddle. They take the most authoritative type of Evolution, the one which most deserves to be regarded as Nature's decree, the one which Mr. Huxley styles the cosmic process, the only type of philosophy which could at the present day by any possibility be exalted to the rank of a final standard, and they think it out to the bitter end. If we have any clear cosmic torch, this is the one. They hold it high and wave it wide. By its illumination we see the column of humanity with reversed arms turning its back on all the great ideals toward which it has crawled upward in the space of hundred thousand years or so, cheapening the moral nature, and marching back without conviction of sin toward the original homunculus. This is a dark picture, certainly.

True, if we remove this cosmic torch things do not look so dark. There are at least as many people today as ever working for the interests of righteousness and peace and human brotherhood. They make fewer practical blunders, they keep the issues clearer, they utilize the results of science, they bring to the task a broader scientific knowledge, a profounder sympathy for human conditions, a greater willingness to look at all sides. Witness President Eliot'es noble contribution to a better understanding between labor and capitol. These people are putting up a stout fight for the moral nature, and they meet with much success among the plain folk. They vitalize character, for the moral nature feeds upon revelations and ideals as the body feeds upon bread.

BLIND LEADERS OF THE BLIND.

But the great difficulty with these people is that they are all fools. This does not mean that they are obliged to have guardians appointed over them; in reality, many of them are guardians of the commonwealth or community to which they belong. They are not dull in practical affairs; their foolishness consists in the fact that all their highest ideals and inspirations rest upon a so-called semi-mythical or subliminal basis which they cannot prove before this infallible tribunal that has indorsed our friend the Troglodyte. They cannot make their articles of faith square with any specific type of evolutionary dostrine, or prove their revelations to the latest type of scholarship. Our magisterial authorities are withholding a verdict on their case until the Society of Psychical Research has finished its investigations.

This lack of intellectual status gives them a phantasmal appearance, which probably caused Mr. London and Mr. Adams to overlook them altogether. Indeed, one frequently hears in intellectual circles the statement that no one today believes in such articles of faith. But it is the fools who bring practical light to the social question.

Anecdotes of Pastor Russell

The class at Sharon, Pa., held a Pastor Russell memorial service on Sunday afternoon, November 12, Mr. A. C. Wise of West Middlesex, Pa., who has been intimate with him for thirty years gave a discourse on his life and character and I report some personal anecdotes he related in describing our great leader.

About thirty years ago Brother Wise received a copy of "Food for Thinking Christians". He was a minister in the United Brethern Church, but the Truth made such an impression on him that he left the ministry and became one of the earliest and most successful colporteurs, being the means of bringing many persons into the Truth. Soon after receiving the above named booklet, he made a visit to Pastor Russell and spent from Saturday to Monday with him at his home, the Bible House family not having been started then. Before leaving Brother Wise said, "Brother Russell how did you come to discover this great system of truth?" Pastor Russell replied, using the large bay window of his parlor as a back ground for his illustration, "I found one link here, another here, another there and there. Then the thought came to me that there must be other links to fill up the gaps and make a complete chain. So I searched until I found them." He said he found two of these links by going to hear a discourse by an Adventist, namely, that man is not inherently immortal, and does not have a soul, but is a soul, and that the wages of sin is death and not eternal torment.

In describing Pastor Russell's personal traits, Brother Wise referred to his general and ready wit. Like all men with brilliant minds he liked a joke and appreciated the humerous aspect of things. Once Brother Wise called at the Bible House in Allegheny and found Pastor Russell and assistantsengaged over a large pile of letters. Brother Wise remarked, "Brother Russell you get a great many letters." "Yes," was the reply, "we even have a letter here from heaven"; of course, meaning the Bible. In the colporteur work Brother Wise had a custom of saying "Sir, are you a lover of good books," in order to introduce his subject. Pastor Russell learned of this and sometimes when he met Brother Wise his greeting as he shook hands would be, "Brother Wise are you a lover of good books?"

During the anti-slavery agitation beforethe war the slave-holders had much to say on the question 'Does a negro have a soul?" They endeavored to excuse their injustice to the Negro by trying to make out that he was not a human being. In his books Pastor Russell had demonstrated that no human being has a soul but that every human being is a soul. Once when riding on a street car a Negro boarded the car, whereupon Pastor Russell whispered, "Brother Wise, do you believe a Negro has a soul?" This was a joke that only a reader of Pastor Russell's books could understand, but it was a very witty pun upon an idea, a much higher pun of wit than a pun upon a word.

His dying request for a "Roman toga" ashe called the sheets in which he wished to be wrapped, may have been the last scintillation of his kindly, wholesome humor; his object being to lighten the burdened spirit of Brother Sturgeon, his faithful Luke, 2dTim. 4:11. He may have thought of the Roman Senators, who, when the northern barbarians took and burned the city of Rome and massacred many of the inhabitants, prepared for death by donning this white and flowing garment of office. Taking their seats in the forum they calmly awaited their fate. The barbarians were awed by the sight, thinking that perhaps they were gods. Finally overcome by curiosity a barbarian touched one of the Senators. This was an insult to his dignity and he struck the offender. Filled with rage and perceiving that they were men, the barbarians slew them all.

In illustration of the humility and graciousness of this great man, Brother Wise, related that when the trouble with Mrs. Russell came to a climax a private meeting of 150 of the brethern met by special invitation to consider the matter. Brother Wise was one of the number and went to Allegheny. Mrs. Russell had left her husband and had dismissed the help leaving them without a housekeeper and the Bible House force had to take their meals at a restaurant. Brother Wise and two others stayed over night with Pastor Russell. In the morning he arose before them and cooked them a nice breakfast with his own hands. Great man as he was, and fully convinced as he was that the Lord had called him to lead the greatest work of the Time of the End, he was ready to do a menial service for the brethern and become their cook and waiter.

A young brother in an Ohio town was very active in the harvest work. The strain became too great for his brain and while conducting a meeting he became insane. His mental derangement was quite serious. Pastor Russell's work had not become so great as it did later but he was then a very busy man with great cares on his shoulders, yet he left his work, traveled to the young man's home, stayed with him a couple of days, sleeping with him and taking care of him at night in an endeavor to clear his mind of its delusions andmania. The young brother subsequently recovered his mental health.

His zeal in preaching the Truth in those early years of the harvest is shown by the following incident. Brother Wise was once dining with him in a restaurant, Brother Russell commenced talking to Brother Wise about certain points loud and distant enough to be heard by the other diners and gave quite a little discourse. The diners listened and remained sitting after finishing their meal. When they had left he said, "I was talking to you in order to reach them."

Pastor Russell's countenance and bearing showed plainly that he was no ordinary man. About twenty years ago he gave a discourse in the Court House at Youngstown, Ohio. A man who was present afterwards said to the writer, "When Mr. Russell entered the Court room and walked down the aisle it made me feel queer; he looked so much lake Jesus Christ." A United Presbyterian minister told me that when he was a student in the Theological Seminary he once met Pastor Russell passing through the park, not then knowing who he was. So striking was his appearance that this minister turned around and watched him until he had passed out of sight.

The earthly house of his tabernacle has been dissolved. He has received the uncorruptible crown which fadeth not away, "A prince and a great man has fallen in Isreal;" but he was one of the people and kept close to them. These little anecdotes, preserved in the memory of a friend who shared the heat and burden of the early harvest day with him will help us to know him as he was.

What Scripture evidence have we that we are in the Laodicean Age, thereby proving that the Church referred to in Revelation 3, 14-8, is the system of our day?

CHARLES K. WAGNER
Minersville, Pa.

Answer:—There is very strong Scriptural proof that we are living in the Laodicean period of the church's history. We learn from Bible chronology that we are at the end of "Gentile Times." The time when the Kingdoms were to be given to "Him whose right it is," and that could not take place until the last stage of the church had done its part in developing the saints, who are to be joint heirs with Christ in His Kingdom.

The condition of the church today corresponds with the description of the church at Laodicea, as given in Revelation; just as the description of each period given in the letters to the Seven Churches in Rev. 2:3 corresponds to the condition of the church at each of those periods, as we find it on the pages of history.

First we have the message of the angel of the Church at Ephesus—angel meaning messenger, or special representative. The word Ephesus means first, or desirable, and covers the period during the lives of the Apostles.

After being commended for their works, their labors and their patience, and because they could not bear those who were evil; and tried those who said they were Apostles, and were not, but were liars; yet they were rebuked because they had left their first love.

Even at that early date a falling away was beginning to take place, as the Apostle explains, the spirit of Anti-Christ was already working. Yet they were further commended because they hated the deeds of the Nicolaitanes, which the Lord also hated.

"Unto the angel of the Church in Smyrna write: these things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive; I know thy works and tribulations and poverty, (but thou art rich); and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews and are not, but are of the synagogue of Satan. Behold the Devil shall cast some of you into prison, and ye shall have tribulation. Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a Crown of Life."

The word Smyrna means bitter and refers to the second age of the church, covering the terrible pagan persecutions, ending with the reign of Constantine.

"Unto the angel of the church in Pergamas write: These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with two edges; I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, where satan's seat is; and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where satan dwelleth."

But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast them there that hold the doctrine of Balaam, and also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes, which thing I hate."

The word Pergamas means "earthly elevation," and covers the period in which the Papal system had its rise. "Antipas," one who protests against the pope. "Doctrine of Balaam," teaching error for profit. "Nicolitanes" those who lord it over God's people. The word "Nicolans" means "a conqueror of the people." At the first period of the church they hated this doctrine, remembering that the Master said, "One is your Master, even Christ, all ye are brethren." But now they were beginning to vie with one another for the honor of "lording it over God's heritage."

"Unto the angel of the Church in Thyatira write: these things saith the Son of God, I know thy works and charity, service and faith and patience. Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which callest herself a prophetess, to teach and seduce my servants to commit fornications, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols. And I gave her space to repent of her fornication, and she repented not. Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit fornication with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds. And I will kill her children, and all the Churches shall know that I am he which searcheth the reins of the hearts. But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyaritra, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of satan, I will put upon you none other burden. But that which ye hold hold fast till I come."

Thyatira means "The sweet perfume of a sacrifice," and refers to the period in which the true church was enduring hardships in the wilderness while the Apostate Church was reveling in her royal paramours.

"That woman Jezebel," the Apostate Church, Papacy. "Gave her space to repent," 360 years from the beginning of the Reformation to the beginning of the Harvest in 1878." "Fornication," worldly affiliation; "Her Children," daughters, Protestant sects. "The depth of Satan," modern no-Ransom theories, Evolution, Christian Science, Spiritism, etc. Satan posing as "an angel of light."

"Unto the angel of the Church in Sardist write: These things saith he that hath the seven spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that then livest, and art dead. But be watchful and strong, then the things which remain, that are ready to die, for I have not found thy works perfect before God.

"Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments, and they shall walk with me in white for they are worthy."

The word Sardis means "That which remains," and refers to a brief period just before the Reformation.

"Have not defiled their garments," by unfaithfulness. "In white raiment," actual righteousness. "Fine linen is the righteousness of the Saints."

"Unto the angel of the Church in Philadelphia write: these things saith he that is holy, he that is true, and so on, and because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation which is to try all them that dwell upon the earth. Behold I come quickly; hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy Crown."

The word "Philadelphia" means "Brotherly Love," and this is supposed to cover that period from the Reformation until recent times, probably about the year 1874.

All know that during that period there was much love and zeal, and a spirit of self-sacrifice in all churches.

"The word of my patience," cheerful, constant endurance. "The hour of temptation," the special trials of the harvest time, due to the prevalence of deceptive influences and teachings which would, if possible, "deceive the very elect." "Behold I come quickly." He is coming soon now.

"Unto the angel of the Church of Laodicea write: these things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the Creation of God. I know thy works, that thou art neither hot nor cold; I would that thou were cold or hot. So then because thou art neither hot nor cold; I would that thou were cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, I will spew thee out of my mouth. Because thou sayest I am rich and increased in goods, and have need of nothing, and knowest not thou art wretched, and miserable and poor, and blind and naked.

"I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich, and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve that thou mayest see.

"Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and him with me." The word Laodicea means "Justice for the people."

The description given here fits perfectly the condition of Nominal Christendom for the last forty or more years. Any middle aged or elderly person who has been taking notice of those things can remember when the change came. Previous to that time the Churches were filled with earnest saintly souls who went for no other purpose than to worship God. Fairs, festivals and shows were unheard of. The ministers were quiet and dignified, and did not use baseball slang. They did not "hit trails," nor make "home runs for God."

But alas, when the Philadelphia period quietly changed into the Laodicean period, all was changed. Then the world and the Church walked hand in hand. "Rich fairs and shows in the halls were held, and the world and his children were there. Laughter and music, and feasts were heard in the place that was meant for prayer. Then the sons of the World, and the Sons of the Church, walked closely hand and heart, and only the Master who knoweth all, could tell the two apart."

They were "lukewarm," neither cold nor hot; were "spewed out," and became cold. They boasted of being rich in numbers and prosperity, but they were poor in the spirit of the Truth. "Blind," could not see the Plan of Salvation for the Church and for the world. "Naked," stripped of the Robe of Christ's Righteousness by the Clergy in the name of Higher Criticism, Evolution, etc.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock;" yes, He has come now, and is present, though invisible. "If any man will open unto me," showing that the dealing is with the individual now, instead of the Organization. And here is where our Lord commands us to "come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and receive not of her plagues," "For her sins have reached unto heaven," "and strong is the Lord God who judgeth her."

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The United States in Prophecy

By Elder J. A. Oppy,
of Siloam Springs, Ark.

This we find to be the facts in the case. For "The dragon was wroth with the woman (the true consecrated church) and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." The Remnant church is yet to come into direct conflict with the beast, his image, his mark, and the number of his name. It is to stand victor over all four of these specifications, whatever they may be. Subsequent fulfilled prophecy, no doubt will reveal more plainly the practical meaning of those terms. To our understanding the Remnant church will not, can not be delivered, or meet with its change to heavenly conditions, before it comes into deadly conflict, with all the above specifications. To our understanding, it has been Providentially overruled, that the symbol applying to this the grandest nation on earth, has been ignored by so many Bible expositors, or to say the least passed by in silence. To the writer it fully explains why the Remnant did not meet with its change in 1914, when the lease of Gentile rule expired. The grand confederacy of all the sects and creeds, and the rolling together of the "scroll," Catholics and Protestants, had not yet taken place in 1914. Our dear Pastor Russell has a number of times noted the fact, that the church confederacy movement has not developed as fast as he had expected, and assigns this as a reason that it was rather doubtful, if the church would be delivered in 1914. To the writer its Providential that the symbol applying to this Nation in prophecy, has been applied to another great power; for had it been otherwise the harvest work might have been greatly handicapped. We have not yet been able to see that the United States is one of the ten divisions of the Roman kingdom. It most surely is not one of the ten horns, for they are symbolized with crowns, indicating monarchy. As the cleansing of the sanctuary was not fully accomplished in 1846, so the ecclesiastical image of the beast was not fully developed. But the ecclesiastical feature fully developed is not the full development of the image to the beast, but as it were only a half development. To our mind it requires the union of the ecclesiatical with the civil, with the civil subordinated to the ecclesiastical, and used as agency to enforce by law, the doctrines and dogmas, of the image to the beast. This Nation, the United States, stands alone in its federating church and state movement as the champion of that false system of worship, indicated by the title it has chosen, known as "The Great American Catholic (universal) Church." Its sole purpose and undying ambition, is to change the Constitution of these United States, and place all christian institutions, and usages, on an undeniable legal basis fundamental law of the land." Feb. 29, 1892, the United States Supreme Court, in the case of the Trinity Church, decided that this is a Christian nation. Then what is left for the Federated Churches to do but to raise the tide of popular sentiment in favor of that false idea, and take control of the nation and run it on the so-called Christion principle This decision of the Supreme Court is concerned, settles the long disputed principle, that Christianity is a "Part of the common law," instead of bein separate and distinct from it. These federated churches have decided, that the Bible shall be the standard of their reform of the nation. But dear people, please bear in mind, that it will not be the Bible, but their exposition of it that will be the standard. And woe to all discenters who oppose it. But this woe can have no terrors for the Remnant for they have consecrated their flesh to death any way. They are forewarned, and fore armed, with the following scripture: "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered in the flesh are ye yourselves with the same mind, for he hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." He has consecrated his flesh to death, and it does not matter what the dragon may do with it, he will not be false to his vow—he will not sin against his soul to save his flesh from any penalty inflicted by law, though it may be the death penalty. Bible students will now see it was a great mistake to suppose that the church would be delivered in 1914, but God will overrule it for His glory and the good of His people.

THE FINAL DECREE.

More than 2000 years ago, the prophet gave us the following pen picture of it: "Gather yourselves together, yea, gather together, O, nation (the Royal Priesthood, Remnant church) not desired; Before the Decree bring forth, before the day pass as the chaff, before the fierce anger of Jehovah come upon you. Seek ye Jehovah, all ye meek of the earth, that have kept His ordinances, seek righteousness, seek meekness, it may be ye will be hid, in the day of Jehovah's anger." Zeph. 2:1-3. As we see it, this final decree will have the full measure of its power when the Papal Hierarchy, and apostate Protestantism unite together, or are "rolled together." As we see it these great religious elements will not "depart as a scroll" till after it is rolled together. Here is what the Protestant end of the scroll proposes to the Papal Hierarchy, "Whenever they (Roman Catholics) are willing to cooperate in resisting the progress of political atheism, we will gladly join hands with them." Here is the reply of the Papal end of the scroll, "There are many Christian issues, to which Catholics could come together with non-Catholics, and shape civil legislation for the puplic weal."

It will be noticed that the "decree" brings forth, just before the day passes as the "chaff"—the ending of the great "time of trouble." The Revelator gives us another vivid pen picture of the same decree, couched in a little different language, as follows: "And he (the two horned beast, the United States) maketh the earth and them that dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose death-stroke was healed." If the worship here specified were in the jurisdiction of the first beast, the Papal beast, that beast would enforce its own worship. Most evidently then, this enforced worship is in a non-Catholic country, and can apply to no other country than the United States. There is little or no doubt, in the mind of the writer, but that some visible mark, sign, or badge, will be given to all worshippers of the beast or his image, to be worn in the closing scenes of the "time of trouble," as a personal protection, and all who do not have this badge, will be subjects of vengence—death. In fact such a badge is now worn by Papal subjects, on the flap of the vest, bearing the number 666, derived from the Latin numerals, which have a numerical value, inscribed on the ancient tripple crown of the popes. Similar badges, in the form of "Pax-pins," cross and crown, are now worn by International Bible Students, which has served as a personal protection in time of the late European wars.

WHAT IS THE POWER OF THE PROTESTANT END OF THE SCROLL?

The answer is easy. "The National Reform Association," with its auxiliaries, are the powers engaged in rolling the scroll toward the Papal Hierarchy. We here enumerate a few of its many auxilliaries. The "World-wide Revival Movement," the W. N. C. T. Union, the W. C. T. Union, the Y. M. C. A Association, the Y. M. C. Association, the Y. M. C. Endeavor Association, the Epworth League, and many other rivulet helps. All of these are under the supervision of "the federated churches of Christ in America," and pushing up the Protest (?) end of the scroll. We here subjoin a short paragraph from the W. N. C. T. Union as it shows the spirit and purpose which actuates them all. "The Woman's C. T. Union, local, state, national and world-wide, has one vital organic thought, one all-absorbing purpose, one undying enthusiasm, and that is that Christ shall be this World's King, yea, verily, this World's King, in its realm of cause and effect, king of its courts, its camps, its camps, its commerce, king of its colleges and cloysters, king of its customs and its Constitutions. The kingdom of Christ must enter the realm of law, through the gate-way of politics. We pray heaven to give them (political parties) no rest, till they swear an oath of allegiance to Christ in politics, and march up in one great army to the polls to worship God. If this does not show the contemplated Union of Church and State, an image to the Papal beast, what could show it?

We submit a statement from Rev. E. B. Graham, one of the vice presidents of "The National Reform Association," showing the dragon spirit, and venom manifested toward dissenters who will not fawn on their pet dragon. "We might add, in all justice, if the opponents of the Bible (their exposition of it) do not like our government, and its Christian features, let them go to some wild desolate land, and in the name of the devil, and for the sake of the devil, subdue it, and set up a government of their own, on infidel and atheistic ideas, and then if they can stand it stay there till they die." This zealous Doctor of Divinity, (one of the prophets "dumb dogs") rises to the climax of his subject and cries out in the frenzy of his soul, "Tolerate theism sir? There is nothing out of hell that I would not tolerate as soon." So then Jews, S. D. Advents, S. D. Baptists and International Bible Students, especially and all non-conformists in general, are to be coerced, into image worship, or be disfranchised and banished to some wild and desolate land. This is self evident for a little further on in this same speech he exclaims: "They cannot dwell together on the same continent."

WHAT IS THE POWER AT THE PAPAL END OF THE SCROLL?

The Papal end of the scroll will only appear to roll toward the Protestant end. It plans carefully for further apostasy on the part of the Protestant end. It plans carefully for further apostasy on the part of the Protestants, bides its time, and lets the Protestants do the rolling. Protestants do not want the Catholic "Steam Roller" to go

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

CHRISTENDOM IN GREAT DANGER

The following sermon was delivered by Pastor Russell in Buffalo, N. Y., on January 22, 1905:—Editor.

Pastor Russell of Allegheny, Pa., delivered two addresses in Buffalo, N. Y., Sunday to intelligent audiences. His afternoon topic was "God's Oath-Bound Covenant to Abraham and His Seed." His evening discourse on "Christendom in Great Danger, but the Very Elect are Protected," we transmit in full. The text was: "God shall send them stcrong delusions that they should believe a lie; that they all might be condemned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."—II. Thes. ii., 11, 12.

The statement of the Apostal James, that God tempteth no man, is not to be understood as a contradiction to the language of our text. God tempteth no man to sin, to do wrong, but He has at various times sent or permitted siftings and testings among those who are nominally His people—to separate the true from the false. Sometimes a great truth becomes the sifting or separating cause, as at our Lord's first advent. There our Lord's presentation of Himself in the flesh to the covenanted nation Isreal, as the long promised Savior, Deliverer and King became to that people as a whole a test, separating the Isrealites indeed from the mass of the nation—separating the wheat from the chaff. Our text tells of the end or harvest time of the gospel age, and how the Lord will now permit or "send" strong delusions for the purpose of sifting and separating the true from the false among those who have named the name of Christ. We hold that, according to the Scriptures, we are living in this harvest period and that the sifting of the wheat from the tares has begun, and that the strong delusions mentioned in our text are coming upon Christendom.

The Scriptures bring to our attention a class of spirit beings which fell from divine favor before the blood. These, we are told, have from that time until the present day been confined in chains of darkness in Tartarus—the circumambient air of this planet. The story of these fallen angles is briefly stated three times—in Genesis, vi.: 2; I. Peter iii: 20; II. Peter, ii:4; Jude, i:6. The Old and New Testament records are thus in agreement. Additionally, however, we have a multitude of scriptures, both of the Old and New Testaments, which refer to these fallen angels as "demons"—unfortunately mistranslated as "devils" in our common version. Without exception these demons are represented as cunning, deceitful, treacherous, devilish and as having a special malignant attitude toward mankind, and as taking special delight in misleading and deceiving humanity, particularly along irreligious lines and immoralities.

We call to your remembrance the Apostle's statement regarding this matter, to the effect that God's people have their struggle or contention, not with flesh and blood, but with wicked spirits in influential positions. Again the same Apostle points out to us that Satan is the chief leader of these spirits or demons and declares that we are not ignorant of his devices, his intrigues, his deceptions; again he styles him as wily, adroit, cunning. He informs us that the heathen world, while thinking they are worshipping God, are really deceived by these demons; their religious theories and practices are really demonology instead of theology.—Eph. vi:12; II. Cor. ii:II.

The human family is in great distress through the fall; mental, moral and physical imperfections are manifest everywhere; "there is none righteous, no, not one." As a consequence, all are agreed to the Apostle's broad statement, "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together waiting." (Rom. viii:88). Naturally enough the groaning ones seek for the cause of their trouble as well as for a remedy. The Bible sets forth as the cause of all earth's woes and sorrows the brief statement, "By one man sin, entered the world and death by sin, and thus death passed upon all men, for all are sinners." It sets forth the remedy also, namely: "Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures," and at His second advent he will institute times of restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all the holy prephets since the world began." (Acts iii.:21; v:12, I. Cor. xv.:3.) This, in brief, is the gospel of Christ.

The gospel of the demons contradict this from first to last. It denies that man ever was created in God's image and likeness; denies that he ever fell from it into sin and death; denies that Christ ever redeemed us, and holds that we need no Redeemer; just a process of evolution is at work which is lifting mankind from a mean and low brute beginning upward, to ultimately make of the race gods, and that all that is necessary for this grand result is time. As for death, demonology denies that there is death, and claims that what seems to be death is really a change from a low form of life to a higher form. This demon reaching is to be found among all the heathen peoples and in all their religious writings, but it is not at all sanctioned in the Scriptures. They reach to the contrary, as we have shown, that death is the penalty for sin; that it is a real penalty, a real death; that the dead are really dead, and that there is neither wisdom, nor device nor knowledge in the grave (sheol), whither all go, and that the hope of the race dies in a resurrection, and that the hope of a resurrection lies in the redemptive work of our Lord's first advent and in nation of the divine Word, assured which He will exercise at His second advent.

A pertinent question for each of us dear friends, at this moment is this: To which of these teachings do we give adherence. Are we holding fast, "the faithful Word of God," or are we giving heed to these seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, against which the Lord and Apostle gave so many warnings? Is our theological faith an anchor of hope holding us firmly to the truth as set forth by the Lord, or are we to an extent drawing in the original falsehood told by Satin and perpetuated by the lying spirits the falsehood that death is not death, that our dead friends are more alive than ever before, etc.? If this be the case let us at once begin a thorough examination of the divine word, assured that error sanctifies, but it always injurious, and that our Lord was right when He prayed for His disciples, "Sanctify them through Thy Truth, Thy Word is Truth."

Inquiries of the clergy respecting the place and condition of the departed bring no satisfaction; the few who still tell of tortures in infernal regions are less and less believed, and the others of increasing number who deny that the dead are in tortures are unable to give any answers respecting their whereabouts. No wonder the confiding sheep are preplexed. Oh, that they would look to the Word of the Lord that they would remember "the Lord is my Shepherd," that they would seek from the inspired sources the knowledge which their souls crave! Oh, that they might learn that the hope set before us in the gospel of Christ is the hope of the ressurrection of the dead! Mark the clearness of the Apostle's statement on this subject—"If there be no resurrection of the dead, then they that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." I. Cor. xv.:17, 18.

The reason for sending the strong delusion mentioned in our text is plainly stated in the context, but before it can be appreciated it is necessary to have some grasp of the divine plan of the ages; it is necessary to see that the Lord's work throughout this gospel age has not been as many suppose an attempt to convert the world, but, as the Scriptures declare. He has been merely selecting out from the world the people for His name—to be the Bride of Christ. (Acts 15:14.) We must see too, that this elect people does not include all who become nominal members of Christian churches, but merely those who through full faith and consecreation become followers of the Lord Jesus in truth, and receive the spirit of adoption from the Father. These, through the trials and difficulties of this life shall be proved overcomers of the world and its spirit and accepted as joint-heirs with Christ, as His Bride of the Kingdom. This class, the Scriptures distinctly tell us, it but a little flock. Our Lord's words are, "Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The Apostles declare also, "Not many wise, not many mighty, not many noble hath God chosen."—"Has not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs of the kingdom."—I. Cor. 1:26; James 2:5.

After we once see that only the overcomers of kingdom class are being selected during this Gospel age, we are ready to see that God's great time for dealing with the majority of our race is in the future—after the second coming of Christ—during His millenial kingdom—whose reign of righteousness will bless and give opportunity of eternal life to all the families of the earth.

We are not of those who expect this world to be burned up. Quite the contrary, we expect its rejuvenation, its perfecting as the Garden of Eden, the paradise of God, the everlasting home of the majority of the human family—of all except the truly consecrated Church of the Gospel age and those who shall ultimately die the second death. We have no sympathy of thought, for those who are looking for the destruction of the earth, but we nevertheless believe, as the Scriptures teach, that the present age of aion will cease and a new age of aion begin. In error the translators have rendered the word aion "world" and given a misimpression.

More than this, we believe that the Scriptures clearly indicate that the Scriptures age is now ending and the age, lapping with it, is beginning. It is at this particular junction that all the New Testament writings as well as our Lord's great prophesy of Mathew 24, center, indicating a time of confusion, a trouble such as the world has never known before, and pointing out that these are judgments of the Lord designed to prepare the world for the next dispension and the reign of the kingdom of righteousness. Furthermore, the Apostle distinctly points out that these judgments will begin at the House of God—the nominal church. Our Lord also point out the same thing, calling it a separation of wheat from tares in the harvest or close of this age.—Matt. 13:30.

It is because Christendom as a whole, though nominally a wheat field, is practically a tare field with a scattering of wheat intermingled that there is to be such a commotion in connection with the separation of the wheat and the tares. True, the Lord, who knoweth the heart, who knoweth them that are his, could easily separate them from the other, but he has chosen to make a separation publicly to demonstrate his own justice in the matter. Hence in this harvest time—at the proper time to separate the wheat from the tares—the Lord not only sends the sickle of truth to gather the wheat but he also sends the strong delusion to gather the tares.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMON

As will be seen in another column Pastor Russell's sermon is published as usual, and one will be published every week from now on. These are taken from our back files, and we believe we are the only paper that has them.

Also another new feature will be added next week. We have obtained permission to run in serial form Pastor Russell's "DIVINE PLAN OF THE AGES." Tell your friends about this, as we will all have to pull together until other arrangements are made.

GONE HOME.

Gone Home! To be forever with the Lord,
White-robed and clothed with Immortality;
Beholding face to face Jehovah God!
Gone Home! All sorrow, pain and anguish left Behind. 'Tis finished, all the sacrifice,
And faithful unto death he hears,"Well done,

Come, enter thou into the promised joy!"
What message would "our shepherd" send to us?
To us who wait this side the parting vail?
"Be brave, be strong, weep not, have faith in God,
The fields are white to Harvest, go ye forth,
And, even as our Master said: 'Lo, I
Am with you always, even to the end,'
So shall my loving presence go with you,
Until ye too shall hear His sweet 'Well done'
So shall there be one shepherd and one flock
And all rejoice together with the Lord."

Letter from Headquarters.

Brooklyn, Nov. 13, 1916.

Dearly Beloved Co-Laborers in the Harvest Field:—

The great shock of our Beloved Pastor's death has undoubtedly affected you in the field as much as it did those of us here in the Bethel and Tabernacle.

We received the news on Tuesday evening through the Associated Press dispatches sent all over the country. However, no confirmation was received from Brother Sturgeon, who accompanied him as his secretary, and we were not inclined to believe the report until we heard from him. A number of the family remained up all night, waiting until 6:30 in the morning, when Brother Steugeon's wire came announcing our dear Pastor's death and that he would arrive home Friday morning with the body. So we waited patiently for his arrival! These two days of waiting were days of great anxiety to us, during which time our minds were filled with a continued series of conflicting emotions. We were solemn and sad, yet happy and glad, for we realized that our dear Pastor was with the Lord and that his work would continue.

An Friday morning Brother Sturgeon arrived with the remains, which were immediately taken to the undertaker's rooms, and later, on Saturday, brought to the Bethel, where they lay in state until Sunday morning and were then taken to the Temple, where the funeral services were held.

Brother Sturgeon told us about his experiences on the last trip, which, according to the Tower announcement, was to include Lansing, Mich.; Springfield, Ill.; Wichita, Kans.; Dallas, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio, Texas; San Diego, Cal.; Topeka, Kas.; Tulsa, Okla.; Lincoln, Neb., and New York City Temple, November 5. All appointments were filled enroute save Springfield, Ill., a train wreck having occurred, causing a delay of several hours. He arrived at Dallas, Texas, in time to serve at the Convention there. The next day he served at Galveston in the afternoon, Houston at night, proceeding to San Antonio for what proved to be his last public meeting. He was suffering so much at San Antonio that it was necessary for him to leave the platform on three different occasions for a period of from five to ten minutes. Just as he left the platform on each occasion, Brother Sturgeon took up the thread of his discourse and carried it on until his return. After the meeting they boarded the train for California. Upon arrival there he was too weak to fill his appointment Sunday afternoon at San Diego. Instead, he remained in his hotel at Los Angeles, and at four o'clock addressed the Church there while seated upon a chair on the platform. This was his last message to the church. From the hall he went to the train, where a drawing room was provided for the use of himself and Brother Sturgeon on the journey East. He gradually grew worse, and although apparently suffering a great deal made no complaint, being true to the "Morning Resolve." He was too weak to carry on any conversation with Brother Sturgeon aside from indicating the little things he wanted done for his comfort. However, a few expressions were made by him from time to time.

When asked about the Seventh Volume, he said, "Someone else can write that." Later he said that others would smite the waters of Jordan. A rather remarkable thing occurred on Monday morning—the day before his death, when he asked Brother Sturgeon to make a Roman Toga for him, which consisted of two sheets folded about 12 inches on the top, one in front and one on the back, pinned on either shoulder. After this was arranged he laid down on the couch in the drawing room and closed his eyes. Immediately Brother Sturgeon understood this to mean that death was near. It is interesting to note that the Toga was worn by those who had kept their vows and finished their work in triumph. At 2:30 Tuesday afternoon he peacefully breathed his last. The body was taken from the train and prepared for burial and placed aboard the next train coming east.

A Memorial issue of The Tower is now being prepared, which will give a detailed account of the funeral arrangements and other interesting items connected with our Pastor's life and work. This will reach you in due time. Therefore we will not enter into the various details in this letter.

Undoubtedly many of you are wondering what will be done by those left in charge of the work here. We assure you that everything will continue as before, for Brother Russell left detailed arrangements to have the work carried on after he was taken away. Just before his departure on the last trip, he did something we have never before know him to do—write a personal letter to the head of each department, outlining his duties and the arrangements he had made for carrying on the work in general. Further, in his will provision was made to continue THE TOWER. He named an editorial staff of five brethren and left sufficient matter prepared by him to last an indefinite period.

Shorely before he started on his last trip, he placed an order with the Conkey Printing Company for over a hundred thousand copies of STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, which are now in process of preparation. He also wrote a very interesting preface for each of the Six Volumes, which will appeear in the new edition. From these facts and many others, we are all convinced that our beloved Brother was aware that his work in the flesh was about finished and that the end would come soon.

Many letters of greetings and sympathy and many donations of flowers and money to purchase flowers were received. For all of these we desire here to express our deep appreciation. We recognize that you all sorrow with us; and we also are sure that the same Holy Spirit which sustained the Bethel Family in such a remarkable manner also sustained each and all of you. While we have many things in the past to remind us of our Beloved Brother's presence with us and his untiring zeal on behelf of all the household of faith, and while such will be fond memories, yet we believe that all of the Lord's people will do as our Beloved Pastor so often recommended—"forgetting the things behind, and pressing forward to the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Jesus, our Forerunner, has entered into the holiest of all; and we believe our Beloved Brother is there also in the joys of the Lord. We pray for each of you the Lord's blessing and sustaining grace. May the Truth shine brighter into your lives! May the things of the present life become less and less attractive to you, and the things of the Kingdom become more and more your treasure!

With much Christian love, we remain,

Your brethren in the Master's service,

WATCH TOWER B. & T. SOCIETY.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S GRAVE.

Tribune readers will appreciate a mental vision of our pastor's grave. About 1200 people were present at the interment that sunny afternoon, and just as the sun touched the horizon and the curtain of night was being drawn, the shadows of evening merged into the dusk of twilight, the funeral cartage entered the gateway of the city of the deal, and the remains of the departed encircled the Rosemont Hill to a point directly above the grave of the servant of God who had laid down his life in the service of his Lord. Thhe grave is located in the middle of the upper row of grave spaces in the Bethel lot in section T of Rosemont division. This lot has room for 192 adult graves, no one can be buried directly above our brother, but upon either side and below. His is the grave of honor. The burial case with its casket is embedded in a solid encasement of cement five inches thick beneath, top, ends and sides, there to repose indefinitely without decay.

At Brother Russell's instance the cemetery rule prohibits the making of grave mounds in this section, the highest priced of the cemetery. Graves are marked in Bethel lot by a small marble slab which stands five inches above the lawn surfaceand has only the name of the deceased, this also the arrangement of our brother. He left instruction for the erection of a pyramid shape granite monument with nine-foot base and seven-foot apex in the center of the lot. Upon its four sloping sides an openBible on which will be the burial record of all the family members buried there. The cross and crown to embellish the four sides above the Bibles with suitable scripture texts between all of which has had his careful attention.

The grave is adorned with a closely set row of hardy echeveria around the sodding, and on the grave center are the words "OUR PASTOR" in echeveria lettering, above the grave and along the sides we have arranged the floral tributes in semicircle formation. Hundreds have visited the grave and many have taken from it mementos of fernand leaves. Some of these we took to our auditorium for sending to distant friends. Many pictures have been taken and are on sale by Brother Carl Dorst of 225 Sample street, Millvale, Pa., and by Brother William D. Soper of 144f W. 112th street, Cleveland, O., at 10 cents each unmounted, or 15 cents mounted on fine cardboard. Brother Soper also has a large size view of Carnegie interior at 50 cents. I merely mention this to guard me against letters of inquiry here. I took three views myself, and these are turned over to Brother Carl Dorst. Brother N. E. Nelson of Duquesne, Pa., has upwards of 25 kodak views, postcard size, securable at a nominal sum. His card might well appear in the ribune columns as to price, etc. His auto was at our service several days during the rush of this occasion. To him was allowed the privilege of supplying the Tribune with data re the interment of our pastor's body.

Faithfully,
J. A. BOHNET.

THE PHOTO-DRAMA.

The fourth and last production of the Photo-Drama of Creation, which was being shown in the Lyceum Theatre, this city, was as big a success as the three previous productions. Many people were unable to get in at some of the evenings and there is some talk of a reproduction.

The United States in Prophecy

over the fair institutions of this great nation, but they are anxious that their self-made Protestant "Steam Roller", shall thunder down over the people, and that the wheels of their Jaugernaut shall crush out all "heretics". And the beast that was (the Papal beast. He was till 1799) and is not (because of his death stroke in 1799) is himself also an eighth, (because of the temporal power he is yet to exercise, after the kingsdoms of Europe, have failed to settle the world's great war trouble) and goeth into perdition." Rev. 17; 11. It is the thought of the writer that after the kingdoms of this world have failed to restore peace to the world, that the pope, through diplomacy, will step forward and ask that they all give the matter into his hands for a time, and he can demonstrate to them that peace will very soon come back, and its cooing dove brood over all the world. As we see it not till then will the Papal beast go into "perdition." As proof of these thoughts we offer the following scripture, "And the ten horns which thou sawest, are ten kings (the ten kingdoms of Europe) who have received no kingdom as yet, (this cannot now be said of the ten horns) but they receive authority as kings (at some future date) with the beast, for "one hour," vs. 11. We understand this "one hour" to be symbolic time. One hour is the 24th part of a year in symbolic time, and is equal to 15 days of litteral time. Our thought in brief is this: All the affairs of this old world will finally be given into the power of the Papal beast and his image. Every principle of so-called Protestantism will then be repudiated, and when this hour of symbolic time has expired, the beast and his image, will go into the symbolic lake of fire to be destroyed. As we see it universal anarchy will reign for 15 litteral days—and that will be long enough to make the world deathly sick and prepare it for the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The whole world will then be in a great hurry to hail the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. To the writer this position is corroberated by the following scripture: "These have one mind, (the ten kingdoms of Europe) and they give their power and authority, unto the beast." During the great world-war now in progress, the kings of earth exercise their own authority and power, but when they have made an absolute failure, then they will say to the beast, Now take our authority and power and do what you please with it and we will work with you as for us we have had all we want of it by ourselves. It will then be a short, sharp, dark struggle, but the Light of Millennial Day will break through it and the King of Peace will then take full control. Listen: "These shall war against the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them, for He is Lord of Lords, and King of Kings and they also shall overcome that are with Him, called and chosen and faithful." Our thought is that not till this final crisis is precipitated will the Remnant be "Overcomers," meet with final change, and be glorified with their Head beyond the "Veil." True Protestantism, sets the religious conscience above the civil power, with certain limitations, such as life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. These God-given endowments, no one may invade, be he king or pope. Again true Protestanism sets the Bible in fallible Word of the living God, above the militant church, and this divine order of things no king or pope may invade. The Papal beast and his image deny both of these propositions. This makes the High Call to the Kingdom, and to kingdom honors, a narrow way to travel in, for it is a path of suffering with the Master, but it leads to Eeternal Glory. In conclusion a word of comfort, "And that God of all favor who has called you to His aionian, Glory, by the Anointed One, when you have suffered a short time, will Himself complete, confirm, strengthen you. To Him be the glory, and the power, for the Ages. Amen." 1 Pe. 5:10-11. Diaglott.

THE NEW MARKET HOUSES FINEST IN THE WORLD

The General Public Invited to Inspect the World's Most Modern Improved Market Houses--Honesty and Fair Dealing Backed by Big Business Men---Protective Association Behind Every Purchase.

The Pittsburgh Diamond Market Houses, located at the Market Square, Market and Diamond Streets, Pittsburgh, are receiving the final touches of the master hand and they are regarded as the last word in modern market house construction in which is embodied the latest modern improvements.

Nothing has been left out that would go to lift the market place of Pittsburgh upon the highest pinacle of modern structures and Pittsburgh now takes her place at the head in the world's march of progress when market house equipment with all its modern phases are taken into consideration.

No market house or market place in the universe where the great buying public goes shopping can offer anything like this which the Somber City presents and all hats are off and in the air to the Officers and Directors as well as the members of the Diamond Market Protective Association.

To this organization with its indefatigable Officers and Directors goes the credit for the most modern improved market houses in the world and the sanitary conditions as well as the modern refrigerating appliances are not surpassed or even equalled in any market house or market place on the globe.

It was left to the greatest industrial centre in the World to lead in this march of progress and she has done it, but in this she has only unfurled, on another pinacle her pennant, that "Pittsburgh Promotes Progress," and while thus flaunting itself to the breezes it suggests this message, "the world is welcome to fall in behind."

Of course Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong was essentially the leader in making possible the construction of this exceptionally modern market place and to him goes much credit for his valuable aid and executive ability. His assistance in making possible the appropriations and the executive signature of approval were essential to the start and next came the late Director of the Department of Public Works Robert Swan with his valuable assistants, Superintendent of City Property Henry Townsend, Chief Clerk M. F. Phillips and Market Clerk Louis C. Haehn.

Superintendent Townsend was tireless in his efforts to meet the wishes of the buying public and patiently did he take up the details which were presented by the Officers and Directors of the Diamond Market Protective Association.

Then, too, Market Clerk Haehn, who has had charge of the Pittsburgh Diamond Market Houses for nine years was a valuable acquisition when the new buildings were planned and his market house experience was essential to realizing the necessity of practical ideas in the installation of modern facilities. With Superintendent Townsend and Market Clerk Haehn working in harmony with Officers and Directors of the Diamond Market Protective Association and these in turn conferring with Director Swan, the Architects in charge of the building, and Mayor Armstrong something of importance was surely to develop.

The work was not planned in a day and visits to other cities were necessary in seeking the latest improvements and the most modern ideas. Nothing was to be overlooked and every device of value sought at any cost. Thus with complete unity and absolute harmony the world's most modern market houses were worked out and developed into two magnificent buildings. None should lose an opportunity of visiting these buildings and making a complete inspection of what is regarded as the most complete, the most modern and finest equipped sanitary market houses with complete refrigerating plant ever installed in any market house in this or any other country.

These modern facilities are the highest ideals of the Officers and Directors of the Diamond Market Protective Association and well might the buying public be exceptionally proud of the market houses that are practically completed and now open to the general public.

The Officers and Directors of the Diamond Market Protective Association is not made up of men seeking political offices nor are they politicians. The entire membership is composed of hard headed practical businessmen, whose honesty of purpose cannot be questioned and whose valuable experience in the commercial and financial world means much in placing the market conditions of this city in the front ranks.

The representatives of this remarkable association had no one to serve except the patrons of the market houses and a visit will soon convince the citizens and the buying public how well they have been served. It is to these men more than to any single individual that the new Diamond market houses in Diamond street, Pittsburgh, have been built and to their credit be it said the latest improved facilities have been installed.

Of course the new market is not what the Officers of the Association desired or what they fought for, but it is a long step in the direction of perfection which could not be attained at this time owing to a lack of sufficient appropriation to meet the necessary requirements for which the officers of the Association fought so valiantly. In this they were supported by Superintendent Townsend, Market Clerk Haehn as well as Mayor Armstrong but the previous administration had loaded down the taxpayers with a bonded indebtedness that must be met and the present administration feared additional millage may bring the wrath of an aroused public down upon it not because the money had gone toward the market houses but because of the burden of higher taxation. The Association, however, is to be congratulated for the great work accomplished and their names will naturally enough go down in history for the indefatigable energy and the exhaustless efforts displayed in persuading the Administration and Council to do what has already been done in building the present Houses, and improving the conditions that even though they do not measure up to the demands of the Officers and the Directors of the Association are far superior and greatly in advance of any market houses in this country or abroad.

The above group of Officers and Directors represent Pittsburgh's Leading Business men who have formed the Diamond Market Protective Association to guarantee honesty and fair dealing in supplying the demands of a tremendous buying public who patronize Pittsburgh's leading Market Houses in Diamond Square, Market and Diamond Streets, Pittsburgh. All members of the Association are standholders and are therefore vitally interested in the patrons of these Market Houses.

The members of the Diamond Market Protective Association are to be complimented on the men whom they selected to represent them as the Officers and Directors of the Association. These men have demonstrated their worth and used their splendid executive ability as well as their valuable business experience in bringing about the completion of the new Market Houses and this was a monumental task. It was these men who time after time met with Superintendent Townsend, Market Clerk Haehn, the late Director Robert Swan and Mayor Armstrong as well as the architects and details were at times nerve racking. Certainly many discouraging incidents occurred and valuable suggestions were set aside to lack of sufficient appropriation but the final finishing touches are being put on and the thousands who are patronizing the markets are loud in their praise of the great work accomplished by the Officers and Directors of the Diamond Market Protective Association.

There are people all over the city who have never heard of the Diamond Market Protective Association and this association whose members are made up of those holding stands in the market houses supply a marvelous shopping public who from time to time make purchases at the Diamond Market Houses located at Diamond and Market streets which is practically the heart of the great City of Pittsburgh.

This association has for its officers some of Pittsburgh's leading businessmen and men whose sterling qualities have done much for this greatest of industrial centres. They are worthy of a place in the life and history of our city and their very presence in the market places assures honesty in dealing and the highest integrity in all business transactions. With such men it is a pleasure to trade as every assurance is given that the best quality is furnished and every purchaser may feel absolutely confident that articles purchased have full value and that every transaction not only bears the guarantee of being value received but it stands with the seal of the Diamond Market Protective Association upon it and this backed by the City of Pittsburgh gives ample guarantee that not only is the buying public protected but that the quality is of the highest standard and the best the country can afford.

This guarantee stands for purity of quality, thoroughly inspected and that every pound contains full 16 ounces.

This guarantee is not given when dealing elsewhere even with the vigilance of the officers of the Bureau of Weights and Measures and this guarantee is not given when the buying public patronize the cheap meat stores now located on the principle streets and side streets in the heart of the city as well as the residece sections.

Fraud practiced in the "bargain" meat shops as well as in other lines and the bargain meat shops are buying the lightest and cheapest meats. Defective meat is sold at the cheap bargain shops and

The Divine Plan of the Ages.

BY C. T. RUSSELL, 1886.

FIRST VOLUME SCRIPTURE STUDIES.

Mr. C. T. Smith ("B. Arp") Associate Editor of the Atlanta Constitution, said of this wonderful book when it was first issued:

"It is impossible to read this book without loving the writer and pondering his wonderful solution of the great mysteries that have troubled us all our lives. There is hardly a family to be found that has not lost some loved one who died outside the church—outside the plan of salvation, and, if Calvanism be true, outside of all hope and inside of eternal torment and despair. We smother our feelings and turn away from the horrible picture. We dare not deny the faith of our fathers, and yet can it be possible that the good mother and the wandering child are forever separated?—forever and forever?

"I believe it is the rigidity of these teachings that makes atheists and infidels and skeptics—makes Christians unhappy and brings their gray hairs down in sorrow to the grave—a lost child, a lost soul! * * *

"This wonderful book makes no assertions that are not well sustained by the Scriptures. It is built up stone by stone, and upon every stone is the text, and it becomes a pyramid of God's love, and mercy, and wisdom.

The title of this series of Studies—"The Divine Plan of the Ages," suggests a progression in the Divine arrangement, foreknown to our God and orderly. We believe the teachings of Divine revelation can be seen to be both beautiful and harmonious from this standpoint and from no other. The period in which sin is permitted has been a dark night to humanity, never to be forgotten; but the glorious day of righteousness and divine favor, to be ushered in by the Messiah,who, as the Son of Righteousness, shall arise and shine fully and clearly into and upon all, bringing healing and blessing, will more than counterbalance the dreadful night of weeping, sighing, pain, sickness and death, in in which the groaning creation has been so long. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."—Psa. 30:5.

As though by insight the whole creation, while it groans and travails in pain, waits for, longs for and hopes for the day, calling it the Golden Age; yet men grope blindly, because not aware of the great Jehovah's gracious purpose. But their highest conception of such an age fall far short of what the reality will be. The Great Creator is preparing a "feast of fat things," which will astound his creatures, and be exceedingly, abundantly beyond what they could reasonably ask or expect. And to his wondering creatures, looking at the length and breadth, the height and depth of the love of God, surpassing all expectation, he explains: "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord; for as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."—Isa. 55:8, 9.

Though in this work we shall endeavor, and we trust with success, to set before the interested and unbiased reader the plan of God as it relates to and explains the past, the present and the future of his dealings, in a way more harmoious, beautiful and reasonable than is generally understood, yet that is the result of extraordinary wisdom or ability on the part of the writer is positively disclaimed. It is the light from the Son of Righteousness in this dawning of the Millennial Day that reveals these things as "present truth," now due to be appreciated by the sincere—the pure in heart.

Since skepticsm is rife, the very foundation of true religion, and the foundation of truth, is questioned often, even by the sincere. We have endeavored to uncover enough of the foundation upon which all faith should be built—the Word of God—to give confidence and assurance in its testimony, even to the unbeliever. And we have endeavored to do this in a manner that will appeal to and can be accepted by reason as a foundation. Then we have endeavored to build upon that foundation the teachings of Scripture, in such a manner that, so far as possible, purely human judgment may try its squares and angles by the most exacting rules of justice which it can command.

Believing that the Scriptures reveal a consistent and harmonious plan, which, when seen, must commend itself to every sanctified conscience, this work is published in the hope of assisting students of the Word of God, by suggesting lines of thought which harmonize with each other and with the inspired Word. Those who recognize the Bible as the revelation of Gods plan—and such we specially address—will doubtless agree that, if inspired of God, its teachings must, when taken as a whole, reveal a plan harmonious and consistent with itself, and with the character of its Divine Author. Our object as truth-seekers should be to obtain the complete, harmonious whole of God's revealed plan; and this, as God's children, we have reason to expect, since it is promised that the spirit of truth shall guide us into all truth.—John 16:13.

As inquirers, we have two methods open to us. One is to seek among all the views suggested by the various sects of the church, and to take from each that element which we might consider truth—an endless task. A difficulty which we should meet by this method would be, that if our judgment were warped and twisted, or our prejudices bent in any direction—and whose are not?—these difficulties would prevent our correct solution, and we might choose the error and reject the truth. Again, if we should adopt this as our method we should lose much, because the truth is progressive, shining more and more unto the perfect day, to those who search for it and walk in the light of it, while the various creeds of the various sects are fixed and stationary, and were made so centuries ago. And each of them must contain a large proportion of error, since each in some important respects contradicts the others. This method would lead into a labyrinth of bewilderment and confusion. The other method is to divest our minds of all prejudice, and to remember that none can know more about the plans of God than he has revealed in his Word, and that it was given to the meek and lowly of heart; and, as such, earnestly and sincerely seeking its guidance and instruction only, we shall by its great Author be guided to an understanding of it, as it becomes due to be understood, by making use of the various helps divinely provided. See Eph. 4:11-16.

As an aid to this class of students, this work is specially designed. It will be noticed that its references are to Scripture only, except where secular history may be called in to prove the fulfillment of Scripture statements. The testimony of modern theologians has been given no weight, and that of the so-called Early Fathers has been omitted. Many of them have testified in harmony with thoughts herein expressed, but we believe it to be a common failing of the present and all times for men to believe certain doctrines because others did so, in whom they had confidence. This is manifestly a fruitful cause of error, for many good people have believed and taught error in all good conscience. (Acts 26:9.) Truth-seekers should empty their vessels of the muddy waters of tradition and fill them at the fountain of truth—God's Word. And no religious teaching should have weight except as it guides the truth-seeker to that fountain.

For even a general and hasty examination of the whole Bible and its teaching, this work is too small; but, recognizing the haste of our day, we have endeavored to be as brief as the importance of the subjects seem to permit.

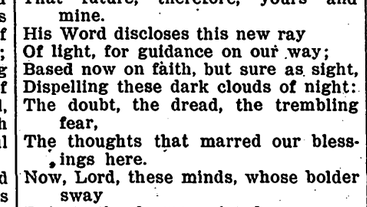
To the interested student we would suggest that it will be useless for him merely to skim over this work, and hope to obtain the force and harmony of the plan suggested, and the Scripture evidences herein presented. We have endeavored throughout to present the various fragments of truth, not only in such language, but also in such order, as would best enable all classes of readers to grasp the subject and general plan clearly. While thorough and orderly study is necessary to the appreciation of any of the sciences, it is specially so in the science of Divine revelation. And in this work it is doubly necessary, from the fact that in addition to its being a treatise on divinely revealed truths, it is an examination of the subject from, so far as we know, an altogether different standpoint from that of any other work. We have no apology to offer for treating many subjects usually neglected by Christians—among others, the coming of our Lord, and the prophecies and symbolism of the Old and New Testaments. No system of theology should be presented, or accepted, which overlooks or omits the most prominent features of Scripture teaching. We trust, however, that a wide distinction will be recognized between the earnest, sober and reverent study of prophecy and other scriptures, in the light of accomplished historic facts, to obtain conclusions which sanctified commonsense can approve, and a too common practice of general speculation, which, when applied to divine prophecy, is too apt to give loose rein to wild theory and vague fancy. Those who fall into this dangerous habit generally develop into prophets (?) instead of prophetic students.

No work is more noble and ennobling than the reverent study of the revealed purposes of God—"which things the angels desire to look into." (1 Pet. 1:12.) The fact that God's wisdom provided prophecies of the future, as well as statements regarding the present and the past, is of itself a reproof by Jehovah of the foolishness of some of his children, who have excused their ignorance and neglect of the study of His Word by saying: "There is enough in the fifth chapter of Matthew to save any man." Nor should we suppose that prophecy was given merely to satisfy curiosity concerning the future. Its object evidently is to make the consecrated child of God acquainted with his Father's plans, thus to enlist his interest and sympathy in the same plans, and to enable him to regard both the present and the future from God's standpoint. When thus interested in the Lord's work, he may serve with the spirit and with the understanding also; not as a servant merely, but as a child and heir. Revealing to such what shall be, counteracts the influence of what now is. The effect of careful study cannot be otherwise than strengthening to faith and stimulating to holiness.

In ignorance of God's plan for the recovery of the world from sin and its consequences, and under the false idea that the nominal church, in its present condition, is the sole agency for its accomplishment, the condition of the world today, after the Gospel has been preached for nearly nineteen centuries, is such as to awaken serious doubts in every thoughtful mind so misinformed. And such doubts are not easily surmounted with anything short of the truth. In fact, to every thoughtful observer, one of two things must be apparent: either the church has made a great mistake in supposing that the present age, and in her present condition, her office has been to convert the world, or else God's plan has been a miserable failure. Which horn of the dilemma shall we accept? Many have accepted, and many more doubtless will accept, the latter, and swell the ranks of infidelity, either covertly or openly. To assist such as are honestly falling thus, is one of the objects of this volume.

We here present a diagram, published by the "London Missionary Society" and afterwards in the United States by the "Women's Presbyterian Board of Missions." It is termed "A Mute Appeal on Behalf of Foreign Missions." It tells a sad tale of darkness and ignorance of the only name given under heaven, or among men, whereby we must be saved.

Heathen	896 million
Mohammadians	175 million
Roman Catholics	190 million
Protestants	116 million
Greek Catholics	84 million
Jews	8 million



The Watchman—the "Y. M. C. A." journal of Chicago—published this same diagram, and commenting on it said:

"The ideas of some are very misty and indefinite in regard to the world's spiritual condition. We hear of glorious revival work at home and abroad, of fresh missionary efforts in various directions, of one country after another opening to the gospel, and of large sums being devoted to its spread and we get the idea that adequate efforts are being made for the evangelization of the nations of the earth. It is estimated today that the world's population is 1,424,000,000, and by studying the diagram we will see that considerably more than one-half—nearly two-thirds—are still totally heathen, and the remainder are mostly either followers of Mohammed or members of those great apostate churches whose religion is practically a Christian idolatry, and who can scarcely be said to hold or teach the gospel of Christ. Even as to the 116 millions of nominal Protestants, we must remember how large a proportion in Germany, England and this country have lapsed into infidelity—a darkness deeper, if possible, than even that of heathenism—and how many are blinded by superstition, or buried in extreme ignorance; so that while eight millions of Jews still reject Jesus of Nazareth, and while more than 300 millions who bear his name have apostatized from his faith, 170 millions more bow before Mohammed, and the vast remainder of mankind are to this day worshipers of stocks and stones, of their own ancestors, of dead heroes or of the devil himself; all in one way or other worshiping and serving the creature instead of the Creator, who is God over all, blessed forever. Is there not enough here to sadden the heart of thoughtful Christians?"

Truly this is a sad picture. And though the diagram represents shades of difference between Heathens, Mohammedans and Jews, all are alike in total ignorance of Christ. Some might at first suppose that this view with reference to the proportion of Christians is too dark and rather overdrawn, but we think the reverse of this. It shows nominal Christianity in the brightest colors possible. For instance, the 116,000,000 put down as Protestant is far in excess of the true number. Sixteen millions would, we believe, more nearly express the number of professing church members of adult years, and one million would, we fear, be far too liberal an estimate of the "little flock," the "sanctified in Christ Jesus," who "walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." It should be borne in mind that a large proportion of church members, always numbered in the reckoning, are young children and infants. Specially is this the case in the countries of Europe. In many of these, children are reckoned church members from earliest infancy.

But dark as this picture appears, it is not the darkest picture that fallen humanity presents. This represents only the present living generations. When we consider the fact that century after century of the six thousand years past has swept away other vast multitudes, nearly all of whom were enveloped in the same ignorance and sin, how dark is the scene! Viewed from the popular standpoint, it is truly an awful picture.

The various creeds of today teach that all of these billions of humanity, ignorant of the only name under heaven by which we must be saved, are on the straight road to everlasting torment; and not only so, but that all of those 116,000,000 Protestants, except the very few saints, are sure of the same fate. No wonder, then, that those who believe such awful things of Jehovah's plans and purposes should be zealous in forwarding missionary enterprises—the wonder is that they are not frenzied by it. Really to believe thus, and to appreciate such conclusions, would rob life of every pleasure, and shroud in gloom every bright prospect of nature.

To show that we have not misstated "Orthodoxy" on the subject of the fate of the heathen, we quote from the pamphlet—"A Mute Appeal on Behalf of Foreign Missions"—in which the diagram was published. Its concluding sentence is: "Evangelize the mighty generations abroad—the one thousand million souls who are dying in Christless despair at the rate of 100,000 a day."

But though this is the gloomy outlook from the standpoint of human creeds, the Scriptures present a higher view, which it is the purpose of these pages to point out. Instructed by the Word, we cannot believe that God's great plan of salvation was ever intended to be, or ever will be, such a failure. It will be a relief to the perplexed child of God to notice that the Prophet Isaiah foretells this very condition of things, and its remedy, saying: "Behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles (heathen) shall come to thy light." (Isa. 6:2, 3.) In this prophecy, the gross darkness is lighted by the bow of promise: "The Gentiles (the nations of earth in general) shall come to thy light."

Not only have the continued misery and darkness of the world, and the slow progress of truth, been a mystery to the Church, but the world itself has known and felt its condition. Like that which enveloped Egypt, it has been a darkness that could be felt. In evidence of this, note the spirit of the following lines, clipped from a Philadelphia journal. The doubt and gloom, intensified by the clashing creeds of the various schools, has not yet been dispelled from the writer's mind by the rays of divine truth direct from the Word of God:—

"Life! great mystery! Who shall say
What need hath God for this poor clay?
Formed by his hand with poetnt skill
Mind, matter, soul and stubborn will;
Born but to die; sure destiny—death.
Then where, oh! where this fleeting breath?
Not one of all the countless throng,
Who lived and died and suffered long,
Returns to tell the great design—
That future, which is yours and mine.
We plead, O God! for some new ray
Of light for guidance on our way;
Based not on faith, but clearer sight,
Dispelling these dark clouds of night;
This doubt, this dread, this trembling fear;
This thought that mars our blessings here.
This restless mind, with bolder sway,
Rejects the dogmas of the day
Taught by jarring sects and schools,
To fetter reason with their rules.
We seek to know Thee as thou art—
Our place with Thee—and then the part
We play in this stupendous plan,
Creator Infinite, and man.
Lift up this veil obscuring sight;
Command again: 'Let there be light!'
Reveal this secret of Thy throne;
We search in darkness the unknown."

To this we reply:—

Life's unsealed mystery soon shall say
What joy hath God in this poor clay,
Formed by his hand with potent skill,
Stamped with his image—mind and will;
Born not to die—no, a second birth
Succeeds the sentence—"earth to earth."
For One of all the mighty host,
Who lived and died and suffered most,
Arose, and proved God's great design—
That future, therefore, yours and mine.
His Word discloses this new ray
Of light, for guidance on our way;
Based now on faith, but sure as sight,
Dispelling these dark clouds of night:
The doubt, the dread, the trembling fear,
The thoughts that marred our blessings here.
Now, Lord, these minds, whose bolder sway
Rejects the dogmas of today,
Taught by jarring sects and schools,
Fettering reason with their rules,
May seek, and know Thee as Thou art,
Our place with Thee, and then the part
We play in this stupendous plan,
Creator Infinite, and man.
Uplifts the veil, revealing quite
To those who walk in heaven's light
The glorious mystery of His throne
Hidden from ages, now made known.

Such a blessing is now coming to the world through the unfolding of the divine purpose and the opening of the divine Word, of which blessing and revealing this volume we trust is a part.

Those who will turn away from the mere speculations of men, and devote time to researching the Scriptures, not excluding reason, which God invites us to use (Isa. 1:18), will find that a blessed bow of promise spans the heavens. It is a mistake to suppose that those without faith, and consequent justification, should be able to apprehend clearly the truth: it is not for such. The Psalmist says, "Light (truth) is sown for the righteous." (Psa. 97:11.) For the child of God a lamp is provided whose light dispels from his pathway much of the darkness. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." (Psa. 119:105.) But it is only "the path of the just" that "is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." (Prov. 4:18.) Actually, there is none just, "none righteous, no, not one" (Rom. 3:10); the class referred to is "justified by faith.' It is the privilege only of this class to walk in the pathway that shines more and more—to see not only the present unfoldings of God's plan, but also things to come. While it is true that the path of each individual believer is a shining one, yet the special application of this statement is to the just (justified) as a class. Patriarchs, prophets, apostles and saints of the past and present have walked in its increasing light; and the light will continue to increase beyond the present—"unto the perfect day." It is one continuous path, and the one continuous and increasing light is the Divine Record, illuminating as it becomes due.

Therefore, "Rejoice in the Lord, ye righteous," expecting the fulfilment of this promise. Many have so little faith that they do not look for more light, and, because of their unfaithfulness and unconcern, they are permitted to sit in darkness, when they might have been walking in the increasing light.

The Spirit, of God, given to guide the Church into truth, will take of the things written and show them unto us; but beyond what is written we need nothing, for the Holy Scriptures are able to make wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus.—2 Tim. 3:15.

While it is still true that "darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people," the world is not always to remain in this condition. We are assured that "the morning cometh." (Isa. 21:12.) As now God causes the natural sun to shine upon the just and the unjust, so the Sun of Righteousness will, in the Millennial day, shine for the benefit of all the world, and "bring to light the hidden things of darkness." (1 Cor. 4:5) It will dispel the noxious vapors of evil, and bring life, health, peace and joy.

Looking into the past we find that then the light shone but feebly. Dim and obscure were the promises of past ages. The promises made to Abraham and others, and typically represented in the law and ceremonies of fleshly Israel, were only shadows and gave but a vague idea of God's wonderful and gracious designs. As we reach the days of Jesus the light increases. The height of expectancy, until then, had been that God would bring a relliverer to save Israel from their enemies, and to exalt them as the chief nation of the earth, in which position of power and influence God would use them as his agency for blessing all the families of the earth. The offer given them of heirship in the kingdom of God was so different, in the conditions demanded, from what they had expected, and the prospects of the class being selected ever attaining the greatness promised were, outwardly and humanly considered, so improbable, that all but the few were thereby blinded to the message. And their blindness and hostility to it were naturally increased when, in the process of God's plan, the due time came for extending the message, and making the invitation to share in the promised Kingdom applicable to every creature under heaven who should by the exercise of faith be reckoned a child of faithful Abraham and an heir of the promise made to him.

The Great Delusion of Our Time

VIEWED FROM THE WATCH TOWER.

We devote considerable space to the foregoing because it treats an important subject from a standpoint with which we agree—although it differs from our own in that it ignores the divine revelation on which we build everything. We added sub-headings to assist the elucidations. From the Scripture standpoint alone is this subject perfectly clear. From God himself we get "the white light" of absolute truth on these matters. From this our standpoint all is much more plain. Ours is the true "magisterial" or decisive view which alone can speak with authority and silence criticism. "Let God be true though it make every man a liar."

The fall of our race from the divine likeness, through disobedience explains why all men have a basis for moral sense and higher attainments, which for a time have been dwarfed by the over-cultivation of the selfish propensities. The tendency of Sin is ever downward, its offspring is death, its husband is selfishness. Righteousness has for her husband Love, and the offspring by divine arrangement is Life-everlasting.

Many are the voices and influences favoring degeneracy through sin, appealing to the powerful selfish desires. One voice from on high appeals for righteousness to our higher qualities of mind, weak and impaired by the fall and atrophied through lack of exercise.

The great appeal of the Law Covenant was made only to the Jewish nation, and its influences was beneficial not to the Hebrews only, but also to neighboring nations who took knowledge of Israel's hopes and aims. Other appeals were through the Prophets to Israel, and they too were partially effective. But the great appeal of God to men was made in due time through his Son, the Voice from Heaven. The message was not merely a law showing our woe-begone condition, but additionally it spoke peace with God, the forgiveness of sins, through our Lord's great sacrifice for our sins. This was God's true voice or message of love and mercy.

"He that hath an ear, Let him hear."

But alas, only a few hear at all, and still fewer hear the voice distinctly. The ears of moral and religious perception are dulled by the fall, and additionally by the confusing sin of selfishness and necessity aggravated by the god of this world. Those who hear also see things invisible to others—see with the eye of faith. The opening of the eyes of their understanding comes to them as a result of their hearing and accepting the Voice and being begotten again to a newness of life. These are "the very elect," now being called and prepared for the Kingdom honors and services.

From these "elect" even now radiates an influence which affects many favorably—many who see not the heavenly vision open to the "elect" and who hear not the voice from heaven. These are the civilized whose moral perceptions are quickened, and amongst whom arise many of the moral reformers who battle nobly against the degenerate conditions common to the entire race.

Shortly, as soon as "the very elect" the Church, the "Bride" of Christ, shall have been selected and prepared by the trials and disciplines of this present evil world, and been glorified and united to her Lord, the Redeemer—then the next great step in the divine program for the uplift of the world will begin. Then, for the thousand years of Christ's Messianic reign, He and his "elect" bride will bless the world of mankind by restraining Satan and every form of sin, and by inculcating Righteousness and uplifting to the lost image of God all who then, knowing righteousness, shall will to follow its dictates.

"THE WORLD KNOWETH US NOT"

Meantime, however, the Lord's plan is seen clearly only by the "elect." The worldly wise, although benefited by its influences, wander into labyrinths of their own confusing notions, and attribute the progress in the world not to the voice from heaven but to evolutionary progress. Framing a theory accordingly, they are ignoring the work of God's grace and claiming "the survival of the fittest." The foregoing article explodes again the error of this theory—criticising it from its own level of human reason.

A little while—a very little while—and the world will witness an exemplification of its God-ignoring theory, when Anarchy will prevail and anarchists will claim that they are the "fittest" type of the human family. Ah! that will be a rude shock to these philosophers and their dreams. Thank God for his Word instructing us that he has so timed matters that at that very juncture the "elect" will be glorified and take the control of earth's affairs—at the very point where otherwise selfishness would so run riot that "no flesh would be saved."

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

The following is the standing of the fund to date:

Pittsburgh, Pa.,N. S., Nov. 23.

I write to note an exception to the interpretation of Scripture by elder J. A. Oppy of Siloam Springs, Ark. re the "United States in Prophecy" as set forth in his article in your issue of Nov. 16.

During the three years of my service to Pastor Russell as his stenographer he made confidential reply to a brother's inquiry regarding the two horned beast of Revalation 13, a copy of which reply I have kept. In that reply Rev. Russell clearly showed that the two horned beast is England and the United States. To say that Democracy and Republicanism represent the two horns of a beast would be to say that this beast had first one horn and then another horn alternately, because both parties are not in power at the same time. Oppy's interpretation throughout lacks the logic contained in Brother Russell's explanation of both the twelfth and thirteenth chapters of the Book of Revalation. In my judgment, brethern, writting for publication would best confine their expressions to testimony rather than the presentation of Scripture doctrine, which may and may not be correct, and is so apt to mislead and confuse the reader. I do not feel privileged to publish Rev. Russell's reply as a whole.

Faithfully yours,

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 25.

I am writing to express appreciation of your managment and of the many admirable features of your liberal journal. It was with intense satisfaction that I found a sermon from Pastor Russell's pen on its usual page. I feared it might be otherwise occupied now that this great and noble man has been called to his reward. I shall be glad to renew my subscription shortly through the W. T. B. & T. Society. If anything ever was worthy of repetition, surely Pastor Russell's sermons are so!

With best wishes, very truly yours,

GET BACK TO NATURE

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them or constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

Sent by parcel post anywhere in the United States. Send cash, stamps or money order. Address, H. H. Von Schlick, 50 Marvel Building, Third and Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

WEEKLY ADDRESS
of
PASTOR RUSSELL
of the
LONDON TABERNACLE
and of
NEW YORK CITY

THE RIGHT AND WRONG VIEWS OF WAR.

The following sermon was delivered by Pastor Russell on January 29, 1905.—Editor.

Pastor Russell of Allegheny gave two addresses at Dorona on Sunday. In the afternoon he spoke on "God's Oathbound Covenant to Abraham and His seed." His evenings discourse was on "The Right and Wrong Views of War." His text was: "Blesed be the Lord, my strength, which teaches my hands to war and my fingers to fight." Psalms cxliv., I. We report the discourse in full, as follows:

To what extent war is either excusable or justifiable is a question which has long perplexed many of the ablest minds. The thought that was is never justifiable under any circumstances finds few suporters; yet, as we should expect, the best and bravest of mankind deplore war and advocate peace on the reasonable and proper terms. How comes it, then, that we find the pages of history covered with war records and find also among the warriors the names of many of the wisest and greatest of men of nations?

We reply that the difficulty lies not so much in the fact that the fall has depraved and brutalized our race, but in the fact that it has so impaired human judgment that the course of wisdom and justice is more or less obscured to all, causing the wrong to appear right. One of the chief results of the fall has been maintenance of large selfishness, while other qualities of the kind have decreased or shrunk Thus selfishness, having come to be a prominent factor in the reasoning of the natural mind, wraps and twists the judgment of men and nations and leads to courses of action which otherwise would be disapproved.

As an illustration of this principle note how every man's ways are apt to seem right in his own eyes and as the poet Burns suggests, he fails to see himself as others see him. He can reason more soundly in respect to the affairs of others than in regard to his own because of the twist, the bias, set up in his own mind by his selfishness. We all recognize that the same thing is true of nations. Thus in the recent Boer war our British friends felt sure that they were wholly in the right; others, even their friends, thought them selfishly blinded to the rights of the Boers. Similarily today the Russians and Japanese are warring because of difference of opinion—both urged on largely by selfish motives—both deploring war while prosecuting it and suffering to it.

However, these very same reasoners, using the very same mental powers and reasoning along similar lines, if they were Russians, would have approved the course of the Czar's government in gradually establishing itself in the far east and gradually entrenching itself in the military and financial control of the Chinese empire, this appropriating to itself the vast resources and energy of a people numbering nearly one-fourth of the population of the whole world. The reasoning of the Russians on this subject no doubt was that they were crying civilization and business methods and strong government to a heathen people, and that they had a right thus to exploit the heathen to heir own advantage. In justification of their course they doubtless thought of the similar procedure of Great Britain in India. Doubtless, also, pride told the Russians that their selfish desire to give the Chinese good government.

Indeed we find that the excuse of all the conquerers of the world has been that they were capable of giving the conquered better laws and regulations than they were able to provide for themselves. Thus the spirit of pride, which is an element of silfishness in the fallen nature, has combined and co-operated with general selfishness in the prosecution of nearly all the wars of conquest, and been the excuse of a very large proportion indeed of man's inhumanity to man.

How does God view the matter? Why does not He interfere to establish and prosper the right and overthrow the wrong? Why is it that the meek do not inherit the earth, but raher the rapacious, the combative, the grasping? Why is it hat for now 6,000 years sin and selfishness havt reigned among men, resulting in wars and rumors of wars? Why is it that even during the nerly ten centuries since the angles sang at our Lord's birth, "Peace on earth, good will to men," there has been no peace? Why is it the, notwithstanding the introduction of peace conferences among mighty nations of the world, beginning with that of Geneva on September 14, 1872, and its successor at The Hague; and the fact that another is proposed, still the world witnesses today its greatest armies, most impregnable fortesses and most powerful navies and most wonderful munitions? Why is it that the dove of peace seems more alarmed than ever, and that the whole world while crying peace, realizes that warfare is more than ever its spirit, not only among kingdoms and armies but between financiers and between capital and labor and in the home and family—war, contention, strife? What about the Prince of Peace, and when will he inaugurate his reign?

Many conjectural replies to these questions might be obtained from "many men of many minds", and they would be discordant—no two exactly alike. We would best, therefore appeal the questions to the Lord Himself, asking His explanation and then hearkening to the message of His word. We can hear but one answer, and it is a satisfactory one, which meets all the requirements and conditions of the case.

The Bible not only explains the fallen condition of humanity as slaves of Sin and Death, but it tells us, too, tha tthe Lord has in a general sense, given over the earth to the control of the children of men, and that while holding a general supervision of the affairs of nations to hinder them from interfering with his fixed plans for eventually blessing the world through the Kingdom of Christ, he permits them within these limits to take their course and to exercise their ingenuity in various methods of self-government, etc.

They are thus demonstrating two things, (1) Their lack of wisdom and justice and love. (2) The hopelessness of the world as respects ever reading perfecting under such conditions, and hence the necessity in the world's interest for the establishment of the Kingdom of God's dear Son for which we have been taught to pray, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy, will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven." Many do not yet realize the hopelessness of trusting in the arm of flesh, but are hoping that the increase in education will surely lift the whole world of mankind to that plane of intelligence where all will concede the wisdom of righteousness, the unwisdom of iniquity. Then, they say, we will have the millenium.

Not so we reply. The millenium could never come, never be established on those lines; but as the Scriptures teach, it will be introduced by force.—Scriptural propecy fully concurs with what we see about us in the unrest brought about by our higher civilization and more general education of the head. The unregentrated heart is sure to be able to make more trouble in proportion to its dgree of education. The prime movers in all great affairs, personal and national, are great men. We do not say that at heart they are worse than many if they had not had the education. For six thousand years the ploughshare of selfishness has been doing its work in breaking the fallow ground of the natural heart, and preparing it for the glorious spring time, the seed time of grace and truth under our Lord's millenial reign.

We have been considering the views of the worldly wise respecting the necessities of war, but now let us take the Christian's viewpoint as set forth by our Lord and the apostles to be the guide of all the soldiers of the cross. We can concede all the wisdom to the world's captains of industry and finance and sociology and armies. We must hearken to the Captain of our Salvation, the Lord Jesus. What does He councel us, must be our inquiry? A difficulty which stumbles many in the fact that they do not recognize the difference between the Church and the world under our present civilized conditions.

Indeed the church nominal, includes the whole world, though the Church genuine composed only of the fully consecreated followers of the Lord is still, as the Scripture declare, a "little flock", comprised not many great, not many wise, not many learned, not many noble, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs to the Kingdom. These are so few and so insignificant, numerically, politically, socially and financially that their peculiar views respecting war effect little or nothing. They may safely pursue the counsel of their Master, assured that the world's course will not be particularly influenced by them except along general lines. Begotten again of the holy spirit of love for their friends and neighbors yea, for their enemies also, to take pleasure in injuring others either in life of limb. Rather they should bind up the broken hearted, heal the sick and comfort the troubled. This was the Master's course, it was His spirit, and it must be the spirit of all who are His in proportion to their consecration to Him.

From the standpoint of the true Christian, therefore, war is reprehensible, particularily aggressive warfare. Love for the neighbors and for the enemy will surely lead to the application of the Golden Rule to both, and the Golden Rule will surely stop all aggressive warfare because it would eliminate the land, hunger and thirst for power that induces such warfare. The Christian view of Russia's course would have been that she would not have coveted China, should have attempted that extension of her territory and power. such a course would have averted the present war with Japan. On the other hand, the Christian in Japan's position should have followed the disposition injunction to follow peace with all men and should have relied upon the results being overruled by the Lord for good. In other words, the Christian's standard for deciding as to Japans course would have been accorded with our text for the present year, "The wisdom that cometh from above is first pure, then peaceable, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits."

A part of the Church's testing is along this very line—to walk with the Lord and comply with his arrangements and views and theories of the world, the flesh and the devil. Those who prove their faithfulness to the divine arrangement now are said in the Scriptures to be "overcomers." It is their faith in the promise of God's Word that enables them to live thus separate from the world and its ideas and schemes. Thus the Scriptures declare, "this is the victory which overcometh the world, even your faith."

These overcomers are the ones who, following their Lord's example and the hopes and promises of the Scriptures are separate from the world now, will be the politicians of the future of the millenial age. We use the term politician in its true sense are referring to those well versed in the principle of civil government and the conduct of State affairs in the administration of public business in the interest of peace, prosperity and safety of the public.

From the Scriptural standpoint the whole world is mentally as well as morally and physically deranged, and this accounts for many of the idosyncrasies. One has abnormal selfishness for money, another an equally abnormal hunger for influence and power, another is carried away to unreasonable lengths in pursuit of pleasure. All these extravagances indicate lack of soundness of mind, and thus viewed the whole world is mentally unsound, some affected with one hobby and some with another. The Lord's Word presents this view and exhorts the little flock, the "soldiers of the cross", "let your moderation be known unto all men," and declare that those who have the wisdom from above have a spirit of a sound mind, placing estimation upon the really valuable things rather than fame, joys and wealth, whose beauty and pleasure vanish as they are neared.

We recommend the heavenly riches and beauties and joys and additionally the heavenly glory and power promised to the faithful, "overcomers", in the life to come, to all who have ears to hear and hearts to appreciate them. Those who pass the present period of testing, developing characters in harmony with the divine, are presently to have of honor and glory and power and dominion such grand measures as "eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath in reservation for those who love Him" live Him more than they love houses or lands, name or fame, self or others.

What we have been saying is in full harmony with the spirit of our text, for although David lived before the time of the begetting of the Spirit, he was a prophet, and his language was guided of the Lord accordingly, so that his words are adapted to the spirit begotten followers of Jesus during this gospel age, as describing the Scriptural warfare and battles of the Lord's followers.

The spirit of warfare is not wholly bad; its evil consists in its misdirection. Combativeness lies at the foundation of all warfare, and however, much harm it has done in the world, without it mankind would be in a pitiable condition today. The grandest endeavors and enterprises would fail of execution were it not for the assistance of combativeness the world would be without power to overcome the obstacles and perils in life's pathway, and would therefore be without character.

In view of this self-evident truth we are surprised that the Scriptures represent our Heavenly Father and Our Lord Jesus as mighty overcomers, conquerors, as victories in conflicts, etc. Respecting Our Lord Jesus are distinctly told that in due time He shall take His great power and reign, and that then the nations of the earth shall be dashed to shovers, as potters vessels would be wrecked with an iron rod. We are assured again that "He must reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet—the last enemy to be destroyed is death.

What is it that we now fight with and overcome? We answer that we are, as new creatures, begotten of the Holy Spirit, creatures, out of accord with our former selves and with the whole course of the world as we see it all about us, and our good fight consists in our resistance of the world, the flesh and Adversary, and our vanquishing of them from bearing rule in our heart and lives and bringing forth evil fruit. More than this, it means such a battle with self as implies the putting down of every high ambiion and fond desire, and the bringing of our hearts wholly and completely into subjection to the will of God.

It is a daily, yea, an hourly battle, and as one of old has stated the matter, "There is no discharge in this war." As the people expresses it, the flesh and the spirit are contrary to each other. Our victory means the survival of the spirit, then new nature, and this means, the overcoming of the human-nature with its affections and desires, so that we allow them not to entrap us into consent to sin, allow them not to hinder us from endeavoring to do whatsoever our hands find to do in the service of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light.

Let us not waste our time in putting down and destroying our enemies; let us not engage in the world's warfare for wealth, for name or fame or land-grabbing; but on the contrary let us fight the good fight, and we will have plenty opportunity to engage every atom of our combativeness thoroughly in fighting against the spirit of the Adversary and the world as well as against our own weaknesses of heredity. Blessed be God who teaches His people how to war against every foe of righteousness and to fight against all the allurements and ensnarements of the world and the Adversary!

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the tremendous scarcity of paper, we are compelled to revise our mailing list. We wish all subscribers would consult the mailing tab on their paper and if in arrears kindly forward the amount at once. The regular price of the Tribune is $2, but under a special arrangement with the Watch Tower, subscribers interested in the Truth have been paying only $1 for an eight page paper. The paper house from which we buy our paper have notified us that the supply for our next contract must be reduced to the lowest quantity on account of the shortage of supply. Much as we would like to we cannot afford at this time, on account of shortage of supply, to carry any subscribers who are in arrears. This request has been made also upon the Tribune by the publishers who are cutting off every paper not paid for and every subscriber in arrears. Won't you please consult your tab and send in your money at once if you are in arrears.

Owing to the scarcity of white paper, the leading papers in all the large cities are either cutting down the size or are raising the price in order that they may continue publication, and the Tribune may have to do likewise.

"JACK."

The night was dark and stormy,
And the winds blew howling wild,
As an aged mother gazed upon,
The portrait of her child.

Chorus.
Your mother still prays for you Jack,
Your mother still prays for you,
In a home far away o'er the ocean,
Your mother still prays for you.
Far away from home and mother,
Far away in a distant land.

Some comrades says come along, Jack,
There goes the army band,
They went to a rough, old barrack,
Where the meeting had just begun,
There something touched that wild boy's heart,
As sweetly the soldiers sang.

The stony heart was broken,
As he thought of his mother dear,
In spite of comrades laughing,
Jack could not keep back a tear,
In spite of fierce temptations
Those words in his ears stil rang,
And he started for heaven that evening
As sweetly the soldiers sang.

At last there came a letter came a letter,
Came deeply edged in black,
From comrades long forgotten,
But remembered Jack.
They have laid your dear old mother
In a grave so dark and cold
And she wants her boy that's roaming
To meet her on the streets of gold.

Your mother's last prayer was for you, Jack,
Your mother's last prayer was for you.
In a home far away o'er the ocean
Your mother's last prayer was for you.

Pittsburgh, N. S., Nov. 25, 1916.

Through your kind favor as a reader of your paper for many years and out of respect for our departed Pastor Russell and on behalf of the many readers of your paper, I would like to answer the following question that has been asked by the questioner below. To answer him through your paper:

"Beth Eden, Chateau and Juniata streets, Rev. James E. Darby—11 A. M., sermon by the Rev. Charles E. Stanton; 7:45 P. M., "'Spiritualism—Will Pastor Russell Have Another Chance?'"

It is the fool who says in his heart there is no God. (Psa. 14:1) "Will Pastor Russell have another chance?" you ask. Well as one of the many who has the same light and knowledge as he—I would answer, No, neither does he expect it or do those who believe with Him, it is those who have the greater light who stand in the most responsible place before God, their Judge and whose consecration through light and knowledge and exceptance by God through Christ is vitalized which when so tried means life eternal or death eternal to such in this age of foreknowledge who through Christ and His Ransom Sacrifice and in harmony with Him has layed down their human all gained through Him as for the flesh. (Rome 12:1) and this has came into covenant relationship to God and through this they have their first individual chance granted through Christ before the vast majority who have lost out through Adam for himself and seed in him, the whole world, some whoes eye of understanding who hate sin and love righteousness and who seek God in spirit and truth in this gospel age under light and knowledge, get their first individual chance now, some chosen from among men from pentecost till the end of this harvest and tested for the Heavenly or spiritual garner only, but the vast majority as yet blinded by the God of this world. (2 Cor. 4:4). Will in God's due time and way get their eyes open to the Heavenly or vitalizing light and knowledge (Isa. 35:8-10) and then get their first individual chance which Adam lost for them as a whole, then through Christ in the coming age, yet not to the spiritual nature or privil ages of this age, or its station with Christ. Paul says of them, "Do ye not know (when so changed to be with Christ as now is) ye shall (then) judge Angels (the fallen Angel) (Jude 6) do you not know ye shall judge the world." (1 Cor. 6:2-3) Many think or dream they have the true light, yet they have not, the God given light, yet their blindness is often a blessing in disguise that when they do get the pure light and knowledge of the incoming age they will then get their first individual chance under true light and knowledge. (Isa. 35 chap.) which Adam lost for us as a whole race. (Ezek. 18:2-4. Jer. 31:29-31. John 5:28-29). Yet many with the measure of the light of our day will certainly merit stripes if not second death according to their violation to their conscience, for God is not to be mocked. Oh! no, Pastor Russell does not need any more chances, he has had his first and only individual chance, thank God by being brought into covenant relationship with God through Christ in this age through the Heavenly light and knowledge which brings the vital responsibility that but few as yet have. His full share of grace in Christ of God, which few know the way, for as the Master stated of this age conditions, straight is the gate and narrow the way and few find it (Matt. 7:14) also many are called and few are chosen (Matt. 22:14) to such a high calling. (Cor. 1:26-28. Gal. 3:29). Vow with Christ, but thank God, this is to only open up the highway of holliness in the incoming age for the many (Isa. 35:8) and not the God dishonoring eternal torture theory. God will soon step forth through the Christ of God and grant the needed light and knowledge that is to bless this poor benighted world mistaught by the God of this world. (Cor. 4:4) for God is love. Then the world in general will get their first individual chance through light and knowledge, and He whose right it will then be will try or judge them on equal bases by that which He shall supply. (Psalm 2, Acts 17:31). Ah! surely God is love, and it is the fool who saith in his heart there is no God. (Psa. 14:1) An intelligent first cause, for who has been his councellor? (Rome 11:34.

Appreciatively yours,
ROBERT J. CRAIG.

FAKE HORSE DEALERS FOUND GUILTY BY JURY

Captain Arch Mackrell and His Shrewd Detectives Land the Fakirs and Secure a Conviction--Prominent Politicians as Character Witnesses--Great Work by Assistant District Attorney

The beginning of the end has arrived for the fakirs, the fake furniture dealers, the fake jewelers, the fake horse dealer and all the other business fakirs big and little. The Pittsburgh Bureau of Detectives won a notable victory last week when they secured the conviction of William Davis, the head of the big fake horse dealing ring; Charles H. Bates his chief assistant and Elisha Bates, better known as Lusher Bates, another of his assistants, on a charge of conspiracy to defraud.

For more than a half score of years Davis has been growing fat and rich off the profits of a chain of stables where innocent purchasers of horses were swindled in the most brazen manner. Davis came to Pittsburgh from Philadelphia where he carried on the fake horse business until an enterprising newspaper, with a desire to serve and protect its readers conducted an investigation and drove him out of the city. The Pittsburgh papers however with more of a desire to share in the ill gotten gains of Davis through the money they get for his advertisements, have taken no part in the prosecution of Davis but have even suppressed all but the merest mention of his trial and conviction.

Davis is reported to be worth $150,000, secured largely from the profits of his fake horse sales. He lives in a good neighborhood on the North side, belongs to clubs and lodges and at his trial bankers, real estate dealers, hotel keepers, business men and even the congressman from his district were in court testifying to his good reputation among his neighbors. His neighbors presumably had never bought horses from him.

A different story of Davis's character and dealings was told on the witness stand by John W. Fitch, an honest farmer of Nottingham, Washington county, and his son who had bought a team of Belgian mares from Davis in April 1916, also by S. G. Steele, an undertaker from Wierton, W. Va., who had bought the same team from Davis in December 1915. Neither of them had anything to show for money which had gone to fatten Davis's bank account.

Early in 1915 Davis added the stable at 107 Park Way to his chain of fake sales stables in Allegheny. Charles H. Davis, a big husky "Gyp" as the fake horse dealers are known to the police and the other honest horse dealers, was put in charge of the place, on a commission basis. Davis said he was a partner. Bates only claimed to be a salesman on a commission. Lusher Bates, father of Charlie Bates was also employed about the place as a salesman.

December 5 and December 12, 1915 there appeared in the classified columns of the Sunday Gazette Times an ad. reading:

$225 Belgian Mares.

Black (half sisters) 7 and 9 years old, one in foal, weigh 2700; cost $410. In number one condition, guaranteed single line leaders. Reason for selling lost lease on farm."

S. G. Steele, at that time living in Chester, W. Va., saw the ad. and with implicit faith in anything he saw in the Gazette Times, a faith which has since been badly shattered, came to the city to purchase this team for use in his business. He was shown the team by Charley Bates, but one of the mares was lame and the other being in foal they would not suit. He was next shown a black horse with a white stripe in its face and after a considerable time another big black horse was found to match it. They were shown and suited Mr. Steele. After some dickering and a pretended telephone conversation a price of $210 was agreed upon and the money paid. As Mr. Steele was going away "Bones" Garrigan, a hanger on at the stable, quietly suggested to Mr. Steele that he had better have the team hitched. This was thought to be a good idea and the team was hitched to a wagon. They were perfectly gentle, could be handled in any way by any one. Charley Bates drove the team around the block and when he returned and stopped the horses they were frothing at the mouth, striking and kicking so that it was difficult to get near them. With difficulty they were unhitched and led into the stable. Of course Mr. Steele did not want that kind of a team to drive in a hearse. When the money was paid Charley Bates said if the team was not satisfactory the money would be refunded. Steele has not received his money yet. He got a team however that turned out to be worthless and after a suit received another which was worse. An appeal was made to the police and Detectives E. T. McGough and V. F. Porter were assigned to make an investigation.

In April 1916 John W. Fitch came into the Detective Bureau and reported to Archibald Mackrell, Civilian Aide in charge of the bureau, that he had been dealing with Davis for a team. According to Fitch he had seen an advertisement in the Pittsburgh Sunday Press for a team of Belgian Mares for sale, and the address was given as 107 Parkway. He had gone to the stable and there met Charles Bates. The Belgian mares were shown him but one was lame and he rejected her. Then a black horse with a stripe in its face was mated with the mare, a bargain was struck and $240 was paid by Fitch into the hands of Charley Bates. Then Fitch, his son and Charley Bates went out to a hotel. When they returned to the stable Bones Garrigan and "Lusher" Bates were hitching the team to a wagon. "Lusher" Bates drove the team around the block and when they returned the horses were frothing at the mouth, striking and kicking and it was with difficulty any one could approach them to get them unhitched. The team would not do. There were no others that would suit. Bates refused to return the money and Mr. Fitch feeling that he had been beaten applied to the police. Mr. Mackrell after hearing the story ordered McGough and Porter to conduct an investigation. This they did with the result that informations were made charging Davis, Charley Bates and Lusher Bates with obtaining money under false pretense, conspiracy to defraud and larceny by trick and device. Warrants were issued and Davis and the Bates were arrested.

At the hearing before Magistrate J. J. Sweeney, they were represented by Richard Martin, formerly assistant district attorney, who is employed by the year as counsel for Davis. They were bound over to the grand jury in spite of all Martin could do to convince the magistrate that no offence had been committed. Steele heard of the arrest and came to the city and made similar informations and more arrests followed.

Richard A. Briggs, superintendent of the newsboys home had also purchased a horse from Bates and all he received was a cancelled check. He also joined the growing army of information makers. Charles Portner, a coal hauler in the Hill district of Pittsburgh, had parted with $110 which had gone to increase Davis's wealth and respectibility and he made an information. A young man from West Newton had also purchased the Belgian mares, only to see them perform after being hitched and doped and had parted with $165 to pay for the exhibition. He also made an information and Attorney Martin was busy earning his annual retainer.

Magistrate Sweeney permitted a settlement in the Portner case and Davis paid $75 and for more than four months has failed to pay the balance. A settlement was allowed in the West Newton case but the money has never been paid and the prosecutions in these cases will be revived. Davis has friends among them politicians and efforts were made to have the prosecutions stopped. Mayor Armstrong was appealed to but refused to interfere. An appeal was made to District Attorney R. H. Jackson but he let the cases go on. The grand jury found true bills and after a number of postponements the cases were brought to trial November 13. Assistant District Attorney Peter Cancilliere was assigned to try the cases and it was largely to his masterly presentation of the case that the verdict was won. The cases were assigned to Judge Sloan of Clearfield county who is assisting the Allegheny county courts but Attorney Martin objected. He did not want them before a country judge and they were transferred to Judge Ambrose Reed's room. From the first Attorney Martin attempted to take advantage of the laws technicalities but he was met at every point by Cancilliere, who presented his case and his law points so clearly that the judge sustained him on all points. The proof showed that the advertisement seen by Fitch in April of 1915 was identical with that seen by Steele in December 1915. In spite of vigorous objections by Attorney Martin Mr. Steele was allowed to go on the stand and tell his experience in purchasing the Belgian mares. Fitch told his story and they agreed. Dr. George H. Dunn a veterinary surgeon of long experience testified the conditions of the horses after they had been driven could only have been caused by the application of some local irritant. Davis's ownership in the stable was proven by his own admissions and his array of character witnesses, who had never bought horses from him, were unable to save him. The trial lasted three days and the jury was out less than 15 minutes when it returned with a verdict of guilty of conspiracy. The beginning of the end has come for Davis's activity in Pittsburgh. The Belgian mares have retired from the market and their price is no longer quoted in the daily papers. The day of the swindlers in horses, furniture, jewelry or furs is drawing to a close. Captain Mackrell, Cancilliere, McGough and Porter are putting the fear of God and the law in their hearts.

The case of Davis will be followed as a precedent in the other trials against him and in prosecutions against the furniture fakirs, the jewelry fakirs, the fur fakirs, the cheap clothing fakir and the whole swindling crew will be driven from the city. It was a notable victory. The National Labor Tribune will aid the Detective Bureau and it will give ample space in bringing, to the attention of the general public the base frauds practiced on the buying public and how tremendous influence is brought to bear upon the Courts through character witnesses who are well meaning but who are ignorant of true facts.

The New Market Houses Finest in the World

meat that in some way escapes the inspectors. This fraud would not be tolerated by the Officers and members of the Diamond Market Protective Association nor by Superintendent Townsend or Market Clerk Hachn. Thus the buyers take no chances and honesty and fair dealing are the watchwords and anything that savors to sharp and cunning practices are not to be found in Pittsburgh's leading market houses.

The officers and Directors of the Diamond Market Protective Association are Benjamin Kalchthaler, President, E. A. Kimmich, Vice President, Harry Riester, Secretary, James W. Fisher, Treasurer. The Directors ae as follows: A. Englhardt, Frank V. Ganter, John A. Ganter, Wm. F. Fried, Wm. Mall, George Gledhill, Ad Riested.

The Association was organized in 1910 for the protection of the standholders as well as the buying public and this organization has developed into one of the most powerful in the interest of the buyers.

No fraud is tolerated and the short weight standholder has been eliminated long ago. He went with the standholder who wished to handle inferior goods and this aggregation is now doing business in the bargain meat stores and in corners where he can best evade the inspectors and the officers, who are protecting the buying public. He is not in the market houses at Market and Diamond Streets.

The police are there and the members of the Association have no room for him. Neither is the bellowing faking huxter there; he too has been cleaned out and the patrons of the market have nothing to fear. Every purchase has the endorsement of men of sterling qualities and whose reputation is much more to them than a paltry sum that could be pointed to as ill gotten gain.

The land upon which the new market houses stand is valued at $1,662,570
The buildings are valued at..... 570,000

Total Valuation $2,232,570

The first market house was erected in conjunction with the court house in 1791. This was abandoned in 1841 and torn down in 1853. The second market house was erected in 1853 and the building was then considered one of the most modern in the city. This market is well remembered by those of the present generation and was long the foremost meeting hall in Pittsburgh. Here it was that nearly every President of the United States in the last quarter of a century first presented himself and the party which he represented before he was elected to that exalted office.

The first section of this market house was torn down in 1914 and the second in 1916. Both buildings were replaced with the present buildings. The present new market houses are heralded as the best and most perfect sanitary market houses in the United States and that means the world over. Thus Pittsburgh, the greatest industrial centre in the world boasts of the most advanced market houses ever built and with their present modern facilities and latest improved sanitary refrigerating plants and other modern devices lead the march of progress in this present generation which is regarded as the most enlightened since the days of Babylonia or the culture and refinement of Greece and Rome to which modern civilization sometimes points with pride.

Talk About Orders - War Profits--War Stocks, After the War--What?

If You Have Money to Investigate--- Investigate This Proposition.

Place your money where it is absolutely safe and where it will bring you the largest returns. Invest in the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company—now selling at par $1.00 per share. The Gasoline Industry is the livest and most talked of industry in the country today. It will continue to be the most important industry for the next twenty years to come.

When you purchase shares in the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company you are purchasing an interest in a company with an established business and on an absolutely safe and sound financial basis. The immense property controlled by the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company is in an old established oil and gas field—the best territory in the world for obtaining WET GAS, the kind of gas from which the Highest Grade of Gasoline is produced. The territory is ABSOLUTELY PROVEN by the drilling of 31 wells—all producers. The supply of gas is practically inexhaustible. The property is less than 5% developed, yet the company can show daily gross earnings in excess of $600.00 and is producing approximately 7,500 gallons of gasoline per day and over 1,000,000 cubic feet of refined gas.

Such a Splendid Showing clearly indicates that the proposition IS NOT A PROSPECT OR IN AN UNDEVELOPED STAGE. The future possibilities are most remarkable for the reason that there are drilling locations for at least 800 additional wells. If you want QUICK AND LARGE RETURNS on your investment—then place your order AT ONCE for a substantial block of the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company.

After the war—what? The bottom as well as the Profits will drop out of the WAR SECURITIES—but the business of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company will go on as usual and the profits will be greater than ever—because the consumption of gasoline will be greater than ever, and also the price.

By the first of the year the management of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company estimates that the company will be producing about 20,000 gallons of gasoline per day. Increased production means increased earnings. Do you suppose that at that time you will be able to purchase the stock at par $1.00 per share? It is not at all likely. In all probability by that time the stock will be quoted on the New York Curb around $2.00 or possibly $3.00 per share. Do not delay, but PLACE YOUR ORDER NOW for a substantial block of the stock. All indications point to the fact that the stock will be placed on a DIVIDEND PAYING BASIS at an early date. If you want any of this stock you will have to ACT QUICKLY. The allotment at our disposal is limited. It is being rapidly exhausted. If a proposition has MERIT back of it you do not have to be offering it for sale indefinitely. Such propositions are quickly taken up. The very best and most intelligent class of investors are purchasing the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company. They realize the unusual conditions surrounding this industry, and furthermore they are familiar with the Tremendous Profits already made—and they are fully aware of the fact THIS IS THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY THE GENERAL PUBLIC HAVE EVER HAD TO SHARE IN THE PROFITS. You can find plenty of opportunities prenested to you for investing—but we believe we are safe in saying—that this is the first opportunity the public have ever had to invest in a company producing Gasoline in Large, Paying Quantities and safe and sound in every way.

Immediate action on your part is necessary if you want to secure any of this stock. The whole proposition will stand the closest investigation. Orders by wire will receive our prompt attention. Booklet and other interesting data furnished on application. Bank and commercial references.

"JESUS CHRIST, THE FIRST AND LAST"

Revelation 1:1-8, 17-20. December 3.

The Message of the Risen Christ—In a Trance the Apostle John Saw a Series of Visions Foretelling the Leading Events of the Gospel Age, the Seven Stages of the Development of the Gospel Church and the Setting Up of the Messianic Kingdom.

"Fear not; I am the First and the Last, and the Living One; and I was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore."—Verses 17, 18. R. V.

THE VISIONS granted St. John, recorded in the Revelation, are in no sense to be understood as realities; and this is the significance of his statement, "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day"—Sunday.

There are many reasons for concluding that while the messages were given to the seven churches specified, and were applicable to them, nevertheless these messages should have a wider application to the whole Church of Christ, the number seven representing completeness, and the order representing different epochs in the history of the Church. Thus the Church at Ephesus would represent the condition of the Church at the time of the writing of the message; while the Laodicean Church would represent the Church in the end of the Gospel Age—today. The other churches would correspondingly represent different epochs between then and now. The thought that the number seven signifies completeness is emphasized in the other symbolical representations—the seven spirits, the seven golden candlesticks, the seven stars, etc.

Among the Candlesticks.

Verse 5 teaches what is in direct antagonism to the creeds of Christendom—that the risen Christ was "the first begotten from the dead." That is, our Lord was the first to experience a resurrection in the full sense of the word. Although some before Him were temporarily awakened, they relapsed into death; for they were only partial illustrations of resurrection, to assure men of the Divine Power to accomplish it fully in the due time appointed of God.

Verse 7 clearly teaches that at our Lord's Second Advent the world will be far from converted to God. Some Scriptures taken disconnectedly seem to teach that the world will be converted before His return; but when God's Word is viewed as a whole, there will be found to favor the opposite view—that Christ comes for the very purpose of converting the world, and that the glorified Church of the Gospel Age will share with their Lord in His Messianic Reign.

Christ and the glorified Church will be spirit beings, invisible to men. Our Lord's presence will be manifested to the world by exhibitions of power and glory, not to their natural sight, but to their eyes of understanding. His presence and His authority will be recognized in the punishments and the blessings flowing to mankind from His Reign. Some will discern the new Ruler sooner than will others. But ultimately "every eye shall see [Greek, horao—discern] Him." "He cometh with clouds"; and while these clouds of trouble will hang heavy and dark, when the mountains—kingdoms—are trembling and falling, when the earth—organized society—is disintegrating, some will realize that Jehovah's Anointed is beginning His Reign.

What the Beloved Disciple Saw.

St. John's attention was first attracted by a trumpet-like voice behind him. Turning, he saw in symbol what the Lord's people may now see with the eye of faith and understanding—One clothed like a priest, walking amongst seven golden candlesticks. We are not to regard the word-picture of Verses 13-16 as our Lord's portrait; for it is merely symbolic. The countenance of the glorified Lord was so splendid that St. John fell as dead. But our Lord touched him gently, raising him up and speaking words of comfort and love.

This same message the Father has sent to us through the Son. We must recognize that our Lord Jesus was the Beginning and the End of the creation of God, through whom God made all things else, and who is next to Jehovah, representing the Father in everything. (Revelation 3:14; Colossians 1:15; John 1:1-3; 1 Corinthians 8:6.) We must recognize our Lord as the One who really died for our sins, but who was raised from death by the Divine Power, and who is alive for evermore. We must recognize that He has the key, the power over Hades—the tomb—to deliver all therein imprisoned; and that He has the key, the power over death, to liberate all mankind from the dominion of Sin and Death into the full liberty and life of sons of God.

"In His Right Hand Seven Stars."

We are also to recognize that in His hand—His power—are the "seven stars," angels, messengers, of the seven Churches. Apparently the stars represent special servants through whom the Lord would send the appropriate message for each epoch in the Church's experience; for the messages to the various Churches are addressed to these "stars."

THE FAKE PICTURE MAN IN THE LIGHT

The Furniture Man With the Picture Man and the Horse Fakir Closely Watched by the Police.

The furniture and the fake horse dealers are being dragged into court at a lively rate and the fake photograph collector who wrings an extortionate price for the frame is coming into the lime light. The latter species was introduced to the Tribune through Mrs. Oliver Corwin, 318 Seventeenth avenue, Homestead, when an effort was made to hold her up for a frame she did not order but her refusal meant the keeping of a photograph, which she valued very highly, or the coming across with an extortionate amount.

Mrs. Corwin was subjected to insults and she was told she would have to settle although she said she was unable to meet the unwarranted demands. The work the Tribune was doing got to her in some way and she enclosed in her letter her troubles. No sooner had the letter been received than the matter was transferrd to the legal department of the Tribune and Attorney A. M. Lee, head of the department, got to work. Within a few days a letter was received from Mrs. Corwin that her photograph had been returned. Here is her letter:

Mr. Alfred M. Lee, Attorney for National Labor Tribune,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Sir:—

I thought that I would write you a few lines to let you know that I have received the photograph from ————. I was very glad to get it and I assure you I am thankful to the National Labor Tribune for the wonderful work you are doing in protecting those who are unable to pay attorney's fees and who have no one to take care of their interests when they innocently fall into the hands of men who would take from them everything they have in this world. I am telling my neighbors of the great work you are doing.

Again I thank you, and I am ever your friend.

MRS. OLIVER CORWIN,

318 Seventeenth Ave., Homestead, Pa.

The name of the "picture" concern is withheld because as soon as the attorneys representing the company were informed of the methods employed by the company whom they represented they immediately demanded the return of the photograph.

The fake horse dealers are attempting to secure a new trial, but there is but little hope for their transactions were so foul and base and their knavery so obvious.

The furniture men and the fake jeweler are next on the list. Shoppers should not enter auction stores. Guard against this set who are practicing all the cheap tricks of the shark. The Tribune will continue to wage war against the fakirs and hopes t oeventually exterminate them.

Keep away from the fur fakir, the town is crowded with them.

BIGELOW, THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE, IN OFFICE

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS R 1918 L

Bungling and Blundering Bill and Pennsylvania's Corrupt Governor Before the Calcium--Magee's Hopes Blasted.

The appointment of Edward Manning Bigelow to the office of Director of the Department of Public Works, an office so long held by him under previous administrations, brings general satisfaction to the taxpayers of Pittsburgh, as well as the citizens in general and the wisdom of Mayor Armstrong in this selection is applauded by every one.

There is no use hiding the fact that public sentiment was repidly crystalizing against Mayor Armstrong and his cabinet and there was great need of some strengthening influence by which confidence might be inspired and new life injected. The defeat of Congressman A. J. Barchfeld and Congressman William Coleman is regarded by the opposing Republican faction as a direct rebuke to Mayor Armstrong and his lieutenant Coroner Samuel Jamison as well as a bad omen foreboding destruction to E. V. Babcock and the complete routing of the element represented by the latter. This of course means the hurling of the judicial boom of the Honorable Charles Kline into the jaws of the enemy to be horribly mangled and bruised. There is no apology to be offered for the bungling, blundering campaign conducted by the lamentable and incongruous Bill Kirker. Bill is now everywhere being congratulated by the Democrats for the marvelous success he achieved in pulling off such a grand and glorious, and never to be forgotten Democratic victory. Representative laboring men were scarce on the Republican side and when representative men were willing to make a sacrifice their services were rejected. Men who knew the labor movement from childhood, capable men, who were thoroughly competent to discuss all phases of the labor questions before the public and men who could meet any argument advanced, actually pleaded for an opportunity to talk but they were rejected.

EDWARD M. BIGELOW.

The New Director of Public Works of Pittsburgh.

Men capable of delivering at least hundreds of votes and men whose influence was much in excess of that, pleaded for an opportunity to go to the mill gates and talk, were merely insulted and humiliated when they begged the privilege. These men cared nothing for Congressman Barchfeld but they sought only to aid the Republican party as a whole and they looked only to success of the principles in which they had implicit faith. The eight-hour law was a fine farce. The law was passed and why talk about a law that already existed. Fifty thousand miners, a large number of whom are in Barchfeld's district have been enjoying the eight-hour law for 19 years and nearly every man in the mills has been working on a tonnage basis while Jones & Laughlin's men have been working three eight-hour shifts for years. The only question at issue was that of a few railroad men who never refused to pull the cars from scab mines or scab plants at any time there was a strike and no man knew this better than Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor. But why fight this battle over? Wilson is President and every loyal American falls in behind.

However, Bigelow is the next Director of the Department of Public Works and Director Bigelow is not only the most efficient but he is the best organizer and the most economical man for the place that could be found. His very presence inspires confidence. His ability is a beacon of hope; he know what the people want and he is capable of surmounting the greatest obstacles. There is no sham about him; he HAS HIS FACE TO THE PAST.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, has evidently not heard of the Clayton law, which declares that "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

This act removed labor from the Sherman anti-trust law and notifies federal judges that they can no longer issue injunctions against workers on the theory that labor is a commodity.

President Hise, however, ignores this forward-looking legislation and insists that if the federal government has the right to regulate freight rates for a car load of sewer pipe it should also be employed to regulate the wages of employes.

He told the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in session in this city, that "there could be a set of experts and statisticians at work all the time, considering the expenses of the railroads, wages, the cost of living, and a comparison of these with other lines of industry, in determining what is a just wage and working hour."

The educator did not include living costs for railroad presidents and bondholders of these properties. According to his theory, only working men should be investigated by "experts and statisticians, and the opinion of these latter would be the basis for wages and hours.

FARMERS ARE NON-PARTISAN.

PALATKA, Fla., Nov. 27.—The American Federation of Labor is not the only organization that "rewards its friends and punishes its enemies," and refuses to be engulfed in partisan politics.

"The Farmers' union will stand by its friends wherever it finds them," said President Charles S. Barrett in his opening address to the annual convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America.

"The union has never been in partisan politics and will not be," he said. "Yet right here you may take it from me that no amount of partisan lashing shall drive the union from the support of its friends nor force it to sustain its political enemies. Knowing itself, its powers and limitations, the union is determined to control itself. This simply means that the union is not going to take its orders and directions from the outside."

STRIKE INJUNCTIONS SHOULD BE IGNORED.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—"Disregard strike injunctions, let the consequences be what they may," was the unanimous declaration of the convention of the American Federation of Labor, last Monday.

This position was taken mainly because of a recent decision by the Massachusetts supreme court which has been considered by the A. F. of L. executive council and which was reported to the convention. The court reversed a state law prohibiting strike injunctions. The law declared that the right to labor is a personal right and not a property right.

The convention sustained the report of its committee that the executive council "further pursue the investigation of the case, and if there be any opportunity for a rehearing on appeal, that that procedure be authorized by the convention.

"Your committee would further recommend that it be true sense of this convention that it seems to be the settled purpose of interests antagonistic to the freedom of men and women who labor to persuade and then use the judiciary to misconstrue constitutional guarantees, and thereby nullify legislative enactments so as to leave but one remedy, and we, therefore, recommend that any injunctions dealing with the relationship of employer and employe, and bused upon the dictum, 'Labor is Property,' be wholly and absolutely treated as usurpation and disregarded, let the consequences be what they may.

"Such a decision as that rendered by the supreme court of the state of Massachusetts has its roots in class interests; it is usurpation and tyranny.

"Freedom came to man because he believed that resistance to tyranny is obedience to God; as it came so it must be maintained.

"Kings could be and were disobeyed, and sometimes deposed. In cases of this kind judges must be disobeyed, and should be impeached."

EASTERN WIRE MEN STRIKE.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 27.—Electrical Workers' union is winning its demand for an eight-hour day, increased pay and the union shop. The New England Engineering company, which does business throughout the state, is opposing the union and strikes are on in this city, New Haven, New London and Bridgeport.

HORSESHOERS ORGANIZE.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 27.—Journeymen horseshoers in this city have organized after months of persistent work on the part of a few active spirits who refused to get discouraged.

CHAIRMAN WM. E. CROW THANKS TRIBUNE

The State Committee, Through Its Chairman, Gives Tribune Praise for Its Republican Stand.

Republican State Committee of Pennsylvania, 506 South Broad St.
Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 15, 1916.

Mr. J. H. Vitchestain, Editor National Labor Tribune, Pittsburgh, Pa.

My dear Editor:—

To fail to express to you my appreciation of the splendid support given to the Republican Party by the National Labor Tribune during the campaign just closed, would be an act of ingratitude on my part.

Our records of the 1916 campaign would not be complete without a memorandum that thanks were returned by the Republican State Committee to the National Labor Tribune for the extraordinary efforts displayed in writing and publishing the most effective industrial and labor articles in the interest of the Republican Party that appeared during the campaign.

There were but few labor papers in the country who supported the Republican Standard Bearers, Hughes and Fairbanks, and your forcible articles, coming as they did, from the oldest and most conservative Labor paper in the country gave ample reason for great Republican rejoicing.

The practicle lessons you drew and the convincing arguments you advanced in the reproduction of articles from your back numbers of the National Labor Tribune in which were recalled most vividly the industrial paralysis and privation and want during that period of Democracy prior to the election of McKinley and the repeal of the Wilson and Gorman Tariff Bill, brought home with striking conviction what we may expect. Your articles showing that the eight-hour law had been granted the miners in January 1898, nineteen years ago, during the administration of McKinley and further that advance after advance in wages had followed in addition to the establishment of the Department of Mines and Mining and the Test Stations with mining conditions improved a thousand per cent and all during Republican Administrations, sent home the truth with mighty force.

The facts you produced showing the advances and general improvements in all industrial communities under Republican administrations were indisputable and coming ts they did from the greatest industrial center of the world were reproduced with remarkable effect throughout the country.

Candidly speaking I was of the opinion the Republican vote throughout the great state of Pennsylvania would be reduced by reason of the false issues raised by the enemies.

Your work is worthy of special commendation, and I, therefore, express to you the thanks of the Republican State Committee, to which I desire to add my own sense of obligation, as well as the personal appreciation of those elected on the state ticket.

Again with kind regards and best wishes for your inestimable support and unswerving loyalty, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

W. HARRY BAKER, Sec. W. E. CROW, Chairman.

SAYS PACKERS NOT TRUTHFUL.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Nov. 27.—At the annual convention of the American Meat Packers' association, the president declared that the numerous strikes in this industry were not justified, as the employes have been satisfied and "there is absolutely no need for such disturbances."

These statements are denied by Secretary-Treasurer Homer B. Call writing in The Butcher Workman, official newspaper of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen. He says:

"To find the men in the large meat industries who are satisfied you will be compelled to go into the offices, for the conditions of the men working in the plants are now, and have been for many years, worse than African slavery. Under the present system the workman is not considered ar a human being, but is known as a unit and a cog in the machinery. He is not allowed to look up nor speak, but is compelled to bend over his work, making one continuous motion, until, in some instances, he goes insane, and that for the paltry sum of less than an average of $7 per week."

WANT LIVING COST PROBED.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—The A. F. of L. convention has declared in favor of the appointment of a federal commission to investigate the high cost of living and recommend to congress measures designed to remedy this situation and to prevent its recurrence. The resolution was submitted by Secretary Green of the United Mine Workers of America. It is declared that "the prices of all necessaries of life have increased and are continuing to increase so rapidly as to constitute a menace to the standard of living of the American wage earner," and that "the enormous profits amassed by grain speculators meat packers, mine owners, many manufacturers, and by jobbers and dealers in food and other commodities, as well as by the railroads, express companies and other public service corporations, indicate that these prices are to a large extent artificial and unjustifiable."

EIGHT-HOUR LAW VOID SAYS FEDERAL COURT

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 27.—Last Wednesday Judge Wm. C. Hook of the United States Circuit Court held that the Adamson railroad eight-hour law is unconstitutional and denied the government's plea that an injunction suit started by the Missouri, Oklahoma and Gulf railroad be dismissed.

This road is in the hands of receivers, who were appointed by Judge Hook.

The case was presented to the court the day previous and Judge Hook acknowledged "it is far from being an agreeable duty for a judge to record a judicial conclusion to a conviction that he would stand to in every circumstance."

"Upon a consideration of the Adamson law and of what is said of its practical effect, and what was intended to be accomplished by it, the judgment is that, as the court construes the terms of the law, it cannot be sustained"

Judge Hook stated while the government is not entitled to special consideration, its department of justice is entitled to every consideration in its plea for haste in settling the controversy. The court, therefore, issued the order in such form that an appeal goes direct to the United States Supreme court, which convenes December 4 next. The government immediately notified Judge Hook that it would appeal from his decision.

The Adamson law reads that same shall take effect January 1 next.

DEATHS IN INDUSTRY APPALL.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 27.—In calling attention to the fourth annual industrial, welfare and efficiency conference, held in this city this week, Commissioner Jackson of the state department of labor and industy says:

"The industrial accident list this year in Pennsylvania has already passed the 200,000 mark, with over 2,000 deaths, and will, I believe, approach 300,000 by the end of the year with the corresponding number of deaths. It will take earnest and sustained action on the part of all to stop this enormous economic loss.

"In this country as in most other countries but little distinct attention has been given to the problem of employment by the community as a whole. The financial waste to the state, the employer, and the employe, by reason of this haphazard method of dealing with this most important problem is worthy of very immediate and energetic attention."

ANOTHER STRIKE "SOLUTION."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Henry R. Towne, president of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing company, urged the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to accept his plan of avoiding strikes. It involves a system of contract between the railroad and their employes with the establishment of funds by both parties from which penalties will be paid for breach of contract. The plan further involves contracts which are individual between the railroad and each employe and not with a railroad employes' union.

The latter plan caused the New York street car strike of last September, which is still on. The Canadian industrial disputes act prohibits a strike or lockout in a public utility until after a commission investigates. Dominion trade unionists show that it is impossible to convict an employer of enforcing a lockout, while the contrary is true when workers strike.

Mr. Towne's "solution" of industrial disputes would have the same ending.

HIGH WAGES; GREATER OUTPUT.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Van H. Manning, director of the federal bureau of mines, told the convention of the American Mining Congress that American wages are compensated by the greater value of the output per man and that American industries have overcome foreign competition "by reason of abundance of our natural resources, ingenuity of our inventors and improved machinery."

He protested against the too little regard for the health and safety of the men who labor and declared that "we have become involved in an orgy of hasty exploitation and we are nearing the maximum production of some of the minerals, though the original supply, if wisely mined and utilized, would have lasted many years longer and brought us ten times the wealth."

R. R. PAYS FOR DELAY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The United States Supreme court has affirmed a judgment for $16,500 in favor of Nathaniel Stringer, brakeman, against the Vandalia railroad for injuries in 1905 when he jumped from a speeding locomotive in fear of a boiler explosion. The court added an additional $590 on the verdict under a federal law permitting such an allowance when cases are appealed for apparently no other purpose than to delay final settlement.

The Divine Plan of the Ages

BY C. T. RUSSELL, 1886.

FIRST VOLUME SCRIPTURE STUDIES.

But when the gospel which Jesus taught came to be understood after Pentecost, it was seen by the Church that the blessings for the world were to be of an enduring character, and that for the accomplishment of this purpose the Kingdom would be spiritual, and composed of Israelites indeed, a "little flock" selected from among both Jews and Gentiles to be exalted to spiritual nature and power. Hence we read that Jesus brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. (2 Tim. 1:10) And since Jesus' day yet more light shines, as he foretold it would, saying, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now: howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth . . . and he will show you things to come."—John 16: 12. 13.

There came a time, however, after the apostles fell asleep when the majority of the Church began to neglect the lamp, and to look to human teachers for leading: and the teachers, puffed up with pride, assumed titles and offices, and began to lord it over God's hritage. Then by degrees there came into existence a special class called "the clergy," who regarded themselves, and were regarded by others, as the proper guides to faith and practice, aside from the Word of God. Thus in time the great system of Papacy was developed by an undue respect for the teachings of fallible men and a neglect of the Word of the infallible God.

Serious indeed have been the evil results brought about by this neglect of truth. As all know, both the church and the civilized world were almost wholly enslaved by that system, and led to worship the traditions and creeds of men. From this slavery a bold and blessed strike for liberty and the Bible was made, in what is known as The Reformation. God raised up bold champions for his Word, among whom were Luther, Zwingli, Melanchthon, Wycliffe, Knox and others. These called attention to the fact that Papacy had laid aside the Bible and substituted the decrees and dogmas of the church, and pointed out a few of its erroneous teachings and practices, showing that they were built upon tradition, contrary to truth, and opposed to God's Word. These reformers and their adherents were called Protestants, because they protested against Papacy, and claimed the Word of God as the only correct rule of faith and practice. Many faithful souls in the days of the Reformation walked in the light, so far as it was then shining. But since their day Protestants have made little progress, because, instead of walking in the light, they have halted around their favorite leaders, willing to see as much as they saw but nothing more. They set boundaries to their progress in the way of truth, hedging in, with the little truth they had, a great deal of error brought along from the "mother" church. For the creeds thus formulated many years ago, the majority of Christians have a superstitious reverence, supposing that no more can be known of God's plans now than was known by the Reformers.

This mistake has been an expensive one; for, aside from the fact that but few great principles of truth were then recovered from the rubbish of error, there are special features of truth constantly becoming due, and of these Christians have been deprived by their creed fences. To illustrate: It was a truth in Noah's day, and one which required the faith of all who would walk in the light then, that a flood was coming, while Adam and others had known nothing of it. It would not be preaching truth now to preach of coming flood, but there are other dispensational truths constantly becoming due, of which, if walking in the light of the lamp, we shall know; so, if we have all the light which was due several hundred years ago, and that only, we are measurably in darkness.

God's word is a great storehouse of food for hungry pilgrims on the shining pathway. There is milk for babies, and strong meat for those more developed (1 Pet. 2:3; Heb. 5:14); and not only so, but it contains food adapted to the different seasons and conditions; and Jesus said the faithful servant should bring forth meat in due season for the household of faith—"things new and old," from the storehouse. (Luke 12:42; Matt. 13:52) It would be impossible to bring forth such things from any sectarian creed or storehouse. We might bring forth some things old and good from each, but nothing new. The truth contained in the creeds of the various sects is so covered and mixed with error that its inherent beauty and real value are not discernable. The various creeds continually conflict and clash; and as each claims a Bible basis, the confusion of thought, and evident discord, are charged to God's Word. This has given rise to the common proverb: "The Bible is an old fiddle, upon which any tune can be played."

How expressive is this of the infidlity of our times, occasioned by misrepresentations of God's Word and character by human traditions, together with the growth of intelligence which will no longer bow in blind and superstitious reverence to the opinions of fellow-men, but dmands a reason for the hope that is in us. The faithful student of the Word shauld be able always to give a reason for his hope. The Word of God alone is able to make wise, and is profitable for doctrine, instruction, etc., "that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished." (1 Pet. 3:15; 2 Tim. 3: 15-17.) Only this one storehouse contains an exhaustless supply of things both new and old—meat in due season for the household. Surely no one who believes the Scripture statement that "the path of the just shineth more and more unto the perfect day" will claim that the perfect day came in Luther's time; and if not, we do well that we take heed to our lamp as unto "a light that shineth in a dark place until the day dawn."—2 Pet. 1:19.

Nor is it sufficient that we find ourselves now in the path of light; we must "walk in the light," continue to make progress, else the light, which does not stop, will pass on and leave us in darkness. The difficulty with many is that they sit down, and do not follow on in the path of light. Take a concordance and examine the texts under the words sit and stand, then compare these with those found under the words walk and run, and you will find a great contrast: Men "sit in darkness," and with "the scornful," and stand among the ungodly, but "walk in the light," and "run for the prize."—Isa. 42:7; Psa. 1:1; Heb. 12:1.

Perfection of knowledge is not a thing of the past, but of the future—the very future, we trust; and until we recognize this fact we are unprepared to appreciate and expect fresh unfoldings of our Father's plan. True, we still go back to th words of the prophets and apostles for all knowledge of the present and the future; not, however, because they always understood God's plans and purposes better than we, but because God used them as his mouthpieces to communicate to us, and to all the Church throughout the Christian Age, truth relative to his plans, as fast as it becomes due. This fact is abundantly proven by the apostles. Paul tells us that God has made known to the Christian Church the mystery (secret) of his will which he had purposed in himself, and had never before revealed, though he had it recorded in dark sayings which could not be understood until due, in order that the eyes of our understanding should be opened to appreciate the "high calling" designed exclusively for believers of the Christian Age. (Eph. 1:9, 10, 17, 18; 3:4-6.) This shows us clearly that neither the prophets nor the angels understood the meaning of the prophecies uttered. Peter says that when they inquired anxiously to know their meaning, God told them that the truths covered up in their prophecies were not for themselves, but for us of the Christian Age. And he exhorts the Church to hape fo still further grace (favor, blessing) in this direction—yet more knowledge of God's plans.—1 Pet. 1:10-13.

It is evident that though Jesus promised that the Church should be guided into all truth, it was to be a gradual unfolding. While the Church, in the days of the apostles, was free from many of the errors which sprang up under and in Papacy, yet we cannot suppose that the early church saw as deeply or as clearly into God's plan as it is possible to see today. It is evident, too, that the different apostles had different degrees of insight into God's plan, thoug all their writings were guided and inspired to God, as truly as were the words of the prophets. To illustrate differences of knowledge, we have but to remember the wavering course, for a time, of Peter and the other apostles, except Paul, when the gospel was beginning to go to the Gentiles. (Acts 10:28; 11: 1-3; Gal. 2: 11-14.) Peter's uncertainty was in marked contrast with Paul's assurance, inspired by the words of the prophets, God's past dealings, and the direct revelations made to himself.

Paul evidently had more abundant revelations than any other apostle. These revelations he was not allowed to make known to the Church, nor fully and plainly even to the other apostles (2 Cor. 12:4; Gal. 2:2), yet we can see a value to th entire church in those visions and revelations given to Paul; for though he was not permitted to tell what he saw, nor to particularize all he knew of the mysteries of God relating to the "ages to come," yet what he saw gave a force shading and depth of meaning to his words, which, in the light of subsequent facts, prophetic fulfilments and the Spirit's guidance, we are able to appreciate more fully than could the early church.

As corroborative of the foregoing statement, we call to mind the last book of the Bible—Revelation, written about A. D. 96. The introductory words announce it as a special revelation of things not previously understood. This proves conclusively that up to that time, at least, God's plan had not been fully revealed. Nor has that book ever been, until now, all that its name imples—an unfolding, a revelation. So far as the early church was concerned, probably none understood any part of the book. Even John, who saw the visions, was probably ignorant of the significance of what he saw. He was both a prophet and an apostle; and while as an apostle he understood and taught what was then "meat in due season," as a prophet he uttered things which would supply "meat" in seasons future for the household.

During the Christian Age, some of the saints sought to understand the Church's future by examining this symbolic book, and doubtless all who read and understood even a part of its teachings were blessed as, promised. (Rev. 1:3.) The book kept opening up to such, and in the days of the Reformation was an important aid to Luther in deciding that the Papacy, of which he was a conscientious minister, was indeed the "Antichrist" mentioned by the Apostle, the history of which we now see fills so large a part of that prophecy.

Thus gradually God opens up his truth and reveals the exceeding riches of his grace; and consequently much more light is due now than at any previous time in the Church's history. "And still new beauties shall we see, And still increasing light."

(To be Continued.)

"Is Mankind Advancing?"

"In a book of the above title Mrs. John Martin administers a stiff rebuke to the pride and self-confidence of our age. She feels, and she argues with great skill, that humanity is not advancing in any real sense. 'The world today,' she remarks, 'is convinced that it is making rapid progress. In western Europe and in America increased wealth production, democratic institutions, free educations, free thought, the opening of opportunities in new countries, the acceleration of travel and communication, have combined to produce upon our generation an exhilarating sense of expansion, of liberation, of growing power.' But this impression, it seems, is an illusion. We have not really progressed. Mrs. Martin likens modern civilization to a runaway locomotive going at tremendous speed on a wrong track. 'We have lost our way,' she says; and adds: 'Man may have risen from the ape; also the ape may be a degenerate man. Men are headed ape-ward quite as frequently as angel-ward.' Time runs an elevator which goes both ways, down as well as up.'

" 'What is progress?' asks Mrs. Martin at the outset of her argument. She replies: 'The word progress should, I believe, be exclusively used to express a rise in human capacity, the development of higher orders of human beings. Thus restricted, it remains, as it should, a strictly qualitative, never a quantitave, term. Improved conditions conduce to progress, and are necessary to progress, but may exist without producing progress. Progress is something more than improvement. Progress means movement forward.' This definition leads on to a wonderful picture:

" 'Looking back along the line of history, we can see that we (mankind) have been traveling a long, long road whose winding way, rising and falling century after century, we can trace back for a few thousand years until it enters a trackless desert and fades utterly from our view in the mists of antiquity. Immediately behind the spot where we now stand there seems to lie a downward slope; that is to say, we seem to have been ascending since the eighteenth, the seventeenth, yes, part of the sixteenth centuries. But the Elizabethan era and the period of the Renaissance in Italy do not lie below us. Life was very full and splendid then; man had climbed to a higher point of outlook than which we now act out our little day. Behind those centuries the way becomes obscure; it seems to pass through deep and silent forests, over dim, somnolent plains, in shadowy twilights and through deserted wastes, until it falls away into a wide, cold swamp, noisome, dark, terrible, abounding in reptiles and the horrid monsters of sick dreams.

" 'Beyond this death-bound stillness of the Dark Ages, the road ascends again into the upper air. Birds are singing, the sunlight touches the grain fields; the bustle of human life appears, troops of soldiery in glittering armor, citizens in gorgeous raiment, all the pomp and pageantry of the triumphant of Roman Empire. Behind Rome the road drops away again suddenly, a deep, sharp drop into a valley beyond which it begins to rise once more and, becoming steeper and steeper, it lifts our gaze to the very mountain top, where among the clouds against the deep blue sky, swept by fresh breezes, enthroned amid snow-white temples, gleaming in the golden sunshine, Greek civilization sits upon the pinnacle of human greatness.'

"Having formulated her definition of progress and expressed her conception of the human zenith, Mrs. Martin goes on to ask by what method we may set about to measure the degree of progress existing in any age. She answers this question in the spirit of Huxley's statement: 'The advance of mankind has everywhere depended upon the production of men of genius,' It is by the number and calibre of its men of genius, she holds, that any epoch must be tested.

"In the realm of practical science and pure thought, Aristotle and Plato are probably the two greatest intellects the world has ever known. 'Aristotle,' says Hegel, 'was a genius beside whom no age has an equal to place;' while Emerson exclaims: 'Compare Plato with other men. How many ages have gone by and he remains unapproached!' 'Have we, in modern times,' Mrs. Martin inquires, 'any thinkers who can compare with these ancient Greeks? Kant may be cited, and Darwin and Herbert Spencer; but are they as great as Plato and Aristotle? Very few would seriously maintain that Plato and Aristotle have ever been equaled, much less surpassed.

" 'Greek sculpture, by almost universal consent, is unexcelled. The work of Phidias has no rival unless it be the work of Michael Angelo. Greek poetic genius finds transcendent expression in Homer, one of the four or five greatest figures in the world's literature, and the dramas of Sophocles, Euripides and Aechylus take their place with the dramas of Shakespeare. Dante, of the thirteenth century, and Goethe, of the eighteenth century, have no peers today. The great story-tellers: Mrs. Martin reminds us, 'appeared, as was fitting, in the childhood of the race. The writers of the Old Testament were delightful raconteurs. Ruth is the most lovely of idyls, the stories of Adam and Eve, Joseph and his brethren, Moses and Pharaoh's daughter, Samson and Delilah, are unsurpassable as tales, while the story of the Exodus and the adventures of the children of Israel in the wilderness are told with unending charm and epic fire. As for animal stories, fables, etc., Aesop, writing seven centuries before Christ, has never been surpassed for point and brevity as well as for practical common sense. Boccassio (1313) and Cervantes (1547) can hardly be said to have been outdone by any of the countless numbers of story-tellers who in our day are pouring out such a flood of fiction that one is sometimes almost led to believe that the world is entering upon its second childhood.'

"Coming next to men of action and statesmen, Mrs. Martin names four as being of the first rank, namely, Alexander, Caesar and Pericles, who lived before Christ, and Napoleon, who belongs to the nineteenth century. 'We may say,' she continues, 'that there seem to have been in history about thirty-five men of absolutely first rank. These are Raphael, Michael Angelo, Phidias, Ictinus, Homer, Shakespeare, Demosthenes, Goethe, Aeschylus, Beethoven, Aristotle, Newton, Euclid, Plat, Dante, Kant, Saint Paul, Pericles, Darwin, Moses Cicero, Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Jesus, Buddha, Confucius, Mahomet, Socrates, Columbus, Thucydides, Hipparchus, Hippocrates, Hannibal, Washington.' If Cicero, Thucydides, Hipparchus, Hippocrates, Hannibal, Columbus, Washington and Darwin be omitted from this list, as possibly not measuring up to the first rank, we have twenty-seven names. 'Of these twenty-seven men of transcendent genius,' Mrs. Martin comments 'eleven were produced by one small district. Ten of them were brought forth by one small city about the size of Fall River, Mass., or Paterson, N. J. The little city of Athens produced in a few years more men of consummate genius than did all the millions of inhabitants of China, Arabia, India, Palestine, Rome, Carthage and all of Europe breeding for two thousand years.'

"But surely, it will be objected, genius is not the only standard of progress. Mankind, though it may not produce today the equals of the intellectual prodigies of the past, is nevertheless advancing in industrial and scientific efficiency, in moral insight, in democratic culture. Mrs. Martin meets this objection in a series of chapters.

"The fact that we have more things than we ever had before and can go to more places and 'get there' more rapidly, is not necessarily, she contends, a sign of progress. 'I detest,' she quotes Herbert Spencer as saying 'that conception of social progress which presents as its aim increase of population, growth of wealth, spread of commerce. In this ideal of human existence there is contemplated quantity only, and not quality. Instead of an immense amount of life of low type, I would far sooner see half the amount of life of a high type. A prosperity which is exhibited in board of trade tables, year by year increasing their totals, is, to a large extent, not a prosperity at all, but an adversity.' In spite of all our wealth, the blight of poverty, with its accompanying sickness, suffering, crime, insanity and vice, continues. The social disease manifested in 'atrophy and hypertrophy,' in extremities bleeding at the bottom, bloated at the top, decay in both,' is a portent of the modern world. It was not known in Athens. 'Improvements in machinery,' Mrs. Martin continues, 'have rendered the lot of the workers in some respects harder than before. Machinery,' she says, 'is the great disappointment of the modern world. We have quadruple expansion engines which have a thirty-seven thousand horse-power, but they have not rendered less arduous the labor of coal miners. The sewing machine was hailed as the deliverer of the sewing woman, but since its invention the sweating system has spread. The digging of the Suez canal brought India four thousand miles nearer to Europe, but India remains as miserable and poverty stricken as before. Ocean freight rates on wheat from England to the United States have dropped to one-third in thirty-five years, but 12,000,000 millions of people it is reported remain in that country on the verge of starvation.' The argument proceeds:

" 'Many modern inventions, instead of being sources of price, should be occasions to us of the deepest humiliation, and others are only suggestive of the varied misery whose existance demanded their invention. Thus ingenious firearms witness to burglary and need of self-defense and the sleepless hatred between men; varieties of medicine indicate new varieties of disease, while surgery points to the failure of the whole science of medicine, even as charities reveal the depth of national poverty and the breakdown of the national economies; the police force marks the extent of national crime; insane asylums, prisons, tell their own story, as do the mountains of false hair, legs, arms, and the annual consumption in the United States alone of twenty millions of false teeth!"

"The real point at issue, as Mrs. Martin sees it, is summed up in the question: Is it possible to point to the modern world and say, 'Here are men of a developed type, more intelligent, healthier, more moral, and made so by our vast improvements in the material conditions of life? She herself does not see how this question can be answered in the affirmative. In her eyes, modern civilization is a Frankenstein that already threatens to destroy its makers. Very much of our modern activity appeals to her as 'sound and fury signifying nothing.' As she puts it:

" 'The enormous number of inventions which are daily rendering the mechanism of our existence more complex may be roughly divided into four classes, those whose purpose is:

" '1. To make more things.

" '2. To get there more quickly, or to communicate more quickly.

" '3. To kill men faster.

" 'To alleviate suffering.

" 'These, then, would appear to be the leading ideals of our age. To have more things; to get there quickly; to kill men rapidly; and to save pain.

" 'There is one element common to the first three classes of invention—they are designed to save time. The mammoth reaper which mows a county in a few days, the express train with its sixty miles an hour, the marine cable bringing an answer from the antipodes in a few minutes, the machine guns which cut down an army like a field of timothy, or the torpedo boats which sink a navy—down to the latest egg-beater and corkscrew, are all designed to save time. We may almost say that the whole aim of man's ingenuity, embodied in thousands upon thousands of contrivances, has been directed towards the one sole object of saving time. His railroads, trolleys, canals, tunnels, cables, elevators, bicyles, automobiles, etc., are all for the purpose of enabling him to save time in getting there. His telegraphs, telephones, etc., are devised in order to save time in sending messages. His myriad machines are invented for the purpose of saving time in producing more things. His Gatling guns, torpedoes, automatic firing rifles, etc., are designed to save time in killing men.

" 'And what is the result?

" 'The result is that men have less time now than they have ever had since the world began.'

"Mrs. Martin is equally emphatic in denying any substantial moral progress. In the matter of ethical theory, she agrees with Nuckle in feeling that advance has not only not taken place, but is not possible. To do good to others; to sacrifice for their benefit; your own wishes; to love your neighbor as yourself; to forgive your enemies; to restrain your passions; to honor your parents; to respect those who are set over you—these and a few others, according to Buckle, are the sole essentials of morals, and they have been known for thousands of years. In the matter of moral practice, can it be contended that our present age is supreme? On the contrary, Mrs. Martin avers, we are not as honest, as temperate, as just, as brave, or as public-spirited as the ancient Greeks.

"When she comes to the question of the diffusion of intelligence, she is still skeptical. Even granting that we have today a far larger number of good, average intelligence than in the past, can this fact be said to constitute progress in any real sense? Mrs. Martin replies:

" 'Progress concerns itself only with quality; it means the increased power of human faculty, not the mere numerical increase of human beings.

" 'This is perfectly clear if one reflects a moment upon what took place in the past, during the march from the anthropoid age up to, say, Shakespeare. Suppose at any step of this ascent it had been asserted than to multiply the species in its then stage would be progress; suppose, for instance, that a community of apes, being fairly well fed and merrily engaged in pelting one another with cocoanuts in the forest primeval, should have decided that the multiplication of apes in this (to them) satisfactory condition should be esteemed progress. Obviously they would have been mistaken. Progress meant moving toward Shakespeare, and progress could not take place until the anthropoid ape passed up into a higher species. This is as true of our stage as it has been of any previous one.'

"Genius progress, in Mrs. Martin's sense of the word, takes place when certain individuals emerge from the common level and establish a higher standard of human capacity and excellence. The problem of progress is therefore synonymous with the problem of producing great men. She says:

" 'The ideal aim of society is the production of men of genius, because it is through the activities of these that mankind acquires the means of its highest development and the satisfaction of its deepest needs. A society adopting such an end as its goal would find all grades of labor falling each into its just and honorable place, being each contributive, inasmuch as in it lay, to the attainment of the consciously realized common end.

" 'The ideal of democracy is a horizontal society, but every day is demonstrating more and more clearly that this ideal is unattainable because in the nature of things impossible. Society is not horizontal; it is perpendicular. It is not flat like the sea; it grows upward like a tree toward the light. The Greek method of trying to discover justice and apply it to society, on the hypothesis that society was perpendicular (that is, naturally disposed in sections one above the other like a tree), might have led to success. It is becoming increasingly evident that our efforts to achieve justice, based upon the false hypothesis that society is level like the sea, can never solve our problems. Justice is within the bounds of attainment to a society which realizes that it has at the heart of is life a common aim—to produce the fruit of the tree—and where each individual aims at fulfilling the function to which it is best adapted toward that common end.'

"This train of argument inevitably culminates in a plea for eugenics; but eugenics in its present stage holds out what Mrs. Martin can regard only as a somewhat desolating prospect. She declares in concluding:

" 'No more alluring prospect could be held up to the sorrowing and impatient lover of his kind than that propounded by the eugenicist. Think of breeding poets to order like Saint Andraesberg canaries, or Abraham Lincolns as required! Think of winning blue ribbons with lovely young girls and athletic boys bred and groomed for the show! Think of securing Rockefellers or Carnegies in one's family at will, and thus successfully replenish the family coffers!

" 'Alas for the vanity of these hopes! Eugenics in its present amorphous condition, while it presents on end which seems to be unattainable, presents no beginning which seems to be feasible. Many decades must be passed in the bare effort to accustom men to the idea. Long, long years the deliverate improvement of human breeds must be discussed and dreamed of before it can be done. For this, which is the most stupendous task man has ever attempted, will need his all of intelligence, will, endurance and foresight.' "

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more-fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

CHRISTMAS CHAT.

It is with a sad heart and also a glad heart that I write the Labor Tribune, sad because (to me at least) the greatest of Bible teachers has gone into the great beyond but his teachings will go on as long as the world stands, for truth cannot be destroyed, but that is not what I came to write about.

It is nearly four years since writing the Tribune, and no doubt I am quite forgotten, but I am here to remind you that I am still on the map, and all summer long we have been on the sea shore, and yours truly has had the time of her life gathering sea shells, fishing, going on trips to the great Indian mounds, sometimes would wander so far from home that I would really wonder how I was ever to get back.

How I did pick up shells, away down the beach some five miles, was a sort of sand crab town. It was an isolated spot, so the denizens of the sand holes or holes in the sandy beach and bluffs could sally forth for their prey, like so many huge spiders. They are of all sizes up to twice the size of a common warty garden toad. They are almost white in color and run exceedingly swift when they cite danger, and they can see it real or imaginary a long way. Then they scurry for their holes in the sand, but what interested me most was the little Donax shells, they would watch till the tide was right to bring up the Donax then was their harvest for then they would grab them and carry them away back to their holes in the sand till they had sometimes a hundred of them, then they would devour the little animals inside, and leave the little shells. Of course that suited me as I wanted the shells for making shell work. I made a beautiful portiere of them, the inside of some of them are very pretty, mottled or spotted lavender, pink, white, dark blue and cream colored. Then I use them in crocheting hanging baskets, fringe to border mantles, picture throws, all that and crochet. I make holes in with an awl or large needle, then they are nice for covering boxes, picture frames, etc., edging the work with Donax, the inside upward, and filling in with other shells. There now I have told you what I did with them, and will tell you what I will farther do with them, that is if the Editor catches the Xmas spirit enough to print the offer. I will mail a cigar box full of them and some other shells, so you will not only be pleased, but surprised at what comes from the sea shore, as I say I will mail a large cigar box full to anyone who sends cost of same, you better send 18 or 20 2c stamps as shells are heavy I do not know what they will weigh, but years ago I sent several boxes north they weighed three pounds each. I will send mostly Donax shells and if you wish me to I will crochet a string of them so as to show you how the work is made. A Merry Christmas to all of you from

P. S.—A woman's letter, they say, is never perfect without a post script. I have in an old chest packed away for sixteen years or more a hundred or two packages of toy animal patterns, in each package is a package for making a horse, dog, elephant, mouse, pig, wheelbarrow, dove on wing, mud turtle, red bird, rag doll, rabbit etc. Each pattern is separate, has directions how to make and all are in each package. So if you have any small children for whom you want to make indestructable toys there is your chance. To anyone who sends a stamp or so I will mail an entire lot but mind, the supply is limited. I could not make more, but this I will do if anyone sends after they are all gone, then I will mail them seed of a very large yellow flowered cactus or beach moon flower seed, or both. Any other that I may have. The few packages won't go so very far, so if you get seed they will know why. A. W.

Appreciations

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 25.

I see by the tag on my paper that my subscription expires next month. Will you plase discontinue it until further notice from me. I have enjoyed Pastor Russell's sermons, and other religious features very much, also the privilege of passing it on to neighbors and friends. In due time we know you shal receive your reward for your efforts in sending ut the light, through the columns of your fine newspaper.

Sincerely yours,
HARRIET H. MOORE.

Washington, Dec. 4.

I wish to call your attention to an article in the Enterprise in regard to your paper. It seems that the Editor of that paper, while on his trip East, at the time of Bro. Russell's death, made it his business to lambast most everything and everybody; and he was considerate enough not to leave you out. So he claims to have discovered the fact that you publish two papers, one for the Truth friends containing Pastor Russell's sermons and another for the public, which leaves them out.

If this is true we would like to know it, and if it is not we want you to correct it, as it will certainly be an injury to your paper.

Of course the Editor did not expect it to "get out," he wrote confidentially to the "little girl," and she did not know any better than to put it in the paper. A nice scheme to get a chance to vent his spleen, and then try to hide behind the woman.

A READER.

(This will be the subject of a terse and true article in a subsequent issue. —Editor Tribune.)

Rome, N. Y., Nov. 28.

Will you kindly change the address of our paper from Oneida to Rome, N. Y. We are very much pleased that you are going to republish Pastor Russell's back sermons, and also that you are to run a series of articles from the Divine Plan of the Ages. In our opinion there is nothing in the world which so clearly outlines in a connected form the teachings of the Bible. We wish you continued success in your efforts in the service of righteousness.

Sincerely yours,
MR. AND MRS. E. F. YORK,

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 18.

I am glad that you are keeping the Truth spreading through your valuable paper. And again I rejoice when I read that you are to republish our dear pastor's sermons. Keep going, Dear Editor, we all love to read the love of God and his principles, for the future to the whole world of mankind. With loving kindess to you all in your works.

GET BACK TO NATURE.

If You Are Sincerely Interested in Good Health and Long Life, Read Why Over 100,000 Pittsburgers Are Regular Users of BULGARIAN BLOOD TEA.

They recommend Bulgarian Blood Tea because it is non-alcoholic, and without dangerous mineral drugs.

Because it contains 14 ingredients, leaves, flowers, bark, seed, berries, plants, herbs, roots, etc., imported from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Because it is a scientific fact that each of these ingredients are good for one or another of the internal organs and taken together the human system absorbs the juices unadulterated and in a natural way.

Because the kidneys, stomach, liver, blood and bowels are benefited and strengthened at the same time. The waste food stuffs and body poisons are eliminated and the human machinery is permitted to work naturally, without obstruction.

These 100,000 or more Pittsburghers tell their druggists that they recommend this wonderful nature product because it gives them new health and energy, frees them from sick and nervous headaches, relieves them of constipation, stir up the lazy liver—washes and heals the kidneys, removes the aches of rheumatism and permits them to enjoy their meals and to sleep at nights.

They have sufficient common sense to know that when they make this tea at night they are getting back to nature and following the example of the rugged people of past ages who went to Mother Earth for this very same medicine. They know that everything that Grandmother ever used is in this Bulgarian Blood Tea and then some. It is a formula highly approved throughout Europe.

If you are sick take this chance. Your druggist will confirm the statement that if Bulgarian Blood Tea did not have merit it would never be the household friend which it has become in so many Pittsburgh homes. You can give it to every member of the family. It will increase the efficiency and energy of the father. It is a blessing for women and girls. It will keep the children in a healthy condition, fit to fight the prevalent germs.

Your doctor will tell you that nature is the greatest healer and that her offerings cannot be improved upon by the skill of mankind.

A $1.00 size package of Bulgarian Blood Tea lasts 5 months.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of

PASTOR RUSSELL

of the

LONDON TABERNACLE

and of

NEW YORK CITY

— TEMPLE —

CROWNS FOR ALL HEROES.

The following sermon was delivered by Pastor C. T. Russell on February 6, 1905, at the Bible House Chapel, Allegheny, Pa.—Editor.

As usual, the Bible House chapel was crowded Sunday afternoon. Pastor Russell's discourse on "Crowns for All Heroes," was listened to with close attention. His text was, "When the Chief Shepherd shall be manifested, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." (I Peter 5:4). We report the discourse as follows:

The crown is an emblem of honor, dignity and authority, and when the word is used figuratively it carries much thought of reward. Created in the image and likeness of God, mentally and morally, Father Adam was the first king of the earth, and was given dominion over the earth and all things therein. Describing his glorious condition the Prophet David says, "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels; thou crownest him with glory and honor and hast set him over the works of thy hands; the beast of the field, the fowl of the air, the fish of the sea."—Psalms 8:5.

A CROWN OF GLORY LOST.

Not realizing fully the grandeur of his position as the earthly representative of the Creator, "crowned with glory and honor." Father Adam was not sufficiently careful to maintain his high standing and relationship with the King of kings. His disobeying the heavenly over-Lord, came under the ban of his displeasure, and his sentence was the forfeiture of his crown and kingdom of life. Severe as this penalty appears, it was necessary, just. It was just also that his posterity, sharing in his weakness and depravity, should share also in his loss of the dominion of earth and in his death sentence.

The apostle sets forth the matter explicitly, saying, "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and thus death passed upon all men, for all men are sinners." It will be noticed that we entirely ignore as wholly unscriptural the theory, common to all the creeds of Christendom, to the effect that Father Adam and his race not only lost the dominion of earth but were sentenced to an eternal torture at the hands of demons. We reject this teaching of the dark ages as being thoroughly inconsistent with reason, contrary to scriptures and repugnant both to justice and love, the wisdom and power of the Creator. For the Scriptural proofs on this subject we refer you to a little pamphlet which we supply free, entitled, "What say the Scriptures about hell." This can be had of the ushers or will be sent by mail on a postal card request.

SEEKING OTHER CROWNS.

The crown of divine favor and honor gone, mankind made the best of its fallen condition, and forthwith there began a strife amongst men as to which should be the greater, the more honorable, which should wear the crowns. The pages of history for six thousand years are filled with the records of the strife amongst men for the crowns of earth. Nations and families have been divided, millions have been slain and the greatest imaginable exertion put forth and enormous wealth squandered in the seeking of these crowns of earth.

We review them: The crowns of the Pharaohs of Egypt were first in prominence, surrounded by a host of smaller ones. Later, the prominent positions went to the Assyrians and Babylonians, the Israelites under David and Solomon sharing the glory for a time. Next the Medes and Persians were the chief crown wearers, in the world. Still later, under Alexander the Great and his successors, the Grecians held the first place among the crown wearers. Then came the Caesars of Rome, and subsequently the popes, and later still a division of the crowns amongst the great powers of Europe. Thus matters stand today. Looking back along this line of notable crown wearers, we perceive that very rarely were these crowns obtained except through great perseverance and great cost of blood and treasure and energy. However despicable some of the leading characters in this great drama may appear to us, the energies they have displayed may well merit our appreciation.

MORE NOBLE THAN OTHERS.

Amongst those who for the past six thousands years have sought the nobler crowns are the philosophers, teachers, poets, artists, physicians and musicians. These have sought victories and won crowns along nobler lines than did the kings and nobles, and proportionately more enduring are their crowns of honor amongst men. We would like to include in this list religionists the heathen priests and Christian ministers; but although we recognize pre-eminently grand characters amongst these, we can not recognize them as a whole deserving crowns of honor amongst the heathen but amongst Christains, Protestants as well as Catholics, Greek and Roman, they have too often sought their crowns of honor by cultivating the superstitions of those whom they affected to enlighten. However, it must be admitted that the same charge of fraud and deception could be brought against many who have sought crowns along the lines of healing the sick, medicine, and other sciences and philosophies, falsely so call. The poor world has been denied in paying homage and honor to many rascals, many decievers, who by and by, when the light of the millenial light shall be turned on, will be found covered with infamy.

FOR WHICH SHALL WE STRIVE?

The crown for divine favor and honor gone, mankind made the best of its fallen condition and forthwith there began a strife amongst men as to which should be the greater, the more honorable—which should wear the crowns. The pages of history for six thousand years are filled with the records of the strife amongst men for the crowns of the earth. As we review these various crowns and their enormous cost and their little worth and their fading character, we might well feel discouraged if, filled with the heroe spirit, we are looking about us for a field of victory on which to win some kind of crown. For which shall we strive? Which will not cost us too highly, involve too great a loss of valuable time and energy and too great a dwarfing of our superior qualities of heart and head?

Several things are in favor of the heavenly crown:

1. All who strive for it are sure to obtain it—not merely because of their striving but because of the Lord's appreciation of their efforts, and because, therefore, he is gracious unto them through the Redeemer, and imputes to them all the righteousness and victories they desire and are striving for.

2. This crown "fadeth not away." On the contrary it will grow more and more valuable, more and more to be esteemed as the ages of eternity shall roll. The world which now sees not this crown and hears not the calling from on high, will by and by under the ministrations of the millennial kingdom, be blessed by the obliteration of their present conquests and crowns and ambitions and the placing before them of the grander, the nobler ones—the recovery of the crown Adam lost in Eden redeemed for the world by our Savior, and to be brought unto them, brought within their reach during the millenium. As the world will then be uplifted out of the sin and degredation and death conditions of the present to righteousness and life, (the wilfully evil being cut off in the second death), the Church, secured during this gospel age by the overcomers, will be made known to the whole world of mankind, and all shall ultimately recognize, not only the glorified Jesus, but also the glorified members of His Church then with Him in the work of blessing the world. How unfading a crown of glory is this which the Lord proposes to give to all those who espouse the cause of righteousness and to the extent of their ability to walk in the footsteps of the Son!

3. Those who would strive for this crown of glory must not expect it in this present life. The striving is to be down here, the crown of glory is to be received there. True, some glory is to be ready, but not the crown of glory which the Apostle Peter here declares shall be given at the manifestation of the Chief Shepherd, our Lord Jesus. When he was amongst men, because of his difference of standpoint and effort, He was of no reputation, even amongst the religious rulers. Today the whole world, heathen and Jew, nominal Christians and true, honor the name of Jesus, and in a certain sence crown Him with thorns.

But many of those who now honor the Master do not do so from the standpoint which Jesus Himself enunciated to the Pharises when he said, "Ye garnish the sepulchers of your fathers and deplore their murderous spirit," yet are actuated by the same animosity today toward those of the same faith and spirit with the prophets. (Matt. 23:29:33). Similarly amongst those who sing of Jesus, "Crown Him Lord of All," there are many who hate and oppose those crown-seekers who today are striving to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. Truly the Master said, Marvel not if the world (including the nominal Church) hate you; ye know that it hated Me before it hated you. If ye were of the world the world would love its own, but ye are not of the world, for I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you," The same spirit prevails respecting all the Lord's followers—those who are honored today were generally dishonored and spoken against in their own day.

It is well, then, that those who seek this heavenly crown, should remember the Master's words, "Through much tribulation shall ye enter the Kingdom." If they do not consider the crown worth "much tribulation" it is because the eyes of their understanding are not properly opened to discern the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the glorious character and plan of God under which these crowns are proffered.

CROWNS FOR ALL THE CALLED.

True, the apostles in the words of our text especially addressed the elders of the Church, whom he counsels not to seek in the present time to be lords over God's heritage, but rather wait for the crown of glory by and by. Nevertheless, we hold that the principle is applicable not only to the elders of the Church but to the entire Church, and in support of this thought we would note the words of our Redeemer Himself, of general application to all that are His through faith and obedience. He says, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." And again, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my father in His throne."

Wealth and fame hold out their crowns only to those who are exceptionally brilliant in the various competing classes; but the Lord holds out the heavenly crown to whosoever has the ear of faith and the obedient heart—to whosoever has the eye of faith to discern this crown and the heart to walk the short but narrow way to self-sacrifice and conflict necessary to its attainment. The ablest logicians may seek and win this crown, but on no more favorable terms than it can be obtained by the humblest peasant, laborer, housewife or servant. How wonderful this is! How divine this justice and generosity! It is so, too with the full, free knowledge of him who offered the crowns—who stated in advance that not many great, not many wise, not many learned, not many noble, according to the course of the world—would appreciate the crown of glory which fadeth not away.

He knew and thus intimates that the world in general would only strive and sacrifice for the things that could be seen with the natural eye, the things of this present time; he knew that the worldly wise would say, A little hand is worth much in prospect; he knew that those who realized most keenly their own insignificant and weakness in the great battle of life, and of hopelessness of their ever gaining any great prize in the earthly struggle would be the ones who would most appreciate the proffer of the heavenly crown and for such he especially intended it, as declared, "Chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs of the kingdom."

What our text speaks of as a crown of glory, other Scriptrues speak of as the crown of life. It is both, as the apostle explains. The reward of the overcoming Church who battle faithfully against sin within and without, who are fully consecrated to the Captain of their salvation in thought and word and act, is to be "glory," honor and immortality." (Rom. 2:7). When the crown and dominion of glory were lost by our race in the failure at Eden, life was also lost; and how appropriate it is that, in the divine providence, those who retain the divine favor should not only repossess the glory and the honor but attain also to the life eternal.

That much the obedient of the world in the millenial age may expect, for the promise is that our Lord Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost, to restore mankind to life and to all the glorious qualities of mind and of body possessed before the fall and to deliver to the restored race the "purchased possessed"—the dominion of earth. The crown of glory and crowns of life which God has in reservation for the Church of this gospel age is to be still grander, still more glorious, for as the Apostle Peter tells us, "exceeding great and precious promises" are given to these, that they may become partakers of the divine nature, far excelling human nature in its perfection and glory and honor and life—far excelling all principles and powers, earthly and heavenly, they shall be in position next to the Lord Himself, for they shall be the Bride, the Lamb's wife.

THE COST OF THESE CROWNS.

None can hope for the crown of glory who can not exercise faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as his Redeemer, and faith in his promises respecting these crowns, which will be distributed to the faithful at His second coming. Without faith it is impossible to please God. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. If a faith be a living one, a real one, it will impel to the activity, the knowledge, necessary to victory. Our strife is not against our fellow men, as in the case of those who seek the corruptible crowns of earth, political, financial, social. We strive against sin and the great Adversary, whose snares we recognize more clearly than do others.

Our principle strife and therefore our principle victory is within—to bring even our very thoughts into subjection to the will of God in Christ. Additionally we strive with the world—not to conquer it, but to hinder it from overcoming us, as New Creatures separate from the world, are running in a race course and for a prize which the natural man sees not, appreciates not.

Apparently all things are against us—the world, the Adversary and our own false flesh and yet greater is He that is for us; and it is here that our faith wins us the victory, when we can trust Him for the outcome and draw from Him the grace and strength we need to keep us from discouragement, to cheer and comfort our hearts and to give us on the way and throughout the battle and race the peace of God which passeth all understanding.

Brethren, sisters, at whatever cost of self-denial, social ostracism, disdain of the world, misunderstanding of friends, we may gain this great prize, the crown of glory. It will be cheap. Let us lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us and run with patience the race as before us; looking unto Jesus, the author of our faith, Who shortly now shall be its finisher, and, as the Chief Shepherd he manifested and give us the crowns of glory promised.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the tremendous scarcity of paper, we are compelled to revise our mailing list. We wish all subscribers would consult the mailing tab on their paper and if in arrears kindly forward the amount at once. The regular price of the Tribune is $2, but under a special arrangement with the Watch Tower, subscribers interested in the Truth have been paying only $1 for an eight page paper. The paper house from which we buy our paper have notified us that the supply for our next contract must be reduced to the lowest quantity on account of the shortage of supply. Much as we would like to we cannot afford at this time, on account of shortage of supply, to carry any subscribers who are in arrears. This request has been made also upon the Tribune by the publishers who are cutting off every paper not paid for and every subscriber in arrears. Won't you please consult your tab and send in your money at once if you are in arrears.

Owing to the scarcity of white paper, the leading papers in all the large cities are either cutting down the size or are raising the price in order that they may continue publication, and the Tribune may have to do likewise.

Enclosed you will find money for renewal of my subscription. I thank you for sending it after my subscription had expired. To miss it for one week would be a great loss; indeed I look forward to its weekly arrival as I would to a letter from my best friend. It has been a great source of blessing to myself and others. Your kindess to us will surely receive a great reward.

Yours respectfully,
ELIZABETH BARNES.

Paris, Tenn., Nov. 29.

Your good paper is fine and every good person regrets to hear of the demise of Pastor Russell, except those who have tried to assassinate his character, even the news notices sent in at the time of his death, looked like one of the preachers, or such assassinators had worded the notices to the papers. The notice I saw in one of the Chicago papers, had two truths in it, i. e., that he died in Texas, and that he was about 64 years old. All the balance of the notice was about as near true as the doctrines the other preachers are preaching. (Absolutely false.)

With good wishes,
Yours very truly,
A. G. CHERRY.

Derby, N. Y., Nov. 29

My subscription to your very valuable paper expired November 8th, and I received the last one Nov. 16, all right and please to send Nov. 23d paper, for I am very much interested in a continued article in it. I am so glad that you thought about reprinting Pastor Russell's sermons 'though dead He yet speaketh," and like David "he can't come to us, but we will go to him. A good many shortly. With this I am sending money to renew my subscription.

Yous in Christian fellowship,

North Troy, N. Y., Dec. 1.

Please let me send my tribute of love and thanksgiving to God through the dear Labor Tribune, to all the world, as far as it goes for that "Blessed Faithful and True Witnesses" to the Truth, our dear Pastor Russell, who has, as you said "Gone home." And how glad and thankful I was to see your noble tribute to his spotless character as a servant of the Lord. We who are left, rejoice that he has taken his flight to the city of light to be forever with his Lord. Faithful unto death the cross was borne, the crown is won. Did not the Master say, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life?" The story of his passing seems so beautiful! One moment looking into the faces of beloved brethren, the next in the twinkling of an eye into the face of the Master he loved so well. Oh praise our loving God.

M. A. SMITH.

Brookville, Pa., Nov. 28.

Have renewed my subscription to your interesting paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. Much pleased that you give us information concerning our dear Pastor Russell. His sermons and other writings on Present Truth are what makes your paper valuable to me. You are doing a grand work in assisting to publish the good news of glad tidings of great joy. The finest monument which could be raised in memory of our late Pastor will be that we all hold fast the profession of our faith and to be faithful unto the end.

MISS M. C. SNYDER

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 2.

As I was looking over the Tribune my eye caught these words, "The funeral of Pastor Russell," With tear-filled eyes and a heart full of grief, I read line after line—the last sad scene of our dead, dead Pastor Russell, and I felt from the heart, can it be possible he has gone? We never again can read his fatherly advice or listen to his wisdom of love. Gone! Yes gone, but not forgotten, although his remains lay in Pittsburgh cemetery, he still lives and with the eye of faith we can see him as he was, still with us, but invisible to the eye of faith. We can see him directing his labor of love through some dear brother faithfully chosen to take his place to gather the few scattering jewels that was left by Pastor Russell.

He has gone and free from all care, and has escaped the great earthquake that will come soon upon us, which we can now hear its rumbling warnings, and see it gathering fast, but it will be like the storm on the lake though fierce it will be when our dear Saviour will say, "Peace be Still."

Yours truly, only waiting,

THE PRINCIPLES OF EFFICIENCY.

Fundamental Principle of Efficiency is Common Sense. Ben Franklin Probably Had More Common Sense Than Any Other Man and Consequently a Higher Degree of Personal Efficiency. . .

"My wish, as I formulated it as a child was that I might be able to do everything as well as it had ever been done before," writes Harrington Emerson, Efficiency Engineer. "Not unambitious! That wish has, however, been fulfilled for me to an extent no one dreamed possible 50 years ago. The discoveries that have been made have brought to me powers that were beyond the fancies of fairy tales when I was young. The music of Caruso's voice, though he should die, I can command at any moment from a disk. I can see in color the moving scenes of the coronation of Edward, Emperor of India, at the Durbar. I can see fighting scenes in the center of Africa. I can listen to voices from the air from the islands of the sea thousands of miles away, voices up above the clouds, in a way that not even the fairies could do in olden times. In mid-Atlantic I heard that my youngest brother had been shot in Manchuria. I knew it was not so, nor was it. I can analyze the distant stars, I can measure their motion, I can make them work for me on earth.

"This is but the beginning of our powers in an infinitely rich and willing universe. Are we personally efficient and are we efficiently using our opportunities?

"What is efficiency? There are a number of definitions. I call it a realization of standards. Others say that it is the relation between what is and what ought to be. Others again say that it is a state of mind, and that is also a very good definition. Efficiency is in fact a state of mind. It is the way that you look at your problems. You may look at them from an artistic point of view, you may look at them from a monetary point of view, you may look at them from a charitable point of view and you may look at them also from the efficiency point of view. Is this thing done with the least possible waste? Is there any possible way of saving in this particular operation or in that particular act? Are we wasting our lives in any way?

"The fundamental principle of efficiency is in reality common sense. The human being who probably had more common sense than any other man who ever existed was Benjamin Franklin. He rose to be the friend and counselor of kings and of the greatest on the earth. In his entertaining way he drew up thirteen little rules of conduct. They were characteristic of Franklin. They were modest applicable to his own daily life. Each week he posted one of those rules before him and he applied it for seven days. To be neat in his personal appearance was one of his rules. So on the first of a certain January he started out and during seven days paid particular attention to his personal appearance. He mentions the different things that he had in mind—that his hands should be clean, that his hair should be well brushed, that his clothes should be free from dirt, that his shoes should be clean, that he should be shaven, his linen spotless, that he should be generally tidy and presentable. At the end of the week he had the habit, a habit that persisted and lasted. He then set up a second rule, namely, to be saving and careful of his money, not to waste it, to watch the outgo, so that it should be dissipated in small and unnecessary expenses, and during the second week he practiced that particular rule. The third week he set up the rule of being courteous of being kindly, of being polite in all his relations to other people. And so he went through his thirteen rules in thirteen weeks. After three months he started over again and he practiced these thirteen rules a second time, and a third time and a fourth time in each year, and kept this up for 40 years. The consequence was that after a while all of his good habits had become automatic, they had become ingrained, and unconsciously he was continuously practicing these thirteen rules of good conduct.

"This hint from Franklin led me to draw up thirteen principles of efficiency. There may be 26 principles of efficiency or you may condense them into a smaller number; but in our work we have found that these thirteen principles cover an enormous number of possibilities; that if we scatter our attention on details our work suffers, but if we can apply the thirteen tests to every operation, it makes it very much easier, because the tests immediately reveal much that would otherwise be overlooked.

"The thirteen principles may be of interest in their proper sequence:

THE THIRTEEN PRINCIPLES OF EFFICIENCY.

1. Ideals.
2. Common sense.
3. Competent counsel.
4. Discipline.
5. The fair deal.
6. Efficiency reward.
7. Records.
8. Planning.
9. Schedules.
10. Dispatching.
11. Standardized conditions.
12. Standardized operations.
13. Written standard practice instructions.

"One of those principles is to have definite aims, high ideals, to know what you are going after, to know what you intend to do, to know what your ideal is. It is astonishing in many businesses and in many lives to find how empty they are of definite purpose. Instead of being like a blood-hound, his nose leading him to follow one track to the exclusion of everything else until he has run down his quarry, most of us are like a puppy running after a rabbit here and a cat there, after a squirrel, a bird or a bee, jumping back and forth, with no fixity of purpose, with no definite ideal and never achieving anything of value. What we always want to know is, what is the definite ideal. We have often found that one partner had the ideal of very high quality and limited quantity, the other partner the ideal of cheapness and of large quantity. Those two ideals are not compatible in the same article; they are not compatible in the same business; they are mutally destructive; one ideal or the other ought to be set up, not both.

"Another principle is to take competent counsel. A great many people know more than we do. A great many people specialize. There is an enormous accumulation of wisdom that has come down for us from the past. There is an immense accumulation of new wisdom. For any man to think that he can depend on his own judgment and his own experience is to court disaster. It is essential for any man in his own business, or in any other business or in any new thing that he is taking up, to find out what the accumulated wisdom is in that particular direction and to take competent counsel before he acts. He does not have to follow the counsel if he does not want to, but at least he should be advised and not make again the same mistakes that have been made thousands of times.

"Another of the principles is to plan in advance what you are going to do—to have a definite plan. A plan is very different from an ideal. You may have an ideal, but you should plan for the realization of the ideal. After the plans are fully completed a time schedule of performance is to be set up. The schedule brings in the element of time. The next principle is to despatch, to execute what you have planned and scheduled. This is illustrated in railroad work. A new passenger train is to be put on to carry the mail between New York and St. Louis. It has been planned for.

"There have to be a certain number of cars. There has to be preparation for the running of this train. It may take 30 locomotives to put on a daily train of that kind in both directions. Where are they? All must be prepared. After the plans are perfected comes the schedule, the time table. The train is to leave New York at 9 o'clock in the morning, reaches St. Louis at 9o'clock the next morning. The schedule is the plan worked out for the locomotive engineer, so that he may when he is to start and when he is to arrive at the end of his run. But the dispatching is the starting of the train at 9 o'clock. The schedule is the time-table, but the dispatching is the performance in accord with the time-table. The train is dispatched at 9o'clock, reaches Pittsburgh or Cleveland on schedule and is redispatched to St. Louis. These are some of the principles that will aid in attaining efficiency."

Talk About Orders - War Profits--War Stocks, After the War--What?

If You Have Money to Investigate---Investigate This Proposition.

Place your money where it is absolutely safe and where it will bring you the largest returns. Invest in the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company—now selling at par $1.00 per share. The Gasoline Industry is the livest and most talked of industry in the country today. It will continue to be the most important industry for the next twenty years to come.

When you purchase shares in the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company you are purchasing an interest in a company with an established business and on an absolutely safe and sound financial basis. The immense property controlled by the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company is in an old established oil and gas field—the best territory in the world for obtaining WET GAS, the kind of gas from which the Highest Grade of Gasoline is produced. The territory is ABSOLUTELY PROVEN by the drilling of 31 wells—all producers. The supply of gas is practically inexhaustible. The property is less than 5% developed, yet the company can show daily gross earnings in excess of $600.00 and is producing approximately 7,500 gallons of gasoline per day and over 1,000,000 cubic feet of refined gas.

Such a Splendid Showing clearly indicates that the proposition IS NOT A PROSPECT OR IN AN UNDEVELOPED STAGE. The future possibilities are most remarkable for the reason that there are drilling locations for at least 800 additional wells. If you want QUICK AND LARGE RETURNS on your investment—then place your order AT ONCE for a substantial block of the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company.

After the war—what? The bottom as well as the Profits will drop out of the WAR SECURITIES—but the business of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company will go on as usual and the profits will be greater than ever—because the consumption of gasoline will be greater than ever, and also the price.

By the first of the year the management of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company estimates that the company will be producing about 20,000 gallons of gasoline per day. Increased production means increased earnings. Do you suppose that at that time you will be able to purchase the stock at par $1.00 per share? It is not at all likely. In all probability by that time the stock will be quoted on the New York Curb around $2.00 or possibly $3.00 per share. Do not delay, but PLACE YOUR ORDER NOW for a substantial block of the stock. All indications point to the fact that the stock will be placed on a DIVIDEND PAYING BASIS at an early date. If you want any of this stock you will have to ACT QUICKLY. The allotment at our disposal is limited. It is being rapidly exhausted If a proposition has MERIT back of it you do not have to be offering it for sale indefinitely. Such propositions are quickly taken up. The very best and most intelligent class of investors are purchasing the stock of the Pennsylvania Gasoline Company. They realize the unusual conditions surrounding this industry, and furthermore they are familiar with the Tremendous Profits already made—and they are fully aware of the fact THIS IS THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY THE GENERAL PUBLIC HAVE EVER HAD TO SHARE IN THE PROFITS. You can find plenty of opportunities prenested to you for investing—but we believe we are safe in saying—that this is the first opportunity the public have ever had to invest in a company producing Gasoline in Large, Paying Quantities and safe and sound in every way.

Immediate action on your part is necessary if you want to secure any of this stock. The whole proposition will stand the closest investigation. Orders by wire will receive our prompt attention. Booklet and other interesting data furnished on application. Bank and commercial references.

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH

Revelation 2:1-17.—December 19.

The Revelation a Book of Symbols. Seven Successive Stages in the History of the Christian Church Symbolized by "the Seven Churches Which Are In Asia"—Names of the Churches Characteristic—The Great Falling Away—The Lord's Return During the Laodicean Period of Church History.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life." Verse 10.

REVELATION is a book of symbols, which our Lord "sent and signified [told in signs and symbols] by His angel to His servant John." (Revelation 1:1.) Bible students know that the book abounds in symbols, the literal being used only when unavoidable.

In harmony, then, with the remainder of the book, "the seven churches in Asia" must be symbolic and as the book is chiefly history written beforehand, they must symbolize seven successive stages in Church history, covering the period between the First and Second Advents of Christ. The fulfilment, we think, proves the correctness of this position.

Faithful Unto Death.

In the first chapter is a description of "One like unto a son of man," as seen in vision by the Apostle John. Some one or more of the features of this description would seem to be peculiarly appropriate to each stage of the Church; and in each case He who sends the message is thus described. The last part of each message is a promise to the "overcomers," and is also peculiarly adapted to the different periods of Church history.

To give a birdseye view of the arrangement, we would notice their chronological position. Ephesus covers the period during the lives of the Apostles; Smyrna, that of the pagan persecution, reaching to about 325 A. D., when Constantine became Emperor and declared in favor of Christianity. Pergamos embraces the transition period during which the papacy had its rise; Thyatira, the space during which the True Church was in the wilderness, and the Apostate Church sat as a queen and lived deliciously with the kings of the earth. Sardis includes a short interval just before the Reformation; Philadelphia the period from the Reformation until recent times; and Laodicea, the nominal Church of today.

Messages to Various Churches.

Ephesus means first, desirable. During this period our Lord "holdeth the seven stars in His right hand." The messengers of the Churches—the Apostles—were so kept during this epoch that we accept their teachings as our Lord's, believing that their words were really His. This stage of the Church is commended for its faithful, patient labor and for its discernment of Truth and of true teachers.—Acts 20:28-36.

Smyrna means bitter. This stage of the Christian Church was the period of most bitter persecution, under the Emperors from Nero to Diocletian. In this message our Lord styles Himself "the First and the Last, which was dead and is alive." In no other sense could He be the First and the Last than as the Father's direct Creation, through whom all else was created. Any other view would conflict with the Scriptures.—Revelation 3:14; Colossians 1:15; John 1:1-3; 1 Cor. 8:6.

Verse 10. Thus our Lord informed His faithful servants that theirs would be a time of great persecution. Pagan Rome, here symbolized as the Devil, has been the most devilish of earthly governments, when viewed in the light of its bloody persecutions. The ten symbolic days refer to the last and most severe persecution—that of Diocletian, A. D. 303-313. Some of the most sublime pictures of Christian endurance were enacted during the Smyrna period of Church history. The call was for faithfulness unto death; the promise was that the overcomers should receive "the crown of life"—immortality.

Pergamos means earthly elevation. The Speaker is "He who hath the sharp Sword with two edges." (Hebrews 4:12.) During this period, while the nominal Church was growing popular, true Christians were tested and proved by the introduction and development of pagan and papal ideas. The pagan priests, unwilling to lose their influential positions amongst the people, sought to fit their ideas to the new religion. Thus while nominally professing Christianity, they brought many of their former ideas into the Christian Church. These were eventually grafted upon "the faith once delivered to the saints."

Give Thee a Crown.

Thus gradually the Church was led into evil practises and away from God. (Verse 14.) It will be remembered that Balaam, once a Prophet of God, instructed King Balak how to tempt Israel to sin, thus bringing about what he could not himself accomplish. (Numbers 23, 24; 31:16.) So those pagan priests taught the Church to indulge in spiritual fornication, and thus brought upon her the wrath of God.

The "doctrine of the Nicolaitanes" seems to be the selfish theory of lordship or headship in the Church.

DAVID ROSS, LABOR'S GREAT FRIEND, MOURNED

He Fought for the Toiling Masses and Earnest Friends Wonder Why He Was Quietly Passed By

One of the old guard has been much disappointed in not finding something in the Tribune about so loyal a supporter of the rights of labor but the sudden and untimely death of Hon. David Ross occurred after he had returned home for a vacation and while the regular force of the Tribune had been scattered in an effort to seek some recreation.

The unexpected death of Ross was not learned until some time later and this inadvertently, through a call at the office J. W. Henry of the Aetna Insurance company, an old time employe of the Tribune with whom Ross was working out the great problems of insurance to conform with best advantages to the Workmans Compensation act recently passed in Pennnsylvania. Ross, this remarkable man of Illinois, had served well his fellow man and was ever alive to the interests of labor.

How he had won favor is apparent and the following letter, one of many conveys the respect of the great toiling masses:

Chicago, Illinois, Dec. 5.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I write to suggest my disappointment in not noticing a single line in the Labor Tribune or in the United Mine Workers' Journal about the Hon. David Ross of Illinois, whose death occurred recently.

It is the old, old story—that men who do much for organized labor, and our coal miners in particular, are soon forgotten. So it is with the demise of our friend David Ross. I attended the funeral and studied the crowd of men attending and was pained at the absence of miners and miners' officials on that solemn occasion. It is true that Dave Ross, as he was commonly called and familiarly known, was never an officer in the Miners' Association, nor would he ever consent to take a salaried place. He refused to accept the State Presidency in 1889 upon the retirement of old Dan McLaughlan, and on more than one occasion he refused to accept offices in State and National Conventions of the miners. He preferred to do his bit in the ranks and for the cause, as a private, and how well he could do and did his part the leaders in the Miners' Union and the Coal Operators in the joint movement can well attest.

The ablest pleading ever made for remedial mining legislation in Illinois, before the Mining Committee and before the General Assembly, was made by David Ross. It was he who wrote and prepared for the printing of the remarkable pamphlets of 1892 to 1898 in advocacy of a series of labor measures, The Weekly Pay Bill, The Gross Weight Bill, The Anti Truck Store Bill and many others, most of which in turn have become Statutory Law in Illinois. I regarded him as the ablest and most convincing writer and public speaker Labor had in the State of Illinois, during the years 1892 to 1915.

He attended his first State or National Convention in 1895, when he represented the miners of Ogelsby and La Salle, at the National Convention held in Indianapolis, Indiana, during the month of September of that year. Dave Ross was then a timid, green, boyish-like fellow, but full to the brim of "will and want" to make a union that would be of benefit to the men of the craft with which he was identified. His entire family, his blood and nature, was of the miners. It was evident to the men of that Convention and particularly to the older and more experienced delegates that "that young fellow Ross" would make his mark in the Labor Movement.

He was a great reader of all literature bearing upon the Labor and Economic questions. His memory of what he read, what he heard spoken and what he observed, was really marvelous. He would recall in thought, facts, figures and incidents when making a speech, and in his strongest and highest flights of oratory, words and figures would pour out as readily as if being read by expert readers from the speeches of a Jefferson, Calhoun or Webster.

So resourceful and so self-possessed, was the old widow woman's miner-son, that it was a rare treat to hear him, especially anyone with

AFTER THE WAR, WHAT?

In his message to Congress President Wilson expressed himself in regard to labor and everywhere there is an artificial increase forced not through domestic trade but as the result of the nations in conflict. The serious problem with which this nation will be confronted must be met after the war when the channels of foreign trade have been brought to a close.

Union men paid thirty-five million dollars in dues and assessments in 1911 and lost in wages twenty-five million eight hundred thirty-six thousand seven hundred dollars in wages through strikes and lockouts. This does not include loss of credit and demoralizing influences for which it is impossible to make a material estimate. These staggering figures lead to the conclusion that any method in which there is mediation, conciliation and arbitration that will bring about a peaceful ending of the dispute for the mutual benefit of employe and employer should meet with general public approval. The President must prepare for the conditions after the war. NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE.

BIGELOW RESPONDED TO THE LAST CALL

As a Tribute to His Memory Mayor Armstrong is Urged to Change Grant Boulevard to Bigelow Boulevard.

Edward Manning Bigelow, the father of Pittsburgh's parks, the great public benefactor, the civic philanthropist and the idol of the greatest industrial center in the world, has gone to solve the unsolved problem, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

No state should be more proud of its public benefactors than Pennsylvania and no man won more fame than Edward Manning Bigelow for the work he performed as a public servant, both for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the City of Pittsburgh. A statue to his memory while living; magnificent public parks and almost innumerable public improvements encompass the city as monuments to constantly remind a thrifty and prosperous people in his achievements. His memory must loom greater as the days go by, and the song of the bird and the scent of the rose will come to refresh it, while the great boulevards,

EDWARD M. BIGELOW.

The New Director of Public Works of Pittsburgh.

the magnificent streets and the filtration plants and other public improvements will remind the coming generation of one who made a city great and a great people happy.

It was at 3:30 Wednesday morning when Edward Mannning Bigelow heard the tolling of the bell of eternity and met the dark winged angel of death. The Tribune had presented his name to Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong as the only man capable of bringing to the present administration the qualities so essential to an administration that wished to gain public favors through a cabinet in which men of giant intellect were to be found. The administration had suffered intensely through the death of Director Robert Swan, and a successor to him must be a man of extraordinary ability. None could be found who could so easily solve a peculiar situation or master a monumental undertaking so successfully as Bigelow and Mayor Armstrong could find no man in whom the people of Pittsburgh had more implicit confidence.

Those interested in the achievements of the administration importuned the Mayor to urge Bigelow to accept and the latter's immediate friends pleaded with Mrs. Bigelow, who vigorously protested, to submit to the demands of the people. Being much prevailed upon Mrs. Bigelow finally yielded and the appointment was made and the Ex-State Highway Commissioner became for the fourth time the Director of the Department of Public Works of Pittsburgh. This frail man with giant intellect had not been well for some time but with an indescribable zeal he immediately began to plan for himself massive burdens and for Pittsburgh gigantic undertakings with that irresistable will and determination to complete anything he ever undertook. No task was too great, no obstacle too large to surmount, no impediment could interfere with his majestic strides. When Napoleon was told that the Alps were before him he said "there shall be no Alps" and the road across the Simplon was constructed through a district formerly almost inaccessible. So it was with Bigelow. When told that the Grant Boulevard could not be constructed that it was an impossible engineering fete without expensive slips after each rain fall and a multitude of other interferences that are now looked upon and laughed over, yet Bigelow began and completed the work. The Diamond street widening objectors met similar fate and the filtration "experts" who declared "it can't be done" have long since gone into hiding. So the newly appointee within a few hours

DISHONEST ADVERTISING.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—A decision likely to have far-reaching effect in the prevention of dishonest advertising methods of the nature exposed by The Tribune, particularly false statements of merchandise values, has been rendered in a criminal court in Washington, D. C. In the first case arising under the act of Congress designed to prevent false advertising in the District of Columbia a New York corporation, Southwick Shops, Inc., which has a store in Washington and one at No. 200 Fifth avenue, New York, was convicted. The corporation was fined $300 and Henry C. Smithwick, its secretary-treasurer, was sentenced to serve a jail term of sixty days. The court announced that as this was the first conviction the jail sentence would be suspended. The jury reached its verdict of guilty after only four minutes' deliberation.

The conviction was based largely upon the testimony of C. E. LaVigne, formerly director of The Tribune Bureau of Invesctigation and now representative of the American Fair Trade League. Mr. LaVigne's testimony, which was corroborated by other witnesses, was that the Southwick Shops, Inc., had advertised various articles of merchandise to be of a value far in excess of their true worth. Palm Beach suits for which the company had paid $3.50 were advertised by the convicted concern to be worth $10 or $12 each.

The testimony was a remarkable arraignment of the methods used in such shops. Mr. Southwick admitted on the stand that the Palm Beach suits represented as $10 and $12 values had been purchased at prices ranging from $3.25 to $3.50 each "from a man who blew in there one day from a house" he had never heard of. Mr. Southwick declared that such dealing would not hurt his conscience and that he would not consider it an imposition, upon the public to sell goods advertised as being worth $10 or $12 for which he had paid only $3.50. A salesman who testified as a witness for the defence was forced to admit that the suits were not $12 articles. When asked by the court why he represented that they were, he was unable to make any response. The same salesman said that the prices fixed were what the company regarded as the highest reasonable value, but they were not based upon cost.

The great importance of the decision lies in its effect upon false advertising of merchandise values, a method of deceit which has been flagrant and widespread, especially in this city. Hitherto dishonest dealers have sought to hide themselves behind the contention that the statement of a particular value is not "false advertising," because value is a mere matter of opinion. The decision affords a complete answer to that unworthy contention. It is anticipated that the section of the penal law of New York which declares untrue, misleading or deceptive advertising to be a misdemeanor and which has provisions substantially similar to those contained in the act of Congress under which this conviction was obtained will receive a similar construction.

R. R. MEN STAND ON SIDE LINES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Attorneys representing the government are combatting the railroads' attempt to set aside the Adamson eight-hour law.

"We are not going to employ attorneys," said Grand Chief Stone, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in his address to the American Federation of Labor convention at Baltimore.

"We are going to be an interested spectator on the side lines. We are going to see the railroad corporations of this country fight the government they live under.

"I think the railroads had the idea that we were going to employ attorneys and use up all the funds we had in these organizations to fight injunction suits, because in the neighborhood of 3,000 of them will be filed, which would mean employing about 3,000 attorneys.

Had the railroads wanted to be fair in testing the constitutionality of the law they would have selected some one suit and made a test case of it."

DEMAND FOOD EMBARGO.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 4.—The A. F. of L. convention, last week, voted unanimously to demand an ambargo upon shipments of wheat and other breadstuffs. The report of the federal department of agriculture was quoted to show that the wheat crop is barely sufficient for our own people the coming year, and that present conditions "are a menace to the physical and social well being of the nation." President Wilson and congress are urged to place an embargo in harmony with international law.

A resolution demanding a probe by the department of justice into the increased cost of print paper, which has been doubled and in some cases trebled, within the last year, was also adopted.

CLOSED SHOP MAKES BUSINESS AGENT BOSS

Jefferson Wrote Two Great Affirmations Lifting the Open Shop to the Rights of Man.

BY COL. JOHN P. IRISH, CAL.

Jefferson, the Philosopher of the Revolution, wrote into our civic scheme, two affirmations, without which the rights of man cannot be enjoyed and free popular government cannot exist. The first of these was, "equal rights for all, special privileges for none."

The second was in that mighty preamble to the Declaration of Independence:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal and endowed with certain inalienable rights, amongst which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and that to secure these, governments are instituted amongst men."

In these forty-eight words, Jefferson wrote the impregnable indictment of the closed shop, and lifted the open shop to the dignity of the highest expression of the rights of man.

From 1776 to 1876, one hundred years, this country enjoyed equality of rights, and its citizens had a right unquestioned to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. In that period, we reared generations of Americans who gave to us by the Mexican War our splendid frontage on the Pacific Coast, and the territory now divided into five American states, and a generation which preserved the Union in the Civil War, and reaffirmed the civic philosophy of Jefferson. In that century, a greater percentage of American workingmen went forward to financial independence than since, for every man depended upon skill and industry in his handicraft for constant employment and the best wages.

Then began a change, imperceptible at first, but gathering force until now in the form of union labor, it denies the equal rights of men, and denies the right to life itself, unless under conditions it enforces, and not under the equal operation of economic law.

We have now reached the period of the closed shop, in which no man is permitted to live by the work of his hands, except by the consent of the walking delegate and business agent of Union labor.

There is no economic argument against the organization of labor, if it be legally responsible and keep within the limitations of law.

It should mean the superior skill of its members, but it does not.

It should mean their superior industry and productivity, but it does not.

Labor unions claim the right of collective bargaining, and the making of contracts, but they refuse to incorporate under the law and to assume legal responsibility for contracts, and the right to sue and be sued.

They demand contracts of the employer, but whether that employer be an individual, a firm, a partnership or a corporation, each has a legal status, and may sue or be sued in case of breach of contract, or be punished for any violation of the law which holds a strong hand over them all.

So, between the two parties to such collective bargaining and contract, there is no equality of right. The contract is not bilateral, it is unilateral, with all the responsibility upon one party, the employer.

Under this condition of irresponsibility of the union, the closed shop is entrenched in its absolute denial of the right of a non-union man to work, and therefore denial of his right to live.

The labor guilds of France grew so strong that they demanded of the King that he treat the licensing of labor as a royal prerogative, and that no man be permitted to work without the royal license. He was a

The Tribune Can Blow, Too.

One of our leading daily contemporaries in Pittsburgh boasted most enthusiastically a few weeks ago over having received a subscription from abroad. That is an almost daily occurance with the National Labor Tribune but to what heights would the vaunting have soared if said daily had received a postal from Finland with a kick that its issue of last May had not yet been received, and urgently requesting another of said date.

Loud may the Tribune boast not over a subscription from Europe that may inadvertenely come to any newspaper but that each copy of the Tribune is so valuable that far away Finland is at a loss to know what the world was doing last May and what the Tribune had to say about it and that lacking that enlightenment Finland must whirl around with this mundane and benighted sphere until the Tribune's issue of May 18, gets to Karso, Finland. Then for a blaze of intellectual glory.

For the benefit of our readers we herewith present the postal:

Korso, Finland, octro. 14. VII. 1916.

Dear friends:

My Tribune for May 18th has not been received.

Will you please mail me a copy?

I appreciate your valuable paper. My address is no more Mikaelsgatan 2F Helsingfors, but: Korso, Finland, Europe.

Yours respectfully,

THE EXISTENCE OF A SUPREME INTELLIGENT CREATOR ESTABLISHED.

Evidence Aside From the Bible, Examined in the Light of Reason. An Untenable Theory. A Reasonable Theory. The Character of God Demonstrated. Reasonable Deductions.

Even from the standpoint of the skeptic, a reasonable and candid search into the unknown, by the light of what is known, will guide the unbiased, intelligent reasoner in the direction of the truth. Let it is evident that without a direct revelation of the plans and purposes of God, men could only approximate the truth, and arrive at indefinite conclusions. But let us for the moment lay aside the Bible, and look at things from the standpoint of reason alone.

He who can look into the sky with a telescope, or even with his natural eye alone, and see there the immensity of creation, its symmetry, beauty, order, harmony and diversity, and yet doubt that the Creator of these is vastly his superior both in wisdom and power, or who can suppose for a moment that such order came by chance, without a Creator, has so far lost or ignored the faculty of reason as to be properly considered what the Bible terms him, a fool (one who ignores or lacks reason); "The fool hath said in his heart, 'There is no God." However it happened, at least that much of the Bible is true, as every reasonable mind must conclude; for it is a self-evident truth that effects must be produced by competent causes. Every plant and every flower, even, speaks volumes of testimony on this subject. Intricate in construction, exquisitely beautiful in form and texture, each speaks of a wisdom and skill above the human. How short-sighted the absurdity which boasts of human skill and ingenuity, and attributes to mere chance the regularity, uniformity and harmony of nature, while denying that nature has an intelligent Lawgiver.

Some who deny the existence of an intelligent Creator claim that nature is the only God, and that from nature all forms of animal and vegetable developments proceeded without the ordering of intelligence, but governed, they say, by "the law of the survival of the fittest" in a process of evolution.

This theory lacks proof, for all about us we see that the various creatures are of fixed natures which do not evolve to higher natures; and though those who hold to this theory have made repeated endeavors, they have never succeeded either in blending different species or in producing a new fixed variety. No instance is known where one kind has changed to another kind.* Though there are fish that can use their fins for a moment as wings, and fly out of the water, and frogs that can sing, they have never been known to change into birds; and though there are among brutes some which bear a slight resemblance to men, the evidence is wholly lacking that man was evolved from such creatures. On the contrary, investigations prove that though different varieties of the same species may be produced, it is impossible to blend the various species, or for one to evolve from another. For the same reason the donkey and the horse, though resembling each other, cannot be claimed as related, for it is well known that their offspring is imperfect and cannot propagate either species.

*For the benefit of some readers we remark that changes such as the transformation of caterpillars into butterflies are not changes of nature; the caterpillar is but the larva hatched from the butterfly's egg.

Surely if unintelligent nature were the creator or evolver she would continue the process, and there would be no such thing as fixed species, since without intelligence nothing would arrive at fixed conditions. Evolution would be a fact today, and we would see about us fish becoming birds, and monkeys becoming men. This theory we conclude to be as contrary to human reason as to the Bible, when it claims that intelligent beings were created by a power lacking intelligence.

One theory regarding the creation (excepting man) by a process of evolution, to which we see no serious objection, we briefly state as follows: It assumes that the various species of the present are fixed and unchangeable so far as nature or kind is concerned, and though present natures may be developed to a much higher standard, even to perfection, these species or natures will forever be the same. This theory further assumes that none of these fixed species were originally created so, but that in the remote past they were developed from the earth, and by gradual processes of evolution from one form to another. These evolutions, under divinely established laws, in which changes of food and climate played an important part, may have continued until the fixed species, as at present seen, were established, beyond which change is impossible, the ultimate purpose of the Creator in this respect, to all appearance, having been reached. Though each of the various families of plants and animals is capable of improvement or of degredation, none of them is susceptible of change into, nor can they be produced from, other families or kinds. Though each of these may attain to the perfection of its own fixed nature, the Creator's design as to nature having been attained, further change in this respect is impossible.

It is claimed that the original plants and animals, from which present fixed varieties came, became extinct before the creation of man. Skeletons and fossiles of animals and plants which do not now exist, found deep below the earth's surface, favor this theory. This view neither ignores nor rejects the Bible teaching that man was a direct and perfect creation, made in the mental and moral image of his Maker, and not a development by a process of evolution, probably common to the remainder of creation. This view would in no sense invalidate, but would support, the Bible's claim, that nature as it is today teaches that an Intelligent Being, ordered it, and was its first cause. Let human reason do her best to trace known facts to reasonable and competent causes, giving due credit to nature's laws in every case; but back of all the intricate machinery of nature is the hand of its great Author, the intelligent, omnipotent God.

We claim, then, that the existence of an intelligent Creator is a clearly demonstrated truth, the proof of which lies all around us; yea, and within us; for we are his workmanship, whose every power of mind and body speaks of a marvelous skill beyond our comprehension. And he is also the Designer and Creator of what we term nature. We claim that he ordered and established the laws of nature, the beauty and harmony of whose operation we see and admire. This one whose wisdom planned and whose power upholds and guides the universe, whose wisdom and power so immeasurably transcend our own we instictively worship and adore.

To realize the existence of this mighty God is but to dread his omnipotent strength, unless we can see him possessed of benevolence and goodness corresponding to his power. Of this fact we are also fully assured by the same evidence which proves his existence, power and wisdom. Not only are we forced to the conclusion that there is a God, and that his power and wisdom are immeasurably beyond our own, but we are forced by reason to the conclusion that the grandest thing created is not superior to its Creator; hence we must conclude that the greatest manifestation of benevolence and justice among men is inferior in scope to that of the Creator, even as man's wisdom and power are inferior to his. And thus we have before our mental vision the character and attributes of the great Creator. He is wise, just, loving and powerful; and the scope of his attributes is, of necessity, immeasurably wider than that of his grandest creation.

But further: having reached this reasonable conclusion relative to the existence and character of our Creator, let us inquire, What should we expect of such a being? The answer comes, that the possession of such attributes reasonably argues their exercise, their use. God's power must be used, and that in harmony with his own nature—wisely, justly and benevolently. Whatever may be the means to that end, whatever may be the operation of God's power, the final outcome must be consistent with his nature and character, and every step must be approved of his infinite wisdom.

What could be more reasonable than such exercise of power as we see manifested in the creation of countless worlds about us, and in the wonderful variety of earth? What could be more reasonable than the creation of man, endowed with reason and judgment, capable of appreciating his Creator's works, and judging of his skill—of his wisdom, justice, power and love? All this is reasonable, and all in perfect accord with facts known to us.

And now comes our final proposition. Is it not reasonable to suppose that such an infinitely wise and good being, having made a creature capable of appreciating himself and his plan, would be moved by his love and justice to supply the wants of that creature's nature, by giving him some revelation? Would it not be a reasonable supposition, that God would supply to man information concerning the object of his existence, and his plans for his future? On the contrary, we ask, would it not be unreasonable to suppose that such a Creator would make such a creature as man, endow him with powers of reason reaching out into the future, and yet make no revelation of his plans to meet those longings? Such a course would be unreasonable, because contrary to the character which we reasonably attribute to God; contrary to the proper course of a being controlled by justice and love.

We may ,reason that in creating man, had Divine Wisdom decided it inexpedient to grant him a knowledge of his future destiny, and his share oi his Creator's plans, then surely Justice as well as Divine Love, would have insisted that the being should be so limited in his capacity that he would not continually be tormented in his capacity with doubts, and fears, and ignorance; and as a consequence Divine Power would have been used under those limitations. The fact, then, that man has capacity for appreciating a revelation of the Divine plan, taken in connection with the conceded character of his Creator, is an abundant reason for expecting that God would grant such a revelation, in such time and manner as his wisdom approved. So, then, in view of these considerations, even if we were ignorant of the Bible, reason would lead us to expect and to be on the lookout for some revelation as the Bible claims to be. And furthermore, noting the order and harmony of the general creation, as in grand procession the spheres and systems keep time and place, we cannot but conclude that the minor irregularities, such as earthquakes, etc., are but indications that the working together of the various elements in in this world is not at present perfect. An assurance that all will ultimately be perfect and harmonious on earth as in the heavens, with some explanation why it is not so at present, are requests which are not unreasonable for reasoning men to ask, nor for the Creator, whose wisdom, power and benevolence are demonstrated, to answer. Hence we should expect the revelation sought to include such an assurance and such an explanation.

Having established the reasonableness of expecting a revelation of God's will and plan concerning our race, we will examine in the next chapter the general character of the Bible which claims to be just such a revelation. And if it presents the character of God in perfect harmony with what reason as above considered dictates, we should conclude that it thus proves itself to be the needed and reasonably expected revelation from God, and should then accept its testimony as such. If of God, its teachings, when fully appreciated, will accord with his character, which reason assures us is perfect in wisdom, justice, love and power.

"Ye curious minds, who roam abroad,
And trace creation's wonders o'er,
Confess the footsteps of your God,
And bow before him, and adore.

"The heavens declare thy glory, Lord;
In every star thy wisdom shines;
But when our eyes behold thy Word,
We read thy name in fairer lines."

Questions and Answers.

NOTE—If any of the readers of the Tribune wish to ask further questions in regard to the teachings of the I. B. S. Eureka, Cal., Dec. 7.

I would like answers to the following questions through the columns of your valuable paper. We have an infidel here who claims to know that the religion of Brahma is 2,000 years older than the Bible and they had a garden of Eden also a Christ. Is he giving us the truth. This infidel is very intelligent and well read; has read the Bible a good deal and well versed in ancient and modern history and is leading some astray. I always understood the Bible is the oldest book in existence. Vol. Page 38, and oblige,

A. F. TOMLINSON.

Answer—It is true that the Bible is the oldest book in existence, being more than three thousand years old. It also contains the only credible history extant of the period which it covers. It begins with the creation of the earth. Its cronological feature ending in the first year of Cerus, 536 B. C., a point where secular history begins to be reliable.

By its prophecies it foretold events which have taken place since that time and which will take place in the future.

Daniel's prophecy regarding Israel's seventy weeks foretold the first advent of our Lord, giving the time of his death, and everything else connected with it. It also sealed the prophet and the vision. It sealed Daniel as a true prophet and the vision as a true vision

Thus giving us a "strong consolation." In symbolic form it also gives us a history of the Christian church, true and false, during this Gospel Age, just as we find it set forth on the pages of history.

The Hindu Religion which includes Brahmanism, was a development covering four periods, from 1500 B. C. to modern times. First, Vedism, 1500 B. C. to 900 B. C. Second, Bramanism 900 B. C. to 1200 A. D. Third, Buddism, 543 B. C. to 900 A. D. Fourth, Modern Hinduism or Popular Mythological Brahmanism, 400 B. C. to the present time.

The sacred literature of the Hindu's, the Vedas, all have the term Veda, (Divine Knowledge,) applied by the Bramans. While they existed orally about fourteen centuries B. C. they remained unwritten until the fifteenth century A. D.

Of all the heathen religions, Brahmanism was the worst. With its domineering Priesthood, its system of annual sacrifice, and castes. Its dogmas of the transmigration of souls, demon worship, the degradation and seclusion of women and its thirty-three millions of deities. Child marriage, and child widowhood were a part of its awful system.

It surely could not be a revelation from a God of either love or justice.

Even if its tradition extended back farther than the age of the Bible, that would not prove it true.

We believe all heathen religions and philosophers, had their origin in the garden of Eden. When Satan said to Mother Eve thou shalt not surely die, and they have been developing in one form and another ever since.

At the time of our Lord's first advent they had begun to tincture Judaism, and so the teachings and beliefs of the Jews today, are far removed from the faith of Abraham. The nominal Christian Church has also been polluted in the transmigration of souls, Spiritism with its supposed communion with the dead, and Christian Science with its "All is God, and all is good," are simply phases of it. We give some quotations from those heathen philosophies. "I am God." "The whole universe is God. There is nothing else." "Ignorance makes the soul think itself different from God." Everything is worshipable, from the soul of man to the blade of grass. "This atom belongeth to the over soul, is the all, the truth, the over soul." There is no sense of sinfulness, or guilt, because "All is good."

How does that compare with present day delusions, and doctrines of demons?

But Christianity can be traced back farther than that. Christ was the lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

Many have wondered what foundation these doctrines might have had.

We believe the fallen angels who materialized before the flood, were the Gods of Mythology, and their offspring who perished in the Deluge, were the Demigods. The dreamy, passive minds of the people of India, the result of the tropical climate, rendering them an easy prey to the deceptive influences of those demons. Yet the worst conception of a supreme being that ever found lodgement in the human mind, during all those dark ages of heathen mythology, with all of its attendant horrors, was not so much of a travesty on religion, and everything else good and bad, as was that master stroke of Satan, the doctrine of eternal torment which he succeeded in foisting on the Christian Church during the dark ages and which is still held to by some of those "hireling shepherds," who seem to be afraid they might not get to pluck the golden fleece from their dear sheep, if they were to admit they did not believe it.

Some so-called Christian writers who are willing to compromise, with heathenism, claim to believe that Budda, Confusius, Mohammed, and others, were God's representatives, as Christ was quoting Paul as saying that God had never left himself without a witness.

But Paul did not say those heathen Gods were witnesses, but after telling how in times past God had suffered all nations to walk after their own ways adds, "Nevertheless he left not himself without a witness, in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness." Acts 14:17.

There is about as much reason in trying to set forth such views as that, as there was in the attempt of a certain man trying to prove by the Bible there is no God, by taking the last four words of the passage, "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God." Or of the good old colored preacher who was so distressed because his people had gotten into such a habit of playing marbles, that they could not even attend church. After hunting all through the Bible for a suitable text, he finally found the words "Marvel not." Thinking that was just what he needed, and with a much better excuse for his expediency, he proceeded to preach them a powerful sermon from those words, ending it by saying—Now my bredern I wants to warn you in the words ob our dear Sabious, if you cares about your souls' salvation, to marble not from dis time on, or you will done go to hell sure.

The Brahmans probably had a Christ and a garden of Eden, for the wily instigator of their system would leave nothing out to make the counterfeit incomplete.

When we were asked to explain Matthew 27, 52-53, we stated on authority of Prof. C. Lischendorf, that they were spurious; and are so listed in our Berean Bible, which states that they are omitted by the Senatic M.S., which it is claimed is perfect and complete.

After sending our reply we found an article which seemed to be a somewhat reasonable explanation of the verses. And believing that it is better to explain a passage if it can be done in harmony with other Scriptures, than to say it is spurious, we were about to send an article giving the Brother's explanation, when we saw some criticisms on what we had said, and concluded to wait and see how many different views would be expressed. As usual where Bro. Russell has not expressed himself on a subject; there are about as many different views as there are different shaped heads.

The Brother explains that Jesus crying out the first time, verse 46, would represent the beginning of the Gospel Age. And his second crying out, verse 50, would represent the last experiences of the body of Christ, when his resurrection would be complete.

Verse 51, the rent veil, the quaking earth, and rent rocks, he claims had a literal fulfillment at the time of Jesus' death, and was a picture of the entire Gospel Age. The rent veil picturing that after Jesus' death, the Church would get a glimpse of spiritual things in the Most Holy, while the trembling earth and the rent rocks would picture the events of the harvest period or end of the age. Verse 52-53, he explains to mean that after the resurrection is complete the saints, Ancient Worthies, will come forth from the tomb, and will go into the city and appear unto many," the Jews who are in Jerusalem.

This seems to us the most reasonable explanation we have heard, and give it for what it is worth. We invite kindly criticisms, and if we make mistakes we wish to correct them.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 4.

Having been kept quite busy I have failed to mingle my voice of appreciation to your paper; but wish the friends all to know I still love the Lord and rejoice in his promises to those that overcome and I shall be pleased to hear from any who care to write me. The death of our Shepherd was a great shock to us all, but he has been glorified and can yet lead us upward. Let us press forward to the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus. Since I was a child of 14 years I have desired to know of our Heavenly Father. I was confirmed at that age with a class of 36 at St. Marks P. E. church at Baltimore, Md. I was very earnest in my desire to please and live close to the Lord. I was also a Sunday school teacher at St. Marks, yet my young heart was yearning for something I could not just explain or account for. I so often thought and said at home the teachings I received did not just satisfy. They were not what I had expected to receive. The longing followed me year after year and I could not account for it. I so often thought the Great God of this universe who gave his creatures such a beautiful world to live in, for I am a lover of nature and her beauties, surely he had some great purpose in view and I was longing to learn. He had said so, but in vain I searched but could not see, blind indeed. Often I asked the dear father who raised me from a child of six years, having lost mother, and he told me as he saw and knew, being ever anxious to learn all, I asked the so-called Lord's people and Shepherds of our locality but alas they could not satisfy the hungry soul. They did not know of any times of refreshing or restitution of all things. So the years passed on; I married and came to Norfolk, Va. and with husband I went to the Christian church, then the Baptist church, the same thing being mostly taught. At times I was asked by friends to go with them to the Catholic mission. I went on several occasions to the "Holy Rollers," but soon found they were under the fallen angels (evil spirits.) I began to see there was no true religion. Surely Christianity had lost the key. I gave up staying home doing the best I could to learn his holy word alone. After the death of my husband I had a greater desire for the love of the Father who said he loved his children and he had promised to be my Husband, so I returned back to the Baptist church. I went regular and I was so hungry I was asked to be a member and be baptized, but I refused, not being satisfied as yet. I replied, "no, I will never be a Baptist." Truly the unseen hand was holding me back. In 1914, Feb. 1st, the greatest trial of life came, a beautiful daughter was taken. Oh, how I rebelled. Surely the Father loved me. I went to her home—her husband was a worldly man. I became more hungry than ever. I wanted a strong arm to lean on and I was every crying to the Father for protection. He sent me the Truth. I then found the lost key. I am now rejoicing in the casket of gold, for truly it has given me the pearl of great price and what are these few years of trouble to that crown laid up for those that overcome. Pray for me, dear ones, that I may be one found worthy. Words of comfort thankfully received.

Into His perfect image,
Then I shall be satisfied.
When I shall awake in his likeness,
And in His presence abide.

ELLA MAY McCLOUD.

You will please find check for $1.00 to renew my subscription for 1917. I very much appreciate your good paper. It is surely improving; glad to see the Help Others Fund progressing and also the back sermons of our dear Pastor Russell, and all other features of your good paper. Pride, La., Dec. 4.

I have been a reader of your paper for the past four years and I like it more and more each time I read it, because it is such nice clean paper, also because it has stood so firmly in printing our dear pastor's sermons. When so many other had cut it out I also find many other helpful Truth features therein that is as cool water to a thirsty could and I am real glad that you will continue to print our dearly beloved pastor's sermons as I just came into present truth in 1905 and that will cause me to get sermons that I never would have got because at that time and until about 1907 I did not even know of the sermons. The paper has been set to us by a dear loving brother out west and we never would have been able to get it. May God bless and keep him to the end of the way then give him an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom. I saw a letter from Sister Lillian Jones whom I think was the wife of our Dear Brother O. K. Jones one of the four brothers that was with us in 1908 and the first truth friends we ever met, although he has long since passed beyond the veil of flesh yet he is treasured in my memory like an evergreen and I am hoping, yea, striving to meet him and our dear under shepherd in that great convention. Jesus said, In my father's house there are many a mansion, and I truly hope dear editor, that you will be in one of those mansions, because he said that if one would give a cup of cold water to one of his little ones he would in no wise lose his reward. I send warm Christian greetings to all the dear Saints of God and ask an interest in their prayers. Praying the Lord's richest blessings upon you, I am,

Yours in the one hope of our high calling,

The Tribune for the 30th came to hand yesterday. We have endeavored to note the point to which J. A. Bohuet takes exception in Elder Oppy's Exegesis of Rev. 13-11. I fail to get the idea of a republican horn at one time and a Democratic horn at another.

We note in The Tribune, 16th, col. 7th, 7th line, these words, "A Republican or Democratic form of government." The spirit of the text preceding, and that which follows these words, will not warrant the interpretation that J. A. Bohuet reads into it. Count 45 lines from the top of this 4th column. It reads, "For this is a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, and that the power is in the people, showing a republican form of government, and not a kingdom."

Elder Oppy was using the language framed by President Lincoln who was elected by the Republican party, yet there is not a statesman or a scholar that studies those words that does not recognize that they are profoundly Democratic?

I understand Bro. Oppy to infer in the 7th line above, that, taking any phase of the government, we have a government of the People; in the 11th and 12th lines of the 4th col. Bro. Oppy deffinitly states that, "That these two horns denote governmental power; eclesiastical and civil lying side by side, in perfect harmony with each other."—The one is the Church the other is the State, and why that any one should construe the language to mean a Republican horn operating alternately with a Democratic horn, gets quite beyond my capacity.

Bro. Bohuet then procedes to give us some Fatherly advice, which savors mightily of the same kind of seasoning, that was doped out by a one "Stevens," who was sent by the conference to tell the Methodists of Juniata Borough what they should do to keep themselves religious. I was one of those who belonged to that society. This man informed us that it was not within the province of the man who stood behind the anvil, the desk, the counter, or that followed the plow, to look into these matters; (He was here referring to Biblical and Eclesiastical matters.)' "I am paid to attend to these things.

Bro. Bohuet informs us that He is in receipt of present truth relative to the Beast and it's image that has more logic in it than that of Oppy's. "'Why is this logic being withheld from the people.'" Understand that God's people are His confidents, and I speak the truth for them, that they are constantly seeking for the good,—the best; and if they have not got it, who shall condemn them.

Bro. Oppy's Exegesis is the best that ever came to me. I never knew that some of the Brothers had something better; I have all of scripture studies, I have read, and reread them; I have all of Zions, Watch-towers bound in volume dating back twenty-four years, and I have never noticed the slightest intimation in any of Bro. Russell's writings, that the people should wait on Him; that they should leave their thinking at His shop, and have it thought out for them. I have a personal knowledge that some Friends did do this very thing, for one of them said to me, when he was not taken to glory in 1914, that he had taken Bro. Russell as the one who was to dispense the meat in due season, and if He leads me astray there is no one to blame but Him, I told the Bro., that that was the farthest thing from my thought. That Bro. Russell had done for me all that I could hope for; He baptized me in symbol with His own hands, and then pointed me to the word of God by the mouth of Paul; "Study to show thyself approved unto God," and not unto me, nor to others.

Paul's laguage is profoundly forceful, that the conduct of God's family must be framed parallel to that proscribed by the council of His will, and not to the ip-se-dix-it of men. I called a Brother's atention to what had been said to me, because it alarmed me. I told Him that I felt that Bro. Russell will be taken away, and these folks will find that their light has been snuffed out. This is the ultimate result, if we walk in the light of another man's lamp. "For thou wilt light my candle, the Lord my God will enlighten my darknerr. (Ps. 18-28).

Yours by His Grace,
H. K. HAMMOND.

THE "HELP OTHERS" FUND.

In this era of prosperity when the nation is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity let not the prosperous forget that there are those who through misfortune, perchance, through the removal by death of the head of the household, the bread winner of the family, or through circumstances over which they have no control, who are not privileged to enjoy the richest blessing being lavished upon the more fortunate. In this very hour when we are at peace with the world and the fair fields of America instead of running crimson with the life blood of the nation's best, is bowing to the golden harvest. In this day of plenty let us remember that our duty is to "Help Others" and see that they shall partake of some of the richest Blessings. It is for this purpose that the Tribune has at the suggestion of more thoughtful readers of Pastor Russell's Sermons began its "HELP OTHERS" fund and there is occasion for much joy over the willingness of our readers to contribute. The Help Others fund depends upon you for its success and only by the readiness of the Tribune friends to send in their mite will it succeed. Do not wait for large sums; send in small contributions. The small as well as the large are thankfully received and the sunshine and joy that may come to some home will be a bountiful Blessing to you.

Do not delay. Send in the money at once. HELP OTHERS.

EVOLUTION IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

By Prof. Geo. E. Post.

The world, perhaps, holds no other such single collection of scientific curiosities as can be found in the British museum. Gallery after gallery, cabinet after cabinet, and mile after mile of shelving, exhibit a bewildering array of beasts, birds, fishes and moving creatures of every kind, stuffed and preserved, along with prehistoric relics, fossil forms and all the various specimens of organic life.

Here would be the place of all others for the scientific skeptic of the day to trace the lineage of which he boasts and to demonstrate his descent from the prehistoric monkey, but unfortunately, the men who have the greatest opportunities do not always make the best improvement of them, and a large proportion of the talk about scientic infidelity comes from men who know nothing of science. The editor of the "New York Evangelist" publishes the following article containing the testimony from Mr. Etheridge, who stood at the head of the Natural Science department of the British Museum:

"Our friend and fellow traveler in Palestine, Prof. Geo. E. Post, is, as our readers are aware, a man of extensive attainments and wide and acute observation of facts and phenomena—in short, a man of science in the true sense. On the alert for whatever is worthy of study, it was a matter of course that while recently in London in quest of instruments and apparatus for the Medical College at Beirut, he should spend some portion of his time in the British Museum—that immense storehouse of all that remains to us of the arts, the learning and life-conditions of the ages. Treated with the utmost courtesy by the large circle of noted men and scholars, Dr. Post very naturally, in the course of his visits to this great center of attraction, came in contact with Mr. Etheridge, than whom no one is more able to interpret and sum up whatever there is to be seen. Indeed, he had a special errance with him, and it thus fell out, in common phrase in a good sense, that the recognized British expert in all these matters was "interviewed" by our American missionary and man of science as to his conclusions, his summing up of the bearings of the entire deposit there collected in the department of natural history, and set in order as nowhere else in the world. And thanks to a correspondent, a former colleague of Dr. Post, we have here an account of Mr. Etheridge's conclusions. They are given only in summary, but are clear and satisfactory as to what may be learned from a full study of the remains of all pre-historic periods. Their decisive bearing on the controversies of the day will be apparent to all. It is seldom that so much that is significant and entitled to great, even conclusive weight, is embraced in the same space:

"'London, Aug. 2, 1885— " 'Yesterday I was in the natural history department of the British Museum. I had business touching some fossils which I found in the Lattakia Miocene and Pliocene clay beds, and about which I wrote an article which appeared in "Nature" last year. Mr. Etheridge, F. R. S., kindly examined and named them. I was anxious to hear what a first-rate working scientist, with perhaps the largest opportunity for induction in the world, would say on Darwinian evolution. So, after he had shown me all the wonders of the establishment, I asked him whether, after all, this was not the working out of mind and Providence. He turned to me with a clear, honest look into my eyes, and replied, "In all this great Museum there is not a particle of evidence of transmutation of species. Nine-tenths of the talk of evolution is sheer nonsense, and founded on observation, and wholly unsupported by fact. Men adopt a theory and then strain their facts to support it. I read in all their books, but they make no impression on my believe in the stability of species. Moreover, the talk of the great antiquity of man is of the same value. There is no such thing as a fossil man. Men are ready to regard you as a fool if you do not go with them in all their vagaries. But this Museum is full of proofs of the utter falsity of their views."

"I have condensed very much, but you may spread this out over twenty minutes, and imagine what a comfort it was to hear it. I do not propose to surrender yet even to theistic evolution, which seems to me at best a bad name for God's creation.' "

Now, we want to hear the verdict of bar-room scientists, saloon geologists and horse-shed philosophers, who are more anxious to establish a connection with the monkeys and baboons than with Adam, who "was the son of God" —From "'The Armory."

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

TIMES OF REFRESHING COMING.

The following sermon was delivered by Pastor Russell in New York City on January 13, 1905.—Editor.

Pastor C. T. Russell of Allegheny, Pa., spoke twice at the Grand Opera house, New York, Sunday. In the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock his topic was "To Hell and Back. Who are There? Hope for the Recovery of Many." His topic for the evening was, "Times of Refreshing Coming", the text being the language of St. Peter:—"Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you."—Acts 3:19-20. Pastor Russell said:

"It is sometimes claimed that those who study God's Word become pasimistic, looking forward to merely trials, difficulties, etc. But we claim, on the contrary, that those who understand God's Word aright are the most cheerful people in the world—that the gospel rightly understood is good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people. True, the Scriptures do faithfully delineate sin and its downward influence and the certainty of just punishment as well as of rewards; but, more than this, they give us ground for expecting future blessings and a paradise restored, such as can be found in no other writings in the world, such as purely human philosophy could not reasonably even dream of.

"Our text is an illustration of this: "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of Jehovah." What refreshment comes to our hearts even with the very reading of these words! Although they point out to us the dry, the arid, the dying and dead condition of the world of mankind in the present time they tell us of refreshment, rejuvenation, etc. The thought behind the Greek word here rendered "refreshing" is "recovery of Breath"—as of one who was dying gasping were enabled to breathe freely again. Refreshing, therefore, as a translation, well represents the original thought. And as we look about us and see the condition in which the world is, nearly 20,000,000,000 alread dead and 1, 600,000,000 dying at the rate of 80 per minute, we get a glimpse of human affairs as it appears from the divine standpoint—a gasping, a dying world of humanity. How joyful is this message, then, which the Apostle Peter echoed, 'Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of Jehovah.' How much it means to our dying race! The Apostle Paul expresses the same thought as looking down into the future he exclaims, 'The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God'—waiting for Christ's millenial kingdom.—Rom. 8:22.

THEN SINS WILL BE BLOTTED OUT.

"Pentecost witnessed the covering of the sins of believers with the role of Christ's righteousness imputed to them, but the coming times of refreshing are to do far more than this, for then the sins will be actually blotted out, to be no more forever—no trace of them will longer remain. It is indeed a blessed privilege for the Lord's people at the present time to realize the covering of their sins with the merit of their Redeemer—to realize that the Father no longer regards them nor treats them as sinners, but as justified by faith. On the basis of this faith they have peace with God and the fellowship and communion and privileges of children.

"Nevertheless, after all these privileges have been enjoyed, we are assured that the present is a trial time, and that our adoption into the Lord's family as members of the body of Christ. His bride, is as our Methodist friends would say, but a probationary membership. None will be accepted into full membership in the body of Christ and into the joint-heirship with Him until the probationary period shall have been passed successfully and they shall hear the Master's voice in the first resurrection saying, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of the Lord Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things.

FROM THE PRESENCE OF THE LORD.

"It was the Lord Jehoviah who sentenced our race, who placed the curse of death upon us. We say in this afternoon's discourse that this was not the curse of eternal torment at the hands of demons, but of death—'The soul that sinneth, it shall die,' being the Lord's declaration. We could not deny the justice of the divine decree that none of the sinful race is worthy of everlasting life, but we could have assured our Creator that we had learned a great lesson through the fall and if we were granted such an opportunity as Father Adam enjoyed we would be thoroughly loyal to the great King of Kings and His laws of righteousness, and that thus obeying him we might have hope for favor and everlasting life accordingly.

"But the Heavenly Father did not wait for us to plead for His mercy. He laid hold upon one mighty to save—Jesus. He sent His only begotten Son into the world that we might live through Him, that the dying world might be released from the sentence by His paying the penalty for us, so that eventually all disposed toward righteousness might attain it.

"The Scriptures tell us that 'in the fullness of time God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, that He might redeem, etc. (Gal. 4:4). The fact that this was 4,000 years after sin entered, so far from confusing us, should show us the fixity of the divine purpose, and that accordingly to the great clock of the universe every feature of the divine plan will be carried out. The times of refreshing of which the Apostle Peter tells us in our text, are just as sure of accomplishment in their season. The Apostle Peter could not definately know when these times of refrishing would come. Our Lord said to them, 'It is not for you the times and seasons, which the Father hath put in His own hands.' What comfort it gives to our hearts, what strengthening to our faith, to realize that all these times and seasons are in the hands of the Almighty! Viewed from this standpoint, the 2,000 years from the time Peter uttered these words seems none too long to wait for the refreshing promise. Comparing it with the time of waiting for the Redeemers first advent, it is but one-half as long. And now dear friends, we believe we see indications in the Lord's word and in the affairs of the world around us of conclusive proofs, that the times of refreshing are nigh at hand.

WHY THE LONG DELAY?

"We answer that the delay is incidental to the work of the atonement. All of this was typified in the Jewish nation. Annually that nation had a day without atonement in which the people were without God's favor as representing condemnation. The people of Isreal on the atonement day fasted and wore sackcloth as symbolically evidencing the world's condition at the present time. As soon as the Day of Atonement sacrifices had been finished and the whole work of atonement completed the high priest lifted up his hands and blessed the people and they arose from the dust and were filled with joy and gladness, representative of the blessings which will come to the world of mankind as soon as this gospel age shall have accomplished its work and the millennial age have began. In the later there will be no more a death sentence upon the world, no longer a groaning and travailing creation under sin and death conditions. The times of refreshing shall be upon the world; the Lord Jesus will be present in His second advent in glory and power, although invisible to men; and His kingdom over all shall be the evidence of the divine favor returned and the gradual split of the world out of sin and death conditions will be demonstrations that the curse of sentence of death has created, hath passed away, that the reign of sin and death has terminated and that the reign of righteousness and life everlasting had begun.

THE ANTITYPICAL ATONEMENT DAY.

"This entire gospel age is a day of atonement in antitype. At its beginning our Lord as the great High Priest offered the first sacrifice of the day of atonement—Himself—typefied under the Jewish economy by the bullock. The benefit of that first sacrifice of the atonement day was not applied generally to all Isreal, but was limited to the under-priests and the Levites, the body and household of the high-priest, Aaron. So in the antitype the first sacrifice of this day of atonement was that of our Lord Jesus, finished at Calvary, and in it He made applicable merely to the household of faith—to all believers, including the Royal Priesthood, the consecrated church."

WAITING FOR THE ADOPTION.

We have already quoted the Apostle's words respecting the groaningfi creation—the world in general—the whole creation groaneth and travaileth together in pain until now, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God. 'We now see who these sons of God are; that our Lord Jesus is the captain, the Head, the Lord, the High-Priest ever his church, His Bride. His Royal Priesthood—the different figures representing the same class from different standpoints. We now see that all those are the sons of God who are now being selected or elected, and that by and by they shall be manifested as God's kingdom class. For that manifestation and reign of righteousness, the Millenium, we shall hope and pray.

"But notice again that the Apostle declares that these under-priests, these probationary members of the church, the body of Christ, also groan—notwithstanding the Pentecostal blessing, notwitcstanding their begetting of the Holy Spirit, notwithstanding the light of divine favor upon them, notwithtanding the covering with the precious robe of Christ's name and their aceptance at the throne of heavenly grace. Of those the Apostle says, 'We ourselves groan within ourselves." But mark that he does not say that of the sons of God, for if on the very elect we will bow with our Lord, and all the faithful will thus be sons of God who will be manifested to the world.

HE SHALL SEND JESUS CHRIST.

"The Apostle argument leads up to the second coming of Our Lord Jesus as the grand climax of all our hopes—the time for the full realization of all the precious promises of God's word. That he does not refer to the first advent to our Lord is clear, for that was past when he thus spoke.

"Comparatively few Christians seem to realize how important a place the second coming of Christ occupies in the Bible. Could their attention be sufficiently aroused to insure an inventigation on this subject it would mean a genuine awakening among all who reference the Scriptures. A theological error has led to the disregarding of the second coming of Christ. That popular error is that the church is to bring about the times of refreshing, is to establish the world the Millenial Kingdom and to convert the world, to cause the knowledge of God to fill the whole earth, etc., and that the Lord's second advent will not take place until after the church has accomplished this. Alas, then the second coming of Christ would never take place, for the natural increase of population in the world far exceeds the conversions made to Christianity, even if these conversions were all genunie. All reliable statistics prove this and show an increasing disproportion."

I have enjoyed your paper with the large, clear type, making it so easy for elderly people to read the good sermons published in it. Ill health makes it necessary for me to discontinue my subscription. So please see to it and oblige.

Respectfully,
MRS. MARGARET COLEMAN

Altoonna, Pa., Dec. 6.

Enclosed find one ($1.00) dollar for which renew my subscription to your paper for another year. My subscription expired in November, but am glad you continued sending paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the tremendous scarcity of paper, we are compelled to revise our mailing list. We wish all subscribers would consult the mailing tab on their paper and if in arrears kindly forward the amount at once. The regular price of the Tribune is $2, but under a special arrangement with the Watch Tower, subscribers interested in the Truth have been paying only $1 for an eight page paper. The paper house from which we buy our paper have notified us that the supply for our next contract must be reduced to the lowest quantity on account of the shortage of supply. Much as we would like to we cannot afford at this time, on account of shortage of supply, to carry any subscribers who are in arrears. This request has been made also upon the Tribune by the publishers who are cutting off every paper not paid for and every subscriber in arrears. Won't you please consult your tab and send in your money at once if you are in arrears.

Owing to the scarcity of white paper, the leading papers in all the large cities are either cutting down the size or are raising the price in order that they may continue publication, and the Tribune may have to do likewise.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE,
M. S. VITCHESTAIN, Treas.

"A SOFT ANSWER TURNETH AWAY WRATH."

PITTSBURGH, PA., December 11.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

In a recent issue of the St. Paul Enterprise in letters from the editor to his wife, I see he accuses you of publishing two papers, one for the Truth friends and one for the public.

I have been a member of the Pittsburgh Eccelsia since 1902, and have been a frequent visitor at the Tribune Office since 1905, at which time they began publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, and I can say there is no truth whatever in the report; in fact one would think that Brother Abbott with his vast amount of newspaper knowledge would know how utterly impossible it was for any paper at this time, when the price of white paper is so high, to have two issues of the paper, especially when subscription prices are so low. I do not know Brother Abbott, but I do know the Editorial Staff of the Tribune, in fact I have been a personal friend of its editor since 1905 and up until about three years ago, when I became very busy with other matters, I censored every article that went in the Tribune, as some matter had crept into its columns before that time which was not in harmony with the Truth and the Editor not having a full knowledge of the matter, I was asked to censor all articles in regard to the Truth which I did. Most of this censoring was done in the year 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910, but since that time very little censoring has been necessary, as those who were antagonistic to the Truth, when they found their articles did not appear, usually ceased sending them.

Since 1905 I suppose the Tribune has sent out over ten thousand sample copies, indeed it may reach even more as an accurate account was not kept, and since then (1905) I personally know the Tribune had lost many valuable advertisements on account of their publishing Pastor Russell's sermons. The letters regarding the cancellations were shown to me with the remark by the editor at that time, "Well, I do not care what I said, I will never quit publishing these sermons as long as they are furnished to me."

I cannot understand why any man in the Truth would want to give out matter that would injure the "Tribune" in any way, as I know the "Truth' has never had a better friend than the National Labor Tribune of Pittsburgh, one of the very first papers which published Pastor Russell's sermons in full. At the time they started to publish Pastor Russell's sermon they had a clubbing list with the "Watch Tower," but a few years later I prevailed upon the editor to make the price One ($1.00) Dollar per year on any subscription sent direct, and he consented to do so.

During all these years I have never submitted any matter from the pen of our late dear Pastor Russell to the National Labor Tribune but what they were glad to print same, and oftimes they have thrown out other matter to make space for it.

In regard to the two issues of the "Tribune" being published, I am fully conversant with, as the Editor told me they were going to publish a special edition for the politicians in which no other matter (including Pastor Russell's sermon) was to appear but what concerned politics. This issue was sent to the politicians and their friends in Allegheny County, but their regular subscription or mailing list, the issue of Thursday containing Pastor Russell's sermons was mailed to all. Some of the Truth Friends may have gotten a copy of this special edition by mistake, but if they did, it was a mistake only, because this entire special edition is bought up and paid for by the politicians and their friends of Allegheny County. Mr. Vitchenstain, the editor of the National Labor Tribune, has been a very warm friend of the "Truth" all these years and all the employees of the office are very friendly to the Truth and do all they possibly can to further its interest.

Private letters from the Editor's wife to the Editor or vice versa are not to my way of thinking matter the Truth Friends wish to read. The Truth is too grand, too glorious, too ennobling for any one who has tasted of it to again want to partake of the prosaic things of this world.

The letter in your last issue from "A Reader" is not one that I would write; in fact, I think every article a Truth Friend writes and sends in should be signed. Let us have Charity, Charity, Charity; have Charity. If Brother Abbott lambasted everything as "Reader" says he did, (I did not read his letter entire), it is not our mission to lambast Brother Abbott in return. I do not know the brother, but if he has made mistakes, I would rather think they were of the head than of the heart.

I do not like the term, "Hiding behind a woman." The world uses this term, let us forsyear it. I have too high esteem for women to believe any good woman would allow herself to be used as a shield to defend the cowardly spleen of any man and I have too high a respect for any man who has tasted of the good things (The Truth) to think he would want a woman to do so. I cannot think of anything so ungrateful as the desertion of an old and tried friend (such as the Tribune has always been) on mere hearsay evidence. I refer the readers to the many articles in the "Watch Tower" the past year on the "Sin of Ingratitude."

With malice towards none and charity for all.

Yours truly,
J. H. BLACKMORE.

Tribune Appreciations

Alliance, Ohio, Dec. 6.

You will find money enclosed for which renew my subscription to the Tribune which expired September 12, 1916. I would renew through the Watch Tower but I see by your last issue that is not necessary so I am sending direct to the Tribune. I like your paper because of the publication of Pastor Russell's writing and testimonies from friends of the truth.

Yours very truly,
H. C. TEMPLE.

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 6.

I now take the pleasure of renewing my subscription. You will find money inclosed for your paper, thanking you for Pastor Russell's weekly sermons. We appreciate the Tribune and all the religious features with gladness and glad to know you will continue publication of Pastor Russell's weekly back sermons.

Wishing you in love, success, yours,
A. H. KAUFFMAN.

The article which apeared last week under the caption, "The Great Delusion of Our Time," was written by J. H. Henderson in the Atlantic, Ga., Monthly. Credit where credit is due.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 7.

Receiving my copy of your worthy journal today I notice the advice from your Treasurer, re-subscriptions in arrears, etc. I see you do not withdraw the $1 offer from those interested in the Truth, though you apparently think we are getting the paper for less than its worth, which is undoubtedly true. But remembering, as you must, that very few of the Lord's people are rich in the world's goods, it is quite likely that very few of them would feel that they could pay the full price, so that if you were to withdraw your generous reduction in our favor it may be that the majority of Truth friends would be compelled to have their subscriptions cancelled.

This would be my situation. My subscription through the Watch Tower runs to the 27th inst. and I will enclose $1 in this, hoping your current item above mentioned indicates that these $1 subscriptions will be received. I very greatly appreciate your continuing to publish the Pastor Russell sermons from your back files, as well as other features of Truth.

With best wishes, very truly yours,
E. GILLETTE.

A GOOD OFFER.

To all those who wish to have the Tribune sent to a NEW ADDRESS for 1917, the Tribune makes this offer. We will send the Tribune to any address from now until January 1918 for One Dollar. This means thirteen months instead of twelve. Send in all subscribers with this proviso.

Another thing—it is not necessary for our friends to send their money to the Watch Tower, Brooklyn. Send your renewals and new subs to us direct and thus save time and trouble.

The price of the Tribune to all Truth friends is ONE DOLLAR a year, paid in advance, all other reports to the contrary.

SOME TROUBLES IN MESABA RANGE.

Anarchy Reigns Where the I. W. W. Exists.

By HARRISON GEORGE.

Eight billion dollar combine of capital to fight organized labor. Such is the weight of the oppressive forces headed by the U. S. Steel Corporation. To realize what such oppression means to the American people we shall examine a district where Steel Trust control is absolute; i. e., the Mesaba Range.

We shall summarize its local control of social and political forces.

The federal judge of this district is Page Morris. Judge Morris has denounced from the bench the range town councils, who wanted the Steel Trust to pay proper taxes. The judge owns steel stock. How he got it has not been explained. Next, Bruce McDonald, immigration inspector at Duluth, in recommending deportation of Geo. Anderytchine, a striker, said, "He is dangerous because he is smart, having acquired a remarkable English vocabularly in less than three years."

Governor Burnquist. He it was who sent the now famous telegram to the sheriff ordering the arrest of strike leaders and the taking of them "before magistrate, preferably at Duluth," where Burnquist was apparently sure of the judge. Burnquist it was who gave sanction to the ipmortation of an army of thugs to over-awe the strikers.

Sheriff Meining of St. Louis county, deputized this private army of the Trust and gave it full power to deny constitutional rights of speech and assembly. These so-called guards left the company grounds to attack strikers on the streets and in their homes. This crew arrested over six hundred people. District Attorney Greene saw that the victims escaped no penalty he and his subordinates could fix upon them with the aid of gunman testimony.

Municipal Judge Carey during the strike, gained the sobriquet of "Old Ninety Days"—his usual sentence to strikers. The mayors of the range towns are the one bright spot. Headed by Victor Power and Mike Boylan they exerted every effort to bring operators and strikers into conference. The strikers welcomed this but the operators refused. These mays have been attacked by the trust press and Power roused the ire of the trust by becoming attorney for the strikers. As a consequence he has been indicted for alleged graft.

The press deserves dishonorable mention. The Duluth News-Tribune has bitterly denounced the strike and verbally damned the strikers, vilifying the leaders. There may be more degraded daily elsewhere, but the Tribune holds the laurels for Minnesota. The Biwabik, Minn. Times runs a close second. As an example of what it means to organize in a trust town I quote from the Times anent organizers: "If these men are allowed freedom of action and speech they will precipitate another strike. There is but one way to stop this outrage, that is to do as did the citizens of Everett, Wash." Readers will remember that an "Open Shop" posse shot down five peaceful workers at Everett Nov. 5th. The Times says an organizer "hates to get the deserved bat over the head with a stout club by a strong man." That the people should "take the situation in their own hands, county officers cannot be depended on. The situation should be controled as it is in the south." The Mesaba Ore is the one local paper taking the side of labor. As a result its editor, C. M. Atkinson, has been indicted on some petty charge connected with the local administration.

For the trust, you may safely advocate lynching and murder. You may as company gunman, shoot strikers under authority of the county and with sanction from the state. Yet if, as striker, you assemble with your fellows; if as organizer, you teach labor its power as did Scarlett, Schmidt and Tresca; if you stand for labor in any way; you face the vengeance of all those forces which reflect the industrial control of organized capital. That is why all labor is watching Minnesota, where the big legal battle, now postponed to the 18th., will soon begin. The opinion prevails in the East that behind all the trouble is the I. W. W. the most destructive organization in existance. Its anarchy is not tolerated in the East but the West is suffering intensely from the ruin and destruction brought by the most irresponsible band of labor outcasts in this country. Everett was compelled to use the most violent means to protect property and the rights of its citizens.

COMPULSORY PHYSICAL EXAMINATION.

By JOHN P. WHITE.

President United Mine Workers of America, speaking before the Conference on Social Insurance, Washington, D. C., December 6th, 2:00 P. M.

Compulsory physical examination, whether of employes in industry or of any other class of citizens, involves an interference with the personal life of the individual so serious that it should be undertaken only on the assurance that the public welfare demands it and that the results are worth the sacrifice of that personal sanctity which our institutions have trown about the individual.

This, in my judgment, is another way of saying that the state, not the employer, should undertake such examination, assuming always that public policy demands compulsory examination at all. I am not prepared to admit even this. Our well-to-do class manage to maintain a fairly high standard of health, and it has become a universal custom among wellt-o-do people to consult the doctor and the dentist on frequent occasions.

Compulsory examination is shrdtaol Compulsory physical examination is being urged only for wage earners. The reason is not far to seek. For the disinterested physician or scientist, it is a short cut to remedying a condition which is due to the fact that wages are too low to permit wage earners, as a class, to spare the means for doing what otherwise they would voluntarily do, and without prompting from any authority—that is, to consult the physician as frequently as necessary.

If we are to assume that insufficient wages, and the ignorance and helplessnecc attendant on low wages, are to remain with us always, then we could proceed with a program of paternalism and justify it. The fear of organized labor and lovers of human freedom generally is that low wages will become so buttressed by remedial measures of this sort that the public conscience will be dulled into an acceptance of low wages as a permanent institution.

Of course, in some occupations, such as that of locomotie engineer, certain physical tests are so necessary on the ground of public safety that no objection can be raised. But, with industry organized for private profit, the weeding out of men not physically perfect by physical examination means only that those who pass the test will be subjected to greater strain than previously. The late Professor Hoxie of Chicago University, after conducting a thorough investigation of scientific management, expressed the opinion that the greatest danger now threatening the American wage earner is the speeding up of industry and the consequent physical strain imposed upon the worker.

If Professor Hoxie and other economists and students of industrial problems are correct, as I believe they are, then we must regard the entrance of a number of physically unfit men into industry as a blessing, if it serves to check the tendency toward more speed and greater strain.

As modern industries are organized today, the rejection of unfit men means, not the protection of those who are accepted, but license to increase the strain upon them so that eventually they, too, or their descendants, will be added to the class of the unfit. In this respect the fate of th ephysically fit is like that of the flower of European manhood, maimed and slaghtered on the battlefield.

"They will scrap the whole human race if they keep on," said Andrew Furuseth in referring to the increase in efficiency devices, so-called. We are in great danger of losing entirely the human equation in industry, and with it the freedom of the individual. This is not only inhuman and intolerable from a humane standpoint, but it is not efficient. Human nature is too complex to measure men with a yard stick. Some of the greatest inventors and mechanics, not to mention statesmen and even soldiers, have been men who could never have passed the rigid physical tests imposed by some of our modern industrial corporations whose managers have gone mad over "efficiency." Many a young man, who might later invent a device which would revolutionize that particular industry, would be rejected and discouraged, probably turned aside from what should have been his life work.

If physical examination of all persons is demanded on the broad ground of social welfare, then let it be administered by the state.

Better still, let our scientists and wise men cease regarding the great mass of workers as densely ignorant and hopeless wards, over whom they must watch and care. eLt them instead join with organized labor in demanding a fair wage, and then, take my word for it, the very men for whom they are now so solicitous will be found taking the best of care of themselves.

It is certainly putting the cart before the horse to demand the weeding out of all save the physically perfect, while at the same time we permit low wages and poverty to continue to make physical fitness difficult or impossible to achieve.

I should like the advocates of compulsory physical examination to read what was written by Mr. iGlbert Chesterton, the English writer, when it was proposed by the health authorities of London to require the hair of all poor children to be cut short in order to rid them of vermin. In a classic passage, Mr. Chesterton points out that the true remedy would be to give the little child a leisured mother, and therefore to give the father a living wage and freedom from the extortations of the landlord.

"Rather than that one hair on the head of the street urchin be touched," concludes Mr. Chesterton, "we shall have a revolution."

It is always easy to experiment with the poor and humble and defenseless, rather than to attack the source of the problem, when that source lies in strongly intrenched priivleges enjoyed by the few at the expense of the many.

The Pittsburgh Speedway Land company completed its organization on Monday, November 27th, and elected the following officers and directors:—James H. Johnston, President; Edward E. Rieck, Vice-President; Dr. Bayard Phillips, Treasurer; Charles J. Carr, Secretary; Charles C. Tennis, Director, and Joseph B. Callanan, Director.

This Land company is chartered under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and is incorporated for Fifty Thousand Dollars. The principle office will be in the Benedum-Tress building, Pittsburgh, but they will also have an office on the property on which they are to operate in Buena Vista township. Their intention is to create two hundred acres of farming land into building lots.

TELEPHONE GIRLS STRIKE.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 4.—Because four members of the newly-organized Telephone Operators' union were discharged, telephone girls employed by the Home Telephone company suspended work. Later they were joined by the Electrical Workers' union.

Officers of the Central Labor Union are assisting the strikers. The unionists ask that the question be arbitrated. Officers of the company plead that they do not understand the terms used by the unionists, and the latter reply that this is a feeble attempt to gain time that strikebreakers may be imported.

THE HOLY CITY

Revelation 21:1-5, 22-27.—December 27.

The New Jerusalem—The New Spiritual Government of the Millennial Age—The New Heavens and New Earth Symbolic of New Conditions to Prevail Under Messiah's Rule—The New Spiritual Government to Be Invisible—In Another Figure Called "The Temple of God."

"Behold, the Tabernacle of God is with men, and He shall dwell with them, and they shall be His people." Verse 3.

PARADISE, the Garden of God, was applicable as a name to Eden, where our first parents resided before their disobedience and expulsion. The same name is Scripturally applied to the new earth when Restitution blessings shall have brought it to perfection as the abode of those who shall have eternal life.

Elsewhere this Paradise of the future is referred to by the Apostles as "the third heaven," and as "new heavens and a new earth." (2 Corinthians 12:2; 2 Peter 3:13.) They are not referring to new planets or to heavens ranged one above another, but to the third of three great periods of time, beginning with man's creation and extending into the illimitable future. The first of these periods, termed the first heavens and earth—the old order of things—passed away with the great Deluge. The second period, "the heavens and the earth which are now"—the present order—are reserved of God to pass away with a great symbolic fire of trouble—revolution, etc. (2 Peter 3:6, 7; Galatians 1:4; Zephaniah 3:8, 9.) The third great period is to be a "world without end," under Divine administration.

The Holy City.

The "new heavens" will consist of the new spiritual ruling powers—Christ and His Church. The present "heavens" consist of the nominal religious systems which, while claiming Christ for their Head, nevertheless bow largely to Antichrist, "the god of this world," "the prince of this world," who is blinding all except the few who are taught of God. (Eph. 2:2; 2 Cor. 4:4.)

Our lesson declares that the former heavens and earth—which are now—will then have passed away. All present institutions will perish utterly in the great Time of Trouble with which this Age will shortly end. The "sea" symbolizes masses of people in a restless, unstable, anarchistic condition—just as "land" symbolizes social order, and "mountains" the kingdoms of the present time. The symbol signifies that under the control of the new spiritual Power, the reconstructed social order will be so satisfactory that there will be no more restless, dissatisfied masses. The new regime will secure justice to every creature, and will obliterate the differences of wealth and power now existing.

The New Jerusalem.

In Scripture symbolism a city represents a government. (Revelation 17:18.) The New Jerusalem symbolizes the new spiritual government of the Millennial Age. It is not earth-born—reared by men—but descends from God; that is, it is spiritual, invisible. But the whole world will quickly be made aware that a new government has been instituted—a government of righteousness and omnipotence; and that thereafter whoever does righteousness shall be blessed, but that evildoers shall be punished.

Verse 3 associates this City with the other figure of a symbolic Temple which God is preparing, and of which the saints will constitute the "living stones" and "pillars." (1 Peter 2:4-7; Ephesians 2:19-22.) Through it mankind will approach God, to receive blessings. Thus God, represented in His Church—The Christ, Head and Body—will dwell with men during the Millennium, and they shall be His peoples. Since He is the Author of all blessings of Redemption and Restitution, the record appropriately declares that "God will wipe away all tears from their [mankind's] eyes." This implies a gradual raising to life.

Here our Study turns to a consideration of the City, the glorified Church. She will have need of neither sun nor moon. These also are symbols. The sun signifies the light of the Gospel; the moon, the Gospel light as reflected in the Law and the Prophets of the Jewish Dispensation. The Church will be so filled with Divine glory that nothing could add to her blessings of knowledge and Divine favor. Hence the Almighty and the Lamb will always be an inner Temple in this great Temple provided for the world's blessing.

New Heavens and New Earth.

Old MSS. omit the words "of them that are saved" from Verse 24. Indeed, it is because the nations are NOT SAVED that they need this special light during the Millennial Age, in order to their salvation. The expression "nations" means peoples, and shows that all peoples will be thus favored under God's Kingdom. The "kings" are the Ancient Worthies, who during the Millennium will be the representatives of the spiritual, invisible Kingdom of Christ.—Psalm 45:16; Hebrews 11:39, 40; Luke 13:28.

THE FREE METHODISTS ON LABOR UNIONS

Not More Than One-Tenth of Toiling Masses Belong to Unions.

It is estimated that in the United States there are employed in the mills, factories, shops, mines, on the railroads and in commercial institutions no less than 20,000,000 men. Of this number the American Federation of Labor claims to represent 2,000,000; this leaves 18,000,000 employes without any representation. There are those who are complaining that President Woodrow Wilson is giving entirely too much attention to President Samuel Gompers, who represents but 2,000,000 while the great bulk of the toiling masses are without any representation.

President Gompers is a Democrat and has managed to keep close to President Wilson but the entire nation is not unionized nor is there but very little semblance of unionism in the Pittsburgh district. This is due to the arbitrary and arrogant manner which union men when in power handled the mills and factories over which they had jurisdiction. This resulted in continual strikes and inestimable losses to both employee and employer. The old "mill committee" was a pest and in the old days the "mine committee" was no better. Every drunk wanted a strike and sober men who were anxious to work were compelled to suffer while the committees were forced to fight for some worthless scoundrel whose over indulgence in liquor not only paralized the industry but brought many innocent men into dispute and want into the home.

There is a vast difference between fighting for principle and fighting for some incompetent mechanic or a worthless, improvident drunk. Yet principle was always sacrificed and rarely a question at issue, industries suffered on trival matters and eventually the employer had no alternative but to either close his shop or permit the most irresponsible men assume control.

This condition has spread across the continent and everywhere any attempt to unionize has met with strenuous opposition and a battle which in the mind of the employer means life or death.

In the Pittsburgh district Unionism with but very few exceptions means nothing more than a few bribing, grafting politicians and the endorsement by Union labor of any political candidate is significant of the fact that the politican has come across with probably $1000.00, although an endorsement has been sold for $25.00. It is said the liquor interests bought the labor bunch, who appeared at Harisburgh during the last session of the legislature in the interest of the liquor traffic, for $25.00 and car fare. This brought no end of censure for the cheap manner in which the declaration of representing two million workingmen was given out as an interview and the returns was only $25.00.

Some of the accessories are still kicking because they got nothing. However there is another opportunity now dawning and the indications are a larger amount will be asked for appearing at the approaching session.

Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh if he wants the General without an army, who has "two million union men in his phantom aggregation should make application at once. Of course the "two million" disappeared when this president of all the unions became a candidate a year ago, he was defeated by 30,000 majority.

The candidate who defeated him belonged to no union. However, the visionary hosts represented by the labor skates only exist in the mind and an endorsement has always been equal to a defeat. It is a most regretable incident that Hughes and Fairbanks received the endorsement of the labor skates. The money was illy spent and the amount handed for the endorsement really injured the Republican candidates. But the campaign was one of blunders from beginning to end and the buying of the skates was not the least.

Attention has been called to the attitude of some of the churches which look upon the question of labor unionism.

In an effort to be set right one of them views the situation thus:

1. The Free Methodist Church is not against the laboring men as a class. She stands for the highest interests of the working people. And well she may, for she is made up almost exclusively of hard-working, toiling men and women who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow. What is their interest is hers. What is hers is theirs.

2. It must be understood right here that not more than one-tenth of the laboring men and women of our country belong to the labor unions. The Free Methodist Church stands for the rights of the nine-tenths of the laborers against the unjust discrimination and unbrotherly, uncharitable, unfair, unrighteous treatment and domination of the leaders composing the labor trust of the country, who are making slaves and often unwilling tools of the one-tenth of the laboring men for the purpose of raking in the shekels for their personal gain.

3. The most gigantic, unscrupulous and dangerous trust in the world today is the labor trust, and it is doing more to disturb the industrial world and interfere with the legitimate channels of business and hinder prosperity than all other organizations combined.

4. We have not a single word, except of condemnation, of any trust, corporation or combination in the world that will grind down the laboring class, and we believe that the latter have suffered

HOW THE FAKIRS ARE REAPING A HARVEST

The Tribune's Investigators Show a Would-Be Purchaser How the Fakir Trims His Victims.

The fake jeweler is doing a rushing business and the fake auctioneer is doing equally as well in his campaign of plunder, while the fake furniture man is busy between the alderman's office and warding off suits for damages for false arrest.

For three months the attorney for the Tribune has been kept busy bringing action against the fakirs and protecting the shopping public. Why these fakirs are permitted to exist is the marvel, but District Attorney R. H. Jackson has promised that he will begin a clean-up campaign at an early date. The fake jewelers are reaping a splendid harvest and the money they are getting away with on cheap fake jewelry climaxes even the haul of an lucrative safe blower.

A prominent citizen of Pittsburgh stopped two acquaintances in front of the Farmers Bank Building and related his experience in an effort to buy a diamond pin valued according to the fake jeweler at $250. The acquaintances immediately admonished the would-be purchaser and informed him the alleged jeweler aspired only to be a cheap fakir. The challenge was made by the acquaintances that any article offered by the fakir could be purchased at one-half the first price asked. The trio then proceeded to said fakir, whose place of business was within less than a quarter of a block from where the trio were holding their confab. Two entered the alleged jewelry store and began talking about watches, while the fakir reached into the case and therefrom brought out several timepieces, there the display began. The prices on the watches were quoted from $10 to $20, the latter being Elgin movements, gold filed case with 20-year guarantee. Before any offer could be made said fake jeweler again reached into the case and produced a scarf pin set with ruby stone and nine small diamonds. The value placed upon the pin was $135. One of the duet who entered became the spokesman and the alleged intended purchaser. Much fuss was made over the "beauty" but, said the pretended purchaser, "Too much money. What's the least you'll take?"

"Give me $100 and you can have it," said the fakir.

Some more examination with the remark, "The pin's fine but that's too strong. How much less will you take?"

"Take it for $90."

"If the ruby was genuine I would," said the would-be purchaser.

"What would you really take, put your lowest figure?"

"Give me $70 and you can have it. " I'd like too, but I haven't that much money."

"Sixty-five is enough."

"Give me the money and take it."

"No I won't." With this the two walked out but the companion of the pretended purchaser urged delay. However, both walked out of the store while the disappointed fakir bellowed some insulting remarks.

The price of the pin had now been reduced from $135 to $65. The trio met on Fifth avenue near the corner of Wood street and the intended purchaser after discussing the incident with the rest, made up his mind to go still further and with his companion he returned to the store. Upon entering he boldly charged the fakir with trying to cheat, which, of course, the fakir denied. But the pretended purchaser continued: "play fair, don't cheat me. You know you are trying to cheat." Which the fakir vehemently denied. However, the bargaining was reopened and to start anew the fake jeweler reached into the case and pulled out the watch first displayed, with the Elgin movement and the gold filled case which bore the alleged guarantee for 20 years.

"How much did I ask you for this watch?" asked the fakir. "Twenty dollars," replied the intended purchaser. "What will you give me for the pin and this watch?" asked the fakir. The intended purchaser examined the watch and again viewed the pin and after some delay and pretended criticism he said: "If I give you $65 for both the watch and the pin will you accept it?"

'Give me the $65," said the jewelry fakir.

"No I won't," replied the intended purchaser. Again he walked out. Later the companion of the intended purchaser returned to the fake jewelry store and after a brief conversation said, he would bring back the purchaser, provided, however, he was to profit by any purchase made. "I believe I can get him back. He's stuck on that pin. I think but where do I come in? How much commission do I get?"

"Say, if you bring him back, I'll sell him and I'll give you the pick of any reasonable pin in the store."

The incident was closed with the fakir who is still conducting his fake jewelry business and with others, is trimming the shopping public to perfection. Smithfield street is lined with fake jewelers and the unfortunate part is that legitimate stores are suffering through the alleged gold-smith plunderers. The auction stores also along Smithfield street are deliberately robbing the public and the fakirs are lined down Fifth Avenue.

There are legitimate stores in Pittsburgh and the public should be cautious. The general impression prevails that the average man wants to please his wife or his sweetheart with jewelry. He cares nothing about the price but the smile, though it be momentarily. He knows

EIGHT HOURS LESSENS FATIGUE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—"Fatigue is caused by the intensity and frequency of repetition of muscular acts," said Dr. F. S. Lee of Columbia university, in an address on the ill effects of over work.

"The way to avoid fatigue is to shorten the workday. The shorter workday, where it has been tried out, has resulted in better health and morals, better social environment, more efficient industrial organization. These results have been clearly demonstrated, in view of the active unprincipled opponents of the reduction, as well as its honest but timide oponents.

"Modern labor saving machinery has, no doubt, increased the intensity of the muscular acts. A workman at a machine is no longer required to lift heavy weights, for the machine has made the frequency of repetition of muscular acts greater—the worker makes quicker and more movements."

EXPOSE R. R. POVERTY PLEA.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The joint congressional committee that is investigating the transportation question gave the railroads an opportunity to prove their cry that they can't get capital to expand.

Senator Cummins asked Alfred P. Thom, counsel for the railroads' executives' advisory committee, if he knew of any railroad company that has tried to get money for new construction and has failed.

The railroad man acknowledged he knew of no such case, but insisted that railroad stocks and bonds "are no longer attractive to investors." The senator suggested that watered stock might be the answer, while calling attention to the fact that the roads have earned an amount in the last 10 years equivalent to 8 per cent on their watered stock and actual money invested.

Mr. Thom said that this was not enough. He thought the millions of watered stock that has been pumped into railroads only represented the full worth of these properties. He said he knew nothing of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad, which has been looted by stock jugglers. He was positive, however, that railroad stock no longer appeals to investors.

The commission is investigating every phase of transportation, including government ownership.

EMPLOYERS PLEAD FOR UNITY.

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 11.—The chamber of commerce is tiring of its non-union shop agitation and at the last meeting of the Central Labor Council a delegation from the former body pleaded for unity and asked the unionists to attend a meeting of the chamber that will be especially arranged for them.

I view of the chamber's declaration for the non-union shop the unionists took the position that relations would remain the same until the business men by resolution announced they would keep their organization out of industrial disputes. Until that time it was voted to accept no invitation.

REJECT AGE-LONG THEORY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Trade unionists shock well meaning people because of their irreverence for the so-called "immutable law of supply and demand."

But it would appear that other forces are likewise undermining this ancient fetich, for the New York World editorially says:

"The law of supply and demand under which the grain and provision magnates of Chicago usually take refuge, when public complaint is made of their activities, is not immutable. Like the law of gravity in the case of a flying machine heavier than air, it may be evaded and even set aside temporarily."

OBJECT TO CONVICT LABOR.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 11.—Organized labor does not take kindly to Governor Williams' legislative policy, as outlined in a newspaper intervie, in which he is quoted as favoring the building of a terrace around the capitol with convict labor. The governor construes this is within the law which provides for the state use of convicts, but organized labor insists that this monument to convict labor would be a disgrace to Oklahoma.

WAGES-BY-LAW WEAKENED.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 11.—In a letter to the public lighting commission Corporation Counsel Dingeman has notified anti-unionists and cheap labor advocates that the amendment to the city charter, which provides that municipal employes shall receive the "highest prevailing wage," does not mean what it says, and that there is no danger of their rates being disturbed by the city recognizing higher rates.

CITY BOILER INSPECTOR NOW A BIG FARCE

Defeated Candidate Takes His Neighbor's Job Without Passing Examination. Council Asked to Cut Inspector from Budget.

Of all the worthless offices that ever existed that which has the examining of stationary engineers and is operated in the Public Safety Building under the title of Boiler Inspector, is the worst. This office has the passing upon the applications of engineers and particular care is taken that no engineer is permitted to take the examination unless he has had "two years" experience attending boilers and such work that places him in close connection with engines that fit him for the work of engineer. Every engineer in the city must first pass this examination and he must have experience; he, too, must be recommended by competent engineers, and in addition he must have the recommendation or a certificate from his previous employer who must vouch for his experience and ability.

The first voucher in the application for engineer's permit according to the blanks furnished applicants at the office of Boiler Inspector calls for recommendations by two engineers.

Voucher No. 2 is for the employers who must state how long applicant was employed by said employers and his moral character.

Voucher No. 3 is also for an employer showing he may have worked for more than one employer. Then comes Voucher No. 4 as to character. The applicant must also swear to "experience and testimonials of character and qualifications." The impression is given out that none but members of the Engineers' Union can become applicants. This naturally enough assures employers that none but competent men are employed in the city of Pittsburgh. It is the duty of the Boiler Inspector and his assistants to carry out the provisions of this ordinance as well as the provisions of the application.

The chief boiler inspector is secretary of the Stationary Engineers' Association. A well regulated union permits no man to work in the capacity of an engineer without first being a member of the organization and not since the law went into effect has there been any person other than a competent engineer permitted to run an engine. Yet this secretary of the Engineers' Association and at the same time the head of the office of boiler inspector under the direction of the Director of the Department of Public Safety, permits one Robert McGrath to act as chief engineer in the County Buildings and so far as the latter's engineering capacity is concerned it is said of him the mechanism of a wheelbarrow would more than confound him. Said McGrath is Chief Engineer, thus "overlooking" all the machinery in the county buildings. Said "Overlooker" McGrath has never had any experience as an engineer so far as the requirements of the city demand; he has never passed an examination nor filled out an application for a license. Said McGrath is a "Union Man" it is said, the kind that takes his neighbor's job. In every way said McGrath is said to be unqualified and yet he has been given the place. An attempt has been made to smother the protests of the members of the Stationary Engineers' Association, but this blaze will soon burst into fury.

The office of boiler inspector in the city of Pittsburgh is actually a farce and council should wipe it out. Councilman Herron and Councilman McArdle are looked upon as representative labor men espousing always the cause of labor at the same time remembering that competent men are always entitled to their own. It is said the office of boiler inspector has been used to the injury of applicants under the pretense they did not meet all the requirements. Engineers for ordinary work such as hoisting have been mitigated against to the injury of these unfortunates, but not only are the taxpayers being made victims of incompetency but experienced engineers are being deprived of their rights while bungling defeated candidates are given places at the expense of the taxpayers. The time for bringing the matter to the attention of the taxpayers has not yet arrived, but the time to call the attention of council to the farce is opportune.

The taxpayers can be saved considerable money by the obliterating of the office of boiler inspector as its inefficiency is clearly demonstrated. If an inexperienced man who is not even a member of the Stationary Engineers' Union can be made a "chief" engineer, of what service is either the examinations, the recommendations or the Union? If the Secretary of the Union becomes a party to securing any blundering, bungling defeated candidate a place and that too by taking his neighbor's job without being competent, said secretary is unfitted for

THE BIBLE AS A DIVINE REVELATION VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF REASON.

The Claims of the Bible and its Surface of Credibility—Its Antiquity and Preservation.—Its Moral Influence.—Motives of the Writers.—General Character of the Writings.—The Books of Moses.—The Law of Moses.—Peculiarities of the Government Instituted by Moses.—It was not a System of Priestcraft.—Instrustions to Civil Rulers.—Rich and Poor on a Common Level Before the Law.—Safeguards Against Tampering With the Rights of the People.—The Priesthood Not a Favored Class, How Supported, etc.—Oppresion of Foreigners, Widows, Orphans and Servants Guarded Against.—The Prophets of the Bible.—Is There a Common Bond of Union Between the Law, the Prophets and the New Testament Writers?—Miracles Not Unreasonable.—The Reasonable Conclusion.

The Bible is the torch of civilization and liberty. Its influence for good in society has been recognized by the greatest statesmen, even though they for the most part have looked at it through the various glasses of conflicting creeds, which, while upholding the Bible, greviously misrepresent its teachings. The grand old book is unintentionaly but wofully misrepresented by its friends many of whom would lay down life on its behalf; and yet they do it more vital injury than its foes, by claiming its support to their long-revered misconceptions of its truth, received through traditions of their fathers. Would that such would awake, re-examine their oracle, and put to confusion its enimies by disarming them of their weapons!

Since the light of nature leads us to expect a fuller revelation of God than that which nature supplies, the reasonable, thinking mind will be prepared to examine the claims of anything purporting to be divine revelation, which bears a reasonable surface evidence of the truthfulness of such claims. The Bible claims to be such a revelation from God, and it does come to us with sufficient surface evidence as to the probable correctness of its claims, and gives us a reasonable hope that closer investigation will disclose more complete and positive evidence that it is indeed the Word of God.

The Bible is the oldest book in existence; it has outlived the storms of thirty centuries. Men have endeavored by every means possible to banish it from the face of the earth: they have hidden it, burned it, made it a crime punishable with death to have it in possession, and the most bitter and relentless persecutions have been waged against those who had faith in it; but still the book lives. To-day, while many of its foes slumber in death, and hundreds of volumes written to discredit it and to overthrow its influence, are long since forgotten, the Bible has found its way into every nation and language of earth, over two hundred different translations of it having been made. The fact that this book hos survived so many centuries, notwithstanding such unparalled efforts to banish and destroy it, is at least strong circumstantial evidence that the great Being whom it claims as its Author has also been its preserver.

It is also true that the moral influence of the Bible is uniformaly good. Those who become careful students of its pages are invariably elevated to a purer life. Other writings upon religion and various sciences have done good and have enrolled and blessed mankind, to some extent; but all other books combined have failed to bring the joy, peace and blessing to the groaning creation that the Bible has brought to both the rich and the poor, to the learned and the unlearned. The Bible is not a book to read merely: it is a book to be studied with care and thought; for God's thoughts are higher than our thoughts, and his ways than our ways. And if we would comprehend the plan and thoughts of the infinite God, we must bend all our energies to that important work. The richest treasures of truth do not always lie on the surface.

This book throughout constantly points and refers to one prominent character,, Jesus of Nazareth, who, it claims, was the the Son of God. From begining to end his name, and office, and work, are made prominent. That a man called Jesus of Nazareth lived, and was somewhat noted, about the time indicated by the writers of the Bible, is a fact of history outside of the Bible, and it is variously and fully corborated. That this Jesus was crucified because he had rendered himself offensive to the Jews and their priesthood is a further fact established by history outside the evidence furnished by the New Testament writers. The writers of the New Testament (except Paul and Luke) were the personal acquaintances and disciples of Jesus of Nazareth, whose doctrines their writings set forth.

The existence of any book implies motives on the part of the writer. We therefore inquire, What motives could have inspired these men to espouse the cause of this person? He was condemned to death and crucified as a malefactor by the Jews, the most religious among them assenting to and demanding his death, as one unfit to live. And in espousing his cause, and promulgating his doctrines, these men braved contempt, deprivation and bitter persecution. Admitting that while he lived Jesus was a remarkable person, in both his life and his teaching, what motive could there have been for any to espouse his cause after he was dead?—especially when his death was so ignominious? And if we suppose that these writers invented their narratives, and that Jesus was their imaginary or ideal hero, how absurd it would be to suppose that sane men, after claiming that he was the Son of God, that he had been begotten in a supernatural way, had supernatural powers by which he had healed lepers, restored sight to those born blind, caused the deaf to hear, and even raised the dead—how very absurd to suppose that they would wind up the story of such a character by stating that a little band of his enemies executed him as a felon, while all his friends and disciples, and among them the writers themselves, forsook him and fled in the trying moment?

The fact that profane history does not agree in some respects with these writers should not lead us to regard their records as untrue. Those who do thus conclude should assign and prove some motive on the part of these writers for making false statements. What motives could have prompted them? Could they reasonably have hoped thereby for fortune, or fame, or power, or any earthly advantage? The poverty of Jesus' friends, and the unpopularity of their hero himself with the great religionists of Judea, contradict such a thought; while the facts that he died as a malefactor, a disturber of the peace, and that he was made of no reputation, held forth no hope of enviable fame or earthly advantage to those who should attempt to re-establish his doctrine. On the contrary, if such had been the object of those who preached Jesus, would they not speedily have given it up when they found that it brought disgrace, persecution, imprisonment, stripes and even death? Reason plainly teaches that men who sacrificed home, reputation, honor and life; who lived not for present gratification; but whose central aim was to elevate their fellow-men, and who inculcated morals of the highest type, were not only possessed of a motive, but but further that their motive must have been pure and their object grandly sublime. Reason further declares that the testimony of such men, actuated only by pure and good motives, is worthy of ten times the weight and consideration of ordinary writers. Nor were these men fanatics; they were men of sound and reasonable mind, and furnished in every case a reason for their faith and hope; and they were perserveringly faithful to those reasonable convictions.

And what we have here noticed is likewise applicable to the various writers of the Old Testament. They were, in the main, men notable for their fidelity to the Lord; and this history as impartially records and reproves their weaknesses and shortcomings as it commends their virtues and faithfulness. This must astonish those who presume the Bible to be a manufactured history, designed to awe men into reverence of a religious system. There is a straight-forwardness about that Bible that stamps it as truth. Knaves, desirious of representing a man as great, and especially if desirous of presenting some of his writings as inspired of God, would undoubtedly paint such a one's character blameless and noble to the last degree. The fact that such a course has not been pursued in the Bible is reasonable evidence that it was not fraudulently gotten up to deceive.

Having, then, reason to expect a revelation of God's will and plan, and having found that the Bible, which claims to be that revelation, was written by men whose motives we see no reason to impugn, but which, on the contrary, we see reason to approve, let us examine the character of the writings claimed as inspired, to see whether their teachings correspond with the character we have reasonably imputed to God, and whether they bear internal evidence of their truthfulness.

The first five books of the New Testament and several of the Old Testament are narratives or histories of facts known to the writers and vouched for by their characters. It is manifest to all that it did not require a special revelation simply to tell the truth with reference to matters with which they were intimately and fully acquainted. Yet, since God desired to make a revelation to men, the fact that these histories of passing events have a bearing on that revelation would be a sufficient ground to make the inference a reasonable one, that God would supervise, and so arrange, that the honest writer whom he selected for the work should be brought in contact with the needful facts. The credibility of these historic portions of the Bible rests almost entirely upon the characters and motives of their writers. Good men will not utter falsehoods. A pure fountain will not give forth bitter waters. And the united testimony of these writings silences any suspicion that their authors would say or do evil, that good might follow.

It in no way invalidates the truthfulness of certain books of the Bible, such as Kings,, Chronicles, Judges, etc. when we say that they are simply truthful and carefully kept histories of prominent events and persons of their times. When it is remembered that the Hebrew Scriptures contain history, as well as the law and the prophecies, and that their histories, genealogies, etc., were the more explicit in detailing circumstances because of the expectancy that the promised Messiah would come in a particular line from Abraham, we see a reason for the recording of certain facts of history considered indelicate in the light of this twentieth century. For instance, a clear record of the origin of the nations of the Moabites and of the Ammonites, and of their relationship to Abraham and the Israelites, was probably the necessity in the historian's mind for a full history of their nativity. (Gen. 19:36-38). Likewise, a very detailed account of Judah's children is given, of whom came David, the king, through whom the genealogy of Mary, Jesus' mother, as well as that of Joseph, her husband (Luke 3:23, 31, 33, 34; Matt. 1:2-16), is traced back to Abraham. Doubtless the necessity of thoroughly establishing the pedigree was the more important, since of this tribe (Gen. 49:10) was to come the ruling King of Israel, as well as the promised Messiah, and hence the minutae of detail not given in other instances. —Gen. 38.

There may be similar or different reasons for other histories facts recorded in the Bible, of which by and by we may see the utility, which, were it not a history, but simply a treatise on morals, might without detriment be omitted; though no one can reasonably say that the Bible anywhere countenances impurity. It is well, furthermore, to remember that the same facts may be more or less delicately stated in any language; and that while the translators of the Bible were, rightly, too conscientious to omit any of the record, yet they lived in a day less particular in the choice of refined expressions than ours; and the same may be surmised of the early Bible times and habits of expression. Certainly the most fastidious can find no objection on this score to any expression of the New Testament.

Shinniston, W. Va., Dec. 15.

I surely appreciate your valuable paper with its many items of interest for the universal welfare and elevation of man in this present life. And especially we appreciate your generosity in the space given for the gospel truth, and for the reprinting of Pastor Russell's sermons, and thus keeping the bread upon the waters, that it may be seen many days hence. Our dear Pastor consecrated the life that was given him by his mother birth in the service of our dear Lord unto death forever, by the which he was begotten of the Holy spirit, and he waited and labored patiently for over forty years, and was faithful unto this death, and in a moment in a twinkle of an eye, passed from mortality into immortality, and is now with the dear Lord whom he so loved as to lay down his life faithfully in His service, and is numbered among those whose "works follow with him."

He fought a good fight, he finished his course, he kept the faith: Henceforth, from now on he will wear the crown that was laid up for him when he first received the mark of perfect love while in the flesh, and he is now in the spirit, and to all eternity shall ever be. We cannot pray for our dear Brother as we have, day by day, "God bless our beloved Pastor." Therefore let us all join in with one consent in our daily prayer, and pray the dear Lord to bless the memory of our dear beloved Pastor.

Yours very truly,
NIMSHI NUZUM.

Greetings and best wishes to you. I beg to advise that I am today renewing my subscription to your paper which expires Dec. 17th, through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society's Office, which will reach you in a few days.

I have read the Tribune in the past with great interest and particularly on the account of the publication of our beloved brother's (Pastor Russell) sermons. These were the redeeming features of the Tribune and on the acount of them, I always looked forward eagerly each week for its coming. While it has pleased the dear loving Heavenly Father to call him from labor to reward for which I am glad on his account, yet, we greatly miss his wise counseling and mourn our loss. I am glad however, that the Tribune is republishing some of his past sermons.

With best wishes for you I am
Yours in the Anointed One,
(MRS.) VIRGINIA JONES.

Waycross, Ga., Dec. 15.

Enclosed please find renewal of my subscription to the Tribune which expired Oct. 1, 1916. Please pardon my delay in renewing. I am glad you've decided to reprint Pastor Russell's sermons, we enjoye reading them so much.

Thanking you for past favor and wishing you much success.

Yours truly,
H. H. SMITH.

Monessen, Pa., Dec. 15.

I notice by the tab on my paper that the time is up December 2, so I hasten to renew my subscription for another year. I have been taking the paper for four years and I like it on acount of Pastor Russell's sermons and I wish to thank you for the stand you have taken for the truth and righteousness. Enclosed find one dollar.

Yours in Him,
J. A. NORDSTEDT.

New Brighton, Pa., Dec. 17.

Enclosed herewith I hand you check for $1.00 for which you will please continue to send me the Labor Tribune.

Let us hope that many will comply with request under caption, "Important Notice to Subscribers", page 3, Nov. 30, 1916, issue.

Surely all will want to assist in keeping the Tribune at the very reasonable price it is now offered.

I to am pleased to know that you will print each week, a back sermon of Pastor Russell, (now deceased). These will be entirely new to those recently interested in present Truth.

Since the precious Truth never grows old, but increases in sweetness and value each time we read it, we may safely assume that these sermons will be equally appreciated by those older in present Truth.

The printing of a portion of the "Divine Plan of the Ages" each week is a commendable feature and should meet with approval of all.

Very truly yours,
B. C. RUTLEDGE.

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 15.

Seeing your notice to truth friends in the Tribune of Nov. 30th, offering your paper for one dollar per year, to all friends sending subscription direst. So enclosed please find one dollar for my subscription which expires on the 16th day of December.

I would not like to miss a copy as I enjoy reading the sermons and other features very much.

Wishing your continued success.

I am yours, etc.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SPHERE IN THE REFORMATION.

RESUME AND REMINISCENCES.

(Note:—The following conclusion of the Reformation Essays was written before Pastor Russell's death. When the Editor of the Tribune put in the notice of the temporary discontinuence of the Reformation Story in the issue of Nov. 1, captioned by, "Taking a Rest,' he had no knowledge of the fact that Pastor Russell was going to pass into his rest. Neither did the writer. The unexpected happened here as elsewhere. The material that follows had to be modified to suit the history of the leading subject of this story.—Author.)

THE CLERGY NOT ONLY D. D.'S, BUT VICIOUS ONES.

What the world needs is not more educated men but more moral and useful ones; men who can help bear the burdens of society and be trusted. Society is now honeycombed with graduates of universities who, like the negro who buys a razor and uses it for "social" purposes, use their training and schooling for plundering the public for personal gain. The product of the seminaries are not a whit behind those of the secular schools; while they are supposed to represent the highest consciousness of society, actually they fall below the product of the seular when some student of the collage of "Hard Knocks" crosses their pathway. An instance proving this may be related.

Shortly after the question of Pre-Millennialism was recognized by the leading lights of sectarianism and conferences were held by them in New York and London, the lesser ones, like theological jumping jacks (pulled by financial strings) followed suit, for the pew was thinking on these questions. So they arranged for a conference in the city of Allegheny, Pa., to pro and con this then living issue. After advertising extensively —amongst themselves—they gathered from far and near within the state. One provision of the program prohibited "cranks" from occupying the platform, thus making it exclusively for the elect few. As indicating the character of those taking part in this assembly we narrate what occurred at one of the sessions.

A tall, well dressed, and bewhiskered fossil stepped forward with a bow as stiff and solemn as a newly-made judge, carrying his coat over his arm. He tossed the cloak on a convenient sofa, placed his high stiff hat upon it, and came down to the footlights, deliberately removing his kid gloves. There was no introduction—he was the whole show—and show it was for he was an actor, and a trained one. He began talking as he removed his gloves and after getting one off he held it in his hand seemingly lost in his fogy speech. He would emphasize by beating the palm of his hand with the glove and by the time he was half through his phonographic speech he had removed the other glove and laid both on the table. The oration was perfection—dead perfection; flights of eloquence, bursts of pathos, were the only life that had not been sandpapered out of this scholastic gentleman. Then, as if to relieve the monotony, he flew into a rage—you would have thought he had stepped on a bananna peel—he pranced up and down the platform denouncing Millennial Dawn with all the vehemence concealed beneath this culture, and showed his true colors by saying that if he had his way he would lead a procession to the outskirts of the city to burn the author or those books at the stake.

After this demonstration the cultured clergyman stepped down from the pulpit and, noticing a distinguished looking gentleman who sat near the front row, elbowed his way toward him and endeavored to be sociable in the following dialogue:

"You are a minister of the gospel, I presume, judging from your appearance?"

"Yes, sir.

"Pray, of what demonination, may I ask?"

"Independent."

"Of this city, I presume, and what is your name, please?"

"C. T. Russell."

The embarrassment of this "gentleman" can better be imagined than described. Do you find this spirit in other walks of life—in politics, science, industry? Why is it that the clergy should be vicious? Of course this is not true of all, but that this is not an isolated case may be ascertained by the reading of J. T. Rutherford's pamphlet, "The Great Battle in the Ecclesiastical Heavens"; there you find some saying that they would like to skin Russell alive and tack his hide to a barn door! One might well say of this culture that it is the "collective and organized wisdom of the lowest forms of animal intelligence."

This incident, as well as the nature of the poison prepared for the minds of the people against Russell, will serve to emphasize the fact that morality and heart sentiment are also matters to be acquired in life as well as education—tuition never changes the heart, but truth will, and truth is the reward for obedience to Christian principle in life. Russell learned to avoid coming in contact with these personifications of error and did not attend their special sessions afterward. At Norfolk, Va., during a convention in session there the writer was talking with him leisurely along the streets of the city enroute to the hotel, when suddenly, without any apparent reason, he quickened his gait and crossed the street so rapidly that his companion could scarcely keep pace; upon inquiry as to his haste he pointed to a large sign displayed on a church, "Russellism Exposed." This seemed strange and an indication of fear, but he explained that he had a body guard on some occasions and did not take any risks that would be tempting providence.

Mr. A. H. Macmillan is authority for saying that Russell at times felt nervous in going before a large audience. Mr. Macmillan relates that on an occasion when the upper tendom occupying his hotel unexpectly requisted him to say a few words he wanted B. H. Barton, who was near-sighted, to make the address, and insisted that "Bro. Barton will not see the audience and will not feel any embarrassment." This timidity cannot be attributed to his lack of confidence in his ability to think of something on the spur of the moment, but rather to the fact that he was very susceptible to the influence of an audience and that the large ones drew on his vitality. Nor can we suppose that he feared facing those who did not agree with his religious beliefs. What has a man to fear who is on the right side of a question? That he was not concerned much in this way can be proven by an incident which occurred during the Eaton-Russell debates; during one of the regular meetings at the "Bible House" held during the week, in giving the announcements for the meetings Russell stated that on the following Sunday he would preach from the Bible House pulpit; someone in the audience arose and inquired if the arrangement for the debate with Dr. Eaton had been cancelled—he had apparently forgotten that he was slated for the debate.

Russell's ability to round up a subject on short notice is attested by an incident related by J. A. Bohnet. Some years ago Mr. Bohnet was delegated by the "Bible House" congregation at Allegheny, Pa., to ask their pastor to speak on a certain subject that was in dispute at one of their Bible study classes. The matter was neglected until the Sunday that the congregation expected him to speak on the question. Mr. Bohnet waited for the pastor to emanate from his study, which was in the same building as the auditorium, and explained the situation, requesting the pastor to apoligize to the congregation for Bro. B.'s negligence in not notifying him in time to be prepared, since many present had come especially for this occasion. The pastor inquired—"why, what was the subject, brother?" To Mr. Bohnet's surprise he began preaching on the subject, when we fully expected to hear him make his apology. The audience did not know, but that their pastor had been fully prepared for his topic.

MODERN EDUCATION

The remarkable genius and talent of Pastor Russell, both in intellect and speech, is not to be accounted for along the ordinary lines—he did not acquire his education in the institution of learning, nor did he acquire his distinct literary style from Puttman's Hand Book of Phrases for Clergymen; the manufactured product all have the same dash of lavendar, both in ideas and expression. His case is not without a parallel. The two Humbolt boys were educated by private tutors almost to the exclusion of institutions of training, yet their scientific literature is the abode of nearly all modern thinkers along their lines. Russell acquired his education in this way and his theological productions are already serving a like purpose.

STRIKING DEFENSE GIVEN OUR PASTOR

Libelous Assault on Dead Leader in Baptist Paper Draws Sharp Reproof by Tom Watson in Jeffersonian. Noted Georia Politician and Editor Humbles Churchman with Satirical Shafts.

In the Christian Index, the organ of the Baptists of Georgia, the following editorial notice appeared:

Charles Tate Russell, who called himself "Pastor Russell" died on a railroad train in Texas, October 31, and the Christian world does not mourn. Pastor Russell began life by selling shirts in Pennsylvania. He next became a lecturer on religious topics, and was soon known in Pitsburgh as "the crank preacher." He was never connected with any organized church and was never an ordained minister. On account of illegal relations with other women, he was divorced from his first wife soon after their marriage. One of his numerous tricks was his widely advertised "miracle wheat," which he sold at a dollar a pound. His receipts from this source aggregated more than two thousand dollars a year in 1911, and the donations to the Publication Society ran his profits up to $150,000 a year. In a single decade he received two million dollars from his followers, who believed that his prophecies wer true, that the world would come to an end in October, 1914. He was the head of the International Bible Students' Association, of London, and the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania. The books and tracts of his teachings have had a very wide circulation, and perhaps no man in America has upset the faith of so many devout Christians as did Mr. Russell. With his decease let it be hoped that his works will die with him, and that the credulous public will be no longer deceived by his fallacious teachings.

The italic type which emphasize, certain words in the above, are mine; they serve to direct your attention to those charitable expressions which you may generally look for, when your heterodoxy is the subject of my orthodox comments, my doxy being always the right thing, of course.

When I saw in the papers that Pastor Russell had died painlessly on the cars, while on his way from one field of work to another, my first thought was that the old man had been blessed with a beautiful death.

No languishing upon a weary bed of pain; no wasting away of mind and body; no burdensome service imposed upon others; none of the ghastly physical debilities which render the lengthy sickness of the failing mortal so peculiarly dreadful!

To die like a soldier, is a glorious end; to fall at the post of civil duty, when in full possession of mental vigor and bodily independence, is the best way to leave the stage.

The Index says that "the Christian world does not mourn."

Are there no Christians among the Russellites? I would not feel justified in saying that. There was a time when Baptists were not considered Christians; and they were slaughtered by other professors of Christ for not professing in the same manner that the slaughterers did.

When Arnold of Brescia was burnt for being a Baptist in principle, the papal court at Rome could have published a statement to the effect that "the Christian world does not mourn."

When the original Calvinists died in Paris, on St. Bartholomew's day, the papal court not only did not mourn, but went in splendid procession to Roman Churches to sang Te Deums, in praise and thanks, for the bloody massacre of the Russellites of that day.

Faith, Hope, Charity, "and the greatest of these is Charity," said Jesus Christ, not thinking of alms, only, but of that nobler charity which thinketh no evil, and which credits your neighbor with the same honesty of opinion that you want for yourself.

"Pastor Russell began life selling shirts." Well, what of it? We all have to wear shirts, and, if somebody didn't sell 'em, how would we get 'em? We can't steal 'em.

"He next became a lecturer."

Of course that was quite a change, but still not a disgrace. Besides, you needn't go to hear a lecturer, unless you want to; whereas, you must meander to church, once occasionally, and listen to a sermon, else your neighbors will look down on you.

"*He * * * was soon known in Pittsburgh as 'the crank preacher.'*"

That was mighty bad, of course, but not worse than what they called John Wesley and George Whitfield. The regular clergy never did fling flowers at the disenters. In the eyes of the regulars, the disenter is always a disturber of the peace, an incendiary, a stirrer-up of strife, a ranter, an unruly member, a Philistine!

Paul, Peter, Barnabas, James and the other pioneers of Christianity, were crank preachers, gospel tramps, and trouble-breeders, in the estimation of the regular pagan clergy of the time.

Humanly speaking, Christ was a vagabond, a crank preacher, a disturber of the peace to the Jews and Romans of that day. In their opinion, his talk was blasphemous, and that's what caused them to put Him to death.

"He was never connected with any organized church, and was never an ordained minister."

Who ordained John the Baptist? To what organized church did he belong?

Did Christ ever organize a church? Did he ever outline a plan of clerical organization?

If so, show me!

"On acount of illegal relations with other women, he was divorced."

A serious charge to bring against the living or the dead. If not true, The Index can be sued and prosecuted.

My understanding has been that Pastor Russell's wife divorced him because he was a eunuch, just as Thomas Carlyle and John Ruskin were.

My recollection is that the evidence at the trial showed, that Pastor Russell had never carnally known his wife, or any other woman.

The Index had better look it up; I would hate to see the Russellites get out warrents for our Index brethern.

"One of his numerous tricks was his miracle wheat."

Ah, yes; I had my little pleasantries about that wheat, and am not especially glad to remember it. The wheat proved to be a prolific variety, and is extensively sown in Kansas and other grain States. Besides, it is not so clear that the Pastor himself was personally responsible for its name, or that he derived any personal profit from it.

The sale of that prolific wheat compares quite favorably with some "Church Dinners' that I have tried to eat, and some Oyster Suppers, where—is I heard Bishop Candler say, many, many years ago—"three helpless oysters are sold for a quarter."

"In a single decade, he received two million dollars."

What did he do with it? I haven't seen any account of Pastor Russell's big estate, yet. Did he leave any? Did he hoard the money which poured in upon him, or did he lay it out in good works?

From the small amount of alimony allowed by the court to his divorced wife, I am strongly inclined to believe that he did not own much property, if any at all.

"'No man has upset the faith of so many devout Christians as did Mr. Russell."

Did these upset Christians become infidels? Were they made worse men and women, by believing in Pastor Russell's version of Christianity?

After having become Russellites, did the upset Christians go to stealing, backbiting, creating, fornicating and wife-beating?

I am acquainted with some Russellites, and they appear to me to be at least as devout in their Christian virtues, as they were before Pastor Russell upset them.

In fact, if some of the other "devout Christians" were similarly "upset," and jolted out of their ruts, and hide-bound self-righteousness, they'd be better off, and better missionaries for Christianity.

"With his decease, let it be hoped that his works will die with him."

What "works" of his were so injurious to the human race?

Intellectual agitation, directed as Pastor Russell's was, cannot do any considerable harm. Can you imagine a man, or woman, having become a Russellite, from a bad motive?

There was no inducement. No evil motive could have prompted the act.

Please think of that.

A lustful man might turn Mormon, because of his polygamous propensities.

A Protestant preacher may turn Catholic, to become a priest, and enjoy the vast advantages of being one.

A bright young man may "study for the ministry," as an easy way to make a good living. But what inducement, other than honest conviction, could turn a layman of the Baptist or Methodist Church into a Russellite? I can't see any.

Will Pastor Russell's works die with him? Hardly. Mrs. Eddy's works did not die with her; and Alexander Campbell's didn't, with him.

Nothing seems to be easier in this country, than to start a new kind of religion; and I suppose that in the long run, the tares will get separated from the wheat.

Which are the tares?

Your kind of religion, you numbskull.

Which is the wheat?

My kind of religion, you simpleton.

So far as my reading goes, all theological controversies tend to that conclusion.

WEEKLY ADDRESS
of
PASTOR RUSSELL
of the
LONDON TABERNACLE
and of
NEW YORK CITY
— TEMPLE —

"TIMES OF RESTITUTION."

The following sermon was delivered by Pastor Russell on January 20, 1905—Editor.

Pastor Russell addressed a congregation of between 300 and 400 Sunday afternoon at Bible House Chapel, Arch Street, Allegheny, Pa. His text was: "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive (retain) until the Times of Restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since world began." Acts 3:20, 21.

The Speaker said:

My topic is a continuation of that of last Lord's day, delivered in New York City, delivered also through the columns of The Labor Tribune and other newspapers, to my larger congregation "scattered abroad." On that occasion we called attention to the "Times of Refreshing" pointed out by the apostle as the hope for the Church and the world, and to be expected at the second coming of our Lord. We pointed out that this promised shining forth of divine favor upon the world means a time for sackcloth and ashes and weeping and groaning and traveling in pain under the weight of sin and its death penalty will soon be past, when the Sun of Righteousness shall shine upon the world to bless and to reinvigorate and to refresh.

The words of our text to-day follow those of last Lord's Day as explanatory as teaching in what respect the divine, refreshments will come to the world, how the divine blessing will be poured out. The second coming of our Lord is the key to the entire matter. As the Scriptures declare, the Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son, who redeemed the world. Hence, our text declares that with the ending of the night of sin and death the heavenly Father's favor will be manifested in the second advent of Christ, who cannot return until certain appointed times shall have arrived. The suggestion is in accord with our Master's words to the apostles when they inquired after his resurrection, "Wilt thou at this time restore the Kingdom of Israel?" He answered and said unto them, "It is not for you to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in his own power."

WHAT ARE RESTITUTION TIMES?

The Apostle refers to these times of restitution as though his hearers were all thoroughly familiar with them as though they all understood that the divine promise of blessing through Christ implies times or years in which this blessing would be poured out upon the world. He seems also to take for granted that his hearers understood the meaning of the word restitution—that it signifies to restore, to put back again into a proper condition. It is somewhat remarkable that the "faith once delivered to the saints" has so far been lost sight of, and so far contaminated with the errors from the heathen, intermingling during the dark ages, that remarkably few of the Lord's people to-day seem to have ever thought of times of restitution. Indeed many ministers of the Gospel hearing our text quoted, have at first presumed that it was some peculiar translation, having overlooked it entirely in their Scripture readings, and never having caught the thought of restitution, which the apostle here in our text declares has been spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.

If any prophet failed to speak of the coming times of restitution, the Apostle Peter's declaration implies that such a prophet should not be regarded as a truthful or holy one. In other words, this message of coming is so important and has so large a place in the divine revelation, that no prophet could be the Lord's mouthpiece without referring to these times; and in harmony with this thought may we not inquire with reason. How can any of the Lord's people to-day consider that they are in full accord with the heavenly father and his inspired revelation while they are neglecting and comparatively ignorant of this most important subject the coming restitution which will be inaugurated at the second advent of our Lord Jesus?

In one of His parables our Lord speaks of a woman who hid leaven in three measures of meal until the whole was leavened. The three measures of meal represent the family baking, the spiritual food provided by the Lord for the household of faith. If any wish to divide the measures, we may properly see in the first the great truth of justification, in the second the truth respecting sanctification, in the third the truth respecting glorification or the final deliverance. A sufficiency of food for the family of God was provided through the teachings of Jesus and His apostles and the ancient prophets—"sufficient that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished." But, alas, the parable shows the corrupting of this food by the intermingling of leaven which in the Scriptures is used as a symbol of corruption.

MENTIONED BY ALL THE HOLY PROPHETS

We must not understand the Apostle Peter to mean that everyone of the holy prophets of old mentioned the millennial age in specific terms, and explained minutely all the grand features of the blessing of restitution then to be brought to the world of mankind. We must take as an example on this subject the word of our Lord when He said, "Moses wrote of me." If we look into the writings of Moses we find no particular description of our Lord Jesus, His personal appearance, the time of His first advent, the nature of His work, etc. What do we find? In what way did Moses write to Christ? We answer, that he was a type of Christ himself, a type of the greater Prophet who would introduce the better New Covenant.

Furthermore, the various sacrifices which Moses instituted and directed were records in advance, to illustrate what must be expected, those who would be in a right condition of heart to understand it, the time of fulfillment, but written in such a manner that others might hear and not understand, might see and not believe. Let us glance hastily at the testimonies of the various prophets, and note to some degree their references to the coming times of restitution and the work to be accomplished. Judging from what we have seen of part fulfillments of the words of the prophets, what ought we to expect in their testimony regarding the events still future?

Moses was a prophet and in the five books of Moses, we find various lessons, various instructions, much information, respecting the coming times of restitution. Every text of Passover representing the deliverance of the people from the power of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, was a type of the deliverance of all who desire to be in harmony with God, which shall soon be effected during the millennial age—the power of the prince of this world being lost and the people being delivered from the slavery to sin and death. The Red Sea picturing the utter overthrow of Pharaoh, suggests to us, when we understand it, the complete overthrow of Satan and all his hosts, as it ultimately shall be accomplished when the Lord shall deliver the people.

The Day of Atonement for the Jewish people instituted by Moses, taught not only the great sacrifice for sin but that with its accomplishment would come to a rolling away of the curse and the uplifting of humanity, the blessing of all the families of the earth through the greater than Moses and the greater than Aaron—through Christ and his glorified Church. While there are many pictures of restitution in the teachings of Moses, after we understand the matter, there is one so simple, so plain, that even babies in Christ may understand it. We refer to

ISRAEL'S TYPICAL JUBILEE YEAR

Every fiftieth year, under the law of Moses, was a year of release from all slavery, all bondage, all debts, not only for the people but for the land, their original inheritance. So mankind—sold under sin into slavery to sin and under its bondage and wages, death is waiting for the great antitypical jubilee times, the times of restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. When those times shall have been introduced they are to be antitypical of Israel's jubilee. Much more glorious, much more grand, much more blessed, they will give back not only earthly possessions but to as many as will receive them in the Lord's way they will bring mental, moral and physical restitutions, bringing the world of mankind back to their original conditions in which Adam was created, in the image and likeness of God, and from which he fell through sin; we all as his heirs participating.

How grand an uplift that will be! We hear much of the social uplift much of endeavor to lift the world out of degradation and sin and trouble, and we are in sympathy with everything that is good and helpful in this way, but we are most of all in sympathy with God's great plan, which proposes to do these things on a marvelous scale, and to right the difficulties of earth in such a manner that they will no more annoy or trouble. All who will accept the divine favors at that time will come to the full perfection; and, being tested will never again fall; while all who will refuse the divine favors and blessings of that time, will fail in the testings and will die the second death, and neither trouble others nor be troubled themselves thereafter.

JOB'S PROPHECY PICTORIAL

Job was a prophet and in his own experience he typified the losers which have come to the world through the reign of evil. He lost his children, his flocks, his herds, his property, his health and the love and companionship of his wife. The poor desolate, old man prayed to the Lord that he might be hidden in the grave until the time of divine wrath against sin was at an end, and that then he might be remembered of the Lord and come forth from the tomb under the blessed conditions of the millennial age, under the light of divine favor. Poor Job was a picture or type of the world which is in just such a condition—Job 14:13; Rom. 8:22.

Job's later experiences too, are prophetic, and fulfill the requirements of our text. Job spoke of restitution times in the record of his own restitution blessings. When the Lord's time of favor returned to him, he got back just as many children and more flocks and herds and more honor and dignity and a greater blessing in every way. So in the world in the times of restitution. Mankind may attain not only to the blessed conditions which Father Adam enjoyed, but to fill greater mercies and favors in many particulars.

David's Psalms are full of references to the Kingdom of the Lord and the blessings of the world when he shall be the Governor amongst the nations. He tells us that then wars shall cease unto the ends of the earth. In various of his psalms he pictures the times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, which shall then cause the earth to smile and yield her increase and the whole human family to rejoice. He pictures the seasons of refreshing symbolically, calling upon the mountains and hills, the trees and the grass, to clap their hands and praise the Lord, for He will reign gloriously.

The prophet Isaiah gives most vivid pictures of the character of the blessings which will be upon the world during this millennial period, these restitution times. He tells that the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the face of the great deep. (Isa. 11:39.) He tells how the wilderness shall blossom as the rose and the solitary places shall rejoice. He tells how streams shall break forth in the deserts—not only in the literal desert, but also in the poor desert hearts from which hope has fled and into which the streams of refreshing shall come. He tells how in that time all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped—not only the physical blind and physical deaf, but the mentally and morally benighted. He explains how the Lord is going to make a great feast of fat things for all people and how through his Kingdom (mountain) he will destroy the veil of ignorance and superstition which is over all people, and how he will swallow up death in victory, wipe away tears from off all faces, and take away the rebuke of his people. Thus does the Lord through His holy prophet tell us of the coming times of restitution of the universal blessings which shall then prevail and the glorious opportunities which shall be for all people.—Isa. 25-6-9; 35.

THE RESURRECTION HOPE IS RESTITUTION

The Prophet Hosea is another of the holy Prophets, and he also in various ways refers repeatedly to the coming times of restitution. He pictures the entire work of the millennial age, of lifting mankind from the death state up, up, up to the full perfection of life. His words are quoted to this effect by the Apostle Paul in I. Corinthians 15, 54, 55. His words are, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death; O death I will be thy plague! O grave, I will be thy destruction." Hosea 13; 14.

Similarly, dear friends, we might take up all the various prophets and find in each one's testimony most pointed references to these coming times of restitution, but the time will not permit. We must close with one more reference and it shall be to Ezekiel's prophecy. Turn with me to the sixteenth chapter of Ezekiel. Let us read together the word of the Lord through this holy prophet. Read it all at your leisure but just at present we must confine ourselves to a few of the most pointed statements.

The Lord is unbrading Israel, and declaring that her course, has been more reprehensible than that of the people of Sodom and Samaria. After telling them that they were worse than these, and that they sinned against greater light, the Lord tells us how intimately he will bless the Israelites and restore them to His favor and have compassion on them, and then he tells further that similarly He will have compassion upon the people of Samaria. This statement, therefore, through the prophet Ezekiel, is a most forceful lesson respecting the future times of restitution. Our dear Redeemer Himself calls attention to the fact that the Sodomites were all destroyed by fire from heaven, (Luke 17:29), but He also declared that if the mighty works that were done in Tyre and Sidon had been done in Sodom and Gomarrah, they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes. (Matt. 11:21).

One would be inclined to say, if this be true, why should not the Sodomites have some future opportunity? It is this very future opportunity which the Scriptures say it is yet to come to the Sodomites, yea, to all people. All the families of the earth are yet to be blessed with a clear knowledge of the truth, under the glorious light of the heavenly kingdom, which, as the Sun of Righteousness shall dispel all the ignorance and error of this present time. But let us read Ezekiel's prediction of coming blessings, which signify a hope for Sodomites.

THE NOBLEMAN'S RETURN

Notice again the force of our Lord's prophecy respecting the future that "all that are in the grave shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth," the few faithful ones to a resurrection of life, the great mass to a resurrection of judgment—to the opportunities for restitution through the chastisements and corrections and disciplines and instructions and rewards of the millennial kingdom, the times of restitution. Mark again our Master's words: "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of Man, and they that hear shall live." (John 5:25.) The knowledge of the Lord must reach all mankind, and those who obediently hear the message of good things of great joy which shall be unto all people shall thereby be revived, refreshed, restored, step by step to all that was lost by Father Adam's disobedience.

Note again our Lord's illustration of the coming restitution times in His parables. When after likening Himself to a nobleman going into a far country and who likened His followers to a nobleman's servants who were given certain pounds or talents of responsibility in His absence and who were called upon to report progress at his return, the parable pictures the return of the nobleman as a king, and this illustrates the glory and majesty of our Lord at His second advent. It then tells us of the rewards granted to the faithful servants, that some were given authority over one, some over two and some over five cities as rewards. A clear intimation is that these disadvantageous conditions will by and by be qualified and empowered to rule, to judge, to bless the world, and that ruling and blessing constitute a picture of the times of restitution and the kingdom under the whole heaven which then will be conducted along the lines of righteousness.

Let us remember also our Lord's words to the disciples when they asked Him pointedly a question saying, "We have left all and followed Thee; what, therefore, shall we have?" He answered and said unto them, "Ye that have followed me in the regeneration shall sit upon 12 thrones." etc. What is this but a teaching for the world to be conducted under the superintendency of the glorified Church, Head and Body? Neither the Lord nor His apostles nor any of His followers have yet been reigning over the 12 tribes or over any of the nations. We are still in the time of sufferings and trials, which attest our obedience and faith. It will not be until this testing time for the Church shall have passed entirely that we shall sit with our Lord in His throne and the times of regeneration of the world shall begin—the time of the restitution of all things which God hath spoken.

Vary our Lord's parable of the sheep and the goats, a picture of the millennial age and its restitution work. The parable marks its beginning as taking place at the second advent of our Lord for it says, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory; and before Him shall He gather all nations; and He shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats." 25:3;-32.

As many as will thus fall into line with the divine arrangement will become the sheep, and gradually during the millennial age, will be gathered to the right hand of the glorified Christ, while all others as goats will be repulsed and separated to the left. At the close of the millennial will come the ultimate and eternal settlement of the interests of both classes. The sheep will be received to everlasting life, the goat class be destroyed in the symbolic fire representing the second death, for the wages or punishment of sin is death.

To those who are desirous of continuing an investigation of these discourses of the Apostle Peter, we suggest that our topic next Sunday shall be the two succeeding verses, namely Acts 3:22. 23. Although this discourse was delivered in New Philadelphia, Ohio, it will, as usual, appear in the columns of the Tribune.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the tremendous scarcity of paper, we are compelled to revise our mailing list. We wish all subscribers would consult the mailing tab on their paper and if in arrears kindly forward the amount at once. The regular price of the Tribune is $2, but under a special arrangement with the Watch Tower, subscribers interested in the Truth have been paying only $1 for an eight page paper. The paper house from which we buy our paper have notified us that the supply for our next contract must be reduced to the lowest quantity on account of the shortage of supply. Much as we would like to we cannot afford at this time, on account of shortage of supply, to carry any subscribers who are in arrears. This request has been made also upon the Tribune by the publishers who are cutting off every paper not paid for and every subscriber in arrears. Won't you please consult your tab and send in your money at once if you are in arrears.

Owing to the scarcity of white paper, the leading papers in all the large cities are either cutting down the size or are raising the price in order that they may continue publication, and the Tribune may have to do likewise.

A CORRECTION.

Please permit me to make a correction in my letter as published in your issue of Nov. 30, as regards the Two Horn Beast of Revelation 13. England and Ireland—the United Kingdom—is the Two Horn Beast, and not the United States and England as you have have it in my letter. I deeply regret this typographical error, also the reference to Pastor Russell as "Reverend," a title we do not use. I wish you would kindly make this correction and greatly oblige.

Sincerely yours,

The better day is not far away, for which we are glad. Continue sending paper as long as the money holds out. I am much desirous of obtaining the March 15 Watch Tower 1895, will you please insert the copy belew in your paper and oblige

CLOSED SHOP UNIONISM FROM ANOTHER POINT

A. F. of L. CALLED "LABOR TRUST," "PROFESSIONAL AGITATORS" EXPOSED—ASSESSMENTS HIGH, LOSS THROUGH STRIKES FABULOUS AND UNIONS RUIN TOWNS.

Closed Shop Unionism and what it means to the workman, the employer and the community is demanding some attention and the Marshall Jackson Company, of Chicago, have copyrighted a pamphlet which is being distributed broadcast.

Through their permission the National Labor Tribune is able to present the contents to those who would in no other way be able to know how the problem is handled by those who also have some conception as to the benefits as well as the disadvantages of the open shop.

The American Federation of Labor is branded as a "Labor Trust ;" the "professional agitator;" is exposed and the danger of the union to a prosperous community are presented with no encouragement for the union.

The startling information is given that Middle West union men in 1906 paid as high as $80 a year in extra assessments and still more striking is the information that in 1911 in this county alone union men paid $35,000,000 in dues and assessments and lost $25,836,700 in wages.

There is no effort on the part of the authors to handle any profound economic question but the matter is clear, concise and to the point.

The Tribune presents it without comment so the reader may analyze for himself the logic of the arguments contained therein:

Closed Shop Unionism; What it Means to the Workman; the Employer; and the Community.

What is The American Federation of Labor? It is commonly called the "Labor Trust."

What is its object? To control every man who works. It sends organizers all over the country for that purpose. Some of these organizers are in our city today.

Who are these organizers? They are paid professional agitators.

What does the word "agitator" mean? It means one who excites; who "stirs up."

Are these agitators mechanics or workingmen? No; they are hired for their "gift of gab."

Are they interested in the workmen or their employers? No; they are strangers to us.

Why are they here? They are here to make money for themselves and their union bosses.

Where is this money to come from? It is to come out of your pay envelope.

How do they propose to get it? By persuading you to join the union, and pay weekly dues.

Are you to join of your own free will? Yes, if possible. But if not, you are to be made to join.

How? They hold meetings in halls, on the streets, at the noon hours. Any time they can get a workman's ear they paint fancy pictures of what the union can do for him.

What for? To agitate, stir up and "rush" a crowd of men into the union before they have time to think.

What then? After this crowd is "rushed" in, they call a strike on some pretext or other. The men gather in crowds; everybody is excited; the agitators urge everybody to join the union.

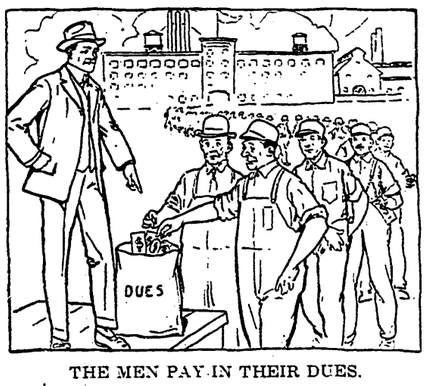
What is the object of the strike? To get everybody on the street.

Why? So they will be afraid to go back to work.

What good will this do the agitators? They expect the men will join the union and "stick with the bunch."

Suppose all the men do join the union? The manufacturer employs independent workmen; or, he moves his plant to another town; or, if weak kneed, he agrees to a Closed Union Shop.

In any event, THE UNION LEADERS GET THEIR MONEY.



THE MEN PAY IN THEIR DUES.

The Union System

You know what a political ring is. There is the "Big Boss" at the top. He has hundreds of small bosses under him. Each of these bosses has still smaller bosses under him. And the smallest boss is the "ward heeler" who rounds up the votes in the ward. Each boss holds his job by the number of votes he can deliver. Control of the votes means control of the public money. Not half the money is actually paid for the work to be done. Whenever any money is spent, the bosses all down the line get their share. And all this money comes out of the taxpayer.

Labor Federations follow this same plan. The "Big Boss" sits in his private office. He has been the Big Boss for many years. Every year the "gang" elects him again. He gets an enormous salary and there is no limit to the money he can spend. He is looking for more and more for himself all the time. The "Big Boss" has hundreds of bosses under him. They all get large salaries and have large expense accounts. These bosses have other bosses under them. They all get big salaries and have big expense accounts. And among these smaller bosses are the "organizers" here. So on down to the business agent. He corresponds to the "ward heeler."

And the money these "union bosses" get COMES OUT OF THE PAY ENVELOPES OF THE UNION WORKMEN.

Union Graft

The union bosses have many ways to get money when they gain control of the workmen.

First, you must pay your dues regularly each week to hold your job. These run from 25 cents to 75 cents per week, depending on the union.

But don't think that is all. That is only a starter. At every meeting donations are asked to help some other union.

You must pay other assessments from time to time to help other unions on strike. Every time a walking delegate in a town nearby calls a strike, you pay an extra assessment each week.

In 1906, union molders at work in a Middle West city paid as high as $80 a year in extra assessments. And the town is non-union today, and has been ever since 1906. The union men paid their money for nothing. So far as they were concerned, all the strike did was to lose them their jobs.

Another way the union bosses make money for themselves: They call a strike on one pretext or another. Most of the time, the men who quit their jobs do not know what the strike is about. They lose their jobs, their savings, and their homes.

Strikes mean larger expense accounts. A large amount of money is spent. No one can tell where it goes.

And still another easy way for the union bosses to make money: They learn the employer has a job to finish by a certain time. If not completed, he must pay a large penalty. The union boss tells him to "come across" or he will call a strike. When the job is a large one, and the employer timid they get thousands of dollars.

Many of these union "bosses" are enormously rich. A Chicago business agent accumulated $350,000 in 8 years.

After a strike of iron molders in an Eastern city, the walking delegates on the strike committee went into business for themselves.

It would take a large book to tell of all those who are rich and how they got the money.

IT IS THE AGITATOR'S GAME; HE ALWAYS WINS.

"UNTO US A SON IS GIVEN"

Isaiah 9:2-7. December 24.

A Picture of Messiah and His Millennial Kingdom—Darkness Still Measurably Covers the World—The Rising of the Sun of Righteousness to Scatter the Darkness—Messiah to Be the Agency Through Which Earth's Cleansing and Lighting Will Be Accomplished.

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the Government shall be upon His shoulder; and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."—Verse 6.

THE FIRST VERSE of the chapter from which today's Study is taken should be the last verse of the preceding chapter. Verse 2. After the Hebrew idiom, this statement pertaining to the future reads as if related to something in the past. The promised great Light is not yet shining upon the people. Mankind still "dwell in the land of the shadow of death." True, a measure of light emanated from our Redeemer's words and works; and it still shines forth from all whose hearts are illuminated by His promises and His Spirit. But this is not the light which is to scatter earth's darkness and to cause all mankind to appreciate God's glory.

That the Sun of Righteousness has not yet risen with healing in His beams is fully evidenced by the gross darkness of heathendom and by the lesser darkness of Christendom. The glorious prospect is, however, that very soon the Church of Christ will be completed, and that the Sun of Righteousness will shine. (Malachi 4:2; Matthew 13:43.) Then ultimately every child of Adam, sharer in his curse, shall be brought under the influence of that great Light which will constitute the Millennial Age a Day of glory.

Verse 3. "Thou hast multiplied the nation, Thou hast increased their joy; they joy before Thee according to the joy in harvest, as men rejoice when they divide the spoil." This, the Revised Version rendering, is evidently the correct one. This pictures mankind during the Millennial Age, brought forth from death, released from the Adamic curse, rejoicing as those who divide a spoil—sharing in something which has fallen to them. The Millennial blessings will be distributed as Divine bounty; and none will escape these blessings except those who willfully refuse them.

Unto Us a Son Is Given.

Verse 4 delineates this joy. It will be because the great oppressor, Satan, will no longer have control. His yoke of sin, sorrow and death, his rod and his staff of affliction and slavery, will be broken forever. (Revelation 20:1-3.) The victory over the Adversary will not be slowly and gradually accomplished by missions or any human power. The Lord Himself will interpose, "as in the day of Midian," when Gideon and his little band of Israelites routed the hosts of Midian. (Judges 7:15-22.) Gideon evidently prefigured our Lord Jesus; and his little band prefigured the Church of Christ.

After Gideon's little band had been sifted, the Lord granted the great deliverance. So in the end of this Age, after the antitypical Gideon's Band, under their Captain, the Lord Jesus Christ, have given their Message—let their light shine out—God will grant the great victory for truth and righteousness through a Time of Trouble which will eventuate in the binding of Satan and the release of the oppressed.

How It Will Be Brought About.

Verse 6 explains how the foregoing prophecy shall be fulfilled. First, Messiah must come; who would be born after the manner of mankind, but nevertheless would be the Son of God. Continuing, the prophecy pictures the government falling upon His shoulders. Ignoring the earthly sufferings of The Christ, the prophecy points to the glorified Messiah at His Second Advent, as viewed from Jehovah's standpoint.

A name stands for the character or powers of an individual. The titles given to our Lord in Verse 6 represent His majesty, power and glory. Already His followers know Him as a most wonderful Counsellor. The world has yet to learn this fact; but before the close of the Millennium it will be generally known. Our Lord is recognized now by His true followers as the Mighty God, but not as the Father. (1 Corinthians 8:6.) He is the Father's Representative, Mouthpiece, the well-beloved Son, given all power necessary for the accomplishment of the great work entrusted Him. He will be the Everlasting Father of mankind in the sense that, having redeemed Adam and the race to which Adam failed to give life, He will give life everlasting to all who will obey Him. The Church, however, are begotten of Jehovah to a new, spiritual nature.

The Prince of Peace.

Verse 7. David signifies beloved. The kingdom entrusted to King David was God's typical kingdom, and was maintained by the Lord until Zedekiah's time, when it was removed until He should come whose RIGHT it is. (Ezekiel 21:27.) Our Lord, as a descendant of David, was the Heir to that Kingdom which was to have no end.

EDW. B. GOEHRING OUT FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Young and Enthusiastic Lawyer Who Solves Phenomenal Cases and Wins Pardons After Noted Lawyers Have Failed, in Race for Office.

Edward B. Goehring, polite, energetic, capable and willing, is in a receptive mood to be made District Attorney of Allegheny County and if ability and efficiency is an essential qualification with economy and experience, Ed is 100 per cent lawyer for the job. Edawrd B. is a brother of the late Harry L. Goehring and there were but few who were more capable or better known than Harry, and none who were more familiar with the details of the District Attorney's office. Ed. has been geting in touch with every friend and acquaintance and with everybody's else's friend and acquaintance, this, too, besides diging out for strangers with the result that he has listed the names of some 18,000 electors with whom he has come in contact. The individual members making this great army have given a promise or asked to be reminded of their acquaintance when the primary election is a little further advanced. This is not all, Ed. has a platform and he is enthusiastic as well as imbued with implicit confidence that he will be able to line up sufficent votes to put himself across when the votes are counted. He goes still further that while he has personal confidence in his own ability he has friends who are preparing to throw themselves into the battle. Ed. is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, class of '95 and this class is getting a hunch on. When they get started there is something going to happen and there need be no surprise expressed if the whole University should be the vanguard of Ed's campaign because Ed's made up his mind to win. There's another angle to this campaign it's this: Ed. aint too proud to dig. He's made up his mind that he's going to scurry through every train that leaves Pittsburgh and he, too, will ride in on some, and in this way meet face to face thousands of voters who would like to see him and tell him to his face what they think of his candidacy, and how he appeals to them as the next District Attorney of Allegheny County. Ed. has his own ideas about running the office and they're practical. He's a lawyer of 21 years experience and for the most part he's made Criminal law a specialty.

So familiar is he with the details of the District Attorney's office that he can go through them as easy as a ferret goes through a rabbit hole and when Ed goes through there ain't anything left to go after. The District Attorney's Office, Ed says, is the most important office in Allegheny County and but few men who have occupied the office have realized its great importance. "Elect Ed" is what Ed's friends are saying "and let him show the power the office wields." Ed hates a speakeasy proprietor. That reprobate can kiss himself good bye and shake the dust of this mundane locality from his brogans if Ed is elected. Then, too, Ed's charitable and he's a remarkable fellow when he makes up his mind to do a feller a turn.

Not long ago after a half dozen attorneys had collected large sums of money from a poor fellow who was sent to the Penn. Ed started in to get him pardoned. Ed wasn't after the coin, he cast that to the winds with utter contempt and began an investigation of the facts in the case. He stuck to it; it was a hard job with lots of real personal investigation and night work as well as all night work, there was dreaming in the intervening hours between the time the work was temporarily suspended for a nap and the next morning. Finally Ed got the details worked out and the testimony of the witnesses and a personal review of the facts with the surviving witnesses as well as an inspection of the place where the crime was committed. When Ed got through he was primed for the pardon board with the result that when Ed closed his argument the Pardon board woke up to a genuine realization that one Andrew Toth, an unfortunate Hungarian of Homestead, Pa., had been tried for murder and convicted. Later he was committed to the Penitentiary where he served 20 years for the crime. Ed proved to the Pardon Board and every member on it that an innocent man had been forced to remain behind prison bars and high cold stone walls during the best part of his life.

What agony this man had undergone no one can tell. He was committed to the penitentiary after he had been sentenced to be hanged.

Andrew Carnegie upon reading the phenomenal work of Edward B. Goehring sent for Ed and requested him to go over the details of the case in which the great steel master had become interested. Ed outlined the case and then presented the details with evidence corroberating the facts and Carnegie with that philanthropic spirit of his, pensioned Andrew Toth and the latter is now spending the remainder of his days in freedom and with his family who long since had grown to manhood and womanhood. It was Ed Goehring who did the work and it shows that Ed knows how to work out successfully complicated cases after others have failed. Ed's there with the goods. Get busy, fellows, get busy.

ENOCH RAUH IN THE LIMELIGHT FOR MAYOR

Admiring Friends Anxious to Get the Word to Go to It--Rauh Act Makes Many Strong Supporters.

Enoch Rauh, author of the Rauh Act, philanthropist, leading citizen and successful manufacturer and businessman is held in high esteem by the people of Pittsburgh and no man is more conscientious in the performance of his duties than Mr. Rauh.

He is a close observer of civic affairs and since his induction into public office has most successfully mastered many intricate problems of municipal value to the people of Pittsburgh. There was in this country no more representative body of men than the original nine selected by Governor John K. Tener to put into execution the provisions of the new charter which made possible Pittsburgh's Business Council.

The nine who at first were selected were men whose ability and integrity fully measured up to the expectations of a million people in whose midst they were to rule and over whose destinies largely they were to hold sway. The new act was an experiment and the Chief Executive of the Commonwealth sought able, capable and experienced businessmen who were not only successful in their own affairs but whose appointment would immediately meet with the approval of the cultured and refined as well as the humble and the lowly. It is safe to predict that many generations will pass before Pittsburgh will have a more representative body than the first original Business Council and none in that selection by Governor Tener was more representative than Enoch Rauh. From that day to the present no man has done more for the people and none has been more generous in lending assistance. Mr. Rauh has given strict attention to the requirements of the taxpayers and the demands made upon the small home holder. He has rebelled against unnecessary outlays in the compilation of the budget and has protested vigorously against any outrages being perpetrated wherein the taxpayers' money may be squandered to enhance the fortunes of private individuals. When a question of fair distribution came up Mr. Rauh has always been found on the right side. Never has it been charged against him that he has permitted at any time, his own selfish interests to interfere with an equitable distribution of the peoples' money nor has he hesitated to declare himself openly against what might be regarded as vicious legislation which he believed either to be an imposition or wonton extravagance. In every transaction and to every entreaty he is conservative, kind, generous and most considerate. He is not whimsical; he never plays politics at the expense of the taxpayer, neither is he fickle minded but keen, logical and economical. He is cool and collective during the most trying experiences and patient almost to a fault. He's a good listener, always

WOULD ABOLISH MIDDLEMEN.

PHILADELPHIA. Dec. 18.—"The grangers want to get rid of the middlemen," said President McSparren of the Pennsylvania State Grange, which held a convention in this city during the week. "This, we feel, can be done through a 'secondary express,' or sort of parcels post fast freight for commodities. This will really be a fast freight service, if instituted by the government and will prove a boon to farmers and the public alike."

"As matters are now arranged, produce by freight must come by the carload. Take apples, for instance. To collect a carload of apples usually requires the service of a middleman at the receiving point, at the producers' end, as few farmers raise enough apples themselves to fill a car.

"Then, when the apples arrive in the city, a few grocerymen want a full car, and the services of another middleman are required for the distribution of the apples in small parcels. Under secondary freight the railroads would carry parcels of freight, no matter what rate, at reasonable rates. The parcels post limitation is now 130 pounds."

RIGHT TO QUIT ESSENTIAL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—"Take away the laboring man's right to quit work and you might as well enslave him." said President Garretson of the Order of Railway Conductors at the Economic club's annual dinner.

President Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin recorded his usual approbation of the Canadian industrial dispute act, which prohibits strikes pending a government investigation.

STATE INSURANCE PAYS.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 18.—On January 1 next the state insurance fund will declare a dividend of $90,000 that will be distributed among policy holders. As the state fund's initial rate is 10 per cent below that of private insurance companies, the saving to state fund policy holders is from 20 to 25 per cent, as compared with concerns that have placed their risks with stock companies. The state fund dividend will be an the basis of a 15 per cent return to all commercial and general industrial risks and 10 per cent to coal mine operators insured in the fund.

ADAMSON LAW CASE SET FOR HEARING JANUARY 8.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The United States supreme Court will hear arguments on the constitutionality of the Adamson law January 8. The test comes on appeal from Federal Judge Hook's decision in the Missouri, Oklahoma & Gulf railroad case at Kansas City.

The supreme court set aside several other important cases previously assigned for January 8, that the railroad question might be considered.

MINERS' WORK DAYS AND WAGES

COLUMBUS, Ohio., Dec. 18.—The state industrial commission reports that pick miners employed in Ohio coal mines averaged 168 working days each during 1915. The average rate of wage per day was $2.72, or a total of $456.96 for the entire year.

Of 2,430 employes in the sandstone industry reported on, it is stated that 296 receive, per week, under $10; 736 under $12, and 794 under $15.

Coal accidents during the year 1915 resulted in a loss of time equal to the entire time of 1,663 men for one year.

CIGAR MAKERS RAISE WAGES.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 18.—Cigar Makers' union and manufacturers have agreed on a new wage scale, to become effective the first of the year. An increase of $1 per thousand will be paid on all 5 and 10 cent goods and $2 per thousand on special and 15-cent cigars. Packers will be increased 12½ cents per thousand for boxes containing 50 and 100 cigars.

LET U. S. OWN POSTAL LINES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—In his annual report Postmaster General Burleson recommends that early action be taken by congress declaring a government monopoly over all utilities for the public transmission of intelligence and that as soon as possible the telephone and telegraph facilities of the United States be incorporated into the postal establishment.

ORCHARD WORKERS UNITE.

FRESNO, Cal., Dec. 18.—Over 200 Italian orchard and vineyard laborers have organized a union and affiliated to the A. F. of L. Last season the wages of these workers was $2 for an 11-hour day. They are now demanding $2.50 for an eight-hour day.

O'NEIL AND WAGNER FOR COMMISSIONERS

Peohle of Allegheny County Sold Out by Harris and Gumbert to the Vare-Brumbaugh Aggregation.

The Speakership fight is causing some excitement as well as bringing to light some political conspiracies that give promise of some interesting revelations as soon as the public becomes familiar with the way in which their servants in the office of County Commissioner have bargained and sold the promises made to the taxpayers.

County Commissioners Frank J. Harris and A. C. Gumbert have handed over the power of the Commissioners Office as well as its influence to Ex-Mayor William A. Magee and the Mayor in turn has passed it on to Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, the tool of the Vares. The latter is now peddling his authority to the liquor interests or any combination who is open to barter for it.

J. Denny O'Neil, who fought desperately against Harris and Gumbert, charging the latter were in league with the liquor interests and under such circumstances he could do nothing save vehemenently assail such men, is now with the old gang whooping it up.

All that at that time looked corruptable and foul to O'Neil has passed away and now O'Neil without apology has joined issue with Harris, Gumbert and Magee. Magee has compelled Harris and Gumbert to set aside their determination to expose O'Neil's extravagance in office and "shut-up."

While Harris and Gumbert have deliberately and wilfully sold out their promises and have remained practically inactive since their election J. Denny O'Neil has formed a combination with Honus Wagner to run for County Commissioner as soon as the term of the present incumbents expire.

The friends of Wagner, the noted ball player, wanted him to run for Sheriff but he refused owing to a desire to play ball for another season. After the next season, he has given promise, he will join with O'Neil as a running mate for County Commissioner. There is no question about Honus' popularity and with the covering up of the extravagance of O'Neil, Harris and Gumbert will be easy picking.

No greater crime has been perpetrated than the selling out of the power of the County Commissioners. This was forced through Ex-Mayor Magee, who went into a combination with the Vare-Brumbaugh gang and the strange part of the whole conspiracy is the part Gumbert is playing. Gumbert has cheated his friends it is said and patiently submits to the dictation of the Vares.

Before election Harris and Gumbert made all kinds of promises to the people and there was every evidence of efficiency. Allegheny County was promised one of the best administrations it had ever experienced. The Tribune through a promise of the highest ideals and purest motives came to the rescue of Harris whose candidacy was in desperate straights. Well meaning but mistaken followers of O'Neil took exception to the Tribune. Harris and Gumbert were elected but since that time nothing has been done for the public, the promises have been bottled-up and Magee has taken care of O'Neil. The alleged extravagance has never been exposed, nor has the crimes committed by O'Neil been brought to light as was originally intended. Further, the Janitor of the County building is still drawing $4,000 per annum for buying a mop, a scrub bucket and collecting soap wrappers for premiums.

The friends of Harris and Gumbert during the campaign were much excited over this pilfering of the public treasury, the Commissioners have done nothing to save this criminal extravagance. The job is nothing more than that of ordinary janitor and since criticism was made against O'Neil's brother-in-law, who held it, why fire O'Neil's relative to appoint some other equally as worthless. The County Commissioners have gone further; they defy the taxpayers as well as the trade unionists by appointing to the place of Chief Engineer a man who carries no card from the Engineers Union nor a man who has any experience in that capacity. The taxpayers are actually bled to the tune of $2,000 a year or more to keep employed a man as engineer who is filling the office through violation of a city ordinance and at the same time the secretary of the Stationary Engineers Association is violating his oath of obligation. This secretary is in the employ of the City of Pittsburgh as Boiler Inspector and will not nor can he recommend any candidate for appointment or employment who has not passed an examination, and, even before taking the examination he must have two years experience. The farce is practiced on men who seek employment as hoisting engineers.

The extravagance of O'Neil and the reckless disregard for the interests of the people by O'Neil is probably one of the worst outrages that could be perpetrated upon the people and this is being covered up by both Harris and Gumbert through a deal that has developed into a conspiracy between Magee and the Vares.

There is at the present time gas being burned in the County

SECOND VOLUME SCRIPTURE STUDIES.

THE BOOKS OF MOSES AND THE LAWS THEREIN PROMULGATED.

The first five books of the Bible are known as the Five Books of Moses, though they nowhere mention his name as their author. That they were written by Moses, or under his supervision, is a reasonable inference; the account of his death and burial being properly added by his secretary. The omission of the positive statement that these books were written by Moses is no proof against the thought; for had another author written them to deceive and commit a fraud, he would surely have claimed that they were written by the great leader and statesman of Israel in order to make good his imposition. (See Deut. 31:9-27.) Of one thing we are certain, Moses did lead out of Egypt the Hebrew nation. He did organize them as a nation under the laws set forth in these books: and the Hebrew nation, by common consent, for over three thousand years, has claimed these books as a gift to them from Moses, and has held them so sacred that a jot or title must not be altered—thus giving assurance of the purity of the text.

These writings of Moses contain the only credible history extant, of the epoch which it traverses. Chinese history affects to begin at creation, telling how God went out on the water in a skiff, and, taking in his hand a lump of earth, cast it into the water. That lump of earth, it claims, became this world, etc. But the entire story is so devoid of reason that the merest child of intelligence would not be deceived by it. On the contrary, the account given in Genesis starts with the reasonable assumption that a God, a Creator, an intelligent First Cause, already existed. It treats not of God's having a beginning, but of his work and of its beginning and its systematic orderly progress—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Then stepping over the origin of the earth without detail or explanation, the narrative of the six days (epochs) of preparing it for man proceeds. That account is substantially corroborated by the accumulating light of science for four thousand years; hence it is far more reasonable to accept the claim that its author, Moses, was divinely inspired, than to assume that the intelligence of one man was superior to the combined intelligence and research of the rest of the race in three thousand years since, aided by modern implements and millions of money.

Look next at the system of laws laid down in these writings. They certainly were without an equal, either in their day or since, until this twentieth century; and the laws of this century are based upon the principles laid down in the Mosaic Law, and framed in the main by men who acknowledged the Mosaic Law as of divine origin.

The Decalogue is a brief synopsis of the whole law. Those Ten Commandments enjoin a code of worship and morals that must strike every student as remarkable; and if never before known, and now found among the ruins and relics of Greece, or Rome, or Babylon (nations which have risen and fallen again, long since those laws were given), they would be regarded as marvelous or not supernatural. But familiarity with them and their claims has begotten measurable indefference, so that their real greatness is unnoticed except by the few. True, those commandments do not teach of Christ; but they were given, not to Christians but to Hebrews; not to teach faith in a ransom, but to convince men of their sinful state and need of a ransom. And the substance of those commandments was grandly epitomized by the illustrious founder of Christianity, in the words: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength;" and "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Mark 12:30, 31.

The government instituted by Moses differed from all others ancient and modern, in that it claimed to be that of the Creator himself, and the people were held accountable to him; their laws and institutions civil and religious, claimed to emanate from God, and, as we shall presently see were in perfect harmony with what reason teaches us to be God's character. The Tabernacle, in the center of the camp, had in its "Most Holy" apartment a manifestation of Jehovah's presence as their King, whence by supernatural means they received instruction for the proper administration of their affairs as a nation. An order of priests was established, which had complete charge of the Tabernacle, and through them alone access and communion with Jehovah was permitted. The first thought of some in this connection would perhaps be: "Ah! there we have the object of their organization; with them, as with other nations, the priests ruled the people, imposing upon their credulity and exciting their fears for their own honor and profit." But hold, friend; let us not too hastily assume anything. Where there is such good opportunity for testing this matter by the facts, it would not be reasonable to jump to conclusions without the facts. The unanswerable evidences are contrary to such suppositions. The rights and the privileges of the priests were limited; they were given no civil power whatever, and wholly lacked opportunity for using their office to impose upon the rights or consciences of the people; and this arrangement was made by Moses, a member of the priestly line.

As God's representative in bringing Israel out of Egyptian bondage, the force of circumstances had centralized the government in his hand, and made the meek Moses an autocrat in power and authority, though from the meekness of his disposition he was in fact the overworked servant of the people, whose very life was being exhausted by the onerous cares of his position. At this juncture a civil government was established, which was virtually a democracy. Let us not be misunderstood: Regarded as unbelievers would esteem it, Israel's government was a democracy, but regarded in the light of its own claims, it was a theocracy, i. e., a divine government; for the laws given by God, through Moses, permitted of no amendments; they must neither add to nor take from their code of laws. Thus seen, Israel's government was different from any other civil government, either before or since. "The Lord said unto Moses, gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be elders of the people and officers over them; and bring them unto the Tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee. And I will come down and talk with thee there, and I will take of the spirit which is upon thee and will put it upon them, and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not alone." (Num. 11:16, 17. See also verses 24 to 30 for an example of true and giuleless statesmanship and meekness.) Moses, rehearsing this matter, says: "So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known (of influence), and made them heads over you; captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes." —Deut. 1:15; Exod. 18: 13-26.

Thus it appears that this distinguished lawgiver, so far from seeking to perpetuate or increase his own power by placing the government of the people under the control of his direct relatives, of the priestly tribe, to use their religious authority to fetter the rights and liberties of the people, on the contrary introduced to the people a form of government calculated to cultivate the spirit of liberty. The histories of other nations and rulers show no parallel to this. In every case the ruler has sought his own aggrandizement and greater power. Even in instances where such have aided in establishing republics, it has appeared from subsequent events that they did it through policy, to obtain favor with the people, and to perpetuate their own power. Circumstanced as Moses was, any ambitious man, governed by policy and attempting to perpetuate a fraud upon the people, would have worked for greater centralization of power in himself and family; especially as this would have seemed an easy task from the religious authority being already in that tribe, and from the claim of this nation to be governed by God, from the Tabernacle. Nor is it supposable that a man capable of forming such laws, and of ruling such a people, would be so dull of comprehension as not to see what the tendency of his course would be. So completely was the government of the people put into their own hands, that though it was stipulated that the weightier cases which those governors could not decide were to be brought unto Moses, yet they themselves were the judges as to what cases went before Moses: "The cause which is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it."—Leut. 1:17.

Thus seen, Israel was a republic whose officers acted under a divine commission. And to the confusion of those who ignorantly claim that the Bible sanctions an established empire rule over the people, instead of "a government of the people by the people," be it noted that this republican form of civil government continued for over four hundred years. And it was then changed for that of a kingdom at the request of "The Elders," without the Lord's approval, who said to Samuel, then acting as a sort of informal president, "Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they shall say unto thee, for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them." At God's instance Samuel explained to the people how their rights and liberties would be disregarded, and how they would become servants by such a change; yet they had become infatuated with the popular idea, illustrated all around them in other nations. (1 Sam. 8:6-22). In considering this account of their desire for a king, who is not impressed with the thought that Moses could have firmly established himself at the head of a great empire without difficulty?

While Israel as a whole constituted one nation, yet the tribal division was ever recognized after Jacob's death. Each family, or tribe, by common consent, elected or recognized certain members as its representatives or chiefs. This custom was continued even through their long slavery in Egypt. These were called chiefs or elders, and it was to these that Moses delivered the honor and power of civil government; whereas, had he desired to centralize power in himself and his own family, these would have been the last men to honor with power and office.

The instructions given those appointed to civil rulership as from God are a model of simplicity and purity. Moses declares to the people, in the hearing of these judges: "I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger (foreigner) that is with him. Ye shall not respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man, for the judgment is God's; and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it." (Deut. 1:16, 17.) Such hard cases were, after Moses' death, brought directly to the Lord through the High Priest, the answer being Yes or No, by the Urim and Thummim.

In view of these facts, what shall we say of the theory which suggests that these books were written by knavish priests to secure to themselves influence and power over the people? Would such men for such a purpose forge records destructive to the very aims they sought to advance—records which prove conclusively that the great Chief of Israel, and one of their own tribes, at the instance of God, cut off the priesthood from civil power by placing that power in the hands of the people? Does any one consider such a conclusion reasonable?

Again, it is worthy of note that the laws of the most advanced civilization, in this twentieth century, do not more carefully provide that rich and poor shall stand on a common level in accountability before the civil law. Absolutely no distinction was made by Moses' laws. And as for the protection of the people from the dangers incident to some becoming very poor and others excessively wealthy and powerful, no other national law has ever been enacted which so carefully guarded this point, Moses' law provided for a restitution ever fiftieth year —their Jubilee year. This law, by preventing the absolute alienation of property, thereby prevented is accumulation in the hands of a few. (Lev. 25:9; 13-23, 27-30.) In fact, they were taught to consider themselves brethren, and to act accordingly; to assist each other without compensation, and to take no usury of one another.—See Exod. 22:25; Lev. 25; 36, 37; Num. 26:52-56.

Appreciations

Pender, Neb., Dec. 20.

I note from label on my paper that my subscription is about to expire and I am herewith enclosing amount for renewal of same.

Have had it in my home now for several years and very much appreciate the religious features especially.

Am also subscribing to Cincinnati Enquirer, St. Paul Enterprise and last but most certainly not least our grand old Watch Tower which is giving us the strong meat of God's word. We might liken the other to the deserdt—not really necessary—but very delicious and appetizing.

To me each paper fills its own particular niche—each coming at different times, ad each welcomed when its "due time" of arrival comes.

It may be that such articles as that by "A Reader" in the last issue and the one in Enterprise referred to may be needed, now and then, that we all may the better appreciate the frailties of human nature, and so endeavor to guard against them in our own lives; but I can not but be grieved, when I read, noting the spirit which seems to prompt them.

It forcibly reminds me of my family of five children when they were small. Many times they had disagreements and after sharp words and sometimes blows.

Had they come to me, their mother, telling me their little difficulties, I could very soon have made peace and harmony among them. And so I believe it would be with us. We are only children "grown tall," especially in the Father's sight and very immature and undeveloped; but I believe if we would take all these things directly to the Father instead of making them public to each other and to the world He would very soon make peace and harmony and also send "showers of blessings" upon each and all.

How very much we all need yet to grow in all the graces of the Spirit, especially in that of charity (love). Dear brethren let us all be more determined to take all things to the Lord fully assured of His ability and willingness to assist us to become "perfect and entire, wanting nothing," if only we will let Him.

Sincerely in His service.
MRS. L. C. LARKIN.

Yorba Linda, Ca., Dec. 9.

I am today sending P. O. order for fifty cents. This I think, settles my account to 1917. I am ordering the Tribune for another year through the Watch Tower Office.

The death of our Pastor has come to us all as a blow, yet we can rejoice in the great Truth and knowledge he has been privileged to give to us.

What a wonderful man was Pastor Russell.

I feel certain all the dear friends rejoice to see his summons continued in your paper.

May God bless your work.
Sincerely,
MRS. ED. GILMAN.

Calhoun, Ga., Dec. 17.

Enclosed please find money order for renewal of my subscription to your good paper. I wish to add my heartfelt appreciation with many others for the many good features of the Tribune. Its regular visits every week, with its wholsome food for Truth-hungry souls. Hope to add new subscriptions to your list next week

Faithfully,
CHAS. M. FARSMAN.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 18.

I see by the label my supscription expired March 22, 1916, and I wish to thank you for continuing the paper. I am also a Watch Tower subscriber. Interested in the Truth, I enclose amount of subscription price for one year.

Yours very truly,
JOHN PETTERSON,

Jerusalem, O., Dec. 20.

I see my subscription expired the 16th of Nov. Enclosed find Postal Order for one dollar for the renewal for another year. I thank you so very much for continuing the good paper, as I like its pure, clean sentiment, its opposition against fades and fakers, and its strong religious sentiment, es pecially Pastor Russell's sermons, al though he has passed into the beyond, his writings are as good and true as was before.

Yours very truly,
T. C. BRYANT.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 21.

Enclosed you will find money order for the renewal of your valuable paper, which we enjoy so much on account of Pastor Russell's sermon. Though he is dead yet he speaketh through the rermons.

With best wishes for your success,
MRS. M. LAWSON.

Seneca Falls, N. Y., Dec. 18.

Enclosed find renewal of my subscription of your valuable paper for 1917. I am greatly interested in the religious department of your paper. In today's paper read with interest Bro. H. K. Hammond's article in defense of Elder Oppy's Exegesis of Rev. 13-11, as I had copied it and sent to a class that I do not think they take the Tribune.

While we desire to be in accord with what our dear Pastor Russell has written and not swerve from the Truth one iota,—we are to "try the 'spirits' or teachers, whether they are of God." See Bible comments on 1 John 4-1.

With best wishes,
F. H. PARMELEE.

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 9.

I discovered yesterday in receiving my paper that it has run over time. I had not intended it should do so, as it has been sent to me by some dear friend unknown to me. I myself could not afford to take it as I have no income to cover such expenses, and I ask you to discontinue it for the time being.

I want to thank the dear friend whoever they may be, for the loving kindness in sending it, as I have been wonderfully helped through its pages. Being deaf I cannot attend any kind of services, but have enjoyed Pastor Russell's sermons, however, I will have to get along without it for the present, I cannot expect others to send it to me free all the time. May God's blessing rest upon all the dear friends, and also upon your own labors to make it such a worthy paper.

Very sincerely,
MRS. J. DREW.

From all available accounts, excepting tuition from private teachers, Russell got his education very much as did the great statesman, Benjamin Franklin. Their careers parallel in that they were thrown upon their own resources young; Russell in mercantile business with his father and Franklin in the printing establishment with his brother James. Franklin had been equipped with what he could get in a scant two years at a primary school when turned into the world at twelve years of age. Franklin so repaired his deficiencies of his early education during the three or four years of his apprenticeship that he ventured to try a hand as a contributor to the columns of theNew England Courant (Boston); with such success that, when his brother was arrested and imprisoned for a month for a too liberal exercise of his critical faculties, the management of the paper was confined to Benjamin. Jealousy was engendered in his brother on account of this success and he was again thrown upon his own resources. At seventeen we find him in Philadelphia with but one dollar in his pocket. His ingenuity and expertness were brought into play again and secured him employment. A trip to London was attended with failure in the printing businescs on account of financial lack; he then returned to Philadelphia where he secured the control of the Pennsylvania Gazetteer. Here he developed into a journalist, to which fact he owes no inconsiderable portion of his distinction among men. Thus was the education acquired by the most eminent journalist, philosopher, diplomat and statesman of his time, whose writings are published to this day in almost every written tongue.

The same applies to Henry George, the political economist, who, in the same city, developed himself as editor. One of his best productions on single tax started with a small editorial. A germ of truth, once planted, grows best when not checked by the mind being cramped beyond its capacity with a mass of learning and opinions of others. Hence, ignorance is a necessary equipment for the creative endency. Would you know the secret of these essays? Here you have it. We first believe a thing and then set about to get the facts to prove it, and only that which is corroborated by experience and observation is changed from intuition to knowledge. But expression is the educator—if you do not express your thoughts they will not grow. Man is only half himself, the other half expression. "With the heart a man believeth unto righteousness, but with mouth confession is made unto salvation."

The attainment of Russell's scholarship was a matter of experience, just as has been the case with the shining lights of this entire narrative. But this experience must be of a specific knd—that of obedience to principle. Only "he that doeth the will of my Father shall know my doctrine," said Christ. So you may just as well cast aside your respect for the titled dignitaries of churchdom, for they will not add one iota to your spiritual development. This is a fact that many of these clerics are recognizing also, for among those outside of Russell's propaganda who have acknowledged his scholarship are, Prof. S. A. Ellie (Methodist), Rev. J. R. Wells (Baptist), Rev. T. S. Thompson (Presbyterian), Rev. N. S. Garlough (Christian), and those heretofore mentioned in this story. As for those who have assailed Russell, "we should worry and get a wrinkle", since Hubbard has appropriately said that "A wholesale denounciation is a subtle form of flattery"; those who have thus indicated their grateful acknowledgement to their superior and commoner are too numerous to mention.

Modern social conditions, especially in America where the aim seems to be towards equality and where all men and women have the opportunity to win social status each in proportion to their innate or acquired character, those of the greatest capacity to positions of power and influence. There is no objection to any leadership in politics or business which is based on a superior power to imagine, plan and labor, notwithstanding destinctions of birth, creed, and royalty as in Europe. Hence universal education is desired for children, to enable all ranks to aspire to their ideals. In this American ideal the competent easily make their way up, and the foolish, or weak and wicked, often drop down; because society maintains no privileges except those founded on character and attainment. These are the conditions that made Henry Ward Beecher succeed in Life, but was too dense to pass with honors when affiliated with institutionalism. And similarly raised Pastor Russel to the esteem and regard in which he is held by those who read his writings, and it is not surprising that the clerics, representing the old social status of Divine Right of Kings and Priests, are worth when this newcomer elbowed them from the center of the stage of the modern religious drama.

We hear a great deal about students and scholars traveling to round out their education. They may be benefited by the experience acquired and observation afforded in traveling, but the noted philosopher Kant demonstrated by his life that in order to know things it is not necessary to travel—Kant never was outside of the village in which he lived; this proves the fallacy of the dictum that men must travel in order to round out their education. Emerson came to the same conclusion but had to travel to find it out. Henry Thoreau did not travel to win his place in literature for he lived the life of a hermit in the woods near alden Pond, at Concord, and also did not prize his graduating certificate sufficinetly to pay the five dollars to secure it—he said it was not worth it, and proved it by staying there. Russell's travels developed in him the cosmopolitan spirit for he did not feel any more at home in his own city than elsewhere in the states. But one lesson thoroughly taught in Russell's life is that the productive habit should be fostered while we absorb; university tuition absorbs the enthusiasm and vitality in getting ready for life, whereas, those who attempt to create while acquiring education, edify themselves in the endeavor—new thoughts come, like comets, from the outer unimaginable rims of silence, as we endeavor to express the familiar, when not hampered by a paid "professor" or "superior" of institutionalism. Russell, while engaged in business in the city of Allegheny (N. S. Pittsburgh), set the theological squatters, of the many imposing semminaries that ornament the same city, to rout before "seeing the world" and without the assistance of a university training.

MISTAKES.

Jehova makes no mistakes.

All who have ever lived on this earth, have made mistakes, but one—the Son of God. Lucifer, son of the morning, made a mistake, when he said, "I will be like the Most High, I will exalt by throne above the stars of God." He made another, when he left his own habitation, to raise up a race of giants, "hybreds" who perished in the flood. Noah made a mistake when he made wine from his garden. and got drunk on it. Abraham made a mistake when he bound his wife to say in every place where they went, "He is my brother." He made another when he took Sarah's hand-maid, and a son born to him, to help God fulfill his promise to bless all nations through his seed. Esau made a mistake when he sold him birthright for a mess of pottage. Rebecca made a mistake when she taught Jacob to be deceitful, in order to get the blessing. Jacob's sons made a mistake when they sold Joseph for a slave down in Egypt. but God overrruled it for their good and His Glory. Moses made a mistake when he killed the Egyptian and hid him in the sand. He made another when he said, "Hear ye rebels, shall we fetch water out of this rock"? and then smote the rock, taking the glory to himself. But it most beautifully symbolized the smiting of the rock of ages, on Calvary's cross, from whence shall flow the sweet river of salvation, for a dead and dying world, in God's own "due time", when Christ sets up His Kingdom. David made a mistake when he planned the death of Urian, the Hittite, to get his wife. Solomon made a mistake when he took many wives and concubinas, for the record says, "even him did outlandish women cause to sin." For more than 500 years the kings of Isreal and Judah wrote their mistakes and sins in the blood of the nation, till God carried them away, captives into Babylon. Peter made a great mistake when he drew his sword and cut a man's right ear off. He may have intended to cut his head off. But God overruled his mistake for his own glory, making it a sublime object lesson, for all coming time, that the sword which stands for civil government, must never be used to establish the Kingdom of Christ. Paul made a mistake when he said to the High Priest; God shall smite thee thou whited wall, for sittest thou to judge me according to law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to law? The mistakes of Papal Rome, during the Dark Ages, for more than a thousand years, are written with the rack, the gibbet, the dungeon, the stake, with fire, fagot and flame, in the blood of more than 50,000,000 martyrs of Jesus. Martin Luther made a mistake, when he courted the civil arm in defense of the cross of Christ, and thereby made Christianity popular. The great Siwss Reformer made a mistake when his zeal for truth, led him to enter Catholic shrines, pull down pictures and images, and make a bonfire of them.

Calvin made a mistake when he had Servetus burned at the stake. Like Zwingle, who girded on his sword and rode into battle to defend the cross he knew not the folly of acting as civil magistrate, and embassador of the lowly Nazarene at the same time. John Wesley made a mistake, when he preached free grace for all the world during the gospel age, and an eternal Hell of fire, for all who are not saved before they die—infants excepted. Wm. Miller made a serious mistake when he taught that the earth is the sanctuary, and that it would be cleansed by litteral fire in 1844, and that then the whole world would be melted like a ball of wax, and all the ungodly would become ashes, and the saints be taken home to heaven. All mistakes are not sins, but all sins are mistakes. God overruled Brother Millers' mistakes, and made it to emphasize the nearness of Christ's second presence. Pastor Russell made a great mistake in supposing that the church would be delivered in 1914. Well what of it? Nobody was hurt by it. Some of the clergy and churches, may have felt bad because his prediction did not come true, for that would have been an easy way to get rid of "Russellism." But the wrath of God is not filled up in the six plagues of Scripture Studies, that have fallen already; The seventh plague is yet to fall, or be poured out into the "air"—the ecclesiastical heavens. and then there will be lightnings (Truth flashing to all the world) thunders, voices, a mighty earthquake, (Anarchy) and great hail, (distressing Truth) such as never was since God said, "Let there be light." Put all of Pastor Russell's mistakes into one pile, and he has enough left him in his Scripture Studies, to rank him as one of the greatest of men that have ever lived since the days of the apostles, if not the greatest. His mistakes are now being overruled for good of the "very elect", and the whole world, for it emphasizes the fact that Christ is invisibly present, setting up His Kingdom, which is now overthriwing the kingdom of this world, preparatory to the establishing of His Kingdom upon their ruins, that His will may be "done in earth as it is done in heaven." "Three things bear mighty sway with men, the sword, the sceptor and the pen; Who can the least of these command, in the first rank of Fame shall stand."

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 20.

By your kind permission would like to answer the following question through your good paper.

WHO IS WORTHY?"—Rev. 5:2.

John's answer in The Records is—Worthy is The Lamb that was slain, Rev. 5:12. The Master stated there were a few names in Sardis that had not defiled their garments (the Provided Robe of Christ. Matt. 22:11, 12) and they walked with me in white (The wedding garment. Matt. 22:11) for they are worthy, Rev. 3:4. Christ also answers it, blessed are they that hear the Word of God and keep it. Luke 11:28, and the pure in Heart; for they shall see God, Matt. 5:8 and Bro. Paul answers that question in this form, and now abideth faith, hope, love, but the greatest of those is love, and without love we are as sounding brass and tinkling cymbol 1 Cor. 13 Chapt. thus does Paul summons it up, Bro. John, He states, we know we have passed from death to life because we love the Brethren, (John 3:14) while seeking to avoid the sin of un-gratitude.

Dear friends those deductions and answers I or we have been striving with you all to keep as one in Christ as at the Headline of our Copy book, as to be conformed to the image of His Son Rome 8:29 who stated My grace is sufficient for thee. 2 Cor. 12:9. While realizing our need of His merit to cover the unintentional blemishes of the flesh. Now by His grace wishing you one and all a very happy and prosperous New Year 1917 in Him, and that we soon may meet at Jesus feet there as being of The Class as through Christ's Merit found Worthy? for without Him as the Head of our Copy book we would be very unprofitable servants.

Now the little while we may be here do not let us forget the Old Reliable Labor Tribune of Pittsburgh, Pa., and by letting our appreciations through 1917 be a substantial one on their subscription list, while wishing the Editor and office staff a Happy and Prosperous New Year 1917. As being Worthy of the same by His honest efforts.

Appreciatively yours,
ROBERT J. CRAIG.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

THE TRUE LIGHT.

The following sermon was delivered by Pastor C. T. Russell at henectady, N. Y., December 22, 1907:

Pastor C. T. Russell of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice today to large audiences. His afternoon topic was the "Overthrow of Satan's Empire." His morning topic, which we report, was based upon St. John 1, 9. "That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." The speaker said:

Everywhere throughout the Scriptures light is used to represent God, his truth, his righteousness, his servants and their messages, and, contrariwise, darkness is the synonym for Satan, the prince of darkness, and all his deluded followers, the children of darkness, and the wickedness with which he is identified, the works of darkness. So forceful are these figures of speech that they are recognized quickly, not only by those skilled in the use of the Scriptures, but also by the world. The voice of inspiration in the Bible declares that the "whole world lies in the wicked one"—under Satan's influence—under the powers of darkness. And this declaration was made, not in the period before the flood, nor in the period before the giving of the Law to Israel, nor during the Law age, but during this Gospel age. Now, still, since Jesus has come and has given his life a ransom, and since his followers have received the annointing of the holy Spirit, since Pentecost, the world still lieth in the wicked one, as again stated, "Darkness covers the earth—gross darkness the heathen." (I John 5:19; Isa. 60:2.) But the Scriptures also testify that Jesus is the Light of the world—the true Light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the world, the statement of our text. How and in what sense is this true? We reply that it is not yet true—that it is a prophetic statement of what shall yet be.

Our Lord declared this great truth when he said, "I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth in me should not abide in darkness;" but "men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil." (John 3:19; John 12:46.) In other words, our Lord here indicates that mankind had become so depraved, so in sympathy with sin, so out of accord with absolute truth, justice and righteousness, that it was not attractive to them, or rather less attractive to them than the error. He declares that this was the secret of the hatred which his presence engendered and which led to his crucifixion. "The darkness hateth the light, neither approacheth the light lest its deeds be made manifest," for it is the nature of light to scatter the darkness. Strange to say, the darkness was not confined to the ignorant then, nor is it today. It is no respecter of stations. It was the Chief Priests, the Doctors of the Law and the leading Pharisees who were the most pronounced servants of darkness and most opposed to the light or truth which shined forth from our Redeemer's life and teachings. "The common people heard him gladly." Indeed, we say that the powers of darkness are greatest in the more influential and the better educated. Satan himself, the prince of darkness, is not such by reason of his ignorance and stupidity, but by reason of pride and sinful ambition, which led into a course of opposition to the divine plan.

"YE ARE THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD"

Our Lord not only informed us that the possibilities of the light shining from him were limited by the surrounding darkness of Satanic influence and human depravity and wrong ambition, but that the same would be measurably true of his followers—that, so far from being bright luminaries, powerful suns in the firmament of earth's affairs, scattering its darkness, they would merely be little lights or candles. He admonishes us not on this account to be discouraged or ashamed of him, ashamed of the light, but to set our candles on a candle stick, that they may give light to all that are in the house—in the household of faith our lights are to shine. We are to seek to "build one another up in the most holy faith." True, indeed, our windows are to be opened, so that those who are without may see the light within the household of faith and come to the light, and all such are to be welcomed; but we are not to suppose that the world will love our light, nor that if we take it to them they will be inclined to glorify us and exalt us and to honor us. On the contrary, so long as the prince of darkness has his hold upon the world and operates through worldly ambition and prejudice, strongly entrenched delusions and false doctrines, so long the Lord's words are true, "Marvel not if the world hate you; ye know that it hated me before it hated you." (John 15:18.) "Cast not your pearls before swine lest they trample them under their feet and turn again and rend you." (Matt. 7:6.) The depth of your message is not intended for the world, which is worshipping Mammon, but merely intended for the Elect—the class whom God is choosing out of the world for a special purpose, a "people for his name." To these alone is given to know the mysteries of the "Kingdom of heaven," for these alone the light of truth is now intended—even "as many as the Lord your God shall call." As for the rest of the world, they are the children of darkness, who will be dealt with in the Lord's providence in due time.

Similarly the Scriptures speak of the pathway of the just throughout this Gospel age. They do not indicate that the pathway of the Church is a brilliant one, but, quite to the contrary, that it is narrow, crowded, beset with trials and difficulties, and hedged about with darkness except as the lamp of divine truth illuminates it. Moreover, the picture of this path and the Church a traveler on it given in the Scriptures emphasizes this point. It pictures the traveler with the lamp attached to the toe of his sandal, giving light only for each step of the way, as it is written, "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, a lantern to my footsteps." (Psalm 119:105.) The Apostle Peter gives the same thought, saying, "We have also a more sure word of phophecy, whereunto ye do well to take heed, as unto a lamp shining in a dark place until the day dawn." (2 Pet. 1:19.) Here four facts are emphasized: (1) That there is a new day divinely arranged for, which shall dawn in its proper season; (2) that we are now in the night time preceding that new epoch; (3) that the Word of the Lord is the only light and guide for his people in this night time; (4) that those who are not his people and who do not have this light are walking in darkness, however worldly-wise and prudent themselves and others may believe them to be.

THE SUN OF THE NEW DAY

How glad we are of the assurance God has given us that a better day is coming, a glorious day, when all "the shadows, weary shadows, from the world shall flee away." This implies the victory of the light over the darkness, of which we are assured in various Scriptures, which tell us that in due time our great Redeemer Christ shall take to himself his great power and begin his reign—the reign of righteousness—the reign of the Kingdom of God. The further assurance is that promptly at the beginning of that reign Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, that his deception of mankind shall thus be restrained. Our Lord, speaking of this in one of his parables, calls Satan the strong man of this present dispensation, and declares that he will bind him and "spoil his goods"—destroy the works of evil, of sin, os superstition, of ignorance, etc. O, what a happy day that will be for the world!

"BRUISE SATAN UNDER YOUR FEET"

But here we are reminded by the Apostle that the divine plan respecting the future Kingdom of God is that the elect Church of this present time shall be associated in it with her Lord, her Bridegroom. So intimate is this association of the Church with Christ that sometimes the work of restraining Satan and the powers of evil in the opening of the Millennial age is ascribed to the Church under her Head and Lord, as when the Apostle declared, "The very God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." (Rom. 16:20.) Similarly our Lord mentions the Church as associated with himself in the enlightening work of the future; for, while our text refers to Christ as the true, great Light which ultimately shall enlighten every man that cometh into the world, shows that the Church now enlightened, now walking in the narrow way in his footsteps, now exposed to peculiar trials and difficulties in order to develop and test the overcomers, shall also be members of the great Sun of Righteousness which the Scriptures promise shall arise with healing in his beams. (Mal. 4:2.) This participation of the Church with himself as members of the glorious Sun of Righteousness our Lord shows in the parable of the wheat and tares. In the conclusion of that parable he shows the gathering of the Elect in the end of this age by a resurrection change, and then declares, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." (Matt. 13:43.)

GROSS DARKNESS COVERS HEATHENDOM

Coming back from the glorious pictures of the Millennial morning to the facts as we now have them, we perceive the absolute truth of the Scriptural pictures, which represent the world in darkness and heathendom in gross darkness, and the Church alone possessing the lamp of divine revelation—and it, close to the path, giving light only for one step at a time. Everything in these pictures corroborate the other statements of the Word and also our own experiences: that nothing that the Church could do in the present time could scatter the powers of darkness. Our little candles should all be on their candlesticks, our lamps trimmed and burning, to give out as much light as possible for ourselves and for others; but there is absolutely no encouragement for us to think that by any power of our own we could become the Sun of Righteousness and scatter darkness of earth. It will require the glorious change of the First Resurrection to thus equip and qualify us for the work of enlightening the world. On the contrary, despite the efforts of God's people during eighteen centuries since Jesus' death, the numbers of heathendom are increasing hourly. According to statistics there are twice as many heathen in the world today as there were a century ago—1,200,000,000 now, 600,000,000 then.

Alas, while the outward show and splendor of civilization called Christendom are in many respects impressive, our Lord's true picture of the situation prophetically given is, "This people draweth nigh to me with their lips while their hearts are far from me." (Matt. 15:18.) Only a few today, as ever, are right with the Lord, filled with the Spirit and guided by his lamp of Truth. The majority of Christian people everywhere, in all denominations, are failing, as described by the Lord through the Prophet, saying of the true Church of Christ, "A thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee." (Psalm 91:7.) These thousands—yea, tens of thousands—include many of the most learned of our day, just as the failing at the first advent of our Lord included the Doctors of the Law and the Sanhedrin. The fall in this case is not a moral deflection, not a falling into vulgar sin, but the falling away from "the faith once delivered to the saints"—a falling into evolution theories, into Higher Criticism, infidelity, into Theosophy, into New Thought, New Theology, Christian Science, etc.—away from the teachings of God's Word respecting the fall of the race into sin and under divine sentence, respecting the redemption of adam and all his race by the precious Blood of Jesus, respecting the deliverance of the Church and ultimately as many as will receive divine favor at the hands of him who loved us and bought us with his precious blood.

WHY IS THIS THUS?

While declaring his power to conquer sin and Satan and to deliver the world free from its darkness and ignorance and superstition, why does the Lord permit so long a delay? Why was it four thousand years after the fall before he sent the Redeemer, and why has it been nearly nineteen hundred years since the Saviour died and bought the world before he comes in power and great glory to deliver mankind from the yoke of sin and death—to deliver the groaning creation from the bondage of corruption to the glorious liberty of the sons of God? Why? Ah, there is a reason, but it is not for all to know now. Even if we tell it all cannot hear. Our Master said truly, speaking to the faithful little flock, the followers in his footsteps: "To you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; but to others in parables; that, seeing, they might not see, and, hearing, they might not understand." (Luke 8:10.) Hence, we need not be afraid of giving away the secrets of the Lord in respect to this matter, which the Apostle styles "the mystery hidden from past ages and dispensations, but now revealed unto the saints." (Col. 1:26.) It is proper that the saints should know this mystery, for now the strength which this knowledge would give will be of special value to them in their combat with the special trials and difficulties which lie immediately before them. The mystery is this: that God's intention from the first was that the great Deliverer, Messiah, should be not only the Lord Jesus, the Redeemer, but should include also the elect little flock of this Gospel age—the ripe grains gathered in Israel's harvest time and also during this Gospel age those gathered from every nation, people, kindred and tongue. These the Lord styles his "jewels"—"They shall be mine, saith the Lord, in that day when I come to make up my jewels." (Mal. 3:17.) The "jewels" will not be made up, will not be glorified, until the full number of the Elect have been found and polished and prepared. Then shall the elect, the righteous, shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father—for the blessing of all mankind. They, with their Lord, the Bridegroom, will then, as the antitypical seed of Abraham, fulfill the divine promise. "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

Thus the mystery hid from past ages dissolves, becomes plain to those whose eyes have been annointed by the holy Spirit, and who are looking in the direction which the Lord is indicating. They see that now "light is sown for the righteous—truth for the upright in heart," and this rejoices them, first, as a manifestation of divine favor, and secondly because it encourages and stirs them to uprightness of heart, that they may abide in the divine love and go onward from grace to grace, from knowledge to knowledge in the narrow way, guided by the Word as a lamp to their feet. They rejoice because they now understand the purpose of divine wisdom in permitting special trials and tribulations of the people of God—that these are intended to work out for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory to which they have been called according to the divine purpose." They are not jealous or envious of the world and its highway of holiness, upon which it will be privileged to go up to perfection of restitution during the Millennium; they realize that, grand as those blessings will be, "God has provided some better thing for us." (Heb. 11:40.) They are content, yea, able to rejoice in fiery trials, because of their realization that these are the divine arrangements by which they are being prepared, tested, proven worthy of a place in the glorious Kingdom so soon to be established for the blessing of the world. These large-hearted, warm-hearted saints, full of love for God and every creature, are made further glad by the knowledge of the divine plan, that the whole creation is under the divine charge, though saints are God's peculiar care. They rejoice in the unfolding of the divine plan, which shows most clearly that God has provided an opportunity for eternal salvation through Christ for all those who shall obey him. And, furthermore, that the knowledge and opportunity and assistance necessary to such obedience is to be granted to every creature during the Millennium.

"GREAT JOY FOR ALL PEOPLE"

Is it any wonder that the message of God's grace as it was announced on the first Christmas morning was a message of peace and good will toward men—all men? Is it any wonder, in view of what we see of the developing plan of God, that the angels declared to the shepherds, "Behold, we bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people; because unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Messiah, the Lord? No! That message is in full accord with all that we know of the divine Word, and with all that the reasonable, intelligent mind could expect from an all-wise, just, powerful and all-loving Creator. Why should he not delight to bless every creature of Adam's race? Why should he propose to save merely a handful of the Elect and turn the others over to eternal torment at the hands of fireproof demons? Such unscriptural ideas evidently came from the great prince of darkness himself, who fain would turn our hearts away from the God of wisdom, justice, love and power—who fain would have us think of our God as the real adversary of the race, delighting in its suffering. How in accord with this thought of the great blessing coming to every member of this race is our text, which declares Jesus to be the true Light of the world—for every man that cometh into the world. How broad, how gloriously sweeping these statements! How they assure us that the Redeemer of the world was God's great Christmas gift to Adam and all of his posterity—a gift whose value grows in the estimation of all the Lord's holy ones in the present time, as day by day and item by item they come to know the Christ of God—an estimation which will grow with the world as during the Millennial age, they will avail themselves of the glorious opportunities then afforded and come into hearty accord—an estimation which will grow with them throughout eternity as the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the love of God shall become more and more manifest.

GOD'S WAYS HIGHER THAN MAN'S

Let us not mistakingly allow our own littleness of mind to hinder our appreciation of the true meaning of our text; let us remember our Lord's words, "For your thoughts are not my thoughts; neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For, as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my plans than your plans." The great plan of God, which has thus far reached only the Church, even as many as the Lord your God has called, is yet to reach not only the world of mankind that will be living when the election of the Church is completed and when the Bride of Christ shall have been ushered into heavenly glory, but will reach also all those who have already gone down into the great prison-house of death—the tomb, sheol, hades. We know certainly that the vast majority of these have never been enlightened by the Lord Jesus and his Gospel message. There was no such light before our Redeemer came into the world, although four thousand years had elapsed and billions of humanity had gone down to the prison-house. On this the Scriptural testimony is most explicit, namely, that "Christ brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." (2 Tim. 1:10.) Neither the immortality which is God's gift for the Church was seen and appreciated and understood, nor was the eternal life which God is providing for all of Adam's race who will accept it. True, there were vague promises before, but there was no clear light upon them; they had to be received strictly by faith.

But now it is different. We see Jesus, we behold him as the Word of God made flesh, we perceive his mission, that he came to redeem our race. With the eye of faith we behold him crucified for our sins, yea, risen from the dead and ascended up to the Father's presence and appearing as the advocate for the household of faith, the Church which is his body, as the Apostle says, "There to appear in the presence of God for us." (Heb. 9:24.) Now we can see, as the ancients could not see, that God could be just and yet be the justifier of him who believeth on Jesus. We can see that Adam's penalty being paid for him by the death of Jesus, he and all of his family, his race, may be released from the tomb and from the death sentence and be given an opportunity to behold the light—the true light—to be enlightened thereby—to be brought to a knowledge of the truth and thereby have an opportunity for a full reconciliation with the Father and to be restored to all the blessings of his favor. It would seem that the subject is too plain to require controversy—that God has promised that the true light should enlighten every man—that it has not yet enlightened but a few—that it must, therefore, be manifested during the Millennial age to every creature before the great plan of God for human redemption shall have reached its consummation—that one must see this great Light before he could be liable to the great penalty—the Second Death.

Let us who have been favored, called of God in the present time, and who have seen the great Light with the eye of faith, and who have been begotten by the holy Spirit, and whose footsteps have been guided in the path of faith, in the light from the lamp—let us rejoice more and more in the goodness of our God and follow on in the good way, practising the fruits and graces of the Spirit, and thus be made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light, that we may with him shine forth as the Sun in the blessing of all the families of the earth.

A CHRISTMAS FABLE

By Mary Graham Bonner Drawings by Ray Walters

THE snow glistened in the sparkling sunlight. The flakes of snow kept falling, falling. Some stopped to rest on the branches of the pine trees and the little leafless bushes. Some fell straight to the ground and made the snow grow deeper and whiter and softer.

In the center of the woods was a high throne upon which sat a King dressed in red with fur of soft white which looked like snow, and on his head was a crown of gleaming jewels. Around the King sat the Royal Family. There were Princes and Princesses, the Queen and hundreds of pages. The King arose from his throne and spoke. "This is the greatest festival in the year," he said, "and its name is Christmas. It is the day of love and cheer and happiness. We give presents and we are given presents. We think of others and others think of us. It is the day to give! And I, your King, will now begin the celebrations!"

The Queen was smiling. Her eyes were full of gladness and the Princes and Princesses were merry and gay.

"The day of giving," they were all saying. "The most glorious day in the year!"

The pages rushed about this way and that, and from afar came the sound of music. The music grew louder and the voices seemed to come from everywhere. From all corners of the world it seemed as if everyone must be singing, and the King and Royal Family joined in the song. No one quite knew what was the name of the song. No one quite knew what the tune might be, but somehow everyone was singing it—for the song was the song of joy and the tune was happiness. And all knew that song, all knew its tune and throughout the world that day there was singing. Some did not know how to sing the words, some did not know how to make the sounds with their voices, but for these there was the music in their hearts—the love in their hearts for all the people under the sun.

But the pages had emptied before the throne packs with many different sorts of presents. And the King was presenting them to the Princes and Princesses. Then came more and more presents, and more and more of the Royal Family appeared. For they were all arriving for the Great Festival. There were hundreds and thousands and they received presents and they gave presents. The singing went on, the music was mingled with laughter and the happy voices of children were heard.

Soon the children came trooping by. They passed before the throne and the King did not seem to frighten them. He did not seem to be a King of whom to be afraid. All his subjects seemed to love him and he seemed to rule with a sceptre of wonderful kindness. And as the children paused before the throne they said in whispers to each other:

"Look! On the throne is carved the words, 'Merry Christmas to all in the world this day!' And on the sceptre is written, 'Love,—this is the guide to happiness.'"

And then on a mighty pine tree lights appeared and the snow flakes on the branches changed and drooped down heavily laden with presents. And the tree spoke too:

"I am the Christmas tree. For years and years I have gone into homes each Christmas Day. There are many trees but we all have the one name—the Christmas tree—and our King bids us go to many a Christmas festival. Our branches hold gifts and candles of different colors to give the bright light of good cheer."

And from all around the children are opening stockings that they had found hanging on low branches, filled with oranges and candies, nuts and toys. While they were dancing and laughing as they opened many mysterious little packages, the King spoke again:

"Good-bye to all," he said. "I will be back for the festival next year. Come my fine animals! Come my gorgeous chariot!"

Jingling of bells was heard—they were the Christmas bells on the Reindeers and up they pranced to take the King to his home far away. For the King was none other than Santa Claus!

And all of a sudden the scene changed and instead of one great throne many homes could be seen—big homes and little homes, but in all there was a Queen—the mother of the children whom on Christmas Day Santa Claus calls his Royal Family.

Instead of Princes and Princesses they were all children. Instead of one great tree there were many trees. And in place of the sparkling snow and the woods there were fireplaces and green decorations and bright red berries.

For once a year Santa Claus dreams this dream—this Christmas fable. He sees not the hundreds of homes he has visited. He does not see the different mothers. He does not see the children scattered over the earth. He has been to many homes but to him it is all as one. And it is a true dream, too!

For every Christmas Queen is a mother with love in her heart, and there are the fathers who sit on the throne of Santa Claus on Christmas Day with "A Merry Christmas" inscribed in letters which only the children of Santa's dream can see, but which all the children of the world can feel. And the Royal Family—the Princes and the Princesses—they are all children. Not unusual children, but usual children. They are the children who give joy just because they are children, and they are given pleasure because they too can give.

Yes, all over the world, in hundreds of homes after the visit of Santa Claus there is happiness. And because it is Christmas Day there is cheer and good will. And the gifts that Santa Claus receives are the smiling eyes and the merry voices of children as they shout their delight over the Christmas festival.

He is the King—not of a country, nor of a land—but of a Day, Christmas Day, and his subjects are the Children of the World.

For him there is this fable. He can dream of the joy that is in the hearts of all on Christmas morning, while he is sitting on his throne and his chariot drawn by Reindeers is waiting to take him back home!

Enoch Rauh in the Limelight for Mayor.

wears a smile and a cigar, in the haze of which while sitting around the council table he in all probability builds cities and topples them over—again to build others that are still more modern wherein every man is given a chance. Caesar said "Let me have men about me who are fat, sleek headed men, such as sleep o'nights." There is no "lean and hungry look" about Mr. Rauh. His avoirdupois is sufficient to give him rotundity and with it an alluring vivaciousness that makes him rather a Councilmanic member much sought by those who seek favors or who wish to have their wants made known to the heads of the various departments.

Mr. Rauh has held many responsible offices and it was his genius that successfully built up the Credit Men's Association and it was he who was its chief sponsor and president until it was lifted to the pinacle of success. It was Enoch Rauh who fathered the famous Rauh Act which makes it possible for cities of the first and second class to compensate city employees for time lost through injuries or sickness. It is these qualifications that make this member of Council eligible for Mayor of the City of Pittsburgh and there are those who are already booming him as a successor to Mayor Armstrong. There is no reason why he should not be Mayor of a great city such as he represents in Council and his experience in civic affairs fully warrants his friends in urging him to permit his name to be used as a candidate. Up to the present he has held a restraining hand but how long he himself will be able to withhold his anxious and admiring enthusiastic friends is a question.

There is no question but that the city employees who are the beneficiaries of the Rauh Act will stand by him and there are thousands of others who hold him in grateful remembrance for the favors he has done.

The year 1913 will always loom large in the minds of employes of cities of the first and second class in Pennsylvania. During this session of the General Assembly, legislation was passed which extended the principle of employers' liability and workmen's compensation for injuries to employes of public corporations.

This legislation resulted through the activities of City Councilman Enoch Rauh of Pittsburgh.

During this tenure of office Mr. Rauh frequently contended that city employes should be treated on a basis of justice and fair play and that if they were injured or fell sick should be compensated by having their pay continued.

Mr. Rauh found that under the law as it stood the council and mayor could pay no claim unless there was the strictest legal liability and could not recognize the moral responsibility resting on the city to compensate an employe for whose misfortune the city was indirectly responsible.

During recent years there has been a constant agitation on the part of the people for workmen's compensation law and while the people insisted on private corporations taking care of their sick and injured employes there was nothing to compel or allow the people to care for their own employes, the people were asking private corporations to do something which they as a public corporation were not doing.

Mr. Rauh had what is now known as "The Rauh Act" drawn by Attorney L. S. Levin. It was sent to Harrisburg and Senator David Hunter, Jr. and Representative William J. McCraig became interested in the measure. These two men fought its battles in both houses and on June 12 it was finally signed by Governor John K. Tener and became a law of the Commonwealth.

AN ACT Authorizing cities of the first and second class to compensate employes for time lost, while in the employ of the city, as a result of injuries, sickness, or disablement of any kind sustained while in the performance of their duties.

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That cities of the first and second class of this Commonwealth be, and are hereby authorized and empowered to pay all persons in their employ during absence from their employment, caused by injuries, sickness, or disablement of any kind whatsoever, sustained in the performance of their duties: Provided, That such compensation made by the city shall only be equal to the amount of wages or salary said person would have received during the period of absence from his or her employment, and never for a period of time to exceed one year.

Section 2. Any act or part of an act inconsistent herewith is hereby repealed.

Approved—The 12th day of June, A. D. 1913.

JOHN K. TENER.

O'Neil and Wagner for Commissioners.

Buildings at the rate of 500 cubic feet a minute. This extravagance when that product is so scarce. This, too, goes on winter and summer. Not the fault of the gas companies as they can divert the product elsewhere. The County gas bill is $30,000 this year. In the new City-County building the machinery and the motors are so arranged that it will actually require three times the voltage to operate and this will be an additional burden to the taxpayers.

The gas is deliberately turned on and left blow but what's the difference, the poor unfortunate man working for a meagre $2.00 a day with the cost of living leaving him in the hole every week is able to settle. Then, too, the Noblestown road, the building of which cost the taxpayers at least $25,000 a mile, and a bridge at the end of it cost another $150,000. An expenditure of $175,000 by ex-County Commissioner O'Neil merely to satisfy a friend, who had a plan of lots for sale. This $175,000 which if given to the "poor" or the "orphans" would have given some beneficial returns but when this $175,000 of the peoples money is given to build a road and bridge that is absolutely worthless as a public highway a charge of malfeasance in office should be made or the taxpayers should begin action against O'Neil and his colleagues for misappropriating the peoples money. But Harris and Gumbert are accessories.

O'Neil sold out the people and Harris and Gumbert have been handed over to the Vare-Brumbaugh conspirators.

It is unfortunate that the office should have been handled so recklessly and that all the promises made should be set aside with such contempt but there is a day of reckoning. This matter will undoubtedly enter into the approaching County contest and will play havoc against some of Magee's best friends.

An effort is being made to make the fight for Speakership of the state look like something that savors a clean administration but it is said many years have passed since the election of a Governor who can do away with the hypocracy the present Governor has been able to get away with.

O'Neil was once condemning the liquor traffic and is now playing into the hands of the gang while Candidate for the Speakership. Cox was in Pittsburgh Monday declaring to the Members of the Legislature the "Shoe string is out." That means any corruption you want may be put across. "Come in and see me, I'm for it! Vote for me and I'm for any pilfering that the Governor will stand for and he's a marvel in handing the con to both the liquor men and the church folk." It takes Denny to hand the piety and say Harris and Gumbert are covering up the rotten politics played, also the extravagance.

But every indication points to the fact the members of the General assembly will not be cheated and that Baldwin will be elected the next Speaker of the House by a neat majority.

CHRIST COMING, AND COMING TO CHRIST

Revelation 22:6-14.—December 31.

God's Kingdom Not Yet Set Up In the Earth—The Revelation Portrays Trouble For the Church Throughout the Gospel Age, and Their Triumphant Reign During the Millennial Age—The Marriage of the Lamb Not Yet Accomplished—Therefore There Is as Yet No "Bride."

"The Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And he that heareth, let him say, Come. And he that is athirst, let him come; he that will, let him take of the Water of Life freely."—Verse 17. R. V.

POSTMILLENNIALISTS must have an especially hard task when they touch upon the Revelation, as today's Study does. Those who think that God's Kingdom was set up in power at Pentecost, that ever since it has been conquering the world, that its conquest will proceed until God's will is done on earth as in Heaven, that then the Second Advent will take place and our Lord will commend their work and take all the faithful to Heaven and burn up the world—these dear friends must be perplexed over Revelation.

Surely they must admit that the first chapters, containing our risen Lord's Messages to the Churches, imply nothing of the kind enumerated above, suggest nothing to the effect that the Church of Christ is reigning now. Quite to the contrary, they indicate that down to the very end of the Age it will be a suffering Church. Revelation promises a future Reign to those who faithfully endure the trials of the present time preceding the establishment of the Kingdom—the overcomers.

The chapters between the third and the twentieth deal with conflicts between good and evil, evidently covering the entire Gospel Age. Yet in all these conflicts, the evil is shown to be triumphant, and the Lord's people are worn out, cry from under the altar, etc. How thinking people can close their minds to all this is passing strange; for these chapters describe nothing like a Reign of Righteousness.

"Come!"

Only at the conclusion of this book of symbols is the inauguration of the Millennium pictured, showing the triumph of our Lord and His saints. The introduction of that Reign of Righteousness is portrayed, marked by wonderful events connected with our Lord's Second Advent—the glorification of the Church, the binding of Satan, the blessing of the world, etc. One would suppose that, even with no knowledge of the symbols of Revelation, no thinking Christian would have difficulty in realizing that the book foretells trouble for the Church throughout the Gospel Age and the triumphant Millennial Reign at its close.

Sayings "Faithful and" True.

Having pictured the Restitution work to its consummation, the Revelation changes. Verse 6 of today's Study assures us that these wonderful promises are faithful and true. In Verse 7 the Master speaks to all of His Church who have the hearing ear. The intimation seems to be that none can understand this book of symbols until its seals are loosed; and that when its teachings come to be appreciated, the Second Advent will be at hand.

Verse 8 bears out this thought. St. John represents those favored members of the Church living in the end of this Age and privileged to witness what he saw in symbol. Amongst these there might be a disposition to honor too highly the one used of the Lord to communicate the light now due. Verse 9 sets forth the proprieties of the case, God alone should be worshiped. He is the Author of the great Plan of salvation, and will be the Finisher of it. This Plan is brought to our attention now by the Father because the due time has come for His people to understand His purposes.

Verse 10 continues this thought. God's people are not to expect, however, that their telling of the Message, their explaining of the Divine Plan, will convert the world; for the Message was not designed to accomplish this. Notwithstanding the unfolding of the Plan, this knowledge will be only for a special class. (Daniel 12:10.) It is not designed to make righteous the filthy nor to turn the righteous to sin.

Every Knee Shall Bow.

Verse 11. So far as the understanding of the Divine Purpose is concerned, those who are righteous may be righteous still, those who are filthy may be filthy still. There are some who are not saints, but who nevertheless are righteous, who live uprightly, honorably. To these lovers of righteousness the Divine Plan now unfolding commends itself.

Our Golden Text is the inspired statement respecting the work of the Messianic Kingdom. There will be a Bride then. Now the Church is an espoused Virgin (2 Cor. 11:2). The last members of the Church of Christ must enter into glory with their Lord before the Marriage. Then will begin the blessed work of Restitution.
